

1/109

COR - 17052 31 - 94 - 2 P. 2020

INDIAN CASES

CONTAINING

FULL REPORTS OF DECISIONS.

OF

The PRIVY COUNCIL, the High Courts of ALLAHABAD, BOMBAY, CALCUTTA, LAHORE, MADRAS, PATNA and RANGOON, the Chief Court of ODDH, and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of CENTRAL PROVINCES and SIND

Many of which are not reported elsewhere.

VOLUME 107, 1928.

Founded by
Shahab-ud-Din Chaudhri, B.A., LL.B., M. L. C., Now President, Legislative Council, Punjab.

EDITORS

{ A. N. AIYAR, B.A., B.L., Vakill, High Court, Z. K. CHAUDHRI, B.A., LL.B., Barr-at-Law.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY THE MANAGER, AT THE "LAW PUBLISHING PRESS," LAHORE

REPORTERS.

LP2020

1. K. J. RUSTOMJI, B.A., AT-LAW, LONDON.
2. M. A. AZIZ, M.A., (Cantab), LL.B., Advocate of the High Court at ALLAHABAD.
3. MONOMOCHAN BANERJEE, M.A., B.L., Vakil of the High Court at CALCUTTA.
4. MALIK RAM LAL ANAND, B.A., LL.B., Advocate of the High Court at LAHORE.
5. V. N. VENKATAVARADACHARI, B.A., B.L., Vakil of the High Court at MADRAS.
6. BRIJ KISHORE PRASAD, B.L., Vakil of the High Court at PATNA.
7. GOPAL RAMCHANDRA DEO, B.A., B.L., First Great Pleader, Judicial Commissioner's Court (C. P. & Berar) at NAGPUR.
8. M. GHULAM HASAN, B.A., LL.B., Vakil Chief Court, LUCKNOW.
9. P. B. ADVANI, M.A., LL.B., Pleader of the Judicial Commissioner's Court at KARACHI (SIND).

CONSOLIDATED

Comparative Tables showing seriatim the Volumes and Pages of all Indian Law Journals and Reports for the period specified at the top of each table, with the corresponding Volumes and Pages of Indian Cases.

50 I. L. R., ALLAHABAD SERIES, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

Page.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas.	Page.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas.
1	Tulshi Ram v. Bishnath Prasad...	105 885	75	Muhammad Said Khan v. Kunwar Darshan Singh	103 116
12	Jagat Singh v. Jai Narain	101 877	82	Piari Lal v. Mina Mal-Balkishan Das	102 766
18	Nand Kishore v. Ram Sarup	102 144	86	Mashal Singh v. Ahmad Husain	103 363
22	Munni Lal v. Phula	103 322	89	Ram Surat Singh v. Badri Narain Singh	102 814
25	Girdhari Lal v. Gobind Rai	103 346	95	Kundan Lal v. Bisheshar Dayal	103 165
28	Nizam-ud-din v. Ahmad Bhai and Co.	103 365	98	Shib Lal-Ganga Ram, In the matter of	103 477
29	Partab Narain v. The Jute Mills...	103 382	101	Haidari Begam v. Sriman Thakur Lakshmi Narainji Maharaj	103 77
31	Gharib Rai v. Mukh Lal Rai	102 602	107	Ram Prasad v. Mithan Lal	103 326
31	Emperor v. Lodai	103 101	111	Mahbub Ali v. Muhammad Husain	104 419
36	Jaikaran Singh v. Sheo Kumar Singh	103 370	113	Narsingh Das v. Gokul Prasad	107 243
41	Parsotam Saran v. Barhma Nand	102 665	115	Ram Prasad, Shiam Sundar Lal v. Ramji Lal	103 218
51	Baij Nath Prasad v. Narain Prasad	102 608	120	Emperor v. Nasir Ahmad	102 897
55	Sheoambar Singh v. Sheoambar Singh	103 128	125	Muhammad Bashir Khan v. Kulsum Bibi	103 308
59	Kishan Lal v. Ram Lal	103 399	128	Sarwan Pande v. Jagat Pande	103 315
61	Kundan Lal v. Amar Singh	103 123	130	Muhammad Muslim v. Maharania	103 271
63	Subhan Ali v. Ohittu	102 804
63	Sanoman Singh v. Raja Ram	103 457
71	Emperor v. Tirlok	104 232

26 ALLAHABAD LAW JOURNAL, FOR JANUARY, 1928.

1	Narayan Das Khettry v. Jatindra Nath Roy Chowdhury	102 198	62	Ganga Din v. Ram Prasad	106 20
7	Indar Prasad v. Jagmohan Das	103 386	69	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Makhhan Das	107 587
19	Sri Rani Chattri Kumari Devi v. W. W. Broucke	106 571	76	Emperor v. Brahmadin	To be printed.
22	Balla Mal v. Ata Ullah Khan	103 518	78	Darab v. Emperor	105 658
28	Shiam Sundar Singh v. Jagannath Singh	106 534	79	Mirza Altaf Beg v. Fazlul-Haq	105 825
32	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Girjabai	106 1	81	Champa Ram v. Tulshi Ram-Jai Lal	105 739
39	Raj Rani Bari Singhain v. Jawahir Lal-Madan Lal	108 156	83	Hafiz Hafizuddin v. C. Laborde	105 815
41	Ashiq Husain v. Chaturbhuj	108 152	86	Gauri Shankar v. Sri Krishna	107 242
46	Shabbir Hasan v. Emperor	105 810	87	Ohhanga v. Tirhi	107 581
49	Fazal Haq v. Fazal Haq	107 584	89	ohra Ganga Prasad v. Pooran	108 157
53	Kallu v. Ram Das	107 679	90	Chhotey Lal v. Brijraj Singh	108 157
57	Ram Chandra Sahai v. Rama Mal	107 591	92	Karan Singh v. Emperor	106 157
60	Nathu Ram v. Chand Kuar	106 165	95	Gulab v. Emperor	107 157
			99	Emperor v. Babu Ram	107 157
			103	Phulbans Kuar v. Bhagdat Singh	107 157

26 ALLAHABAD LAW JOURNAL, FOR JANUARY, 1928—concl'd.

107	Budhua v. Emperor	107	563	127	Kanhaiya Lal v. Suraj Karan	108	131
109	Murat Singh v. Emperor	107	592	131	Allahabad Trading and Banking Corporation, In the matter of	109	22
110	Mohammad Shoaib Khan v. Zaib Jahan Begam	107	581	134	Ramanand v. Secretary of State for India in Council	107	566
116	Tara Kiran v. Harikishen Das	108	114	139	Kashi Ram v. Emperor	109	120
121	Puran Chand Nahatta v. Monmotho Nath Mukerjee	108	342	142	Phool Chand v. Ram Nath	107	570
124	Jewan Lal Daga v. Nilmani Chaudhuri	107	337	149	Luchi Rai v. Jagarnath Sahu	To be printed.

9 LAW REPORTER, ALLAHABAD, FOR JANUARY, 1928.

Criminal.				*Revenue—concl'd.
1	Budhua v. King-Emperor	107	563	18	Sarju Singh v. Harakh Chand	109	207
3	Baddu Khan v. Emperor	108	124	23	Bhagwati Saran v. Deo Saran Singh	107	702
10	Murat Singh v. Emperor	107	592	26	Parbhu Narain Singh v. Jai Mangal Singh	108	123
11	Gur Narain v. Emperor	107	687	29	Ram Bali Singh v. Sh. Ali Ham-mad	To be printed.
13	Jagannath v. Emperor	107	688
15	Ochachal Ahir v. Emperor	107	689
16	Sukhai Ahir v. King-Emperor	To be printed.
Revenue.
3	Rama Nand v. The Secretary of State for India in Council	107	566	Note.—Decisions of the Board of Revenue, U. P., not printed in Indian Cases.—[Ed.]
12	Nasratyar Khan v. Brij Lal	109	672

52 I. L. R., BOMBAY SERIES, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Ramgowda Annagowda v. Bhau-sahab	105	708	55	Bhailal Nathabhai v. Kalansang Gulabsang	107	52
8	Mukund Dharman Bhoir v. Bal-krishna Padmanji	105	703	61	Gangaram Tillockchand v. Chief Controlling Revenue Authority	106	66
16	Venkatraman Mukund v. Jana-dhan Baburao	106	79	72	Jayappa Lokappa v. Shivangouda Dyamangouda	107	710
32	Nathabhai Devidas v. Waghjibhai Javerbhai	107	49	88	Ganpat Tukaram v. Sopana Tukaram	107	257
37	Bombay Steam Navigation Co. Ltd. v. Vasudev Baburao	106	470	111	Shridhar Sadba v. Ganu Mahadu	108	22
45	G. I. P. Railway v. Kashinath Chimaji	106	465	116	Bhogilal Purshottam v. Ohimanlal Amritlal	107	707

30 BOMBAY LAW REPORTER, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Ganpat v. Sopana	107	257	105	Commissioner of Income Tax, Bombay v. Western India Turf Club	106	642
19	Jayappa v. Shivangouda	107	710	110	Shiam Sunder Singh v. Jagannath Singh	106	534
34	Shridhar v. Ganu	108	22	115	Bajinath Prasad v. Kedar Nath	106	646
38	Huchangouda v. Kallava	107	268	117	Vyankatesh Oil Mill v. Velmahomed	109	99
45	Chintaman v. Khanderao	107	705	122	Ratilal v. Mowjee	109	104
49	Hari Laxman v. Secretary of State	108	19	126	Goverdhanlal Ji v. Chandraprabhavati	109	139
54	Mangaldas v. Secretary of State	108	709	131	Alimahomed v. Shamsuddin	109	133
60	Delhi Cotton Co. v. Income Tax Commissioner	106	156	137	Fatmabai v. Sheriff	108	510
64	Gauri Shankar v. Jiwan Singh	107	4	139	Vidyagavri v. Narandas	108	492
70	Shripad Chandavarkar, In re	108	27	145	Burjor v. Ellerman City Lines	108	477
76	Emperor v. Daga Devji	108	26	153	Sadanand v. Parashram	108	705
79	Fulchand Maganlal, In re	110	107	162	Kondiba Gopal v. Mestrejean	109	191
84	Emperor v. Azimkhan	107	272	169	Bombay Municipality v. Charandas	108	488
86	Emperor v. Mahomed Hasan	107	705	177	Omar Tyab v. Ismail Tyab	108	495
88	Emperor v. Nabibux	107	705	186	Madhavprasad v. Monghilal	108	482
90	Das & Co. v. Broagh Electric Corporation	108	16	197	Tata Iron & Steel Co., In re	108	465
	Bhogilal v. Chimanlal	107	707
	Ati Jagta v. Indurai	107	719
	Pa v. Bhimangouda	108	17

30 BOMBAY LAW REPORTER, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928—concl'd.

220	Chockalingam Chetty v. Seethai Ache	107	237	282	Madhavrao v. Balabhai	107	119
227	Ramanandi Kuer v. Kalawati Kuer	107	14	290	Sime Darby & Co. v. Official Assignee	107	233
238	Sukdevdoss v. Govindoss	107	29	296	Maganmal v. Darbarilal	107	113
243	Sir Bissessar Dass Daga v. Vas	107	25	305	Jewan Lal Daga v. Nilmani Chaudhuri	107	337
251	Martand Rao v. Malhar Rao	107	7	313	Emperor v. Spratt (No. 1)	108	509
261	Muthu Chettiar v. Meenakshisundaram Ayyar	107	1	314	— v. Spratt (No. 2)	108	32
267	Bhagwan Singh v. Ujagar Singh	107	20	315	— v. Spratt (No. 3)	108	30
275	Ardeshir v. G. I. P. Railway	107	124	320	— v. Santaram	110	235

55 I. L. R., CALCUTTA SERIES, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Sassoon & Sons Ltd. v. International Banking Corporation	107	225	126	Saleh Mahomed Umer Dossal v. Natoomal Kessamal	104	478
20	Balmakunda Bisseswar Lal v. Bengal-Nagpur Railway Co., Ltd.	103	740	132	Indian Peninsula Railway Co. Ltd. v. Jes Raj Patwari	106	252
35	Bhupendra Narain Sinha v. Rajeswar Prasad Bhagat	106	117	142	Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company v. Chakravarti Sons & Co.	106	247
65	Budhu Tatus v. Emperor	109	175	154	Durga Priya Chowdhury v. Durga Pada Roy	109	752
67	Nepra v. Sayer Pramanik	103	662	164	Harendra Nath Singha Ray v. Purna Chandra Goswami	109	755
78	Susil Kumar Choudhury v. Ananada Prasanna Lahiri	103	860	173	A. B. Mitchell v. J. O. Dutt	109	739
85	M. Banerjee v. Anukul Chandra Mitra	104	717	180	Heeralal Agarwalla & Co. v. Joakim Nabapiet & Co., Ltd.	103	648
91	Muhammad Yusaf v. Ram Gobinda Ojha	109	538	201	Litifa Khatun v. Tofer Ali	104	655
96	Manmatha Nath Ghose v. Lachmi Debi	105	65	210	Surendra Nath Rath v. Sambhunnath Dobey	104	219
104	Mahomed Yakub Mian Majumdar v. Namar Ali	104	353	219	Banka Behari Deb v. Birendra Nath Dutt	103	864
108	Fazoo Mia v. Sultan Ahamad Chaudhury	106	143	228	Corporation of Calcutta v. Shaikh Keamuddin	103	533
113	Johurmull Bhutra v. Kedar Nath Bhutra	104	387

47 CALCUTTA LAW JOURNAL, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Delhi Cloth and General Mills Co. Ltd. v. Income Tax Commissioner, Delhi	106	156	82	Naimuddin Biswas v. Maniraddin Lashkar	107	726
7	Gauri Shankar v. Jiwan Singh	107	4	87	Nabu Sabu v. Kamdev Maity	107	729
12	Dasharathi Ghose v. Khundkar Abdul Hanan	105	15	90	Sri Rani Chattri Kumari Devi v. W. W. Broucke	106	571
21	Ataharuddin Taluqdar v. Murari Mohun Dutta	107	735	96	Commissioner of Income Tax, Bombay v. Western India Turf Club, Limited	106	642
27	Munshi Safarali Master v. Abdul Majid	100	614	101	Thakur Shiam Sundar Singh v. Thakur Jagannath Singh	106	534
32	Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company v. Messrs. Ohakravarti, Sons and Company	106	247	107	Kumar Birendra Nath Roy Bahadur v. Tarini Kanta Roy	107	724
38	Srimati Jugal Kishore Debi v. Baidya Nath Roy	104	668	112	Upendra Lal Gupta v. Jogesh Chandra Roy	107	730
43	Kedar Nath Mahato v. Emperor	108	577	118	Radha Mohan Dutta v. Nripendra Nath Nandy	105	422
59	Guimoni Dasi v. Tarini Charan Porai	104	360	122	Badhu Tatwa v. King-Emperor	109	175
62	Satish Chandra De Sarkar v. Bakhal Chandra Saha	107	733	124	Nahar Lal Shah Paramesswar Doyal Shah v. Baij Nath Shah	To be printed.
66	Tamijannessa Khatum v. Purna Chandra Chakravarty	103	853	131	Gobind Prasad Kanhaiya Lal... Kumar Baijnath Prasad Singh v. Kedar Nath Goenka	106	646
69	Banka Behari Deb v. Birendra Nath Dutt	103	864	136	V. P. R. V. Chockalingam Chetty v. Seethai Ache	107	237
75	Chuni Lal Jamadar v. Satindra Narain Sinha	103	621	144	Sukdevdoss Ramprasad v. Diwan Bahadur Govindoss Chathurbhujadoos & Co.	107	29

47. CALCUTTA LAW JOURNAL, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928—concl'd.

150	Martand Rao v. Malhar Rao ...	107	7	208	Ram Gopal Goenka v. Corporation of Calcutta	109	237
162	Sir Bissessar Dass Daga v. Emmanuel Vas	107	25	211	Doat Ali (alias) Sheikh Deotali Sarkar v. King-Emperor	109	240
171	Ramanandi Kuer v. Kalawati Kuer	107	14	214	Ardeshir Bhicaji Tamboli v. Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company, Bombay	107	124
183	P. O. Muthu Ohettiar v. K. V. Meenakshisundaram Ayyar	107	1
189	Bhagwan Singh v. Ujagar Singh	107	20
198	Madhavrao Ganpatrao Desai v. Balabhai Raghunath Agaskar	107	119

9 I. L. R., LAHORE SERIES, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Labha Ram v. Raman	103	280	85	Santu Ram v. Dodan Bai	103	703
4	Imam-ud-din v. Sri Ram-Perbhu Dial	110	832	88	Fateh Ali v. Gehna	112	17
7	Mathra Das-Jagan Nath v. Jiwan Mal-Gian Chand	112	29	95	Saif-ul-Kahman v. Muhammad Ali Khan	112	41
23	Budha Mal v. Rallia Ram	110	631	106	Viranwali v. Kundan Lal	112	35
27	Malik Faqir v. Waryam	103	616	110	Jugal Das v. Jasodan Bai	103	170
33	Khushia v. Faiz Muhammad Khan	103	365	116	O'Donnell v. O'Donnell	109	513
35	Municipal Committee, Amritsar v. Harnam Das	110	628	120	Muzaffar Muhammad v. Imam Din	103	865
38	Oheta v. Baija	105	507	133	Kundan v. The Crown	104	253
67	Sham Das v. Kishan Chand	110	8:0	137	Crown v. Puran Singh	112	49
76	Secretary of State v. Tirath Ram	104	281

10 LAHORE LAW JOURNAL, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	B. N. W. Ry. Co. v. Dasaundi Mal Bishambar Dass	108	177	51	Sant Singh v. Mubarak Singh	106	911
13	Malik Faqira v. Jindo	105	603	55	Balkishan Das v. Gendo	108	379
17	Basant Singh v. Shibha Mal	107	481	58	Chhajju v. Crown	Not reportable.
21	Hira v. Tek Chand	107	487	63	Nur Muhammad v. Qaim	110	857
23	Gurdevi v. Kharaiti Mal	104	222	68	Barkat Ali v. Fattu	106	491
27	Sanwal Das v. Kuremal	109	779	70	Kirpi v. Chuni Lal	111	848
40	Joint Hindu family v. Ghulam Hussain	103	52	72	Parman Ram v. Crown	108	517
42	Ralla Ram v. Mohammad Ayub Khan	107	782	75	F. I. D.-Lachmi Narain v. Ram Chand	109	533
45	Nandu v. Jaimal	108	170	87	Bhamboo Mal v. Ram Narain	109	28
48	F. Tirkha Ram-Chuni Lal v. Haider	107	617	93	Kanshi Ram v. Shankar Das	111	596

29 PUNJAB LAW REPORTER, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Balla Mal v. Ata Ullah Khan	103	518	69	Muhammad Ismail v. Crown	109	239
8	Inayat v. Bhari	109	255	70	Pahlad Rai v. Shiv Ram	102	843
14	Mian Taj Mahmud v. Crown	107	100	72	Daya Ram v. Harcharn Das	107	781
27	Bura Mal v. Tulsi Ram	107	609	74	Lajpat Rai v. Faiz Ahmad	103	889
30	Muhammad Ali v. Crown	107	771	77	Daim v. Khanu	109	266
33	Farzand Ali v. Crown	107	482	81	Sikandar Khan v. Baland Khan	107	596
37	Delhi Cloth and General Mills Co., Ltd. v. Income Tax Commissioner, Delhi	106	156	90	Fateh Muhammad v. Crown	109	682
42	Sant Singh v. Mubarak Singh	106	901	95	Ralla v. Mula	103	400
45	Basant Singh v. Crown	109	215	97	Beli Ram v. Ishar Das	110	264
46	Thakar Dass v. Narain	109	165	101	Chawa v. Ahmad	110	264
50	Ram Rakhi v. Brij Bhushan	110	118	104	Tola Ram v. Crown	102	774
52	Waryam Singh v. Crown	106	339	110	Khetu Ram v. Harphool	105	847
54	Mohammed Hussain v. Crown	106	340	112	Umra v. Durga Devi	106	225
56	Muhammad Bakhsh v. Ramzan	109	169	114	Muhammad Ishaq v. Muhammad Yusuf	101	172
58	Ashaq Ali Khan v. Shafi Ali Khan	109	611	118	Mohammad Akbar v. Dharmasala Baba Sadqi Das	103	274
59	Allah Din v. Crown	106	448	119	Mangal Sain v. Indian Merchants Bank, Limited, Amritsar	107	594
61	Kirpa Ram-Lachaman Dass v. Sawan Mal-Goon Chand	106	40	122	Rup Singh v. Official Receiver	107	394
64	Karam Chand v. Jullundur Bank, Ltd.	102	705	125	Wadahawa v. Jai Kishan Das	106	493
67	Shankar Das v. Hukam Chand	106	486	126	Mehta Krishan Chandra, In the matter of	109	228
68	Nur Din v. Allah Ditta	106	481	128	Labha Mal v. Wasawa Mal	106	584

29 PUNJAB LAW REPORTER, FOR JANUARY FEBRUARY, 1928—concl'd.

129	Ashaq Ali Khan v. Mohd. Shafi Ali Khan	106	570	148	Mazulla Khan v. Ghazi Khan	109	817
131	Jam Budha v. Dasu Ram	106	488	151	Crown v. Des Raj	103	226
132	Ulfat Rai v. Tej Narain	106	178	154	Muzaffar Muhammad v. Imam Din	103	665
142	Allahabad Bank, Ltd., Lahore v. Rattan Chand Chawla	102	801

51 I. L. R., MADRAS SERIES, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Mokka Kone v. Ammakutti	108	760	128	Sonachalam Pillai v. Kumaravelu Chettiar	107	625
31	Veeraraghavachariar v. Advocate-General, Madras	106	685	157	Girdharadoss & Co. v. Para Appadurai	107	792
46	Narayanan Nambudri v. Theva Amma	106	230	161	Muthukathan Ambalam v. Govinda Ayyar	108	68
68	Rama Ayyar v. Sivaghanam Pillai	109	317	165	Abdul Rahim v. Batcha Sahib	107	813
76	Jagannatha Pillai v. Kathaperumal Pillai	105	88	167	Kuppathan, In re	105	667
84	Nachiappa Udayan, In re	105	803	171	Suppan Chetti, In re	105	801
86	Ramachandriah, In re	105	829	174	Amirkhan v. Mahalingam Pillai	105	680
91	Veerabadra Pillai, In re	105	657	178	Ibray Rowthen, In re	106	218
96	Sukdedoss Ramprasad v. Govindoss Chaturbhujadoss	107	29	180	Venkata Rao v. Padmanabha Raju	105	669
103	Martiroso v. Subrahmanyam Chettiar	109	70	185	Shariff Sahib v. Abdul Karim Sahib	105	819
122	Muthu Balu Chettiar v. Chairman, Madura Municipality	105	686	187	Crown Prosecutor v. Khadir Mohideen	105	674

54 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Commissioner of Income Tax, Bombay v. Western India Turf Club, Ltd.	106	642	145	Singara Mudaliar v. Govindasami Chetti	108	413
6	Kumar Baijnath Prasad Singh v. Kedar Nath Goenka	106	646	147	Municipal Council, Cuddalore v. Krishnan Nambiar	105	147
8	Sonachalam Pillai v. Kumaravelu Chettiar	107	625	150	Rangasami Aiyangar v. Samasundaram Chettiar	107	646
30	Mosafkanni Ravuthar v. Doraisami	105	179	154	Muniswami Mudali v. Meenakshi Ammal	106	680
40	Rattamma v. Krishnamurthi	106	482	154	Manakkal Maheswaram Nambudripad v. Velappa Menon	107	303
43	Shiam Sundar Singh v. Jagannath Singh	106	534	157	Meenal v. Govindasami Naidu	105	351
49	Martiroso v. Subramaniam Chettiar	109	70	158	Public Prosecutor v. Ratnavelu Mudali	106	459
65	Raja Rajeswara Muthu Ramalinga Sethupathy v. Shunmuga Nadan	107	804	167	Ardeshir Bhicaji Tamboli v. Agent, G. I. P. Ry. Company, Bombay	107	124
66	Bhadri Narayana v. Srinivasa Rao	107	619	174	Mooka Kone v. Ammakutti	108	760
67	Subramania Aiyar v. Rama Aiyar	105	881	208	Maganmal v. Darbarilal Chowdhry	107	113
76	Sundara Raju Dikshatulu v. Seshadri Dikshatulu	106	426	219	Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras v. Muhammad Kassim Rowther	106	308
82	Muthu Chettiar v. Meenakshisundaram Aiyar	107	1	226	Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras v. Muhammad Kassim Rowther	109	329
88	Chockalingam Chetty v. Seethai Ache	107	237	229	Rajah Saheb of Vizianagaram v. Sub-Collector of Berhampore	108	656
96	Padmanabha Ayyar v. Sitarama Ayyar	106	158	230	Kanakamma v. Secretary of State for India	107	643
109	Alwar Chetty v. Jagannatha Aiyar	108	291	231	Ramachandram v. Sabapathy Mudaliar	108	288
116	Raju Naidu v. Kanakku Pillai	108	77	239	Vasudeva Rao v. Sakaram Row	108	301
122	Sir Bissessar Das Daga v. Emanuel Vas	107	25	245	Madhavrao Ganpatrao Desai v. Raghunath Agaskar	107	119
130	Sukdevdoss Ramprasad v. Govindoss Chaturbhujadoss & Co.	107	29	254	Bhagwan Singh v. Ujagar Singh	107	20
136	Maneckji Rustomji v. Wadia	107	639	261	Public Prosecutor v. Palaniyandi Naicken	106	705
138	Venkatrayudu v. Maharaja of Pithapuram	106	663	263	Yelumalai v. Kuppammal	109	173
140	Rama Aiyar v. Sivagnanam Pillai	109	317	267	Muthukathan Ambalagan v. Gopinada Aiyar	108	68

54 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928—concl'd.

269	Athimoolam Servai v. Gopalakrishna Kone	105	216	298	Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras v. Messrs. Sheikh Abdul Kadir Marakayar & Co.	108	73
272	Ramappa Naidu v. Lakshmanan Chettiar	107	786	312	Sheikh Dawood v. Velayuda Semmanotti	108	65
278	Subramanian Chetty v. Sivaswami Chetty	109	557	315	C. Cunniah Company, In re	108	636
281	Ramanandi Kuer v. Kalawati Kuer	107	14	316	Giridharadoss Company v. Appadurai	107	792
293	Sri Rani Chattra Kumari Devi v. Broucke	106	571

27 LAW WEEKLY, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Chockalingam Chetty v. Seethai Ache	107	237	140	Ramgowda Annagowda Patil v. Bhausahab	105	708
7	Shiam Sundar Singh v. Jagannath Singh	103	534	145	Sukdevdoss Ramprasad v. Choti Bai	109	5
12	Narayana Patrudu v. Manager of Peda Marangi Estate	109	869	156	Pochiraju Kannamma v. Mannava Machamma	107	497
16	Public Prosecutor v. Palaniyandi Naicken	106	705	159	Rama Aiyar v. Sivagnanam Pillai	109	317
18	Sadaka Muhammad v. Hayath Batcha Sahib	107	813	164	Narasa Reddi v. Hajee Tar Mahomed Ayooob Sait	107	606
20	Kaliya Perumal Naidu v. Subramaniam Chettiar	109	866	167	Sowbhagiammal v. Komalangi Ammal	107	420
23	Raju Naidu v. Kanakku Pillai	108	77	172	Maneckji Rustomji v. Wadia	107	639
28	President, District Board, Anantapur v. Ismail Sahib	107	428	175	Ma On v. Maung Tin	102	670
30	Chinnan Chetty v. Vilathan	106	219	179	Delhi Cloth and General Mills Co., Ltd., v. Income Tax Commissioner	106	156
32	Ramanatham Chettiar v. Balayee Ammal	107	136	182	Muthiah Chettiar v. Suppa Pillai	106	641
42	Venkatacharyulu v. Suryanarayana	107	130	184	Public Prosecutor v. Kandasami Thevan	98	99
47	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Sethuram Madige Rao Sahib	107	608	188	Bhimana Gowd v. Siddalingana Gowd	104	768
51	Martirosi v. Subrahmaniam Chettiar	109	70	198	Mukund v. Balakrishna	105	703
66	Local Fund Overseer, Mayavaram v. Pukkirisami Thevan	103	416	203	Gauri Shankar v. Jiwan Singh	107	4
69	Public Prosecutor v. Ratnavelu Mudali	106	459	206	Ganapathi Bhatta v. Beeru Bhandary	106	196
77	Public Prosecutor v. Devasikamani	106	559	212	Abdul Ghani Sahib v. Subramania Chettiar	107	769
81	Jagannadhaswamy Naidu v. Manikyam	106	222	216	Sonachalam Pillai v. Kumaravelu Chettiar	107	625
84	Public Prosecutor v. Ramasubbayya Chetty	106	716	237	Dinakar Bahadur v. Shanmugha Nadan	107	804
85	Appala Naidu, In re	107	512	238	Meenakshi Ammal v. Iswaram Aiyar	107	301
86	Parthasarathi Naicker v. Krishnaswami Aiyar	106	706	239	Boddipati Lalamma, In re	106	799
87	C. Cunniah & Co., In re	103	636	239	Muthu Balu Chettiar v. Chairman, Madura Municipality	105	686
88	Ramappa Naidu v. Lakshmanan Chettiar	107	786	243	Bombay Company Ltd., v. Municipal Council, Dindigul	108	216
93	Sankunni Mannadiar v. Krishna Mannadiar	107	490	253	Krishnayya Garu v. Secretary of State for India	107	503
101	Bala Tripura Sundaramma v. Secretary of State for India in Council	106	891	265	Sami Vannia Nainar v. Periaswami Naidu	108	638
119	Sri Protap Chandra Deo v. Raja Jagadish Chandra Deo	102	590	267	Arunachela Aiyar v. Louis Dreyfus & Co.	107	793
124	Secretary of State for India v. Girjabai	106	1	286	Kulandaivelu Nachiar v. Ramaswami Pandia	108	539
132	Sheik Dawood v. Velayuda Semmanotti	108	65	291	Govindaraja Naicker v. Kassim Sahib	108	542
135	Giridhardoss Coy v. Para Appadurai	107	792	294	Commissioner of Income Tax v. Sheik Abdul Kadir Marakkayar & Co.	108	73
139	China Venkatara Yudu v. Maharaja of Pithapuram	106	663	307	Bodapati Adenna v. Chinna Ramayya	109	168
				310	Rajah Sahab of Vizianagaram v. Sub-Collector of Berhampore	108	656

27. LAW WEEKLY, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928—concl'd.

311	Tirumala Reddi v. Kolakula Thomasu Reddi ...	109	581	322	Ramakrishna Reddiar v. Chidambara Swamigal ...	108	282
318	Srinivasa Row. In re ...	109	605	333	Krishna Mukerjee v. Satish Chandra Giri ...	108	348
320	Muniswami Mudali v. Meenakshi Ammal ...	106	660	336	Puran Chand Nahatta v. Monmotho Nath Mukherjee ...	108	342
320	Rangasa Rao v. Swaminatha Aiyar ...	108	414	339	Abdur Rahim v. Syed Abu Mahomed Barkat Ali Shah ...	108	361

(1928) MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY.

1	Gauri Shanker v. Jiwan Singh ...	107	4	101	Ramachandra Upadya v. Srinivasa Tantri ...	109	297
5	Viranna v. Ramanamma ...	109	87	101	Zamindar Garu v. Thuraga Pattabiramayya ...	109	180
9	Elliot v. Subbiah ...	105	138	102	Rajah of Vijianagaram v. Sub-Collector of Berhampore ...	108	656
20	Chockalingam Chetty v. Seethai Ache ...	107	237	103	Pattanna v. Neeli Chetty Ramiah Chetty ...	108	297
25	Raju Naidu v. Kanakku Pillai ...	108	77	103	Shiam Sundar Singh v. Jagannath Singh ...	106	534
30	Sataka Muhammad v. Hayath Batcha Saib ...	107	813	107	Martirovi v. Subrahmanyam Chettiar ...	109	70
31	Boddipati Salamma v. Emperor ...	106	799	120	Dantaluri Venkata Narasimha Raju v. Dantaluri Chandrayya ...	105	171
32	Sukadevdoss Ramprasad v. Choti Bai ...	109	5	122	Cuddapah Ghouse Khan v. Bala Subba Rowther ...	105	109
41	Muthayya Chetty v. Narayanan Chetty ...	109	101	125	Seetharama Chettiar v. Sellathammal ...	To be printed.
45	Manekji Rustomji v. Wadia ...	107	639	127	Venkatarama Prabhu v. Vasudeva Prabhu ...	108	294
47	Muthukantha Ambalagan v. Gopinada Iyer ...	108	68	132	Arunachela Iyah v. Louis Dreyfus & Co. ...	107	793
49	Shariba Booby v. Abdul Salam ...	110	490	149	Puran Chand Nahatta v. Monmotho Nath Mukerjee ...	108	342
50	Meenakshi Ammal v. Iswaram Iyer ...	107	301	152	Arunachalam Pillai v. Shanmugam Pillai ...	To be printed.
51	Subraya Bhatta v. Sripathi Bhatta ...	To be printed.		154	Jewan Lal Daga v. Nilmani Chaudhuri ...	107	337
52	Chinna Venkatarayudu v. Maharaja of Pithapuram ...	106	663	157	Kumarappa Chettiar v. Podisal ...	102	664
53	Kodali Thiruvengalaratnam v. Kodali Butchayya ...	To be printed.		159	Bodapati Adenna v. Bodapati Chinna Ramayya ...	109	168
62	Alamelumanga Thayarammal v. Baluswami Chetty ...	108	208	161	Srinivasa Rao v. Emperor ...	109	605
67	Kaliaperumal Naidu v. Subramanyam Chettiar ...	109	866	162	Authimoolam Pillai v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	108	897
69	Kadar Betcha Saheb v. Emperor ...	109	363	164	Dwarampoodi Venkammav Goparaju Perraju ...	112	1
70	Paramasiva Moopan v. Emperor ...	109	606	170	Vanama Akkayya v. Vanama Lakshamma ...	110	186
71	Bitchalugadu v. Emperor ...	108	901	175	Kana Velayuda Nadar v. Subramania Pillai ...	To be printed.
72	Murugesu Koundan v. Emperor ...	109	816	177	Tirumala Reddi Chinappa Reddi v. Kolakula Thomasu Reddi ...	109	581
73	Sami Vannia Nainar v. Periaswami Naidu ...	108	638	183	Krishna Nath v. Kunnath Kunhamed ...	109	758
74	Kadiraya Goundan v. Kamulu Goundan ...	To be printed.		185	Ramakrishna Reddiar v. Kasivasi Chidambara Swamigal ...	108	282
79	Girdharadoss Co. v. Appadurai ...	107	792	193	Sundarachariar v. Nilamegam Ayyar ...	To be printed.
82	Edega Obanna v. Kanithi Reddi ...	108	514
83	Borojo Charchi v. Odhikari Basudese Das ...	107	653
86	Ramappa Naidu v. Lakshmanan Chettiar ...	107	786
91	Muthu Chettiar v. Meenakshisundaram Aiyar ...	107	1
95	Delhi Cloth and General Mills v. Income Tax Commissioner, Delhi ...	106	156
98	Palaniappa Mudaliar v. Syed Gulam Ghouse Nadani Saheb ...	110	21

11 NAGPUR LAW JOURNAL, FOR JANUARY, 1928.

1	Raoji v. Girjabai ...	107	527	14	Raje Bahadur Raghojirao v. Sitaraj Dajiba Pande ...	107	899
4	Charles Henry Smalley v. Mrs. Olive Muriel Smalley ...	107	667	21	Deola and Dajiba v. Raje. Janardhan Shrinivas ...	111	488
7	Sheobalak Prasad v. Emperor ...	108	442

24 NAGPUR LAW REPORTS, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Mannalal v. Secretary of State for India	103	213	17	Sir Bissessar Dass Daga v. Emmanuel Vas	107	25
3	Ganpatrao v. Thallua	105	495	23	Jago v. Baji Rao	109	643
5	Sadasheo v. S. N. Fadnavis	94	40	25	Martand Rao v. Malhar Rao	107	7
8	Ganpat v. Mahadeo	78	946	36	Ramchandra v. Uka	103	279

3 I. L. R., LUCKNOW SERIES, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Ganesh Singh v. Bhikham Singh	107	545	113	Lal Bahadur Singh v. Rameshwar Prasad	105	581
19	Thakur Jagmohan Singh v. Sheoraj Kuer	106	503	118	Mirza Zamin Abbas v. Lachhmi Narain	105	896
76	Raghuraj Chandra v. Subhadra Kunwar	103	673	126	Mirza Muhammad Sadiq Ali Khan v. Sajjad Mirza alias Munney Agha	105	611
89	Sher Bahadur Singh v. Tafazzul Husain	104	426	130	Ali Husain v. Afzal Husain	105	781
102	Bala Prasad v. Bengal and North-Western Railway Company	106	311	133	Ram Dat v. Chhotak	103	244
107	Mathura v. H. H. Maharana Sir Uday Bhan Singh	106	360

5 OUDH WEEKLY NOTES, FOR JANUARY, 1928.

1	Jagmohan Singh v. Sri Nath	107	868	61	Tikai Chobay v. Firm Sheo Dayal-Ramji Das	107	887
11	Data Din v. Baldeo	110	119	68	Fatimunnisa v. Asghar Husain	108	105
15	Lal Harihar Partab Bakhsh Singh v. Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh	107	553	78	Debi Dayal v. Manao	107	333
20	Mohammed Shafi v. Raunaq Ali	107	882	80	Mathura v. Shambhoo Dayal	107	884
23	Zakaullah Khan v. Gulkandi	110	115	82	Ram Sukh Dubey v. Rampat Tewari	107	879
26	Ram Dulari v. Mushtaq Ahmad	110	216	85	Ram Narain v. Mannu Lal	107	866
29	Madaru v. King-Emperor	107	177	87	Ansar Ahmad v. Samidan	106	822
33	Mani Ram v. King-Emperor	107	876	89	Ram Lal v. Mahadeo	110	113
35	Bishun Narain v. Mazharul Haq	107	881	91	Balbhaddar Singh v. Hardei	108	111
38	Commissioner of Income Tax, Bombay v. Western India Turf Club, Ltd.	106	642	93	Kumar Baijnath Prasad Singh v. Kedarnath Goenka	106	646
42	Gur Saran v. Jagannath	107	896	96	Ramanandi Kuer v. Kalawati Kuer	107	14
44	Thakur Din v. Uma Prasad Dubey				Gaya Bakhsh Singh v. Kuar
48	Kashi Nath Rai v. Nand Behari Singh	108	97	108	Rajendra Bahadur Singh	110	83
50	Maharaja of Kapurthala v. Brij Mohan Das	110	96	121	Faqir Baksh Singh v. Prag Singh	108	109
		108	98	124	Rahim Bakhsh v. King Emperor	109	349

*12 REVENUE DECISIONS, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

4	Gaya Prasad v. Sahdeo Singh	To be printed.		61	Mohammad Yakub Khan v. Bhikhari Ahir	110	67
6	Narpat v. Mohammad Rafi	112	10	69	Rahmat v. Ganeshi Lal	108	733
10	Ramanand v. Secretary of State for India in Council	107	566	72	Durga Prasad v. Jagat Jit Singh Bahadur	To be printed.
20	Faqira v. Hardeva	To be printed.		79	Kesar Kuer v. Kallu Ram	107	562
28	Gulab Singh v. Ali Begam	110	50	84	Kushar Das v. Balbhaddar Singh	107	872
35	Zakaullah Khan v. Gulkandi	110	115	90	Ishur Das v. Chiranji Lal	To be printed.
37	Phulbans Kuar v. Bhagdat Singh	107	677	99	Sat Narain Singh v. Badri Prasad Singh	107	556
44	Raghubar Dayal v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh	110	875	104	Lachman v. Jarbandhan	108	229
46	Gur Saran v. Jagannath	107	896	109	Narayan v. Baldeo Singh	107	877
51	Shiv Ram Lal v. Gangha Shankar Singh	111	370	114	Balaso v. Mauladad Khan	108	132
53	Bhagwati Deo Saran v. Deo Saran Singh	107	702	117	Bala Prasad v. Shyam Behari Lal	108	575
58	Pahlad Singh v. Suraj Bakhsh Singh	109	304	119	Shyam Monohar v. Beni Madho	110	320

*Note—Decisions of the Board of Revenue, U. P., not printed in Indian Cases.—[Ed.]

7 I. L. R., PATNA SERIES, FOR JANUARY, 1928.

1	Lachmi Kuer v. Gajadhar Prashad	104	104	28	Raja Gopal Ray Bahadur v. Taj Muhammad	103	615
6	Ihsan Hasan Khan v. Panna Lal	103	430	30	Raghu Ram Pandey v. Deokali Pande	To be printed.
15	Ramchariter Singh v. King-Emperor	103	548

7 I. L. R., PATNA SERIES, FOR JANUARY, 1928--concl'd.

33	Bibi Umatul Rasul v. Nageshwar Bux Rai	103 679	44	Raghubar Narain Chaudhuri v. Mohit Narayan Jha	To be printed.
41	Lakshminath v. Benares Bank Limited	To be printed.	50	Tajali Mian v. King-Emperor	104 459
			55	Ramjag Ahir v. King-Emperor	109 114
			61	Akbar Ali v. King-Emperor	104 897

6 I. L. R., RANGOON SERIES, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Ma Kin v. Maung Po Sein	109 456	60	U Min Din v. U Po Thaug	109 689
6	Htin Gyaw v. King-Emperor	109 491	75	Rangoon Turf Club v. Corporation of Rangoon	109 514
21	Commissioner of Income-Tax v. A. R. A. N. Chettiar Firm and V. D. M. R. M. Chettiar Firm	110 29	79	Ma Saw Kin v. Maung Tun Aung Gyaw	108 345
25	I. E. Abowath v. A. E. Abowath	To be printed.	87	N. P. A. Chettiar Firm v. H. O. Sharma	110 133
27	Tan Seik Ke v. C. A. M. C. T. Firm	109 769	97	U Ba Pe v. U Po Sein	110 41
29	V. P. R. V. Chokalingam Chetty v. Seethai Acha	107 237	108	Emperor v. Mutu Alagi	110 102
39	K. B. v. Maung Tin Saw	109 675	113	V. P. R. V. Chokalingam Chettyar E. N. M. K. Chettyar Firm	107 461
43	Maung Ba Than v. District Council of Pegu	109 697	122	Maung Shwe Ok v. Karambu Pillay	110 701
46	Jeffery v. Official Assignee of Rangoon	109 695	125	Maung Ba v. Maung Kywe	110 735
48	Po Thaug v. King-Emperor	109 810	128	Maung Pan Gyaw v. Ma Bein	110 729
49	Rangaswami Chettyar v. Maung Po Ku	109 679	131	Kwai Tong Kee v. Lim Chaung Ghee	110 741
54	Rangasawmy v. King-Emperor	109 683	134	Mataprasad Upadhyaya v. Kunnon Devi	110 698

29 CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

1	Parma Nand v. Emperor	106 337	71	Tirumala Venkatarreddy v. Sika-tapu Ramayya	106 583
2	In re Srinivasulu Naicken	106 338	72	Labha Mal v. Wasawa Mal	106 584
3	Waryam Singh v. Emperor	106 339	72	In re Vijayaranga Naidu	106 581
4	Mohammed Hussain v. Emperor	106 310	73	Ala Singh v. Emperor	106 585
5	In re Abbas Ali Sahib	106 341	75	Empercr v. Shib Das Marwari	106 587
6	Sai v. Emperor	106 342	77	Taranagowd v. Emperor	106 589
7	In re Guturi Nagadu	106 343	79	Gendo Uraon v. Emperor	106 591
11	Mangta v. Emperor	106 317	81	Bajit Mian v. Emperor	106 673
12	Emperor v. Asadali	106 348	86	Narsinghdas Marwari v. Em-peror	106 678
14	Emperor v. Ahmad	106 350	88	Sripat Narain Singh v. Gahbar Rai	106 680
17	Gahbar Pande v. Emperor	106 433	90	Parmod Ban Behari Saran v. Emperor	106 682
20	Faiz Mohammad v. Nabu	106 436	92	Emperor v. Babu Ram	106 684
21	Emperor v. Mangu	106 437	91	Chandrika Singh v. Emperor	106 686
24	Mehr Shah v. Emperor	106 440	97	Manzur Husain v. Emperor	106 689
26	Karan Singh v. Emperor	106 442	99	Emperor v. Bandhu Singh	106 691
30	Local Fund Overseer v. Pakkiri-sami Thevan	106 446	102	S. C. Mittra v. Kali Charan	106 694
32	Allah Din v. Emperor	106 448	106	Lalji Dusadh v. Emperor	106 698
33	Karam Ilahi v. Emperor	106 449	111	Hari Gope v. Manmohan Das	106 703
34	Babu Mal v. Ghasi	106 450	113	Public Prosecutor v. Palaniyandi Naicken	106 705
35	Emperor v. Radhia	106 451	114	Parthasarathi Naicker v. Krishna-swami Iyer	106 706
35	Nihal Singh v. Emperor	106 451	114	Badri Dass v. Emperor	106 706
38	Muhammad Zaman v. Emperor	106 454	115	Emperor v. Nga Lu Gale	106 707
39	Moti Lal v. Emperor	106 455	117	Sant Singh v. Emperor	106 709
40	Gopal Singh v. Emperor	106 456	119	Ahamadar Rahman v. Dwip Chand	106 711
41	Khandu v. Emperor	106 457	123	In re V. A. Gopal Narain	106 715
43	Public Prosecutor v. Ratnavelu Mudali	106 459	124	Khub Chand v. Emperor	106 716
47	Phuman Singh v. Emperor	106 463	124	Public Prosecutor v. Bysani Ramasubbayya Chetty	106 716
48	Maccarthy v. Shannon	106 464	125	Akhtar Mohammad v. Emperor	106 717
49	Mari Narayan Chandra v. Em-peror	106 545	126	Gangadhar Bhattacharya v. Em-peror	106 718
63	Public Prosecutor v. Budipiti Devasikamani	106 559	126	Ellamal v. Emperor	106 718
65	Emperor v. Wali Mohammad	106 577
68	Emperor v. Bande Ali	106 580
69	Munshi Singh v. Emperor	106 581
70	Sumram Singh v. Emperor	106 582

29 CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928—concl'd.

129	Ram Prasad v. Emperor	106	721	204	Emperor v. Bahadur	106	796
198	Lal Badshah v. Emperor	106	790	207	Boddipati Lalamma v. Emperor	106	799
200	Siraj-ud-Din v. Emperor	106	792	208	Kalu v. Emperor	106	800
202	Sikandar v. Emperor	106	794

9 ALL INDIA CRIMINAL REPORTS, FOR JANUARY, 1928.

1	Tufail Ahmad v. Emperor	109	809	40	Sheoparsan Singh v. Emperor	104	909
2	Ramjiwan Marwadi v. Lachimi	104	108	41	Akhoy Sardar v. Lalchand Sardar	104	635
4	Har Prasad v. Emperor	107	241	42	Atma Singh v. Emperor	104	636
7	Murugan v. Gutha Rami Naidu	104	625	43	Jialal v. Ohhangalal	104	717
8	Lachimi Kuer v. Gajadhar Proshad	104	104	44	Iswari Prashad Sharma v. Emperor	105	225
12	Gauri Shanker v. Sri Krishna	107	242	46	Munnun v. Emperor	104	636
13	Kalu Mal v. Emperor	104	106	47	Gopal Lal Sanyal v. Emperor	105	228
16	Gulab v. Emperor	107	243	49	Pandurang Krishana Deotale v. Emperor	105	226
20	Irjan v. Emperor	104	714	52	Budhua v. Emperor	107	563
24	Sri Ram v. Emperor	103	411	54	Bishwanath Singh v. Emperor	104	712
25	Gour Mohan Gossain v. Emperor	104	711	56	Sher Muhammad v. Emperor	104	630
27	Emperor v. Sita Ram Narayan Ghogle	104	912	61	Radha Prasad Bhagat v. Emperor	104	633
28	P. A. Paul v. O. Hunt	104	705	64	M. Banerjee v. Emperor	104	717
29	Dhanu Raut v. Emperor	104	705	66	Emperor v. Noor Mahomed	105	433
33	Nga Ba On v. Emperor	104	637	67	Bholu v. Punaji	105	454
38	K. Srinivasa Moorthi v. Narasi Mahalu Naidu	104	719	91	Baddu Khan v. King-Emperor	108	124

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928.

Privy Council.				Allahabad High Court—contd.
1	Commissioner of Income-Tax, Bombay v. Western India Turf Club, Ltd	106	642	20	Darab v. Emperor	105	825
2	Ramanandi Kuer v. Kalawati Kuer	107	14	21	Shabbir Hasan v. Emperor	105	810
8	Ma Saw Kin v. Maung Tun Aung Gyaw	108	345	22	Mangu v. Emperor	106	437
10	Martand Rao v. Malhar Rao	107	7	25	Karan Singh v. Emperor	106	442
16	Abdur Rahim v. Abu Mahomed Barkat Ali	108	361	29	Shikar Chand v. Jagmandar Das	106	519
20	Bhagwan Singh v. Ujagar Singh	107	20	33	Ganga Charan v. Ram Chandra	106	389
24	Ardeshir v. Agent G. I. P. Ry	107	124	34	Badri Singh v. Sadaphal Singh	111	701
27	Bissessar Dass v. Emmanuel Vas	107	25	38	Municipal Board Benares v. Shambhu Nath	101	524
30	Sukdevdoss v. Govindoss & Co	107	29	39	Beti v. Sikhdar Singh	108	721
33	Madhavrao v. Balabhai	107	119	41	Lachmi Prasad v. Lachmi Narain	107	36
35	Muthu v. Meenakshisundaram	107	1	45	Bikhdeo Tewari v. Sukhdeo Tewari	102	175
38	Puran Chand v. Monmotho Nath	108	342	46	Salig Ram v. Lachhman	107	42
39	Seth Maganmal v. Darbarilal	107	113	50	Ram Rachha Tewari v. Girja Dat Pande	107	692
44	Chockalingam v. E. N. M. K. Chettiar Firm	107	461	51	Bohra Kanhaiya Lal v. Gendo	107	31
47	Khushaldas v. Chimanlal	108	14	52	Hukum Chand v. Sital Prasad	107	244
49	Benoy Krishna v. Satish Chandra	108	348	55	Manzur Husain v. Emperor	106	689
51	R. H. Skinner v. Rosy Skinner	108	350	55	Peare Mohan Prasad v. Raghu-nath Lal	107	40
54	Bhogilal v. Royal Insurance Co	108	1	58	Bajinath v. Chhote Lal	107	673
				59	Mohammad Sher Khan v. Bharat Indu	106	656
	Allahabad High Court.			60	Tufail Ahmed v. Emperor	109	809
1	Emperor v. Babu Ram	106	684	61	Mathura Kurmi v. Jagdeo Singh	107	33
3	Shyam Lal v. Sohan Lal	106	255	62	Majidan v. Sabir Ali	107	674
10	Kanhaiya Lal v. Suraj Karan	108	134	65	Sidh Gopal v. Behari Lal	107	247
12	Lakhmi Chand v. Kedari Nath	99	476	67	Paras Ram v. Neksai	107	682
13	Phulbans Kuar v. Bhagdat Singh	107	677	68	Ram Sarup v. Hardeo Prasad	108	144
14	Hafizuddin v. Laborde	105	815	71	Sahu Bisheshar Nath v. Chandu Lal	108	459
16	Sita Ram v. Nanku	106	250	74	Chandi Prasad v. Jamna	102	239
19	Bhagwant Lal v. Sri Ram Chandra Naik	103	654	77	Maksud Ali v. Sheikh Abdullah	108	728
				81	In the matter of Makund Sarup	107	683

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928—contd.

Allahabad High Court—concl'd.			Calcutta High Court—concl'd.
81	Lal Bahadur v. Emperor ...	108 122	92	Radha Rani Dasi v. Sukdeb Bhattacharjee ...	103 811
86	Thakur Lal v. Jagraj Singh ...	107 693	94	Krishna Chandra v. Dina Nath ...	107 357
92	Jai Narain v. Munna Lal ...	107 699	96	Akhoy Sardar v. Lalchand Sardar ...	104 635
95	Aminullah v. Emperor ...	107 690	97	Carmen v. O'Brien ...	107 353
96	Gainda v. Hazari Lal ...	108 704	99	Bijoy Lal v. Benarasidas ...	110 296
Bombay High Court.			102	Jatindra Nath v. Suradhani . Debi	105 851
1	G. I. P. Ry. v. Kashinath Chimnaji	106 465	103	Mahoruddi Sheikh v. Tafed Ali Khalifa	105 779
5	Bombay Steam Navigation Co. v. Vasudev ...	106 470	104	Mobesh Chandra v. Hemendra Nath ...	107 95
8	Venkatraman v. Janardhan ...	106 79	106	Maharaj Bahadur Singh v. Achala Bala Devi ...	105 763
14	Ravji Andu v. Rama Krishna ...	106 206	107	Barsik Nandi v. Gurudas Pal ...	107 474
16	Motilal v. Kasambhai ...	105 864	108	Dwarka Nath v. Atul Chandra ...	106 509
17	Sorabshah v. Secretary of State ...	109 141	112	Saroj Bandhu v. Mati Lal ...	105 756
20	Nathabhai v. Vaghjibhai ...	107 49	Lahore High Court.
22	Ukha Mahadu v. Emperor ...	107 51	1	Chiranjil Lal v. The Crown ...	111 319
23	Shaikh Usman v. Emperor ...	107 57	6	Khangah Hazrat Sultan Bahu Sahib v. Pira ...	111 247
26	Sakharam v. Thama ...	107 265	7	Ghanaya Lal v. Punjab National Bank, Ltd, Lahore ...	111 259
28	Narayan v. Govind ...	107 60	9	Dhanna Mal v. Parmeshri Das ...	111 251
Calcutta High Court.			16	Haji Abdul Rahim v. Ohet Ram Amar Nath ...	104 586
1	Imperial Tobacco Co. v. Albert Bonnan ...	106 277	17	Emperor v. Ibrahim ...	105 807
21	Krishna Kishore Adhicary, In re Sabirer Ma v. Behari Mohan Pal ...	104 845	20	Samman Singh v. Emperor ...	106 108
23	Isaf Nasya v. Emperor ...	102 545	20	Firm Ganesh Das-Ishar Das v. Ram Nath ...	111 498
25	Basanta Kumar v. Khirode Chandra ...	104 759	27	Emperor v. Muhammad Shafi ...	105 826
27	Hari Narayan v. Emperor ...	106 545	28	Firm Panna Lal-Tassadaq Hussain v. Firm Hira Nand-Jiwan Ram ...	102 37
41	Matangini Ghose v. Monmohini Ghose ...	105 149	30	Wazir Chand v. Emperor ...	102 500
43	Priya Nath Manna v. Official Trustee, Bengal ...	105 133	32	Rahella v. Wazira ...	109 320
46	Bonomali Gope v. Fakir Chand Pal ...	104 324	33	Devi Dayal v. Narain Singh ...	100 859
47	Jamiruddin Nascar v. Basanta Kumar ...	105 85	34	Mohammad Khan v. Emperor ...	109 345
49	Raichuddin v. Waiz Bibi ...	104 126	35	Raj Mal v. Harnam Singh ...	104 661
50	J. M. Gregory, In re ...	106 326	39	Kishore Chand v. Hans Raj ...	104 561
52	Rash Behari Mandal v. Hemanta Kumar ...	106 71	40	Chiragh Bibi v. Sultan Bakhsh ...	106 846
55	Girish Chandra Sanyal v. Secretary of State ...	105 80	42	Atma Singh v. Emperor ...	104 636
57	Mathura Nath v. Sreejukta Bageswari Rani ...	106 516	43	Saru Khan v. Jan Muhammad ...	106 313
60	Monmatha Nath v. Luchmi Debi ...	105 65	45	Bhiwani Cotton Mills v. Firm Bishen Sahai ...	105 593
62	Dharani Mohan v. Kshitipati ...	106 66	46	Firm Nanhe Mal v. Firm Piare Lal ...	109 399
63	Sarat Chandra v. Sarala Bala Ghosh ...	105 61	49	Kundan v. Emperor ...	104 253
65	G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Jesraj Patwari	106 252	50	F. Bwey v. Kirk ...	108 381
68	Dasharathi Ghose v. Khondkar Abdul Hannan ...	105 15	51	Abdul Rahman v. Kirpa Ram ...	104 585
73	Akshoy Kumar v. Ashutosh Bhattacharjee ...	105 4	51	Firm Karam Chand v. Firm Daya Nand ...	100 874
74	Kessoram Poddar & Co., v. Secretary of State ...	107 360	53	Board, Sialkot v. Sultan Muhammad Khan ...	106 882
83	Kedar Nath Mahto v. Emperor ...	108 577	55	Jodh Singh v. Mahla ...	106 325
87	Jaladhar Mondal v. Amrita Lal ...	105 641	56	Secretary of State v. Tulsi Das ...	106 801
89	E. M. A. Cohen v. Kumar Debdra Lal ...	107 86	58	Wazir Chand v. Jiwan Devi ...	103 353
			60	Joti Ram v. Harbakhsh Singh ...	105 653
			61	Thakar Datt v. Ram Singh ...	108 376
			63	Azim v. Bahadur Khan ...	103 348
			64	Emperor v. Muhammad Akbar ...	107 286
			65	In the matter of Mehta Krishna Chandra ...	109 228

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FOR JANUARY FEBRUARY, 1928—contd.

Lahore High Court—concl'd.			Madras High Court—contd.
66	Emperor v. Wali Mohammad ...	106 577	52	Ramakrishna v. Venkata ...	108 205
69	Bhag Singh v. Emperor ...	105 681	55	Venkatareddi v. Ramayya ...	106 563
70	Jaswant Rai v. Lajwanti ...	107 603	56	Venkataratnam v. Dhanalakota
72	Muhammad Ismail v. The Crown	109 239		Varahalu ...	104 746
73	Lal Chand v. Thakar Das ...	107 610	56	Sithambaravadivu Ammal v.
75	Megh Raj v. Baz Khan ...	105 812		Thirupalkadanatha Pillai ...	106 125
76	Sikandar v. Emperor ...	106 794	58	Langayya Ayyavaru v. Gangiah..	104 892
78	Prag Narain v. The Crown ...	109 599	61	Thyagarajaswami v. Balayce
80	Lal Badshah v. Emperor ...	106 790		Ammal ...	107 136
81	Mehlu Mal v. Bholu ...	102 295	66	Ammakannammal v. Damodara
82	Rup Singh v. Official Receiver,			Mudaliar ...	109 258
	Jhang ...	107 394	69	Martiroso v. Subramaniam
83	Ulfat Rai v. Tej Narain ...	106 176		Chettiar ...	109 70
88	Jogindar Singh v. Agha Safdar		77	Sonachalam Pillai v. Kumaravelu
	Ali Khan ...	111 878		Chettiar ...	107 625
90	Thakar Das v. Narainu ...	109 165	89	Venkata Krishnayya v. Secretary
92	Emperor v. Des Raj ...	109 236		of State ...	107 503
93	Preman v. Emperor ...	105 678	96	Lakshmi Narayan v. Secretary of
94	Harcharan Kaur v. Lachhman			State ...	105 84
	Singh ...	To be	97	Yahya Ally Saheb v. Secretary of printed.		State ...	106 377
95	Brahman Water Mills v. Mangla-		105	Kandasami Goundan v. Marudadha Mal ...	109 354		chala Goundan ...	107 122
96	Bishen Chand v. Bishen Devi ...	107 393	105	Karuppanna v. Rangaswami ...	107 293
			107	Arunachala Ayyar v. Louis
				Dreyfus & Co. ...	107 793
			118	Sukhdevdoss v. Choti Bai ...	109 5
			124	Meenakshi Ammal v. Iswaram
				Iyer ...	107 301
1	Batchu. Perraju v. Batchu		125	Chenchuvenkatanagiah Chetti &
	Venkataratnam ...	106 142		Co. v. Padmanabhan ...	106 904
2	Doraiswami v. Varadarajulu ...	106 838	126	Muppidathi Ammal v. Muthu-
6	Narayandoss v. Bucharaj ...	106 315		swami Pillai ...	107 289
14	Abdul Huck v. Narayan Naidu ...	106 76	127	Nagarathnammal v. Chinnu Sah
15	Pratap Simha Raja v. Srinivasa-		129	Muhammad Sheriff Sahib v. Abdul gopalachariar ...	106 870		Karim Sahib ...	105 819
16	Ranganatha v. Rajagopalachariar		129	Abdul Salam Sahib v. Veera-
		Not		bhadraraju ...	107 298
18	Anthoni Udaiyan v. Rayappu-		133	Arunachalam v. Muhammad
	dayar ...	105 806		Salihu ...	107 810
18	In the matter of A Pleader,		135	Maccarthy v. Lord Shannen ...	106 464
	Sholinghur ...	106 97	136	Nagalu v. Emperor ...	106 343
20	V. V. Rajabhadar Mudaliar v.		139	Purushothama Rajaliar v.
	Thiruvengada Mudaliar ...	106 651		Kannayya ...	Not
20	In re Nakolo Behara ...	105 826			reportable.
21	Srinivasulu v. Naicken ...	106 338	140	Ammakutti Achi v. Doraiswami
21	Krishnaswami v. Sriramulu ...	106 5		Aiyar ...	106 242
23	Munisami Naicken v. Vedachala		141	Subramaniya v. Chairman, Munici-
	Naicken ...	101 386		pal Council Coimbatore ...	106 205
24	Maheswaran Nambudripad v.		142	Krishnayya v. Sriramulu ...	106 485
	Velappa Menon ...	107 303	143	Ramaswami v. Veeranua ...	106 648
25	Kulandai Velu Pillai v. Venkata-		144	Abbas Ali Sahib v. Emperor ...	106 341
	rayar ...	106 652	144	Rangaswami v. Venkitachala ...	105 170
27	Chinnan Chetty v. Vilathan ...	106 229	145	Kanakamma v. Secretary of State
28	Padmanabha v. Sitarama ...	106 158		Public Prosecutor v. Ratnavelu
35	Sundara Raju v. Seshadri ...	106 426		Mudali ...	106 459
38	Kunhammad Hajee v. Kozhuvam-		147	Borojo Charchi v. Basudebo Doss
	mal ...	106 395	152	Balakrishna Ayyar v. Parvath-
39	Venkata Chandikamba v. Venkata			ammal ...	105 124
	Row ...	105 775	159	Narasimaiah v. Jawantharaj
42	Surayya v. Subamma ...	106 863		Sowcar ...	101 110
43	Krishnaswami v. Raghaviah ...	107 423	160	Public Prosecutor v. Palaniandi...	106 705
48	Venkata Jagga Rao v. Pillai		161	Jagannadhaswami v. Manikyam...	106 222
	Ranganayakulu ...	106 169	163	Ramaswami v. Karuppa ...	108 67
48	Subbayya v. Seshayya ...	105 105

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928—contd.

Madras High Court—concl'd.			Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court—concl'd.
161	Ellammal v. Emperor	106 718	39	Baribahu v. Ganeshsingh	106 429
166	Local Fund Overseer, Mayavaram v. Pakkirisami	106 446	39	Shridhar v. Rajabhau	105 113
167	Appala Naidu v. Emperor	107 512	41	Narayan v. Mahadeo	104 843
168	Ganapathy Ayyar v. Rangaswamy Ayyangar	106 370	43	Maroti v. Vithoba	100 565
169	Parthasarathi Naicker v. Krishna-swami Ayyar	106 706	44	Mahebbub Hussain v. Nasiruddin	105 75
169	Sadaka Muhammad v. M. Hayath Batcha Sahib	107 813	48	Govinda v. Murlidhar	106 170
170	Narayan Patrudu v. Peda Marangi Estate	109 669	51	Surjubai v. Moropant	104 810
172	Parameshwara Tirumumpu v. Narayana Thirumumpu	107 655	52	Secretary of State v. Nand Lal	107 206
173	Rangasami v. Somasundaram	107 646	54	Vishnu v. Achut	105 760
175	Muthu Ramalinga Sethupathy v. Shanmuga Nadan	107 804	55	Govind v. Chintaman	105 840
176	Surappa v. Sundaramma	107 141	56	Yadao v. Krishnaji	106 7
179	Public Prosecutor v. Ramasubbayya Chetty	106 716	58	Surajmal v. Ramnath	105 820
180	Rajagopala Naidu v. Subbammal	109 153	63	Gulabchandji v. Rao Gulabsingh	105 852
190	Ramappa Naidu v. Lakshmanan Chettiar	107 786	Oudh Chief Court.
193	Giridharadoss Co. v. Para Appadurai	107 792	1	Ganesh Singh v. Bhikham Singh	107 545
194	Sheik Dawood v. Velayuda	108 65	8	Ali Husain v. Mohammad	105 781
196	Public Prosecutor v. Devasikamani	106 559	9	Raja Rukmangud Singh v. Balbhadra Prasad	111 264
197	Lalamma v. Emperor	106 799	10	Mohammad Ali v. Jhoo Lal	106 392
198	Secretary of State v. Rangaswami & Co.	106 657	13	Mahadeo Singh v. Har Bukhsh Dube	106 489
199	Koppula Subbiah v. Thammana Munikyam	106 398	15	Ram Lal v. Emperor	106 213
199	Muthiah Servai v. Somasundaram Chettiar	107 814	17	Jagan v. Jagdish	106 305
200	Keshava Rao v. Nathravati	105 837	18	Sukhdeo Pande v. Pragdat Pande	104 760
203	Kaliya Perumal Naidu v. Subramanian Chettiar	109 866	19	Gauri Shankar v. Nisam-Uddin Khan	106 494
205	Sudarsanacharyulu v. Suryanarayana	107 130	20	Sardar Singh v. Ganga Bakhsh Singh	106 363
207	In re, Virumandithevan	105 831	23	Ram Dat v. Chhotak	106 244
208	Lakshmanan Chetty v. Municipality, Trichinopoly	106 659	25	Ajodhya v. Sheo Shankar	100 193
Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.			26	Debi Prasad v. Krishna Kunwar	104 847
1	Vyankatesh v. Annasa Lad	107 517	28	Jugal Kishore v. Gaura	105 191
4	Sabhaiji v. Nawalsingh	104 736	30	Mirza Mohammad Sadiq Ali Khan v. Sajjad Mirza	105 611
10	Commissioner of Income-Tax, Nagpur v. Malak	105 155	32	Maslahuddin v. Ram Kishen	101 258
14	S. R. Vaidya v. Abdul Samad	105 335	33	Bishunath Saran Singh v. Suraj Pal Singh	106 8
16	Jaitram v. Girdhari	104 803	35	Sibta Din v. Braj Rani	105 132
17	Bholu v. Punajai	105 454	36	Bhure Khan v. Emperor	101 177
20	Jagdeo v. Vithoba	105 81	38	Talukdar Khan v. Khairulnisa	106 133
21	Pandurang Krishnaji v. Emperor	105 226	40	Nawab Sharaf Jahan Begum v. Mohammad Sadiq Ali Khan	99 897
23	Anand Rao v. Pandurang	105 129	41	Abdul Ghafoor Khan v. Karamat Khan	106 126
24	Kisan v. Manjai	105 30	42	Deputy Commissioner, Hardoi v. Syed Mairaj Rasul	98 298
27	Tirbeniprasad v. Ramdas	105 43	43	Jang Bahadur Lal v. Bhaya Raghunath Singh	98 1053
29	Govind v. Laxman	101 279	46	Subhakaran Singh v. Genesh Bakhsh Singh	106 26
30	G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Mahadeo Bari	106 420	47	Kalicharan v. Ganeshi Lal	105 224
32	Ghulja v. Maroti	105 559	47	Suraj Pershad v. Ram Adhin	104 586
33	Waman v. Mitra	104 762	48	Firm Ram Lal v. Sundar Lal	110 140
34	Shankar Rao v. Ganpat Rao	105 123	49	Jagmohan Singh v. Sheoraj Kuar	106 593
37	Mamuji v. Dalpat	104 569	67	Mohammad Ali Khan v. Nisar Ali Khan	109 835
			88	Firm Danaji Jasraj v. Firm Puran Lal	106 541
			89	Punjab National Bank Ltd. v. Jai Ram Das	Not reportable.
			89	Mohammad Ali Mohammad Khan v. Gur Prasad	105 830

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FOR JANUARY FEBRUARY, 1928—contd.

Oudh Chief Court—concl'd.			Patna High Court—concl'd.
92	Mahomed Ali Khan v. BaCrul Nisa ...	107 181	83	Raghunath Singh v. Modnarayan Singh ...	105 1
98	Kashif Husain v. Ganga Bakhsh Singh ...	100 787	85	Damodar Prasad v. Masudan Singh ...	105 108
99	Ram Lal v. Badal Khan ...	106 491	86	Ramgulam Singh v. Raj Kumar Rai ...	102 327
101	Ram Sidh Singh v. Mahanth Bakoodas ...	107 333	87	Lal Sahi Palian v. Deba Munda ...	105 58
103	Sarfraz Singh v. Baleshwar Prasad ...	101 282	88	Gomia v. Nanhkoo Singh ...	105 229
104	S. O. Mitra v. Raja Kali Charan ...	106 694	89	Damodar Prasad v. Masoodan Singh ...	105 172
108	Braj Rani v. Sibta Din ...	106 496	95	Nagendra Nath Sen v. B. N. W. Ry. Co ...	105 546
111	Jagannath v. Emperor ...	110 218	98	Jogi Raut v. Emperor ...	105 234
112	Sumran Singh v. Emperor ...	106 582	100	Ghanshyam Singh v. Emperor ...	107 705
113	Dukhi Singh v. Sarju Dei ...	107 178	102	Barhamdeo Singh v. Emperor ...	105 230
114	G. G. Foster v. A. B. Foster ...	107 184	103	Zahuri Sahu v. Emperor ...	106 212
121	Rampal Singh v. Jai Ram Singh ...	107 560	105	Ohhatradhari Singh v. Hemlal Singh ...	105 42
122	Chandrika Singh v. Emperor ...	106 686	106	Jadooie Kaharin v. Kisun Basi Kuer ...	105 39
125	Jang Bahadur Singh v. Arjun Singh ...	110 466	108	Subrani Saraswatain v. Krishna Prasad ...	105 153
125	Tulshipat Ram v. Kema'khiya Dat Ram ...	106 823	109	Sukul Lakhpai Ram v. Raghu Koeri ...	105 33
138	Mitar Sen v. Maqbul Hasan ...	107 890	111	Maharup Kuer v. Mahabir Singh ...	105 131
143	Lal Harihar Partab v. Bisheshar ...	107 553	112	Rajnarin Mahton v. Majlis Sahay ...	104 821
144	Inayat Khan v. Sardar Husain ...	105 912	113	Gokkul Pande v. Baldeo Sukul ...	105 26
Patna High Court.			115	Gendo Unaon v. Emperor ...	106 591
1	Akbar Ali v. Emperor ...	104 897	116	Ohauthmal v. Khem Karam Das ...	107 842
7	Janendra v. Sures Chandra ...	109 821	118	Raghunath Prasad v. Rampiari Kuer ...	109 646
12	Radha Prasad v. Emperor ...	104 633	119	Ramdas Singh v. Rampukur Singh ...	106 835
13	Thakur Das v. Emperor ...	104 450	120	Bajit Mian v. Emperor ...	106 673
17	Tali Mahton v. Lekhraj Mahton ...	104 644	124	Emperor v. Bandhu Singh ...	106 691
19	Ihsan Hassan Khan v. Panna Lal ...	103 430	128	Deonandan Pande v. Anlach Kahar ...	105 561
22	Gokul Chamar v. Emperor ...	105 683	129	Basgit Singh v. Emperor ...	104 626
23	Shibjee Shah v. Hira Lal ...	104 613	134	Herbert Francis v. Muhammad Akbar ...	105 502
24	Ram Das v. Chhota Lal ...	104 526	139	Nathuni Nonia v. Emperor ...	109 898
25	Maharaj Bahadur Singh v. P. C. Lal ...	105 689	143	Bigan Singh v. King-Emperor ...	107 530
28	Birj Ballab Lallji v. Beney Krishna ...	104 364	144	Nayamat Ram v. Rameshwar ...	108 432
29	Janak Prasad v. Askaran Prasad ...	105 742	Rangoon High Court.
31	Tajali Mian v. Emperor ...	104 459	1	R. R. O. O. Chettyar Firm v. Ma Sein Yin ...	105 582
35	Jagdes Choudhury v. Radha Dubey ...	105 740	3	U Teza v. Ma E Gywe ...	106 201
36	Brindraban v. Gopal Saran ...	104 514	6	Maung Shwe An v. Maung Tok Pyu ...	106 828
38	Guljanja v. Emperor ...	105 674	7	Nabin Chandra Deb v. Mi Robeya ...	106 181
40	Shivaram v. Manu Lal ...	104 753	9	Maung Ba Thein v. Ma Than Myint ...	105 586
44	Akli v. Daho ...	105 63	12	Ma Hta Yi v. Ma Pwa Hnit ...	105 710
46	Parbhu Dusadh v. Emperor ...	104 708	13	Maung Aung Tun v. Maung San Nyun ...	105 598
49	Narayan Sahu v. Sri Thakurji Ramji ...	106 194	15	Ko Sit Kaung v. Periakaruppan Gupta v. Administrator-General, Burma ...	105 558
50	Sheoparsan Singh v. Emperor ...	104 909	16	Ma Saw v. Maung Kyaw Gaung ...	105 706
51	Johnston v. Rameshwar Singh ...	104 747	18	Administrator General of Burma v. M. E. Molla ...	105 592
54	Jokhu Gosain v. Ganesh Singh ...	103 189	20	Tar Mahomed v. Zulaikha Bai ...	105 472
56	Bishwanath Singh v. Emperor ...	104 712	21	Nadesan. Chettiar v. Shankaran Chettiar ...	105 701
58	Debi Lal Sahu v. Gosain Koleshar Gir ...	105 395
58	Raja Radha Mohan v. Commissioner Income-Tax ...	104 841
59	Dhanu Raut v. Emperor ...	104 705
62	Kuman Das v. Kachali Mandal ...	105 20
63	Sheonandan v. Kesho Prasad ...	104 124
64	Nagina Singh v. Ramjanam Singh ...	105 83
66	Udai Pratap v. Jagat Mohan ...	106 399

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FOR JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928—concl'd.

Rangoon High Court—contd.			Rangoon High Court—concl'd.
23	R. M. M. Chettyar Firm v. U. Hla Bu	106 200	44	Maung Pwa v. Maung Po Sa	107 165
25	Town Bank, Padigon v. Raman Chettyar	106 853	47	Maung Mon v. Ma Kin Oh	106 258
26	Maung E. Pe v. C. Sin Thun	105 487	Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court.
28	Backer Khorasaneg v. Ahmed Ismail Jamal	106 355	1	Emperor v. Noor Mahomed	105 433
29	Ma Shwe Mra Pru v. Maung Ba On	107 856	15	Kishinchand v. Shamsundar	108 672
30	Maung Shan Hypu v. U Po Thaw	105 474	16	Manghanmal v. Pahlajrai	105 544
31	K. K. S. A. R. Firm v. Maung Kya Nyun	107 161	17	Punjab National Bank v. Mulji Morarji	105 765
32	Ma Saw v. Maung Ba	105 476	21	Firm Hussainbhoy v. Haridas	105 319
34	U Po Thein v. O. A. O. K. R. M. Firm	105 368	37	Firm Yusuf Mahbub v. Firm Sallel Mahomed	105 892
36	M. E. Moolla v. Chartered Bank of India	107 660	40	Ahmad Haji v. Mackenzie Stuart & Co	105 356
40	Nachimai v. S. N. Subramanian Chetty	106 857	43	Ali Mohomed v. Emperor	105 666
43	U. Po Nyun v. Ma Pan Me	107 163	45	Hukumat Singh v. Nenmal Rejhmal	104 572

INDIAN LAW TIMES, VOL. 40, 1928, PARTS 1 TO 9.

Allahabad High Court.			Bombay High Court.
1	Gauri Shankar v. Jiwan Singh	107 4	1	In the matter of an Advocate	104 659
4	Lala Jagmohan Saran v. Sahu Deoki Nandan	106 483	3	Kallasani v. Emperor	106 216
5	In re Kali Charan Sharma	112 56	6	Gangaram Tillockchand v. Chief Controlling Revenue Authority	103 66
11	Shiam Sundar Singh v. Jagannath Singh	106 534	12	In re Nana Khanderao Ghadge	106 109
15	Dayaram v. Secretary State for India	105 621	14	Bhukhandas Lallubhai v. Thakoreram Kapilram	106 147
22	Sita Ram v. Nanku	106 250	17	Kaikhushru Kharsedji Tantra v. Navajbai	106 75
26	In re Shabbir Hasan	105 810	19	Venkatraman Mukund Kamat v. Janardhan Baburao Kamat	106 79
28	Ashiq Husain v. Chaturbhuj	108 152	29	Bhogilal Purshotam v. Chiman Lal Amritlal	107 707
33	Shyam Lal v. Sohan Lal	106 255	34	Shridhar Sadba Powar v. Ganu Mahadu Kavade	108 29
43	Raj Rani Beri Singhain v. Jawahir Lal	108 156	38	Commissioner of Income-Tax, Bombay v. Western India Turf Club, Ltd.	106 642
45	Ganga Narain v. Manik Lal	106 307	40	B. Das & Co. v. Broach Electric Supply and Development Corporation Limited	108 18
46	Raghunath v. Nawab Syed Muhammad Ali Hasan Khan	106 268	41	Emperor Daga Devji Patil	108 26
49	Nathu Ram v. Chand Kuar	106 165	43	Ganpat Tukaram Mali v. Sopana Tukaram Mali	107 257
52	Mohammad Shoaib Khan v. Zaib Jahan Begam	107 681	50	In re Fulchand Maganlal	108 24
58	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Makhan Das	107 587	58	Hari Laxman Joshi v. Secretary of State for India	108 19
64	Partap Narain v. Jute Mills	103 382	62	Khushaldas Gokaldas v. Chimanlal Kalidas	108 14
65	Baij Nath Prasad v. Narain Prasad	102 608	66	Jayappa Lokappa Narasinganawar v. Shivangouda Dyamangouda Patil	107 710
67	Gharib Rai v. Mukh Lal Rai	102 602	77	Chintaman Raoji Naik v. Khanderao Pandurang Thakur	107 705
69	Lodai or Lodi v. Emperor	103 104	79	Shridhar Sadha Powar v. Ganu Mahadu Kavade	108 22
71	Emperor v. Babu Ram	106 684
74	Nand Kishore v. Ram Sarup	102 144
76	Kishen Lal v. Ram Lal	103 399
77	Jagat Singh v. Jai Narain	101 877
81	Subhan Ali v. Chittu	102 804
84	Padarath Pathak v. Jagdeo Pathak	106 910

INDIAN LAW TIMES, VOL. 40, 1928, PARTS 1 to 9—contd.

Bombay High Court—concl'd.			Lahore High Court.
82	Hari Laxman Joshi v. Secretary of State for India ...	108 19	1	Delhi Cloth and General Mills Co., Ltd. v. Income Tax Commissioner, Delhi ...	106 156
86	Madhavrao Ganpatrao Desai v. Balabhai Raghunath Agaskar ...	107 119	4	Sotam Ram v. Parduman Ram ...	105 785
Calcutta High Court.			6	Mauluk Chand Kishanji v. Daya Kishan ...	106 153
1	Kedar Nath Mahato v. Emperor ..	108 577	9	Ulfat Rai v. Tej Narain ...	106 176
13	Arunadoya Chakrabarty v. Mahammad Ali ...	106 261	17	Saru Khan v. Jan Muhammad ...	106 313
19	Abdur Rahim v. Syed Abu Mahomed Barkat Ali Shah ...	108 381	20	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Sheik Haji-Bakha Fazal Din ...	106 226
25	Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company v. Messrs. Chakravarti Sons and Co. ...	106 247	24	Ram Sarn Das v. Bhagwan Singh ...	106 303
30	Mahesh Chandra Chakrabarty v. Hemendra Nath Sen Chowdhury ...	107 95	27	Megh Raj v. Baz Khan ...	105 812
33	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Messrs. Breakwell & Co. ...	109 315	29	Bura Mal v. Tulsi Ram ...	107 609
37	In re Gregory ...	106 326	32	Emperor v. Ibrahim ...	105 807
40	Kamala Prosad Sukul v. Chandra Nath Paramanik ...	106 300	36	Mian Taj Mahmud v. Crown ...	107 160
45	Sir Bissessar Dass Daga v. Emmanuel Vas ...	107 25	46	Motilal v. Emperor ...	106 455
50	Jatindra Nath Roy v. Nagendranath Roy ...	108 246	48	Wadahawa v. Jai Kishan Das ...	106 493
57	Elias v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	108 251	49	Bhagwan Singh v. Ujagar Singh ..	107 20
59	Nishi Kanta Sarkar v. Suresh Chandra Ghose ...	To be printed.	55	Sham Das v. Kishan Chand ...	110 850
63	Sreemati Gnana Dayani Debi v. Sreemati Gunamani Dasi ...	105 52	60	Imam-ud-din v. Sri Ram-Perbhu Dial ...	110 832
67	Banka Behari Deb v. Birendra Nath Dutt ...	103 864	62	Labha Ram v. Raman ...	103 280
72	Budhu Tatua v. Emperor ...	109 175	63	Ralla Ram v. Mohammad Ayub Khan ...	107 782
73	Rukeya Banu v. Nazira Banu ...	105 647	66	Nandu v. Jaimal ...	108 170
81	Susil Kumar Choudhury v. Annada Prasanna Lahiri ...	103 860	68	Firm Tirkha Ram-Chuni Lal v. Haidar ...	107 617
83	Luxmi Industrial Bank Ltd. v. Dinesh Chandra Roy Choudhury ...	To be printed.	70	Cheta v. Baija ...	105 597
85	Commercial Properties, Ltd. v. Commissioner of Income-Tax Bengal ...	To be printed.	Madras High Court.
90	Johurmull Bhutra v. Kedarnath Bhutra ...	104 387	1	Krishna Reddi v. Gandavaram Raghava Reddi ...	107 449
95	Banerjee v. Huseyn Shahied Suhrawardy ...	106 91	8	Kanchumarthi Venkatra Seetharama Chandra Row v. Kanchumarthi Raju ...	89 817
99	Benoy Krishna Mukerjee v. Satish Chandra Giri ...	108 348	11	Borojo Charchi v. Odhikari Basudev Doss ...	107 653
101	Bal Mukunda Bissessar Lal v. Bengal-Nagpur Railway Co., Ltd. ...	103 740	15	Lakshman Chetty v. Chairman Municipal Council, Trichinopoly ...	106 659
104	Sime, Darby and Co., Ltd. v. Official Assignee of the Estate of Lee Pang Seng ...	107 233	16	Pichi Pillai v. Lingham Aiyar ...	108 190
109	Nepa v. Sagar Pramanik ...	103 662	20	Jagannadhaswami Naidu v. Manikyam ...	106 222
113	Mitchell v. Dutt ...	109 739	23	Sonachalam Pillai v. Kumaravelu Chettiar ...	107 625
116	Hazrat Gul Khan v. King-Emperor ...	109 482	41	Singara Mudaliar v. Govindaswami Chetty ...	108 413
			43	Commissioner of Income-Tax, Madras v. Mahomed Kassim Rowther ...	106 508
			45	Commissioner of Income-Tax, Madras v. Mahomed Kassim Rowther ...	109 322
			47	Muthu Chettiar v. Meenakshi Sundaram Aiyar ...	107 1
			51	Sowbhagia Ammal v. Komalangi Ammal ...	107 420
			56	Damarla Subbiah v. Muhammad Mastan Sahib ...	108 66
			57	Taluk Board Devakottai v. Chockalingam Chetty ...	106 648

INDIAN LAW TIMES, VOL. 40, 1928, PARTS 1 to 9—concl'd.

Madras High Court—contd.			Madras High Court—concl'd.
58	Balasubramania Mudaliar v. Chengalroya Chetty ...	To be printed.	142	Public Prosecutor v. Ratnavelu Mudali ...	106 459
59	Rai Bahadur Bansilal Abeerchand v. Sriranganacharammal ...	107 302	148	Mooka Kone v. Pichai ...	103 760
61	Muthiyar Chetti v. Vayyadayan ...	108 412	176	Vanama Akkayya v. Vanama Lakshamma ...	110 186
64	Muhammad Shamsdin Alim Sahib v. Municipal Council, Tiruvalur ...	106 529	Patna High Court.
65	Narayanan Chettiar v. Suppiah Chettiar ...	107 637	1	Rani Chattra Kumari Devi v. W. W. Broucke ...	106 571
68	Nabooma v. Khedar Hussain ...	108 637	4	Balunki Rout v. Sri Kunja Behari Deb ...	105 633
70	Sankunni Mannadiar v. Krishna Mannadiar ...	107 499	14	Parsotim Das v. Emperor ...	106 221
76	Kodali Narayana v. Kailuri Sudar-sanam ...	103 193	16	Mahadeo Lal Murwari v. Rai Bahadur Dalip Narain Singh ...	106 243
78	Varanasi Ramabhrhamam v. Kota Rama Reddi ...	108 273	18	Kumar Baijnath Prasad Singh v. Kedar Nath Goenka ...	106 646
84	Majesty Krishnayya v. Kuppala Nookayya ...	109 649	19	Ramanandi Kuer v. Kalawati Kuer ...	107 14
85	Ulaganatha Pillai v. Sethuram Madige Rao Saheb ...	107 808	28	Gahbar Pande v. Emperor ...	106 433
89	Abdul Ghani Sahib v. Subramania Chettiar ...	107 789	34	Madho Lal v. Mahadeo Rai ...	106 389
93	Thiruvengada Mudaliar v. Thangavelu Mudaliar ...	103 221	35	Hira Bibi v. Lachmi Narayan ...	106 362
97	Ramachandran v. Sabapathy Mudliar ...	108 288	38	Ihsan Hasan Khan v. Panna Lal ...	103 430
101	Vasudeva Rao v. Sankaram Row... ..	108 301	42	Lachmi Kuer v. Gajadhar Prasad... ..	104 104
108	Local Fund Overseer, Mayavaram v. Pakirisami Thevan ...	106 446	45	Pranlachi Kuer v. Jageshar Sahi ...	106 423
111	Martirosi v. Subramaniam Chettiar ...	109 70	48	Raj Gopal Ray Bahadur v. Taj Muhammad ...	103 615
124	Govindaraja Naicker v. Kassim Sahib ...	108 542	50	Tajali Mian v. Emperor ...	104 459
126	In re Abbas Ali Sahib ...	106 341	55	Ishwari Frasad v. Rai Hari Prasad Lal ...	106 620
127	Doraiswami Ayyar v. Coimbatore Easwara Sahaya Nidhi, Ltd. ...	106 423	Rangoon High Court.
129	Mosafkanni Ravuthar v. Zemin-dar of Sivaganga ...	105 179	1	Ma Nyun v. Mg. San Thin ...	105 399
136	Parambath Parkum Mattole Kunkhammad Haji v. Ohathoth Parkum Kozhuvammal ...	106 395	8	R M. M. Chettyar Firm v. U. Hla Bu ...	106 200
138	Sukdevdoss Ramprasad v. Diwan Bahadur Govindoss Chathur-bhujadoss ...	107 29	10	U Teza v. Ma F Gywe ...	106 201
			14	Ma Saw Kin v. Maung Tun Aung Gyaw ...	108 315
			18	Chockalingam Chetty v. Seethai Ache ...	107 237
			23	Ma Saw v. Maung Ba ...	106 476
			25	Choon v. Firm ...	106 468
			29	U Soe v. Maung Ngwa Tha ...	106 654
			32	Maung Shan Hpyu v. U PoThaw... ..	105 474

Alphabetical List of Cases reported in Volume 107 of Indian Cases with references to the Volumes and Pages of other Law Journals and Reports.

[An asterisk (*) denotes cases not reported yet elsewhere.]

Names of cases reported.	Judgment of which Court.	Page.
Abdul Aziz v. Punjab National Bank, Ltd., Lahore ...	*Lahore High Court ...	395
Abdul Baqi v. Saeo Prakash Singh ...	I. L. T. 40 Pat. 84; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 279 ...	542
Abdul Ghani v. Sansar Chand ...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 101 ...	385
Abdul Ghani-Sahib v. Subramania Chettiar ...	27 L. W. 212; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 89 ...	789
Abdul Salam Saheb v. Batchu Veerabhadra Raju ...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 129 ...	298
Abdul Wahid v. Emperor ...	9 Lah. L. J. 533; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 110; 29 Cr. L. J. 256; 29 P. L. R. 329; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 454; 9 Lah. 302 ...	495
Abid Husain Khan v. Sri Thakurji ...	A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 296 ...	895
Adamali v. Abdulali ...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 87 ...	223
Agya Singh v. Sunder Singh ...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 137; 9 Lah. 380 ...	756
Ahmad Din v. Fatima Bibi ...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 290 ...	489
Aimana Khatun v. Saburannessa Bibi ...	32 O. W. N. 449 ...	465
Alan v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 293; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 541; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 10 ...	778
Allan Robert Shaw v. Emily May Shaw ...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 320 ...	273
Amar Nath v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 295; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 460 ...	783
Ameechand Nagin Doss & Co. v. Raoji Bhai Moti Bhai Patel ...	39 M. L. T. 655; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 233 ...	643
Aminullah v. Emperor ...	A. I. R. 1928 All. 95; L. R. 9 A. 28 Cr.; 26 A. L. J. 328; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 197; 29 Cr. L. J. 274; I. L. T. 40 All. 100 ...	690
Annada Bandhu Das v. Ambica Charan Bhatta-charjee ...	47 C. L. J. 569; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 412; 55 C. 892 ...	747
Ardesbir Bhicaji Tamboli v. Agent, G. I. P. Ry. Co. ...	54 M. L. J. 167; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 24; 30 Bom. L. R. 275; 47 C. L. J. 214; 5 O. W. N. 219; 9 P. L. T. 171; 32 C. W. N. 544; 27 L. W. 667; 26 A. L. J. 545; 52 B. 169 P. C. ...	124
Arumugam Chettiar v. Devaraya Chettiar ...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 625 ...	648
Arunachala Iyah v. Louis Dreyfus & Co. ...	39 M. L. T. 563; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 107; (1928) M. W. N. 132; 27 L. W. 267 ...	793
Arunachala Nayadu v. Balakrishna ...	A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 266; 47 C. L. J. 576 P. C. ...	349
Arunachalam Chettiar v. Muhammad Salihu Marak-kayar ...	26 L. W. 803; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 133 ...	810
Ataharuddin v. Murari Mohun Dutt ...	47 C. L. J. 21; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 193 ...	735
Atma Devi v. Shib Devi ...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 244 ...	390
Babu Singh v. Gurbaksh Singh ...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 249 ...	274
Badar-ud-din v. Mehr Din ...	*Lahore High Court ...	605
Badlu Pathak v. Sibram Singh ...	9 P. L. T. 241; 7 Pat. 155; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 234 ...	310
Baijnath v. Ohhote Lal ...	A. I. R. 1928 All. 58; 26 A. L. J. 243 ...	673
Bajirao Abaji Kulkarni, In re ...	29 Bom. L. R. 1587; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 33; 29 Cr. L. J. 226; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 403 ...	56
Balaji v. Ballabhdas ...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 146 ...	671
Balam Nookamma v. Sadireddi ...	53 M. L. J. 863; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 233 ...	417
Balasundarachari v. Kannappachari ...	39 M. L. T. 443; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1165 ...	132
Balkisandas v. Jainarayan ...	23 N. L. R. 166; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 80 ...	666
Bani Kanta Mondal v. Hemanta Kumar Ghose ...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 405 ...	721
Bankey Lal v. Natha Ram ...	*Allahabad High Court ...	569
Bankey Lal v. Natha Ram ...	*Allahabad High Court ...	576
Bansila Abberchand v. Sriranganacharammal ...	I. L. T. 40 Mad. 59; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 486 ...	302
Bapu Suryabhan v. Kisan ...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 136 ...	193
Barsik Nandi Mandal v. Gurudas Pal ...	46 C. L. J. 573; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 107 ...	474
Basant Singh v. Shhibba Mal ...	10 Lah. L. J. 17 ...	481
Batan Singh v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 236; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 485 ...	288
Behari Lal v. Chuni Lal ...	*Lahore High Court ...	490

Bhadri Narayana v. Nagaldinne Srinivasa Rao	...	39 M. L. T. 657; 54 M. L. J. 65; 27 L. W. 632; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1179	649
Bhagela Shah v. Sita Ram	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 414	488
Bhagwan Singh v. Ujagar Singh	...	A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 20; 30 Bom. L. R. 267; 47 C. L. J. 189; 51 M. L. J. 251; 29 P. L. R. 182; 32 C. W. N. 538; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 49; 27 L. W. 672; 26 A. L. J. 553 P. C.	20
Bhagwati Saran v. Deo Saran Singh	..	L. R. 9 A. 23 Rev.; A. I. R. 1928 All. 166; 12 R. D. 53	702
Bhailal Nathabhai v. Kalansang Gulabsang	..	29 Bom. L. R. 1558; 52 B. 55; A. I. R. 1927 Bom. 637	52
Bhairon Dei v. Ram Sewak Lal	...	1 Luck. Cas 648; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 623	552
Bhodai Sheikh v. Barada Kanta Dutta	...	46 C. L. J. 570; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 116; 55 C. 602	355
Bhojaraju Kanakamma v. Secretary of State for India	...	39 M. L. T. 600; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 145; 54 M. L. J. 230; 27 L. W. 791	643
Bhogilal Purshottam v. Chimanlal Amritlal	...	30 Bom. L. R. 92; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 29; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 49; 52 B. 116	707
Bigan Singh v. Emperor	...	6 Pat. 691; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 143; 29 Cr. L. J. 203; 9 P. L. T. 327; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 450	530
Birendra Nath Roy v. Tarini Kanta Roy	...	47 C. L. J. 107; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 131	724
Bishen Chand v. Bishen Devi	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 96	393
Bishun Narain v. Mazharul Haq	...	5 O. W. N. 35; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 221	881
Bissessar Das Daga v. Emmanuel Vas	...	47 C. L. J. 162; 54 M. L. J. 122; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 27; I. L. T. 40 Cal. 45; 30 Bom. L. R. 243; 32 C. W. N. 509; 27 L. W. 655; 24 N. L. R. 17; 55 O. 238; 26 A. L. J. 667 P. C.	25
Board of Control, Tiruvalur v. Balajee Ammal	...	39 M. L. T. 570; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 61; 27 L. W. 32	136
Bontu Appala Naidu, In re	..	27 L. W. 85; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 167; 29 Cr. L. J. 27; 51 M. 339; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 503; 51 M. L. J. 714	512
Borojo Charchi v. Odhikari Basudebe Das	...	I. L. T. 40 Mad. 11; (1928) M. W. N. 83; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 152	653
Budha Mal v. Rallia Ram	...	9 Lah. 418	620
Budhar Pragji v. Rahimtulla Khan	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 93	216
Budhua v. Emperor	...	L. R. 9 A. 1 Cr.; 26 A. L. J. 107; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 52; A. I. R. 1928 All. 118; 29 Cr. L. J. 233	563
Bura Mahi v. Tulsi Ram	...	9 Lah. L. J. 579; 29 P. L. R. 27; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 29; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 890; 9 Lah. 366	609
Burma Railways Co. v. Maung Hla Tin	...	5 R. 813; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 85	175
O. R. M. A. Chettyar Firm v. K. R. S. V. Chettyar Firm	...	5 R. 757; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 96	169
Carl Franz Adolf Otto v. Wing On & Co., Ltd.	...	47 C. L. J. 263; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 83; 30 Bom. L. R. 753 P. C.	352
Carmen v. O'Brien	...	54 C. 1041; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 97; 29 Cr. L. J. 245; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 471	353
Chamaria & Co. v. Sonaton Pal	...	46 C. L. J. 515; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 158	72
Chandra Nath Sen v. Nagendra Nath Ganguly	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 263	467
Charat Singh v. Sukhdev Singh	..	9 Lah. L. J. 547; 29 P. L. R. 264; A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 848	624
Charles Henry v. Olive Muriel	...	11 N. L. J. 4; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 117	667
Chauthmal Bhagirath v. Khem Karan Das	...	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 116	842
Chetumal Bulehand v. Noorbhoy Jafferji	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 89	213
Chhanga v. Tirhi	...	26 A. L. J. 87; A. I. R. 1928 All. 192	581
Chhanu Prasad Singh v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 229; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 486	160
Chintaman Raoji Naik v. Khanderao Pandurang	...	30 Bom. L. R. 45; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 58; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 77; 52 B. 184	705
Chockalingam Chetty v. Seethai Ache	..	A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 252; 4 O. W. N. 1231; 27 L. W. 1; 54 M. L. J. 88; (1928) M. W. N. 20; 47 C. L. J. 136; 32 C. W. N. 281; I. L. T. 40 Rang. 18; 30 Bom. L. R. 220; 36 A. L. J. 371; 6 R. 29 (P. C.)	237
Chokalingam Chettyar v. E. N. M. K. Chettyar Firm	...	A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 44; 5 O. W. N. 517; 6 R. 113; 47 C. L. J. 429; 30 Bom. L. R. 788; 32 C. W. N. 677; 27 L. W. 811 P. C.	461
Collector of Cawnpore v. Jugal Kishore	..	A. I. R. 1928 All. 355	578

Commissioner of Income Tax v. Mohomad Nurulla Khan	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 146	661
Commissioner of Income-Tax, Madras v. Trichinopoly Permanent Fund	A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1078; 53 M. L. J. 881; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 268 F. B.	291
Daliluddi v. Matahar Ali	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 254	470
Damodardas v. Rodba	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 206	513
Dasodhi v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 265; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 332; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 488; 9 Lah. 424	601
Daya Ram v. Harcharan Das	29 P. L. R. 72; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 111; 8 Lah. 678	781
Debi Dayal v. Manao	5 O. W. N. 78; 29 Cr. L. J. 244; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 632; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 532	333
Devi Dial v. Rattan Devi	29 Cr. L. J. 235; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 294	285
Dharmu v. Dalsingh	A. I. R. 1927 Nag. 352	522
Diljan v. Makbul Khan	*Calcutta High Court	475
Dina Nath v. Bir Singh	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 334	770
Domaji v. Tulsiram	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 179	514
Donald Graham & Co. v. Basantram Jhingan	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 91	210
Dukhi Singh v. Sarju Dei	4 O. W. N. 1225; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 113	178
Durga Datt-Jagan Nath v. Ganesh Das-Ishar Das	A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 648	276
Ejalji Dinshaw & Co. v. Dhanpat Mal-Bhagwan Das	*Lahore High Court	593
Edavalath Potayur v. Thiruvazhiyot Valappa	39 M. L. T. 371; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 24; 51 M. L. J. 154; 27 L. W. 796	303
Emperor v. Akbar	29 P. L. R. 219; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 296; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 496	107
— v. Ghulam Nabi	6 Pat 768; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 146; 29 Cr. L. J. 301; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 385	835
— v. Khairati Lal	29 Cr. L. J. 291; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 27	775
— v. Mahomed Hasan Ghanchi	30 Bom. L. R. 86; 29 Cr. L. J. 234; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 491	272
— v. Muhammad Akbar	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 64; 29 Cr. L. J. 236; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 490	286
— v. Nabibux Karimbux Mulla	30 Bom. L. R. 88; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 52; 52 B. 168; 29 Cr. L. J. 383; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 11; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 92	705
— v. Prabhu Upadhaya	29 Cr. L. J. 261; A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 201; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 523	536
— v. Raghunath	29 Cr. L. J. 312; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 255; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 2	907
— v. Shaikh Usman	29 Bom. L. R. 1581; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 23; 29 Cr. L. J. 221; 52 B. 195; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 476	57
— v. Ukha Mahadu Barase	29 Bom. L. R. 1590; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 22; 29 Cr. L. J. 225; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 481	51
Ezra Meyer Aaron Cohen v. Debendra Lal Khan	32 C. W. N. 154; 46 C. L. J. 607; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 89	86
F. A. Savi v. Sabitri Thakurain	6 Pat. 282; 8 P. L. T. 615; A. I. R. 1927 Pat. 363	313
Falzur Rahman v. Sadar Ali	32 C. W. N. 112; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 338	67
Farzand Ali v. Emperor	29 P. L. R. 33; 29 Cr. L. J. 252; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 520	482
Fazal Haq v. Fazal Haq	26 A. L. J. 49; A. I. R. 1928 All. 201	584
Firm of Uttamchand-Brijlal v. Firm of Balmokand	*Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court	435
Foster v. Foster	1 Luck. Cas. 685; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 114	184
Ganesh Das-Ishar Das v. Basheshar Lal-Bansi Dhar	A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 697	278
Ganesh Singh v. Bhikham Singh	4 O. W. N. 1085; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 1; 3 Luck. 1	545
Ganpat Tukaram Mali v. Sopana Tukaram Mali	30 Bom. L. R. 1; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 43; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 35; 52 B. 88 F. B.	257
Gauri Shankar v. Jiwan Singh	53 M. L. J. 786; 4 O. W. N. 1192; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 246; 25 A. L. J. 967; 47 C. L. J. 7; 30 Bom. L. R. 64; I. L. T. 40 All. 1; 32 O. W. N. 257; (1928) M. W. N. 1; 27 L. W. 203; 9 P. L. T. 277 P. C.	4
Gauri Shankar v. Sri Krishna	L. R. 8 A. 172 Cr.; 26 A. L. J. 86; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 12; A. I. R. 1928 All. 128; 29 Cr. L. J. 233	242
Gaya Deen Singh v. Madho Singh	4 O. W. N. 101; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 558	160

George. Richards Laffer v. Francis Arnold Gillen	47 C. L. J. 327; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 275 F. C. ..	347
Ghani Ahamad Khan v. Mehdi Begam	1 Luck. Cas. 615; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 617 ...	325
Ghanshyam Singh v. Emperor	6 Pat. 627; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 100; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 460; 29 Cr. L. J. 239 ...	305
Ghulam Mohammad v. Abdul Majid	*Lahore High Court ...	619
Ghulam Rasul v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 289; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 5 ...	774
Giridhardoss Co. v. Para Appadurai	27 L. W. 135; (1928) M. W. N. 79; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 113; 51 M. L. J. 316; 51 M. 157 ...	792
Gopal Mal v. Gopal Singh-Hari Singh	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 378 ...	392
Gopal Ram v. Magni Ram	9 P. L. T. 329; 7 Pat. 375; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 338 ...	820
Gopal Rao v. Babu	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 273 ...	903
Gopal Singh v. Mangal Singh	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 341 ...	284
Gopaldas Versimal, In re	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 90 ...	433
Govind v. Malkarjunappa	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 133 ...	205
Govindaswami v. Annamalai	A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1071 ...	805
G. I. P. Ry., Co. v. Gopi Ram-Gouri Shankar	9 P. L. T. 163; 7 Pat. 192; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 270; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 99 ...	540
Gulab v. Emperor	L. R. 8 A. 173 Cr.; 26 A. L. J. 95; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 16; A. I. R. 1928 All. 128; 29 Cr. L. J. 244 ...	243
Gulab v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 235; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 660 ...	285
Gulai Jha v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 299; 9 P. L. T. 344; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 277; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 23 ...	827
Gunwant Parashram Naik v. Govind Ehaui	29 Cr. L. J. 313; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 242; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 19 ...	912
Gur Narain v. Emperor	L. R. 9 A. 11 Cr.; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 9; 26 A. I. J. 160; 29 Cr. L. J. 271; A. I. R. 1928 All. 191 ...	687
Gur Saran v. Jagannath	5 O. W. N. 42; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 240; 12 R. D. 4 ...	896
Gurumoorthi Iyer v. P. S. Subramaniam	*Madras High Court ...	401
Hansa v. Ram Lok	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 147 ...	612
H. Bharucha v. Municipal Committee, Lahore	29 Cr. L. J. 250; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 278; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 501; 9 Lah. 394 ...	391
Har Prasad v. Emperor	L. R. 8 A. 170 Cr.; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 4; A. I. R. 1928 All. 130; 29 Cr. L. J. 232 ...	211
Hara Chandra Mandal v. Mohananda Mandal	47 C. L. J. 305; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 299 ...	714
Hari Kishen v. Kanshi Ram	29 Cr. L. J. 251; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 510; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 664 ...	485
Hasan Bandi v. Barati Lal	A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 298 ...	885
Hayat v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 232; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 380; 10 Lah. I. J. 380 ...	768
Hira v. Tek Chand	10 Lah. L. J. 21 ...	487
Hirday Narain Singh v. Kali Charan Singh	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 273 ...	819
Holmes v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 286; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 324; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 499 ...	772
Honia Mali v. Chindhia	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court ...	528
Huchangouda Rudragouda v. Kallaya Kallappa	30 Bom. L. R. 38; 52 B. 132; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 166; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 108 ...	268
Hukum Chand v. Sital Prasad	25 A. L. J. 922; A. I. R. 1928 All. 52; 50 A. 232 ...	244
Imam Bakhsh v. Amiran	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 700 ...	607
Indian Merchants Bank, Limited, Amritsar v. Anup Chand	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 236 ...	492
Jafferli Bhaloo Lakha v. Standard Bank of South Africa, Ltd.	47 C. L. J. 292; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 135; 30 Bom. L. R. 762 P. C. ...	453
Jagannath v. Emperor	L. R. 9 A. 13 Cr.; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 102; 29 Cr. L. J. 272; A. I. R. 1928 All. 185; 26 A. L. J. 410 ...	688
Jagmohan Singh v. Sri Nath	5 O. W. N. 1; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 203; 3 Luck. 302 ...	866
Jai Dev Singh v. Jai Singh	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 445 ...	276
Jai Narain Singh v. Munna Lal	A. I. R. 1928 All. 92; 26 A. L. J. 268; 50 A. 489 ...	699
Jajneswar Karmakar v. Kailash Chandra Ghose	*Calcutta High Court ...	473
Jamila Khatoon v. Dayanand Thakur	7 Pat. 331; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 272 ...	848
Jammula Narayanamurthi v. Nilambara Prudhivisinghi Santo	39 M. L. T. 614; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 226 ...	511
Jamuna Prasad v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 287; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 483 ...	826
Jamwanti Kuer v. Ram Tirath	A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 302 ...	880
Jaswant Rai Datta Chowdhry v. Laiwanti	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 70 ...	603
Jayappa, Lokappa v. Shivangouda	30 Bom. L. R. 19; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 42; 52 B. 72; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 66 ...	710

Jewan Lal Daga v. Nilmani Chaudhuri	... 26 A. L. J. 124; 30 Bom. L. R. 305; (1928) M. W. N. 154; 51 M. L. J. 325; 47 C. L. J. 302; A. I. R. 1928 P. O. 80; 32 C. W. N. 565; 27 L. W. 740; 7 Pat. 305 P. C.	337
Jnanendra Nath v. Jitendra Nath	... 32 C. W. N. 108; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 275	70
Joharmal Mathuradas v. Hira Lal Shewchand Roy	... 7 Pat. 238; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 221; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 90	533
John Lachlan McGillivray v. Bertha Elinor Lillian Haggitt	... 47 C. L. J. 295; A. I. R. 1928 P. O. 115 P. C.	459
Jotirmoy Goswamy v. Guru Gobinda Goswami	... A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 273	469
Jugal Kishore v. Nago	... A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 221	671
K. O. Bonnerjee, In re	... A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 402	738
K. K. S. A. R. Firm v. Maung Kya Nyun	... 5 R. 675; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 31	161
Kalikram v. Emperor	... 29 Or. L. J. 270; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 557	665
Kallu v. Ram Das	... 26 A. L. J. 53	679
Kaluram v. Gajasa	... A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 182	201
Kamod Singh v. Khemkaran	... A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 175	662
Kandasami Goundan v. Marudachala Goundan	... 39 M. L. T. 562; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 105	129
Kanhaiya Lal v. Gendo	... 25 A. L. J. 972; A. I. R. 1928 All. 51; 50 A. 238	34
Karupanna Konar v. Rangaswami Konar	... A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 105	293
Kasiraddin Parmanik v. Kasir Mandal	... A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 227	469
Kasturchand v. Secretary, Municipal Committee, Betaul.	... A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 243	902
Kesar Kuer v. Kallu Ram	... L. R. 9 A. 33 Rev.; 26 A. L. J. 383; A. I. R. 1928 All. 164; 12 R. D. 79; 50 A. 479	562
Kessoram Poddar & Co. v. Secretary of State for India	... 54 C. 969; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 74	360
Khana v. Emperor	... 29 Or. L. J. 276; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 504	759
Khanta Kamini Dutt v. Aswini Kumar Dutt	... 32 C. W. N. 400; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 424	722
Khazan Singh v. Bikram Singh	... *Allahabad High Court	574
Khurshid Haq v. Ramditta Mall	... A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 665	753
Kirpa Ram v. Nand Lal	... A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 413	494
Kirtarath Rai v. Sripat Rai	... A. I. R. 1928 All. 307	254
Kojo Pon v. Atta Fua	... 47 C. L. J. 328; A. I. R. 1927 P. O. 264 P. C.	319
Krishna Chandra Dutta v. Dina Nath Biswas	... 54 C. 1061; A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 91	357
Krishna Reddi v. Gandavaram Raghava Reddi	... 32 C. W. N. 3; 53 M. L. J. 700; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 1; A. I. R. 1927 P. O. 257 P. C.	449
Krishnamachariar v. Chellamal	... A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 561	641
Krishnaswami Ayyar v. Raghaviah Chetty	... 53 M. L. J. 679; 26 L. W. 687; 39 M. L. T. 472; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 43	423
Kuldip Mahton v. Patia	... 9 P. L. T. 437; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 281	539
Kuldip Narain Tewari v. Ram Lal Mandal	... 7 Pat. 260; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 318	621
Kuman Das v. Tilakdhari Singh	... 9 P. L. T. 184; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 94	538
Kunj Behari Lal v. Mubarik Begum	... 9 Lah. L. J. 536; 29 P. L. R. 273; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 833	753
Kunversi Ratansi Patel v. Pitambardas Ramdas	... 29 Bom. L. R. 1355; A. I. R. 1927 Bom. 599	50
Kushar Das v. Balbhaddar Singh	... 4 C. W. N. 1269; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 153; 12 R. D. 84	872
Lachhmi v. Nanak Chand	... A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 716	606
Lachhmi Bai v. Diwan Chand	... *Lahore High Court	759
Lachmi Prasad v. Lachmi Narain	... 25 A. L. J. 926; A. I. R. 1928 All. 41	33
Lakshmi Dhar v. Dhokhe Lal	... A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 300	865
Lal Chand v. Thakur Dass	... A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 73	610
Lal Harihar Partab Bakhsh Singh v. Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh	... 5 C. W. N. 15; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 143; 3 Luck. 293 F. B.	553
Lal Singh v. Jagraj Singh	... A. I. R. 1928 All. 86; 20 A. L. J. 229; 50 A. 546	693
Lalchand v. Issersing	... A. I. R. 1928 Sind 126	46
Legal Remembrancer v. Jahey Sheikh	... 32 C. W. N. 141; 29 Or. L. J. 223; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 228; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 451	90
Lim Yam Hong v. Lam Ohoon & Co.	... 29 C. L. J. 288; A. I. R. 1928 P. O. 127; 30 Bom. L. R. 757 P. C.	457
M. A. Sassoon & Sons v. International Banking Corporation	... 53 M. L. J. 42; A. I. R. 1927 P. O. 195; 1 Luck. Cas. 21; 25 A. L. J. 665; 29 Bom. L. R. 1181; 46 C. L. J. 61; (1927) M. W. N. 648; 32 C. W. N. 30; 39 M. L. T. 659; 54 I. A. 317; 27 L. W. 582; 55 C. 1 P. C.	225

M. E. Moolia v. Chartered Bank	5 R. 685; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 36	860
M. K. Sowbhagyammal v. Komalangi Ammal	27 L. W. 167; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 51; 54 M. L. J. 382; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 803	420
Ma Shwe Ma Pru v. Maung Ba On	5 R. 659; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 29	856
Madaru v. Emperor	5 O. W. N. 29; 29 Cr. L. J. 230; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 221; 9 A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 438	177
Madhab Chandra Dutta v. Jainco Ram	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 231	479
Madhavrao Ganpatrao Desai v. Balabhai Raghunath Agaskar	A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 35; 30 Bom. L. R. 282; 47 C. L. J. 198; 54 M. L. J. 245; 27 L. W. 400; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 86; 52 B. 176; 26 A. L. J. 560; 32 C. W. N. 925 P. C.	119
Maganmal v. Darbarilal	A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 39; 54 M. L. J. 208; 30 Bom. L. R. 296; 5 O. W. N. 226; 47 C. L. J. 222; 27 L. W. 523; I. L. T. 40 Cal. 124; 24 N. L. R. 40 P. C.	113
Mahabir Bux Singh v. Sitla Bux Singh	4 O. W. N. 1255; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 152; 3 Luck 167	871
Mahabir Prasad Dubey v. Sheodayal Pathak	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 167; 7 Pat. 236; 9 P. L. T. 658	821
Mahendra Nath Biswas v. Charu Chandra Bose	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 396	741
Mahesh Chandra Sadhu v. Jogendra Lal Sarkar	32 C. W. N. 181; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 222; 55 O. 512	79
Mahomed Kassim v. Natho Bhaño	*Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court	211
Mahtab Din v. Kasar Singh	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 640	618
Majidan v. Sabir Ali	A. I. R. 1928 All. 62	674
Makbul Ali v. Sasi Kumar Malla	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 305	468
Makund Sarup, In the matter of	A. I. R. 1928 All. 81; 26 A. L. J. 280; 50 A. 495 F. B.	683
Manche Anege Akue v. Mancho Kojo Ababio IV	47 O. L. J. 337; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 262; 30 Bom. L. R. 755 P. C.	347
Mañeckji Rustomji v. H. H. Wadia	54 M. L. J. 136; 27 L. W. 172; (1928) M. W. N. 45; 51 M. 235; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 470	639
Manlal Sain v. Indian Merchants Bank, Ltd.	29 P. L. R. 119; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 240	594
Mani Ram v. Emperor	5 O. W. N. 33; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 207; 29 Cr. L. J. 311; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 21	876
Manmatha Nath Sarkar v. Debendra Nath Samanta	*Calcutta High Court	743
Mansaram v. Lungraji	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	660
Maroti Suryabhai v. Raiwant Rao	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 262	897
Martand Rao v. Malhar Rao	A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 10; 47 C. L. J. 150; 30 Bom. L. R. 251; 27 L. W. 350; 54 M. L. J. 397; 32 C. W. N. 621; 24 N. L. R. 25; 11 N. L. J. 26; 55 O. 403 P. C.	7
Mashar Khan v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 220; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 276; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 514	108
Mathura v. Shambhoo Dayal	5 O. W. N. 80; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 225	884
Mathura Kurmi v. Jagdeo Singh	25 A. L. J. 970; A. I. R. 1928 All. 61; 50 A. 208	33
Mati Lal Lyall v. Premi Lyall	54 O. 1038; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 114	475
Matwal Das v. Nand Lal	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 281	273
Maung Ba Gon v. Ma Pwa Thit	5 R. 747; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 67	167
Maung Po Pe v. Maung Kwa	5 R. 751; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 80	161
Maung Po Si v. K. P. A. P. Firm	5 R. 764; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 68	173
Maung Pwa v. Maung Po Sa	5 R. 668; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 44	165
Maung Tha Dun v. Po Ka	5 R. 768; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 60	172
Meenakshi Ammal v. Iswaram Iyer	33 M. L. T. 590; 53 M. L. J. 903; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 124; 27 L. W. 238; (1928) M. W. N. 50	301
Mitar Sen Singh v. Maqbul Hasan	4 O. W. N. 1243; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 138; 3 Luck 154	890
Mohammad Ali Khan v. Badrunniessa	4 O. W. N. 1106; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 92	181
Mohammad Shafi v. Raunaq Ali	5 O. W. N. 20; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 231	882
Mohammad Shoaib Khan v. Zaib Jahan Begam	26 A. L. J. 110; I. L. T. 40 All. 52; A. I. R. 1927 All. 850; 50 A. 423	581
Mohanlal v. Satyabhama	23 N. L. R. 178; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 89	194
Mohar Ali v. Abdul Karim Sarkar	*Calcutta High Court	742
Mohesh Chandra v. Hemendra Nath	16 C. L. J. 575; I. L. T. 40 Cal. 30; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 104	95
Monmatha Nath Mitra v. Rajeswar Rai	32 O. W. N. 184; 55 O. 355; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 315	81

Moti Jagta v. Indurai Bhaurai Desai	...	30 Bom. L. R. 98; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 53; 52 B. 203; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 93	719
Muhammad Ali v. Emperor	...	29 P. L. R. 30; 29 Cr. L. J. 285; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 164; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 128	771
Muhammad Azim v. Niaz Muhammad	...	29 Cr. L. J. 289; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 317; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 8	773
Muhammad Bakhsh v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 279; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 319	763
Muhammad Fariduddin Ahmad v. Ahmad Abdul Wahab	...	1 Pat. 144; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 255; 9 P. L. T. 383	152
Muhammad Hasan v. Emperor	...	L. R. 8 A. 103 Cr.; 8 A. I. Cr. R. 60; A. I. R. 1927 All. 610; 29 Cr. L. J. 275	691
Muhammad Reza v. Rajbalabhnath Singh	...	9 P. L. T. 240	320
Muhammad Sultan v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 211; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 525	99
Mujaffar Ahmed v. Karim Buksha	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 306	723
Mujibuddin v. Reajuddi Matbar	...	Calcutta High Court	471
Municipal Council, Sydney v. Margaret Alexandra Troy	...	7 C. L. J. 234; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 128 P. C.	455
Munna Singh v. Narain Singh	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	658
Munshi Ram v. Ghulam Dastgir	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 423	400
Munuswami Madali v. Jawarmal Sowcar	...	59 M. L. T. 652; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1180	417
Muppithathi Ammal v. Muthuswami Pillai	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 126; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 263	289
Murat Singh v. Emperor	...	L. R. 9 A. 10 Cr.; 26 A. L. J. 109; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 98; 29 Cr. L. J. 265; A. I. R. 1928 All. 266	592
Murli Pathak v. Emperor	...	L. R. 8 A. 128 Cr.; 8 A. I. Cr. R. 211; A. I. R. 1927 All. 707; 25 A. L. J. 855; 29 Cr. L. J. 262; 50 A. 169	561
Murlidhar v. Fakir Bukhsh	...	*Oudh Chief Court	192
Murugiah Pillai v. Pakkiri Pillai	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 499; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 271	290
Musa v. Mam Kaur	...	5 Lah. L. J. 518; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 119; 29 Cr. L. J. 267; 29 P. L. R. 271; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 453	603
Muthiah Servai v. Somasundaram Chettiar	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 199; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 182	814
Muthu Chettiar v. Meenakshisundaram Ayyar	...	54 M. L. J. 82; (1928) M. W. N. 91; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 47; 5 O. W. N. 163; A. I. R. 1928 P. O. 35; 30 Bom. L. R. 261; 47 C. L. J. 183; 27 L. W. 395; 32 O. W. N. 569; 23 A. L. J. 488	1
Nabu Sahu v. Kamdev Maity	...	47 C. L. J. 87; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 179	729
Nagarathammal v. Ohinnu Sah	...	(1927) M. W. N. 750; 53 M. L. J. 861; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 127	419
Nageshwar Nath Singh v. Temple of Ram Janki	...	4 O. W. N. 1112; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 500	553
Naimuddin Biswas v. Maniruddin Lashkar	...	47 C. L. J. 82; 52 O. W. N. 299; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 181	726
Najaf Ali Khan v. Muhammad Fazal Ali Khan	...	A. I. R. 1928 All. 255	249
Nanak Ohand v. Gaman	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 351	386
Narain Das Bhagwandas & Co. v. Kalyanji Mawaji & Co.	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 173; 24 N. L. R. 55	525
Narain Singh v. Gurbakhsh Singh	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 119; 29 P. L. R. 399; 9 Lah. 306	281
Narain v. Emperor	...	23 P. L. R. 209; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 497	97
Naraindas & Co. v. Ohandiram & Co.	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 86	218
Narasa Reddi v. Tar Mahomed Ayub Sait	...	27 L. W. 164; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 209; 51 M. 330; 54 M. L. J. 710	806
Narayan v. Baldeo Singh	...	4 O. W. N. 1258; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 214; 12 R. D. 103; 3 Luck. 150	877
Narayan Balaji Bandivdekar v. Govind Sakharam Nimkar	...	25 Bom. L. R. 1563; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 28	60
Narayanan Chettiar v. Suppiah Chettiar	...	I. L. T. 40 Mad. 65; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 402	637
Naripendra Nath Mukherji v. Dharendra Narayan Nandi	...	45 C. L. J. 584; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 115	91
Narsingh Das v. Domdoolal	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 222	908
Narsingh Das v. Gokul Prasad	...	25 A. L. J. 775; A. I. R. 1928 All. 140; 50 A. 113	243
Nathabhai Devidas v. Vaghjibhai Jhaverbhai	...	29 Bom. L. R. 1577; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 20; 52 B. 32	49
Natho Singh v. Lachu Singh	...	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 238	156
Nathu Bowa v. Pandurang	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 150	911
Nathu Lal v. Nur Muhammad	...	*Lahore High Court	769

Nazarali v. Bala	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 210	663
Nechaldas v. Official Receiver	*Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court	210
Nibaran Chandra Sikdar v. Abdul Hakim	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 418	751
Notary Public of Lahore v. Jan Bibi	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 329	780
Nur Khan v. Faqir Abdullah	*Lahore High Court	779
Ochachal Ahir v. Emperor	L. R. 9 A. 15 Cr.; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 106; 26 A. I. J. 403; 29 Cr. L. J. 273; A. I. R. 1928 All 194	689
Official Assignee v. Abdul Hussain	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 95	209
Onkar Lala v. Yado Prasad	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	108
P. K. Sen v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 258; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 293	529
Pala Singh v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 267; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 329; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 57	614
Panchapakesa Ayyar v. Ayyaswami Ayyar	*Madras High Court	510
Pamanandachari v. Veerappan	39 M. L. T. 611; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 213	431
Paras Ram v. Neksai	A. I. R. 1928 All. 67; 50 A. 454	662
Partap Singh-Pardhan Singh v. Mewa Singh-Jodha Singh	A. I. R. 1928 Lab. 258	608
Paruchuru Sudarsanacharyulu v. Kollimarla Suryanarayana	39 M. L. T. 628; 27 L. W. 42; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 205	130
Pattathil Sankunni Mannadiar v. Fattathil Krishna Mannadiar	27 L. W. 93; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 70; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 465; 51 M. 320; 54 M. L. J. 682	499
Peare Mohan Prasad v. Raghunath Lal	25 A. L. J. 933; A. I. R. 1928 All. 55; 50 A. 259	40
Phool Chand v. Ram Nath	26 A. L. J. 142; A. I. R. 1928 All. 186; 50 A. 430	570
Phulbans Kuar v. Bhagdat Singh	L. R. 8 A. 361 Rev.; A. I. R. 1928 All. 13; 26 A. L. J. 103; 12 R. D. 37; L. R. 9 A. 243 Rev.	677
Pir Bakhsh v. Gulam Bibi	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 305; 9 Lah. 352; 29 P. L. R. 475	280
Plungun v. Jasodhan	*Lahore High Court	275
Pochiraju Kannamma v. Mannava Mechamma	(1927) M. W. N. 909; 27 L. W. 156; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 297	497
Pokhardas v. Ganpat Rao	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	195
President, District Board, Anantapur v. Ismail Sahib	27 L. W. 28; 29 Cr. L. J. 251; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1195; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 456; 51 M. 512; 55 M. L. J. 204	428
R. B. Poddar & Co. v. D. D. Tatachariar	(1927) M. W. N. 897; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 234	815
Rahimbux-Kaderbux v. Topandas-Harbhugwandas	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 103	440
Rahmat Ali Shah v. Rikhi Keshi	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 143	491
Raj Bachan Singh v. Sooraj Kunwar Ram	4 O. W. N. 1179; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 618	321
Raje Bahadur Raghoji Rao v. Sitaram Dajiba Pande	11 N. L. J. 14; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 189	819
Rajendra Bakhsh Singh v. Bahu Rani	A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 260	330
Rajmal Trilokchand v. Isherdas-Kishenchand	A. I. R. 1927 Sind 247	221
Rajo v. Ali	*Lahore High Court	284
Ralla Ram v. Muhammad Ayub Khan	10 Lah. L. J. 42; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 63	782
Rallia Singh v. Parshotam Singh	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 536	283
Ram Chandra Sahai v. Rama Mal	26 A. L. J. 57	591
Ram Diya v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 294; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 334; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 22	779
Ram Narain v. Mannulal	5 O. W. N. 85; 12 R. D. 310	866
Ram Prasad v. Gurpatri	4 O. W. N. 1049; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 567	559
Ram Rachha Tewari v. Girja Dat Pande	A. I. R. 1928 All. 50	692
Ram Sidh Singh v. Bakoodas	4 O. W. N. 1196; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 101	333
Ram Sukh Dube v. Rampat Tiwari	5 O. W. N. 82; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 218	819
Rama Nath Naskar v. Tarak Nath Banerjee	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 305	746
Ramalinga Sethupathi v. Shunmugha Nadan	(1927) M. W. N. 885; 54 M. L. J. 65; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 175; 27 L. W. 237; 51 M. 242	804
Ramanand v. Secretary of State for India	L. R. 9 A. 3 Rev.; 26 A. L. J. 134; A. I. R. 1928 All. 199; 12 R. D. 10; 50 A. 440	566
Ramanandi Kuer v. Kalawati Kuer	A. I. R. 1928 P. O. 2; 5 O. W. N. 96; I. L. R. 40 Pat. 19; 30 Bom. L. R. 227; 47 O. L. J. 171; 51 M. L. J. 281; 9 P. L. T. 97; 32 O. W. N. 402; 26 A. L. J. 385; 1928 M. W. N. 282; 7 Pat. 221; 27 L. W. 782 P. C.	14
Ramanathan Chettiar v. Sethuram Madige Rao	27 L. W. 47; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 85; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 382	808

Ramappa Naidu v. Lakshmanan Chettiar	..	27 L. W. 88; (1928) M. W. N. 86; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 190; 54 M. L. J. 272	786
Ramaswami Ayyangar v. Rama Nathan Chettiar	..	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 684; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 280	295
Rambhau v. Waman Rao	..	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 251	657
Ramchandra Nagoba v. Retiram	..	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 184; 24 N. L. R. 122	203
Ramdas Sahu v. Judagi Lohar	..	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 231; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 87	532
Rameshwar Kuer v. Lachman Prasad Sahi	..	*Patna High Court	814
Rameshwar Sahu v. Emperor	..	29 Cr. L. J. 308; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 253; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 48	846
Ramgulum Teli v. Emperor	..	9 P. L. T. 92; 7 Pat. 205; 29 Cr. L. J. 297; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 215; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 12	817
Ramji Das v. Jai Ram Das	..	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 301	396
Ramkhelawan Singh v. Diplal Mahton	..	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 240; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 94; 9 P. L. T. 603	537
Ramkumar v. Khushalchand Ganeshdas	..	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 166	668
Rampal Singh v. Jai Ram Singh	..	4 O. W. N. 1229; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 121	580
Rampratap Khandewal v. Govind Bari	..	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	514
Rangasami Aiyangar v. Somasundaram Chettiar	..	54 M. L. J. 150; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 173; 27 L. W. 820	646
Rangaswamy Pillay v. Kuppuswamy Dookshatar	..	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 637	650
Raoji v. Gangabai	..	11 N. L. J. 1; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 123	527
Royal Bank, Canada v. Joseph Salvatori	..	47 O. L. J. 300; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 272; 30 Bom. L. R. 760 P. C.	346
Rup Kishor v. Patrani	..	25 A. L. J. 861; 50 A. 152; A. I. R. 1927 All. 818	45
Rup Narain v. Shibbu Mal	..	*Lahore High Court	466
Rup Nath Mandal v. Jagannath Mandal	..	9 P. L. T. 228; 7 Pat. 178; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 227	145
Rup Singh v. Official Receiver, Jhang	..	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 82; 29 P. L. R. 122; 10 Lah. L. J. 156	394
Rusli v. Rusli	..	23 N. L. R. 192; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 57	522
S. R. M. M. A. Chettyar Firm v. Ma Pwa May	..	5 R. 666; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 50	168
Saba v. Dayaram	..	23 N. L. R. 183; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 91	193
Sadashio Rao Deshmukh v. Laxman Rao Kalar	..	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 227	910
Saheb Din v. Mahabir Singh	..	1 Luck. Cas. 677; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 95; 3 Luck. 273; 12 R. D. 326	326
Sakharam Bala Nikam v. Thatra Bala Nikam	..	29 Bom. L. R. 1571; 51 B. 1019; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 26	265
Sakhu v. Kashiba	..	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 126	199
Sakina Begam v. Muhammad Walli Ullah Khan	..	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 456	397
Salaik Chand v. Tamiz Bano	..	A. I. R. 1928 All. 303	504
Salam Chand Kanayram v. Joogul Kishore Ramdeo	..	32 O. W. N. 114; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 462; 55 O. 777	65
Salig Ram Misir v. Lachman Das	..	25 A. L. J. 937; A. I. R. 1928 All. 46; 50 A. 211	42
Sambhunath Basak v. Abdul Kadir	..	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 217	477
Sandu v. Gopika Bai	..	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	661
Sinkunni Pannikar v. Rama Pannikar	..	*Madras High Court	419
Sardar Muhammad v. Zafar Din	..	*Lahore High Court	624
Sasibushan Mazumdar v. Manik Lal Chandra	..	*Patna High Court	825
Sat Narain Singh v. Badri Prasad Singh	..	4 O. W. N. 1275; A. I. R. 1923 Oudh 146; 12 R. D. 99	516
Sataka Muhammad v. Hayath Batcha Sahib	..	27 L. W. 18; (1928) M. W. N. 30; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 169; 54 M. L. J. 323; 51 M. 165	813
Satish Chandra De Sarkar v. Rakhal Chandra Saha	..	47 O. L. J. 62; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 189	733
Saudagar v. Emperor	..	29 Cr. L. J. 210; A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 165; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 413	98
Saudagar Mal-Lachman Das v. Bahadur Chand-Hari Chand	..	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 42	493
Secretary of State for India v. Makhan Das	..	26 A. L. J. 69; 40 All. 58; A. I. R. 1928 All. 147; 50 B.	587
Secretary of State v. Nandalal	..	A. I. R. 1928 N. L. R. 87	206
Shama Kant Lal v. Ramdhan Puri	..	*Patna High Court	828
Sheikh Ahmad v. Amirkhan	..	A. I. R. 1928	905
Sheo Gulam Puri v. Shiam Lal Bhagat	..	A. I. R. 1928 485	252
Sheopal v. Chitoria	..	4 O. W. N. 1275; 12 R. D. 99	191
Shivaldas Hotchand v. Japan Cotton Trading Co.	..	A. I. R. 1928	434
Shoukhi Sao v. Gaibi Sao	..	*Patna High Court	825
Sidh Gopal v. Behari Lal	..	25	25

Sikandar Khan v. Baland Khan	...	A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 435; 8 Lah. 617; 29 P. L. R. 81	596
Sime, Darby & Co. v. Official Assignee	...	30 Bom. L. R. 290; 54 M. L. J. 337; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 77; 47 C. L. J. 339; I. L. T. 40 Cal. 104; 27 L. W. 744 P. C.	233
Sinthamani Chetti v. Arunachalam Chettiar	...	A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1060	412
Sobha Mal v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 282; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 332	766
Sogia v. Kitaban	...	7 Pat. 141; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 224; 9 P. L. T. 467; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 105	319
Sonachalam Pillai v. Kumaravelu Chettiar	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 77; 54 M. L. J. 8; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 23; 27 L. W. 216; 51 M. 128 F. B.	625
Sooratee Bara Bazar Co. Ltd. v. Municipal Corporation.	...	5 R. 715; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 98	857
Suba v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 280; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 344	764
Sukdevdoss Ramprasad v. Govindoss Chathurbhujadoss	...	47 C. L. J. 144; 51 M. L. J. 130; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 30; 30 Bom. L. R. 238; 5 O. W. N. 195; 27 L. W. 453; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 138; 51 M. 96; 26 A. L. J. 484 P. C.	29
Sunderji Bhimji, In re	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 105	439
Sunmonu v. Disu Raphael	...	54 M. L. J. 394; 47 C. L. J. 333; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 270; 27 L. W. 824 P. C.	344
Suraj Bali v. Emperor	...	4 O. W. N. 1240; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 212; 29 Cr. L. J. 310; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 414	875
Suraj Bali Singh v. Tilakdhari Singh	...	7 Pat. 163; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 220; 9 P. L. T. 310; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 107	151
Surappa v. Sundarama	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 176	141
Suratee Bara Bazar Co. Ltd. v. Municipal Corporation	...	5 R. 722; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 87	849
Taj Mahmud v. Emperor	...	29 P. L. R. 14; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 36; 29 Cr. L. J. 212; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 125; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 505	100
Tarachand Marwari v. Bengal Nagpur Ry. Co.	...	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 259; 9 P. L. T. 616	158
Tek Singh v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 248	358
Thakar Singh v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 277; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 516	761
Thaliyil Manayil v. Valia Narayan	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 172	655
Tikai Chobay v. Sheo Dayal Ramji Das	...	5 O. W. N. 61	887
Tirkha Ram-Chuni Lal v. Haidar	...	10 Lah. L. J. 48; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 68	617
Tulsi Mahto v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 259; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 249; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 543	529
U Po Nyun v. Ma Pan Me	...	5 R. 662; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 43	163
Udhavdas v. Devidas	...	A. I. R. 1927 Sind 160	214
Umesh Chandra v. Safiyatannessa Khatcon	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 267	476
Upendra Lal Gupta v. Jogesh Chandra Roy	...	47 C. L. J. 112; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 186; 32 C. W. N. 1233	730
Upputuri Punnayya v. Polavarapu Lingayya	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 496; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 261	431
Utma Mallick Vishendas, In the matter of	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 114	442
Velu Pillai v. Secretary of State for India	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 852	785
Venkata Krishnayya Garu v. Secretary of State for India	...	39 M. L. T. 551; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 89; 27 L. W. 253	503
Vidiabai v. Mandir Shri Sheoji	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 217	663
Vithu v. Maroti	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 92; 10 N. L. J. 266	198
Vyankatesh v. Annasa Lad	...	23 N. L. R. 143; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 1; 11 N. L. J. 49	517
Wali Muhammad v. Fazal Dad	...	*Lahore High Court	282
Waman v. Vishnu	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 151	516
Wazir Chand v. Karam Chand	...	*Lahore High Court	110
White v. White	...	32 C. W. N. 179; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 513	68
Yusuf v. Musa	...	*Lahore High Court	109

Table showing seriatim the pages of Volume 107 of Indian Cases and the corresponding Pages of other Law Journals and Reports.

[An asterisk (*) denotes cases not reported yet elsewhere.]

Page.	Names of cases reported.	Judgment of which Court.
1	Muthu Chettiar v. Meenakshisundaram Ayyar ..	51 M. L. J. 82; (1928) M. W. N. 91; I. L. T. 40 Mad 47; 5 O. W. N. 166; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 35; 30 Bom. L. R. 261; 47 C. L. J. 183; 27 L. W. 395; 32 O. W. N. 569; 25 A. L. J. 488 P. C.
4	Gauri Shankar v. Jiwan Singh ...	53 M. L. J. 786; 4 O. W. N. 1192; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 246; 25 A. L. J. 967; 47 C. L. J. 7; 30 Bom. L. R. 64; I. L. T. 40 All. 1; 32 O. W. N. 257; (1928) M. W. N. 1; 27 L. W. 203; 9 P. L. T. 277 P. C.
7	Martand Rao v. Malhar Rao ...	A. I. R. 1923 P. C. 10; 47 C. L. J. 150; 30 Bom. L. R. 251; 27 L. W. 350; 54 M. L. J. 397; 32 O. W. N. 621; 24 N. L. R. 25; 11 N. L. J. 26; 55 C. 403 P. C.
14	Ramanandi Kuer v. Kalawati Kuer ...	A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 2; 5 O. W. N. 96; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 19; 30 Bom. L. R. 227; 47 C. L. J. 171; 54 M. L. J. 281; 9 P. L. T. 97; 32 O. W. N. 402; 26 A. L. J. 385; (1928) M. W. N. 282; 7 Pat. 221; 27 L. W. 782 P. C.
20	Bhagwan Singh v. Ujagar Singh ...	A. I. R. 1923 P. C. 20; 30 Bom. L. R. 267; 47 C. L. J. 189; 54 M. L. J. 254; 29 P. L. R. 182; 32 O. W. N. 538; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 49; 27 L. W. 672; 26 A. L. J. 553 P. C.
25	Bissessar Das Daga v. Emmanuel Vas ..	47 C. L. J. 162; 54 M. L. J. 122; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 27; I. L. T. 40 Cal. 45; 30 Bom. L. R. 243; 32 O. W. N. 509; 27 L. W. 655; 24 N. L. R. 17; 55 C. 238; 26 A. L. J. 667 P. C.
29	Sukdevdoss Ramprasad v. Govindoss Chathurbhujadoss ..	47 C. L. J. 144; 54 M. L. J. 130; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 30; 30 Bom. L. R. 238; 5 O. W. N. 195; 27 L. W. 453; I. L. T. 40 Mad 138; 51 M. 96; 26 A. L. J. 484 P. C.
33	Mathura Kurmi v. Jagdeo Singh ...	25 A. L. J. 970; A. I. R. 1928 All. 61; 50 A. 208.
34	Kanhaiya Lal v. Gendo ...	25 A. L. J. 972; A. I. R. 1923 All. 51; 50 A. 238.
36	Lachmi Prasad v. Lachmi Narain ...	25 A. L. J. 926; A. I. R. 1923 All. 41.
40	Peare Mohan Prasad v. Raghunath Lal ..	25 A. L. J. 933; A. I. R. 1928 All. 55; 50 A. 259.
42	Salig Ram Misir v. Lachhman Das ...	25 A. L. J. 937; A. I. R. 1923 All. 46; 50 A. 211.
45	Rup Kishor v. Patrani ...	25 A. L. J. 361; 50 A. 152; A. I. R. 1927 All. 818.
49	Nathabhai Devidas v. Vaghjibhai Jhaverbhai ...	29 Bom. L. R. 1577; A. I. R. 1923 Bom. 20; 52 B. 32.
50	Kunversi Ratansi Patel v. Pitanberdas Ramdas ...	29 Bom. L. R. 1355; A. I. R. 1927 Bom. 599.
52	Bhailal Nathabhai v. Kalansang Galabsang ...	29 Bom. L. R. 1538; 52 B. 55; A. I. R. 1927 Bom. 667.
54	Emperor v. Ukha Mahadu Barase ...	29 Bom. L. R. 1590; A. I. R. 1923 Bom. 22; 29 Cr. L. J. 225; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 481.
56	Bajirao Abaji Kulkarni, In re ...	29 Bom. L. R. 1587; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 33; 29 Cr. L. J. 226; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 403.
57	Emperor v. Shaikh Usman ...	29 Bom. L. R. 1581; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 23; 29 Cr. L. J. 221; 52 B. 195; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 476.
•60	Narayan Balaji Bandivdekar v. Govind Sakharam Nimkar ...	29 Bom. L. R. 1563; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 28.
63	Salam Chand Kanayram v. Joogul Kishore Ramdeo ...	32 O. W. N. 114; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 462; 55 C. 777.
67	Fuzlur Rahman v. Sadar Ali ...	32 O. W. N. 112; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 338.
68	White v. White ...	32 O. W. N. 179; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 513.
70	Jnanendra Nath v. Jitendra Nath ...	32 O. W. N. 108; A. I. L. 1928 Cal. 275.
72	Chamaria & Co v. Sonaton Pal ...	46 C. L. J. 515; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 158.

79	Mahesh Chandra Sadhu v. Jogendra Lal Sarkar	..	32 C. W. N. 181; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 222; 55 C. 512.
81	Monmatha Nath Mitra v. Rajeswar Rai	...	32 C. W. N. 184; 55 C. 355; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 315.
88	Ezra Meyer Aaron Cohen v. Debendra Lall Khan	...	32 C. W. N. 154; 46 C. L. J. 607; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 89.
90	Legal Remembrancer v. Jahey Sheikh	...	32 C. W. N. 144; 29 Cr. L. J. 228; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 228; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 451.
91	Naripendra Nath Mukherji v. Dharendra Narayan Nandi	...	46 C. L. J. 584; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 115.
95	Mohesh Chandra v. Hemendra Nath	...	46 C. L. J. 575; I. L. T. 40 Cal. 30; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 104.
97	Naraina v. Emperor	..	29 P. L. R. 209; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 497.
98	Saudagar v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 210; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 165; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 413.
99	Muhammad Sultan v. Emperor	..	29 Cr. L. J. 211; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 525.
100	Taj Mahmud v. Emperor	...	29 P. L. R. 14; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 36; 29 Cr. L. J. 212; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 125; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 505.
107	Emperor v. Akbar	...	29 P. L. R. 219; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 296; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 496.
108	Mashar Khan v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 220; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 276; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 514.
109	Yusuf v. Musa	...	*Lahore High Court.
110	Wazir Chand v. Karam Chand	...	*Lahore High Court.
113	Maganmal v. Darbarilal	...	A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 39; 54 M. L. J. 208; 30 Bom. L. R. 296; 5 O. W. N. 226; 47 C. L. J. 222; 27 L. W. 523; I. L. T. 40 Cal. 124; 24 N. L. R. 40 P. C.
119	Madhavrao Ganpatrao Desai v. Balabhai Raghunath Agaskar	...	A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 33; 30 Bom. L. R. 282; 47 C. L. J. 198; 54 M. L. J. 245; 27 L. W. 400; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 86; 52 B. 176; 26 A. L. J. 560; 32 C. W. N. 925 P. C.
124	Ardeshir Bhicaji Tamboli v. Agent, G. I. P. Ry. Co.	...	54 M. L. J. 167; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 24; 30 Bom. L. R. 275; 47 C. L. J. 214; 5 O. W. N. 219; 9 P. L. T. 171; 32 C. W. N. 541; 27 L. W. 667; 26 A. L. J. 545; 52 B. 169 P. C.
129	Kandasami Goundan v. Marudachala Goundan	...	39 M. L. T. 562; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 105.
130	Paruchuru Sudarasanacharyulu v. Kollimarla Suryanarayana	...	39 M. L. T. 628; 27 L. W. 42; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 215.
132	Balasundarachari v. Kanniappachari	..	39 M. L. T. 413; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1165.
136	Board of Control, Tiruvalur v. Balajee Ammal	...	39 M. L. T. 579; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 61; 27 L. W. 32.
141	Surappa v. Sundarama	..	A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 176.
145	Rup Nath Mandal v. Jagannath Mandal	...	9 P. L. T. 228; 7 Pat. 178; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 227.
149	Shoukhi Sao v. Gaibi Sao	...	*Patna High Court.
151	Suraj Bali Singh v. Tilakdhar Singh	...	7 Pat. 163; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 220; 9 P. L. T. 310; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 107.
152	Muhammad Fariduddin Ahmad v. Ahmad Abdul Wahab	..	7 Pat. 144; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 255; 9 P. L. T. 383.
156	Natho Singh v. Lachu Singh		A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 233.
158	Tarachand Marwari v. Bengal Nagpur Ry. Co.	...	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 259; 9 P. L. T. 616.
160	Chhanu Prasad Singh v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 229; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 486.
161	Maung Po Pe v. Maung Kwa	...	5 R. 751; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 80.
161	K. K. S. A. R. Firm v. Maung Kya Nyun	..	5 R. 675; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 31.
163	U Po Nyun v. Ma Pwa Me	...	5 R. 662; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 43.
165	Maung Pwa v. Maung Po Sa	...	5 R. 668; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 44.
167	Maung Ba Gon v. Ma Pwa Thit	...	5 R. 747; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 67.
168	S. R. M. M. A. Chettyar Firm v. Ma Pwa May	...	5 R. 666; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 50.
169	C. R. M. A. Chettyar Firm v. K. R. S. V. Chettyar Firm	...	5 R. 757; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 96.
172	Maung Tha Dun v. Po Ka	...	5 R. 768; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 60.
173	Maung Po Si v. K. P. A. P. Firm	...	5 R. 764; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 68.
175	Burma Railways Co. v. Maung Hla Tin	...	5 R. 813; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 85.
177	Madaru v. Emperor	..	5 O. W. N. 29; 29 Cr. L. J. 230; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 221; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 438.

178	Dukhi Singh v. Sarju Dei	...	4 O. W. N. 1225; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 113.
180	Gaya Deen Singh v. Madho Singh	...	4 O. W. N. 1101; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 553.
181	Mohammad Ali Khan v. Badrunnissa	...	4 O. W. N. 1106; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 92.
181	Foster v. Foster	...	1-Luck. Cas. 685; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 111.
191	Sheopal v. Chitoria	...	4 O. W. N. 1123; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 615
192	Murlidhar v. Fakir Bukhs	...	*Oudh Chief Court.
193	Saba v. Dayaram	...	23 N. L. R. 183; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 91.
193	Bapu Suryabhan v. Kisan	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 136.
194	Mohanlal v. Satyabhama	...	23 N. L. R. 178; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 89.
195	Pokhardas v. Ganpat Rao	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
198	Vithu v. Maroti	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 92; 10 N. L. J. 266.
199	Sakhu v. Kashiba	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 126.
201	Kaluram v. Gajasa	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 182.
203	Ramchandra Nagoba v. Retiram	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 184; 24 N. L. R. 122.
205	Govind v. Malkarjunappa	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 133.
206	Secretary of State v. Nandalal	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 52; 24 N. L. R. 87.
209	Official Assignee v. Abdul Hussain	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 95.
210	Nechaldas v. Official Receiver	...	*Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court.
211	Mahomed Kassim v. Natho Bhano	...	*Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court.
213	Chetumal Bulchand v. Noorbhoy Jafferji	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 89.
214	Udhavdas v. Devidas	...	A. I. R. 1927 Sind 100.
216	Budhar Pragji v. Rahimtulla Khan	...	A. I. R. 1923 Sind 93.
218	Naraindas & Co. v. Chandiram & Co.	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 86.
220	Donald Graham & Co. v. Basantram Jhingan	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 1.
221	Rajmal Trilokchand v. Isherdas-Kishenchand	...	A. I. R. 1927 Sind 247.
223	Adamali v. Abdulali	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 87.
225	M. A. Sassoon & Sons v. International Banking Corporation	...	53 M. L. J. 42; A. I. R. 1927 P. O. 195; 1 Luck. Cas. 241; 25 A. L. J. 665; 29 Bom. L. R. 1181; 46 O. L. J. 61; (1927) M. W. N. 618; 32 O. W. N. 30; 39 M. L. T. 659; 54 I. A. 317; 27 L. W. 582; 55 O. L. P. C.
233	Sime, Darby & Co. v. Official Assignee	...	30 Bom. L. R. 290; 51 M. L. J. 337; A. I. R. 1928 P. O. 77; 47 O. L. J. 339; I. L. T. 40; Cal. 104; 27 L. W. 744 P. C.
237	Chockalingam Chetty v. Seethai Ache	...	A. I. R. 1927 P. O. 252; 4 O. W. N. 1231; 27 L. W. 1; 54 M. L. J. 88; (1928) M. W. N. 20; 47 O. L. J. 136; 32 O. W. N. 281; I. L. T. 40 Rang. 18; 30 Bom. L. R. 220; 46 A. L. J. 371; 6 R. 29 P. C.
241	Har Prasad v. Emperor	...	L. R. 8 A. 170 Cr.; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 4; A. I. R. 1928 All. 139; 29 Cr. L. J. 232.
242	Gauri Shankar v. Sri Krishna	...	L. R. 8 A. 172 Cr.; 26 A. L. J. 86; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 12; A. I. R. 1928 All. 128; 29 Cr. L. J. 233.
243	Gulab v. Emperor	...	L. R. 8 A. 173 Cr.; 26 A. L. J. 95; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 16; A. I. R. 1928 All. 128; 29 Cr. L. J. 244.
243	Narsingh Das v. Gokul Prasad	...	25 A. L. J. 775; A. I. R. 1928 All. 140; 50 A. 113.
244	Hukum Chand v. Sital Prasad	...	25 A. L. J. 922; A. I. R. 1928 All. 52; 50 A. 232.
247	Sidh Gopal v. Behari Lal	...	25 A. L. J. 978; A. I. R. 1928 All. 65; 50 A. 284.
249	Najaf Ali Khan v. Muhammad Fazal Ali Khan	...	A. I. R. 1928 All. 255.
252	Sheo Gulam Puri v. Shiam Lal Bhagat	...	A. I. R. 1928 All. 257; 50 A. 485.
254	Kirtarath Rai v. Sripat Rai	...	A. I. R. 1928 All. 307.
257	Ganpat Tukaram Mali v. Sopana Tukaram Mali	...	30 Bom. L. R. 1; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 43; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 35; 52 B. 88 F. B.
265	Sakharam Bala Nikam v. Thama Bala Nikam	...	29 Bom. L. R. 1571; 51 B. 1019; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 26.
268	Huchangouda Rudragouda v. Kallava Kallappa	...	30 Bom. L. R. 38; 52 B. 132; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 166; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 108.
272	Emperor v. Mahomed Hasan Ghanchi.	...	30 Bom. L. R. 86; 29 Cr. L. J. 231; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 491.
273	Matwal Das v. Nand Lal	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 284.
273	Allan Robert Shaw v. Emily May Shaw	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 320.
274	Babu Singh v. Gurbaksh Singh	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 249.
275	Plungun v. Jasodhan	...	*Lahore High Court.
276	Jai Dev Singh v. Jai Singh	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 445.
276	Durga Datt-Jagan Nath v. Ganesh Das-Ishar Das	...	A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 648.
278	Ganesh Das-Ishar Das v. Basheshar Lal-Bansi Dhar	...	A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 697.

280	Pir Bakhsh v. Ghulam Bibi	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 305; 9 Lah. 352; 29 P. L. R. 475.
281	Narain Singh v. Gurbakhsh Singh	...	A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 119; 29 P. L. R. 399; 9 Lah. 306.
282	Wali Muhammad v. Fazal Dad	..	*Lahore High Court.
283	Rallia Singh v. Parshotam Singh	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 536.
284	Gopal Singh v. Mangal Singh	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 341.
284	Rajo v. Ali	...	*Lahore High Court.
285	Devi Dial v. Rattan Devi	...	29 Cr. L. J. 235; A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 294.
285	Gulab v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 235; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 660.
286	Emperor v. Muhammad Akbar	..	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 64; 29 Cr. L. J. 236; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 490.
288	Batan Singh v. Emperor	..	29 Cr. L. J. 238; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 435.
289	Muppidathi Ammal v. Muthuswami Pillai	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 126; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 263.
290	Murugiah Pillai v. Pakkiri Pillai	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 499; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 271.
291	Commissioner of Income-Tax, Madras v. Trichinopoly Permanent Fund	...	A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1078; 53 M. L. J. 881; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 263 F. B.
293	Karupanna Konar v. Rangaswami Konar	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 105.
295	Ramaswami Ayyangar v. Rama Nathan Chettiar	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 684; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 230.
298	Abdul Salam Saheb v. Batchu Veerabhadra Raju	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 129.
301	Meenakshi Ammal v. Iswaram Iyer	..	39 M. L. T. 530; 53 M. L. J. 903; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 121; 27 L. W. 238; (1928) M. W. N. 50.
302	Bansilal Abberchaud v. Sriranganacharammal	...	I. L. T. 40 Mad. 59; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 456.
303	Elavallath Potayur v. Thiruvazhiyot Valappa	...	39 M. L. T. 371; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 24; 54 M. L. J. 151; 27 L. W. 798.
305	Ghansham Singh v. Emperor	..	6 Pat. 627; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 100; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 460; 29 Cr. L. J. 239.
310	Badlu Pathak v. Sibram Singh	...	9 P. L. T. 241; 7 Pat. 155; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 234.
313	F. A. Savi v. Sabitri Thakurain	...	6 Pat. 282; 8 P. L. T. 615; A. I. R. 1927 Pat. 363.
319	Sogia v. Kitaban	...	7 Pat. 141; A. R. 1928 Pat. 224; 9 P. L. T. 467; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 105.
320	Muhammad Reza v. Rajballabhnath Singh	..	9 P. L. T. 240.
321	Raj Bachan Singh v. Sooraj Kunwar Ram	..	4 O. W. N. 1179; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 618.
326	Saheb Din v. Mahabir Singh	...	1 Luck. Cas. 677; A. I. R. 1923 Oudh 95; 3 Luck. 273; 12 R. D. 326.
330	Rajendra Bakhsh Singh v. Bahu Rani	...	A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 260.
333	Debi Dayal v. Manao	...	5 O. W. N. 78; 29 Cr. L. J. 244; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 632; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 532.
333	Ram Sidh Singh v. Bakoodas	...	4 O. W. N. 1196; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 101.
335	Ghani Ahamad Khan v. Mehdi Begam	...	1 Luck. Cas. 645; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 617.
337	Jewan Lal Daga v. Nilmani Chaudhuri	..	26 A. L. J. 124; 30 Bom. L. R. 305; (1928) M. W. N. 154; 54 M. L. J. 325; 47 C. L. J. 302; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 80; 32 C. W. N. 565; 27 L. W. 740; 7 Pat. 305 P. C.
344	Sunmonu v. Disu Raphael	...	54 M. L. J. 391; 47 C. L. J. 333; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 270; 27 L. W. 824 P. C.
346	Royal Bank, Canada v. Joseph Salvatori	...	47 C. L. J. 300; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 272; 30 Bom. L. R. 760 P. C.
347	George Richards Laffer v. Francis Arnold Gillen	...	47 C. L. J. 327; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 275 P. C.
347	Manche Anege Akue v. Mancho Kojo Ababio IV	..	47 C. L. J. 337; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 262; 30 Bom. L. R. 755 P. C.
349	Arunachala Nayadu v. Balakrishna	..	A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 266; 47 C. L. J. 576 P. C.
349	Kojo Pon v. Atta Fua	...	47 C. L. J. 333; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 264 P. C.
352	Carl Franz Adolf Otto v. Wing On & Co. Ltd.	...	47 C. L. J. 263; A. I. R. 1923 P. C. 83; 30 Bom. L. R. 753 P. C.
353	Carmen v. O'Brien	...	54 C. 1041; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 97; 29 Cr. L. J. 245; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 471.
355	Bhodai Sheikh v. Barada Kanta Dutta	...	46 C. L. J. 570; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 116; 55 C. 602.
357	Krishna Chandra Dutta v. Dina Nath Biswas	...	54 C. 1064; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 94.
360	Kessoram Poddar & Co v. Secretary of State for India	..	54 C. 969; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 74.
365	Abdul Ghani v. Sansar Chand	..	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 101.
366	Nanak Chand v. Gaman	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 351.
388	Tek Singh v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 248.
390	Atma Devi v. Shib Devi	..	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 244.

391	H. Bharucha v. Municipal Committee, Lahore	...	29 Cr. L. J. 250; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 270; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 501; 9 Lah. 394.
392	Gopal Mal v. Gopal Singh-Hari Singh	..	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 378.
393	Bishen Chand v. Bisben Devi	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 96.
394	Rup Singh v. Official Receiver, Jhang	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 82; 29 P. L. R. 122; 10 Lah. L. J. 156.
395	Abdul Aziz v. Punjab National Bank, Ltd., Lahore	...	*Lahore High Court.
396	Ramji Das v. Jai Ram Das	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 301.
397	Sakina Begam v. Muhammad Walli Ullah Klaw	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 456.
400	Munshi Ram v. Ghulam Dastgir	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 423.
401	Gurumoorthi Iyer v. P. S. Subramaniam	...	*Madras High Court.
412	Sinthamani Chetti v. Arunachalam Chettiar	...	A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1060.
417	Balam Nookamma v. Sadireddi	...	53 M. L. J. 863; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 233.
417	Munuswami Mudali v. Jawarmal Sowcar	...	39 M. L. T. 652; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1180.
419	Nagarathnammal v. Ohinnu Sah	..	(1927) M. W. N. 750; 53 M. L. J. 861; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 127.
420	M. K. Sowbhagyammal v. Komalangi Ammal	...	27 L. W. 167; J. L. T. 40 Mad. 51; 54 M. L. J. 332; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 803.
423	Krishnaswami Ayyar v. Raghaviah Chetty	...	53 M. L. J. 679; 26 L. W. 687; 39 M. L. T. 472; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 43.
428	President, District Board, Anantapur v. Ismail Sahib	...	27 L. W. 28; 29 Cr. L. J. 251; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1195; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 456; 51 M. 512; 55 M. L. J. 201.
429	Sankunni Pannikar v. Rama Pannikar	..	*Madras High Court.
431	Paramanandachari v. Veerappan	...	39 M. L. T. 611; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 213.
431	Upputuri Punneyya v. Polavarapu Lingayya	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 496; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 261.
433	Gopaldas Versimal, In re	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 90.
433	Shivaldas Hotchand v. Japan Cotton Trading Co.	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 94.
433	Firm of Uttamchand-Brijlal v. Firm of Balmokand	...	*Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court.
439	Sunderji Bhimji, In re	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 105.
440	Rahimbux-Kaderbux v. Topandas-Harbhagvandas	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 103.
442	Utma Mallick Vishendas, In the matter of	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 114.
446	Lalchand v. Issersing	...	A. I. R. 1928 Sind 126.
449	Krishna Reddi v. Gandavaram Raghava Reddi	...	32 C. W. N. 3; 53 M. L. J. 700; J. L. T. 40 Mad. 1; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 257 P. C.
453	Jaffer Ali Bhaloo Lakha v. Standard Bank of South Africa, Ltd.	...	47 C. L. J. 292; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 135; 30 Bom. L. R. 762 P. C.
455	Municipal Council, Sydney v. Margaret Alexandra Troy	...	47 C. L. J. 284; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 128 P. C.
457	Lim Yam Hong v. Lam Choon & Co.	...	47 C. L. J. 288; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 127; 30 Bom. L. R. 757 P. C.
459	John Lachlan McGillivray v. Bertha Elinor Lilian Haggitt	...	47 C. L. J. 295; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 115 P. C.
461	Chockalingam Chettyar v. E. N. M. K. Chettyar Firm	...	A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 44; 5 O. W. N. 517; 6 R. 113; 47 C. L. J. 429; 30 Bom. L. R. 788; 32 C. W. N. 677; 27 L. W. 811 P. C.
465	Aimana Khatun v. Saburannessa Bibi	...	32 C. W. N. 449.
467	Chandra Nath Sen v. Nagendra Nath Ganguly	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 263.
468	Makbul Ali v. Sasi Kumar Malla	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 305.
469	Kasiraddin Paramanik v. Kasir Mandal	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 227.
469	Jotirmoy Goswami v. Guru Gobinda Goswami	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 273.
470	Daliluddi v. Matahar Ali	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 254.
471	Mujibuddin v. Reajuddi Matbar	...	*Calcutta High Court.
473	Jajneswar Karmakar v. Kailash Chandra Ghose	...	*Calcutta High Court.
474	Barsik Nandi Mandal v. Gurudas Pal	...	46 C. L. J. 573; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 107.
475	Mati Lal Lyall v. Premi Lyall	...	54 C. 1038; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 114.
475	Diljan v. Makbul Khan	...	*Calcutta High Court.
476	Umesh Chandra v. Safiyatannessa Khatun	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 267.
477	Sambhunath Basak v. Abdul Kader	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 247.
479	Madhab Chandra Dutta v. Jainoo Ram	...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 231.
481	Basant Singh v. Shhibba Mal	...	10 Lah. L. J. 17.
482	Farzand Ali v. Emperor	...	29 P. L. R. 33; 29 Cr. L. J. 252; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 520.
485	Hari Kishan v. Kanshi Ram	...	29 Cr. L. J. 254; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 540; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 664.

486	Rup Narain v. Shibbu Mal	...	*Lahore High Court.
487	Hira v. Tek Chand	...	10 Lah. L. J. 21.
488	Bhagela Shah v. Sita Ram	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 444.
489	Ahmad Din v. Fatima Bibi	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 490.
490	Behari Lal v. Chuni Lal	...	*Lahore High Court.
491	Rahmat Ali Shah v. Rikhi Kesh	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 113.
492	Indian Merchants Bank, Ltd, Amritsar v. Anup Chand	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 26.
493	Saudagar Mal-Lachman Das v. Bahadur Chand-Hari Chand	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 442.
494	Kirpa Ram v. Nand Lal	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 413.
495	Abdul Wahid v. Emperor	...	9 Lah. L. J. 533; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 110; 29 Cr. L. J. 256; 29 P. L. R. 329; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 454; 9 Lah. 302.
497	Pochiraju Kannamma v. Mannava Machamma	..	(1927) M. W. N. 909; 27 L. W. 156; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 297.
499	Pattathil Sankunni Mannadiar v. Pattathil Krishna Mannadiar	...	27 L. W. 93; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 70; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 465; 51 M. 320; 54 M. L. J. 682.
503	Venkata Krishnayya Garu v. Secretary of State for India	..	39 M. L. T. 551; A. I. R. 1928 Mal. 89; 27 L. W. 253.
510	Panchapakesa Ayyar v. Ayyaswami Ayyar	...	*Madras High Court.
511	Jammula Narayanamurthi v. Nilambara Prudhivisinghi Santo	...	39 M. L. T. 614; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 226
512	Bontu Appala Naidu, In re	...	27 L. W. 83; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 167; 29 Cr. L. J. 257; 51 M. 339; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 503; 54 M. L. J. 714.
513	Damodardas v. Rodba	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 203.
514	Domaji v. Tulsiram	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 179.
516	Waman v. Vishnu	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 151.
517	Vyakatesh v. Annasa Lad	...	23 N. L. R. 143; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 1; 11 N. L. J. 49.
522	Dharmu v. Dalsingh	...	A. I. R. 1927 Nag. 352.
522	Rushi v. Rushi	...	23 N. L. R. 192; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 87.
524	Rampratap Khandewal v. Govind Bari	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
525	Narain Das Bhagwandas & Co. v. Kalyanji Mawaji & Co.	...	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 173; 24 N. L. R. 55.
527	Raoji v. Gangabai	...	11 N. L. J. 1; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 123.
528	Honia Mali v. Chindhia	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
529	P. K. Sen v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 253; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 293.
529	Tulsi Mahto v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 259; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 249; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 513.
530	Bigan Singh v. Emperor	...	6 Pat. 691; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 143; 29 Cr. L. J. 200; 9 P. L. T. 327; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 450.
532	Ramdas Sahu v. Judagi Lohar	...	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 231; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 87.
533	Joharmal-Mathuradas v. Hira Lal-Shevwchand Roy	..	7 Pat. 238; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 221; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 90.
536	Emperor v. Prabhu Upadhaya	..	29 Cr. L. J. 261; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 201; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 523.
537	Ramkhelawan Singh v. Diplal Mahton	...	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 240; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 94; 9 P. L. T. 608.
538	Kuman Dass v. Tilakdhari Singh	...	9 P. L. T. 184; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 94.
539	Kuldip Mahton v. Patia	...	9 P. L. T. 437; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 281.
540	G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Gopi Ram-Gouri Shankar	...	9 P. L. T. 163; 7 Pat. 192; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 270; I. L. T. 40 Pat. 99.
542	Abdul Baqi v. Sheo Prakash Singh	...	I. L. T. 40 Pat. 84; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 279.
545	Ganesh Singh v. Bhikham Singh	...	4 O. W. N. 1055; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 1; 3 Luck. 1.
552	Bhairon Dei v. Ram Sewak Lal	...	1 Luck. Cas. 648; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 623.
553	Lal Harihar Partab Bakhsh Singh v. Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh	...	5 O. W. N. 15; A. I. R. 1923 Oudh 143; 3 Luck. 298 F. B.
555	Nageshar Nath Singh v. Temple of Ram Janki	..	4 O. W. N. 1112; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 500.
556	Sat Narain Singh v. Badri Prasad Singh	...	4 O. W. N. 1275; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 146; 12 R. D. 99.
559	Ram Prasad v. Gurpatri	...	4 O. W. N. 1049; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 567.
560	Rampal Singh v. Jai Ram Singh	...	4 O. W. N. 1229; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 121.

561	Murli Pathak v. Emperor	...	L. R. 8 A. 123 Cr.; 8 A. I. Cr. R. 211; A. I. R. 1927 All. 707; 25 A. L. J. 855; 29 Cr. L. J. 262; 50 A. 169.
562	Kesar Kuer v. Kallu Ram	...	L. R. 9 A. 33 Rev.; 26 A. L. J. 383; A. I. R. 1928 All. 164; 12 R. D. 79; 50 A. 479.
563	Budhua v. Emperor	...	L. R. 9 A. 1 Cr.; 26 A. L. J. 107; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 52; A. I. R. 1928 All. 118; 29 Cr. L. J. 263.
564	Salaik Chand v. Tamiz Bano	...	A. I. R. 1928 All. 303.
566	Ramanand v. Secretary of State for India	...	L. R. 9 A. 3 Rev.; 26 A. L. J. 134; A. I. R. 1928 All. 199; 12 R. D. 10; 50 A. 440.
569	Bankey Lal v. Natha Ram	...	*Allahabad High Court.
570	Phool Chand v. Ram Nath	...	26 A. L. J. 142; A. I. R. 1928 All. 186; 50 A. 430.
574	Khazan Singh v. Bikram Singh	...	*Allahabad High Court.
576	Bankey Lal v. Nattha Ram	...	*Allahabad High Court.
578	Collector of Cawnpore v. Jugal Kishore	...	A. I. R. 1928 All. 355.
581	Chhanga v. Tirhi	...	26 A. L. J. 87; A. I. R. 1928 All. 192.
581	Mohammad Shoaib Khan v. Zaib Jahan Begam	...	26 A. L. J. 110; I. L. T. 40 All. 52; A. I. R. 1927 All. 850; 50 A. 423.
584	Fazal Haq v. Fazal Haq	...	26 A. L. J. 49; A. I. R. 1928 All. 201.
587	Secretary of State for India v. Makhan Das	...	26 A. L. J. 69; I. L. T. 40 All. 58; A. I. R. 1923 All. 147; 50 A. 470 F. B.
591	Ram Chandra Sabai v. Rama Mal	...	26 A. L. J. 57.
592	Murat Singh v. Emperor	...	L. R. 9 A. 10 Cr.; 26 A. L. J. 109; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 98; 29 Cr. L. J. 265; A. I. R. 1928 All. 266.
593	Edalji Dinshaw & Co. v. Dhanpat Mal-Bhagwan Das	...	*Lahore High Court.
594	Mangal Sain v. Indian Merchants Bank, Ltd.	...	29 P. L. R. 119; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 240.
596	Sikandar Khan v. Baland Khan	...	A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 435; 8 Lah. 617; 29 P. L. R. 81.
601	Dasondhi v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 235; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 332; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 488; 9 Lah. 424.
603	Musa v. Mam Kaur	...	9 Lah. L. J. 548; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 119; 29 Cr. L. J. 267; 29 P. L. R. 271; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 473.
603	Jaswant Rai Datta Chowdhry v. Lajwanti	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 70.
605	Badar-ud-Din v. Mehr Din	...	*Lahore High Court.
606	Lachmi v. Nanak Chand	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 710.
607	Imam Bakhsh v. Amiran	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 700.
608	Partap Singh-Pardhan Singh v. Mewa Singh-Jodha Singh	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 258.
609	Bura Mall v. Tulsi Ram	...	9 Lah. L. J. 579; 29 P. L. R. 27; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 29; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 890; 9 Lah. 366.
610	Lal Chand v. Thakur Dass	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 73.
612	Hansa v. Ram Lok	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 147.
614	Pala Singh v. Emperor	...	29 Cr. L. J. 267; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 320; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 527.
617	Tirkha Ram-Chuni Lal v. Haidar	...	10 Lah. L. J. 48; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 68.
618	Mahtab Din v. Kasar Singh	...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 440.
619	Ghulam Mohammad v. Abdul Majid	...	*Lahore High Court.
620	Budha Mal v. Rallia Ram	...	9 Lah. 418.
624	Sardar Muhammad v. Zafar Din	...	*Lahore High Court.
624	Charat Singh v. Sukhdev Singh	...	9 Lah. L. J. 547; 29 P. L. R. 264; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 848.
625	Sonachalam Pillai v. Kumaravelu Chettiar	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 77; 54 M. L. J. 8; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 23; 27 L. W. 216; 51 M. 128 F. B.
637	Narayana Chettiar v. Suppiah Chettiar	...	I. L. T. 40 Mad. 65; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 402.
639	Maneckji Rustomji v. H. H. Wadia	...	51 M. L. J. 136; 27 L. W. 172; (1928) M. W. N. 45; 51 M. 235; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 470.
641	Krishnamachariar v. Chellamal	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 561.
643	Amechand Nagin Doss & Co. v. Raoji Bhai Moti Bhai Patel	...	39 M. L. T. 655; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 233.
643	Bhogaraju Kanakamma v. Secretary of State for India	...	39 M. L. T. 600; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 145; 54 M. L. J. 230; 27 L. W. 791.
646	Rangasami Aiyangar v. Somasundaram Chettiar	...	54 M. L. J. 150; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 173; 27 L. W. 820.
648	Arumugam Chettiar v. Devaraya Chettiar	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 625.
649	Bhadri Narayana v. Nagaldinne Srinivasa Rao	...	39 M. L. T. 657; 54 M. L. J. 66; 27 L. W. 632; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1179.
650	Rangaswamy Pillay v. Kuppuswamy Dookshaper	...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 637.

653	Borojo Charchi v. Odhikari Basudebe Das	I. L. T. 40 Mad. 11; (1928) M. W. N. 83; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 152.
655	Thaliyl Manayil v. Valla Narayan	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 172.
657	Rambhau v. Waman Rao	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 251.
658	Munna Singh v. Narain Singh	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
660	Mansaram v. Lungraji	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
661	Commissioner of Income Tax v. Mohomad Nurulla Khan	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 146.
661	Sandu v. Gopika Rai	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
662	Kamod Singh v. Khemkaran	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 175.
663	Nazarali v. Bala	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 210.
663	Vidiabai v. Mandir Shri Sheoji	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 217.
665	Kalikram v. Emperor	29 Cr. L. J. 270; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 557.
666	Balkisandas v. Jainarayan	23 N. L. R. 166; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 80.
667	Charles Henry v. Olive Muriel	11 N. L. R. 4; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 117.
668	Ramkumar v. Khushalchand Ganeshdas	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 166.
671	Balaji v. Ballabhdas	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 146.
671	Jugal Kishore v. Nago	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 221.
673	Bajinath v. Ohhote Lal	A. I. R. 1928 All. 58; 26 A. L. J. 243.
674	Majidan v. Sabir Ali	A. I. R. 1928 All. 62.
677	Phulbans Kuar v. Bhagdat Singh	L. R. 8 A 361 Rev.; A. I. R. 1928 All. 13; 26 A. L. J. 103; 12 R. D. 37; L. R. 9 A. 213 Rev.
679	Kallu v. Ram Das	26 A. L. J. 53.
682	Paras Ram v. Neksai	A. I. R. 1928 All. 87; 50 A. 454.
683	Makund Sarup, In the matter of	A. I. R. 1928 All. 81; 26 A. L. J. 280; 50 A. 495 F. B.
687	Gur Narain v. Emperor	L. R. 9 A. 11 Cr.; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 99; 26 A. L. J. 160; 29 Cr. L. J. 271; A. I. R. 1928 All. 191.
688	Jagannath v. Emperor	L. R. 9 A. 13 Cr.; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 102; 29 Cr. L. J. 272; A. I. R. 1928 All. 185; 26 A. L. J. 410.
689	Ochachal Ahir v. Emperor	L. R. 9 A. 15 Cr.; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 106; 26 A. L. J. 403; 29 Cr. L. J. 273; A. I. R. 1928 All. 194.
690	Aminullah v. Emperor	A. I. R. 1928 All. 95; L. R. 9 A. 28 Cr.; 26 A. L. J. 328; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 197; 29 Cr. L. J. 274; I. L. T. 40 All. 100.
691	Muhammad Hasan v. Emperor	L. R. 8 A. 103 Cr.; 8 A. I. Cr. R. 60; A. I. R. 1927 All. 610; 29 Cr. L. J. 275.
692	Ram Rachha Tewari v. Girja Dat Pande	A. I. R. 1928 All. 50.
693	Lal Singh v. Jagraj Singh	A. I. R. 1928 All. 86; 26 A. L. J. 229; 50 A. 546.
699	Jai Narain Singh v. Munna Lal	A. I. R. 1928 All. 92; 26 A. L. J. 268; 50 A. 480.
702	Bhagwati Saran v. Deo Saran Singh	L. R. 9 A. 23 Rev.; A. I. R. 1928 All. 166; 12 R. D. 53.
705	Emperor v. Nabibux Karimbux Mulla	30 Bom. L. R. 88; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 52; 52 B. 168; 29 Cr. L. J. 383; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 11; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 92.
705	Ohintaman Raoji Naik v. Khenderao Pandurang	30 Bom. L. R. 45; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 58; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 77; 52 B. 184.
707	Bhogilal Purshottam v. Chimanlal Amritlal	30 Bom. L. R. 92; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 29; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 49; 52 B. 116.
710	Jayappa Lokappa v. Shivangouda	30 Bom. L. R. 19; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 42; 52 B. 72; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 66.
719	Moti Jagta v. Indurai Bhaurai Desai	30 Bom. L. R. 98; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 53; 52 B. 203; I. L. T. 40 Bom. 93.
721	Bani Kanta Mondal v. Hemanta Kumar Ghose	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 405.
722	Khanta Kamini Dutt v. Aswini Kumar Dutt	32 C. W. N. 400; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 424.
723	Mujaffar Ahmed v. Karim Bukhsha	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 306.
724	Birendra Nath Roy v. Tarini Kanta Roy	47 C. L. J. 107; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 191.
726	Naimuddin Biswas v. Maniruddin Lashkar	47 C. L. J. 82; 32 C. W. N. 299; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 181.
729	Nabu Sahu v. Kamdev Maity	47 C. L. J. 87; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 179.
730	Upendra Lal Gupta v. Jogesh Chandra Roy	47 C. L. J. 112; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 186; 32 C. W. N. 1233.
733	Satish Chandra De Sarkar v. Rakhal Chandra Saha	47 C. L. J. 62; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 189.
735	Ataharuddin v. Murari Mohur Dutt	47 C. L. J. 21; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 193.
738	K. O. Bonnerjee, In re	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 402.
741	Mahendra Nath Biswas v. Charu Chandra Bose	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 396.
742	Mohar Ali v. Abdul Karim Sarkar	*Calcutta High Court.

743	Manmatha Nath Sarkar v. Debendra Nath Samanta...	*Calcutta High Court.
744	Hara Chandra Mandal v. Mohananda Mandal ...	47 O. L. J. 365; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 299.
746	Rama Nath Naskar v. Tarak Nath Banerjee ...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 305.
747	Annada Bandhu Das v. Ambica Charan Bhatta- charjee	47 O. L. J. 569; A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 412; 55 C. 892.
751	Nibaran Chandra Sikdar v. Abdul Hakim ...	A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 418.
753	Khurshid Haq v. Ram Ditta Mall ...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 665.
753	Kunj Behari Lal v. Mubarik Begum ...	9 Lah. L. J. 536; 29 P. L. R. 273; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 833.
756	Agya Singh v. Sunder Singh ...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 137; 9 Lah. 380.
759	Khana v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 276; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 504.
759	Lachhmi Bai v. Diwan Chand ...	*Lahore High Court.
761	Thakur Singh v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 277; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 516.
763	Muhammad Bakhsh v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 279; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 319.
764	Suba v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 280; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 344.
766	Sobba Mal v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 282; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 332.
766	Hayat v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 282; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 380; 10 Lah. L. J. 389.
769	Nathu Lal v. Nur Muhammad ...	*Lahore High Court.
770	Dina Nath v. Bir Singh ...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 334.
771	Muhammad Ali v. Emperor ...	29 P. L. R. 30; 29 Cr. L. J. 285; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 164; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 128.
772	Holmes v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 286; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 324; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 499.
773	Muhammad Azim v. Niaz Muhammad ...	29 Cr. L. J. 289; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 317; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 8.
774	Ghulam Rasul v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 289; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 5.
775	Emperor v. Khairati Lal ...	29 Cr. L. J. 291; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 27.
778	Alam v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 293; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 541; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 10.
779	Ram Diya v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 294; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 334; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 22.
779	Nur Khan v. Faqir Abdullah ...	*Lahore High Court.
780	Notary Public of Lahore v. Jan Bibi ...	A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 329.
781	Daya Ram v. Harcharan Das ...	29 P. L. R. 72; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 111; 8 Lah. 678.
782	Ralla Ram v. Muhammad Ayub Khan ...	10 Lah. L. J. 42; I. L. T. 40 Lah. 63.
783	Amar Nath v. Emperor ...	29 Cr. L. J. 295; A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 460.
785	Velu Pillai v. Secretary of State for India ...	A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 852.
786	Ramappa Naidu v. Lakshmanan Chettiar ...	27 L. W. 88; (1928) M. W. N. 86; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 190; 54 M. L. J. 272.
789	Abdul Ghani v. Subramania Chettiar ...	27 L. W. 212; I. L. T. 40 Mad. 89.
792	Giridhardoss Co. v. ...	27 L. W. 135; (1928) M. W. N. 79; A. I. R. 1928

830	Gopal Ram v. Magni Ram	...	9 P. L. T. 329; 7 Pat. 375; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 338.
835	Emperor v. Ghulam Nabi	..	6 Pat. 768; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 116; 29 Cr. L. J. 301; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 335.
842	Chauthmal Bhagirath v. Khem Karan Das	..	A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 116.
844	Rameshwar Kuer v. Lachman Prasad Sahi	..	*Patna High Court.
846	Rameshwar Sahu v. Emperor	..	29 Cr. L. J. 303; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 253; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 48.
848	Jamila Khatoon v. Dayanand Thakur	...	7 Pat. 331; A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 272.
849	Suratee Bara Bazaar Co. Ltd. v. Municipal Corporation	..	5 R. 722; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 87.
856	Ma Shwe Mra Pru v. Maung Ba On	...	5 R. 659; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 29
857	Sooratee Bara Bazar Co. Ltd. v. Municipal Corporation	..	5 R. 715; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 98.
860	M. E. Moolla v. Chartered Bank	...	5 R. 635; A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 36.
865	Lakshmi Dhar v. Dhokhe Lal	...	A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 300.
866	Ram Narain v. Mannulal	...	5 O. W. N. 85; 12 R. D. 310.
866	Jagmohan Singh v. Sri Nath	...	5 O. W. N. 1; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 203; 3 Luck. 302.
871	Mahabir Bux Singh v. Sitla Bux Singh	...	4 O. W. N. 1255; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 152; 3 Luck. 167.
872	Kushar Das v. Balbhaddar Singh	..	4 O. W. N. 1269; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 153; 12 R. D. 84.
875	Suraj Bali v. Emperor	...	4 O. W. N. 1240; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 212; 29 Cr. L. J. 310; 9 A. I. Cr. R. 414.
876	Mani Ram v. Emperor	...	5 O. W. N. 33; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh. 207; 29 Cr. L. J. 311; 10 A. I. Cr. R. 21.
877	Narayan v. Baldeo Singh	...	4 O. W. N. 1258; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 214; 12 R. D. 109; 3 Luck. 150.
879	Ram Sukh Dube v. Rampat Tiwari	..	5 O. W. N. 82; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 218.
880	Jamwanti Kuer v. Ram Tirath	...	A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 302.
881	Bishun Narain v. Mazharul Haq	...	5 O. W. N. 35; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 224.
882	Mohammad Shafi v. Raunaq Ali	..	5 O. W. N. 20; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 231.
884	Mathura v. Shambhoo Dayal	..	5 O. W. N. 80; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 225.
885	Hasen Bandi v. Barati Lal	...	A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 238.
887	Tikai Chobay v. Sheo Dayal-Ramji Das	...	5 O. W. N. 61.
890	Mitar Sen Singh v. Maqbul Hasan	...	4 O. W. N. 1243; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 138; 3 Luck. 154.
895	Abid Husain Khan v. Sri Thakurji	...	A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 296.
896	Gur Saran v. Jagannath	...	5 O. W. N. 42; A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 240; 12 R. D. 48.
897	Maroti Suryabhan v. Raiwant Rao	..	A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 262.
899	Raja Bahadur Raghoji Rao v. Sitaram Daiiba Pande	...	11 N. L. J. 14; A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 189.

TABLE

OF

Cases Applied, Approved, Considered, Disapproved, Dissented from, Distinguished, Explained, Followed,
Not Followed, Overruled and Relied upon in Volume 107 of Indian Cases, 1928.

A	Page.	A—contd.	Page.
A. T. A. R. M. M. Chetty Firm v. Mahomed Kasim, 90 Ind. Cas. 1011; 3 R. 367; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 377. (Relied on) ...	165	Agra and Masterman's Bank, In re , (1867) 2 Ch. A. 391; 36 L. J. Ch. 222; 16 L. T. 162; 15 W. R. 414. (Distinguished) ...	225
Abdul v. Emperor, 6 Ind. Cas. 639; 19 P. W. R. 1910 Cr.; 11 Or. L. J. 389. (Referred to)	775	Aizunnissa Khatoon v. Karimunnissa Khatoon, 23 C. 130 at pp. 158, 160; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 87. (Referred to) ...	882
Abdul Aziz v. Habib Mistri, 49 Ind. Cas. 229. (Followed) ...	842	Ajodhya Mahton v. Phul Kuer, 65 Ind. Cas. 341; 1 Pat. 277; (1922) Pat. 61; A. I. R. 1922 Pat. 479. (Followed) ...	193
Abdul Ghani v. Muhammad Fasih, 28 A. 95; A. W. N. (1905) 200; 2 A. L. J. 667. (Referred to) ...	569	Ajuddin Ahamed v. Khoda Bux Khondkar, 50 Ind. Cas. 5. (Dissented from) ...	494
Abdul Hakim v. Ganesh Dutt, 12 C. 323; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 220. (Relied on) ...	584	Ali Ahmad v. Sohan Lal, 24 Ind. Cas. 6; 12 A. L. J. 613. (Referred to) ...	693
Abdul Rahman v. Wali Mohammad, 68 Ind. Cas. 601; 4 P. L. T. 267; (1922) Pat. 313; A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 72; 2 Pat. 75. (Dissented from)	319	Ali Bakhsh v. Alah Dad Khan, 6 Ind. Cas. 376; 32 A. 551 at p. 562; 7 A. L. J. 567. (Relied upon) ...	581
Abdul Wahid Khan v. Abdullah Khan, 74 Ind. Cas. 849; A. I. R. 1924 All. 1; 21 A. L. J. 529; 24 Or. L. J. 817; 45 A. 656. (Referred to) ...	485	Ali Muhammad Khan v. Chhedan, 15 Ind. Cas. 385; 15 O. C. 91. (Referred to) ...	181
Abdulla v. Shams-ul-Haq, 58 Ind. Cas. 833; 43 A. 127; 18 A. L. J. 969; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 329. (Followed) ...	319	Alla-ud-din v. G. I. P. Ry. Co., 34 Ind. Cas. 104; 14 A. L. J. 494. (Discussed) ...	206
Abdullah Khan v. Banke Lal, 7 Ind. Cas. 183; 33 A. 79; 7 A. L. J. 932. (Distinguished) ...	908	Allu v. Emperor, 75 Ind. Cas. 980; 4 Lah. 376; A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 104; 6 Lah. L. J. 103; 25 Or. L. J. 68. (Followed) ...	766
Abdur Rahman v. Har Narayan Das, 68 Ind. Cas. 238; 9 O. L. J. 211; 4 U. P. L. R. (O.) 72; A. I. R. 1922 Oudh 129. (Followed) ...	494	Alter Cauffman v. Government of Bombay, 18 B. 636; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 933. (Referred to)	601
Abdur Razzaq v. Mumtaz Husain, 25 A. 334; A. W. N. (1903) 63. (Followed) ...	683	Amir v. Kahan Chand, 73 Ind. Cas. 818; A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 255; 5 Lah. L. J. 431. (Dissented from) ...	781
Abhiram Das v. Gopal Das, 17 C. 48; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 571. (Followed) ...	420	Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh, 11 C. 6; 11 I. A. 237; 4 Sar. P. O. J. 559; Rafique and Jackson's P. O. No. 83; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 760 (P. C.). (Followed) ...	273
Abinash Chandra Sarkar v. Atul Krishna Bose, 48 Ind. Cas. 678; 28 O. L. J. 120; 20 Or. L. J. 10; 23 O. W. N. 385. (Distinguished) ...	721	Ammu Ammal v. Puthiaparambath Moidin, 43 Ind. Cas. 677; (1918) M. W. N. 38. (Referred to) ...	386
Abraham v. Abraham, 9 M. I. A. 195; 1 W. R. P. O. 1; 1 Suth. P. O. J. 501; 2 Sar. P. O. J. 10; 19 E. R. 716. (Referred to) ...	890	Amolaksao v. Govindrao, 49 Ind. Cas. 34; 15 N. L. R. 21. (Relied on) ...	908
Abraham v. Sookias, 81 Ind. Cas. 584; 51 O. 337; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 777. (Followed) ...	830	Anandgir v. Srinivas, 47 Ind. Cas. 1008; 16 A. L. J. 711; 40 A. 652. (Referred to) ...	677
Abul Hasan Khan v. Bhura, A. W. N. (1906) 226; 3 A. L. J. 763; 28 A. 763. (Followed) ...	562	Anandrao v. Vasantrao, 9 Bom. L. R. 595; 11 C. W. N. 478; 5 C. L. J. 338; 2 M. L. T. 151; 17 M. L. J. 184 (P. C.). (Distinguished) ...	20
Abul Hassan v. Habib Ullah, 18 P. R. 1906; 114 P. L. R. 1906; 19 P. W. R. 1906. (Followed) ...	489	Anant Ram, In the matter of the petition of , 30 A. 66; 5 A. L. J. 40; A. W. N. (1908) 11; 7 Cr. L. J. 21. (Relied on) ...	56
Achalsingh v. Seth Jiandas, 75 Ind. Cas. 993; 19 N. L. R. 165; A. I. R. 1924 Nag. 44. (Relied on) ...	908	Anantoo Kalwar v. Ram Prasad Tivari, 78 Ind. Cas. 619; 46 A. 295; 22 A. L. J. 182; A. I. R. 1924 All. 465; L. R. 5 A. 86 Civ. (Followed) ...	616
Afladdi v. Satish Chandra Banerji, 34 Ind. Cas. 497; 29 C. L. J. 40. (Followed) ...	735	Andiappa Chetty v. Devarajulu Naidoo, 12 Ind. Cas. 378; 36 M. 68; 10 M. L. T. 251; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 225; 21 M. L. J. 1024. (Referred to) ...	533
Agent of the B. N. Ry. Co. v. Hamir Mull-Chagan Mull, 90 Ind. Cas. 374; 5 Pat. 106; 6 P. L. T. 565; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 727; (1926) Pat. 114. (Dissented from) ...	540

A—concl'd.

	Page.
Andrews v. Hailes, (1853) 22 L. J. Q. B. 409; 2 El. & Bl. 349; 17 Jur. 621; 1 W. R. 366; 118 E. R. 797; 95 R. R. 593. (Referred to)	386
Annamalai Chettiar v. Malayandi Appaya Naik, 29 M. 426; 1 M. L. T. 145; 16 M. L. J. 372 (F. B.). (Followed)	556
Arbitration Act, In the matter of , 95 Ind. Cas. 750; 19 S. L. R. 24; A. I. R. 1926 Sind 209. (Relied upon)	435
Arkwright v. Gell, (1839) 5 M. & W. 203; 2 H. & H. 17; 8 L. J. Ex. 201; 151 E. R. 87; 52 R. R. 671. (Followed)	203
Arumuga Chettiar v. Ramanadan, 59 Ind. Cas. 898; 12 L. W. 352. (Followed)	533
Arunachellum Chettiar v. Haji Sheikh Meera Rowther, 7 Ind. Cas. 856; 34 M. 25; 8 M. L. T. 226; (1910) M. W. N. 6. (Relied on)	298
Arunagiri Mudaliar v. Kandaswami Mudaliar, 83 Ind. Cas. 955; 19 L. W. 418; 34 M. L. T. 170; (1924) M. W. N. 331; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 635. (Followed)	830
Asaram v. Ratan Singh, 32 Ind. Cas. 242; 12 N. L. R. 12. (Followed)	516
Asgar Ali Biswas v. Emperor, 20 Ind. Cas. 60; 40 O. 846; 17 O. W. N. 827; 14 Cr. L. J. 449. (Dissented from)	826
Asghar Ali v. Amina Begam, 24 Ind. Cas. 59; 36 A. 280; 12 A. L. J. 392. (Followed)	606
Assam Bengal Ry. Co. v. Radhika Mohan Nath, 72 Ind. Cas. 714; 28 O. W. N. 438; A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 397. (Dissented from)	540
Astley & Tyldesley Coal Co. and the Tyldesley Coal Co., In re , (1899) 68 L. J. Q. B. 252; 80 L. T. 118; 15 T. L. R. 154. (Referred to)	435
Atra v. Chajju, 12 Ind. Cas. 246; 49 P. W. R. 1911. (Followed)	596
Attenborough v. Solomon, (1913) A. C. 76; 82 L. J. Ch. 178; 107 L. T. 833; 57 S. J. 76; 29 T. L. R. 79. (Applied)	747
Aubhoyessury Dabee v. Gouri Sunkur Panday, 22 O. 859; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 588. (Distinguished)	724
Avathani Muthukrishniah v. Shankaralingam Pillai, 18 Ind. Cas. 417; 36 M. 229; 13 M. L. T. 20; 24 M. L. J. 135. (Relied on)	240
Ayennessa Bibi v. Sheikh Isuf, 14 Ind. Cas. 722; 16 O. W. N. 849. (Followed)	741
Aziz Khan v. Duni Chand, 48 Ind. Cas. 933; 101 P. R. 1918; 23 C. W. N. 130; 165 P. W. R. 1918 (P. O.). (Followed)	617

B

Baboo Beor Kishore Suhye Singh v. Baboo Hur Bullub Narain Singh, 7 W. R. 502. (Distinguished)	20
Badam v. Madho Ram, 66 Ind. Cas. 19; 2 Lah. 339; A. I. R. 1922 Lah. 211. (Followed)	781
Badan Singh v. Emperor, A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 257; 5 Lah. L. J. 520. (Distinguished)	783
Badr Bakhsh v. Jangbaz Khan, 135 P. R. 1893. (Followed)	397
Bahadur Singh v. Mohar Singh, 24 A. 94; 29 I. A. 1; 6 O. W. N. 189; 12 M. L. J. 58; 4 Bom. L. R. 233; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 152 (P. O.). (Followed)	45
Bai Laxmi v. Maganlal Jamietram, 42 Ind. Cas. 450; 41 B. 677; 19 Bom. L. R. 730. (Followed)	268

B—cont'd.

	Page.
Bai Shanta v. Umrao Amir Malek, 93 Ind. Cas. 151; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 141; 28 Bom. L. R. 1; 27 Or. L. J. 423; 50 B. 162. (Commented upon)	561
Baij Nath v. Panna Lal, 83 Ind. Cas. 737; 22 A. L. J. 581; 46 A. 635; A. I. R. 1924 All. 706; L. R. 5 A. 348 Civ. (Followed)	40
Baijnath Das v. Balmukand, 82 Ind. Cas. 321; 47 A. 98; 22 A. L. J. 981; L. R. 5 A. 773 Civ.; A. I. R. 1925 All. 137. (Dissented from)	491
Bakshi Das v. Nadu Das, 1 O. L. J. 261. (Followed)	903
Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Sakwarbai, 26 B. 792; 4 Bom. L. R. 637. (Followed)	420
Bala v. Maharu, 20 B. 783; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1096. (Relied on)	584
Balabhai Raghunath Agaskar v. Matabhai Babaji Rave, 89 Ind. Cas. 931. (Reversed)	119
Balaram Guria v. Syama Charan Mondal, 60 Ind. Cas. 298; 24 O. W. N. 1057; 33 O. L. J. 344. (Relied upon)	211
Balasubramania Pillai v. Pitcha Pillai, 33 Ind. Cas. 552; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 306. (Distinguished)	497
Balasubramania Pillai v. Pitcha Pillai, 33 Ind. Cas. 552; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 306. (Followed)	289
Balkishen Das v. W. F. Legge, 22 A. 149; 2 Bom. L. R. 523; 27 I. A. 58; 4 O. W. N. 153; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 601; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1130 (P. O.). (Followed)	201
Balkrishna Udayar v. Vasudeva Ayyar, 40 Ind. Cas. 650; 44 I. A. 261 at p. 267; 15 A. L. J. 645; 2 P. L. W. 101; 33 M. L. J. 69; 26 O. L. J. 143; 19 Bom. L. R. 715; (1917) M. W. N. 628; 40 M. 793; 6 L. W. 501; 22 O. W. N. 50; 11 Bur. L. T. 48; 44 I. A. 261 (P. O.). (Referred to)	887
Balla Mal v. Ahad Shah, 48 Ind. Cas. 1; 124 P. R. 1918; 35 M. L. J. 614; 18 A. L. J. 905; 23 O. W. N. 233; 25 M. L. T. 55; 180 P. W. R. 1918; 29 O. L. J. 165; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. O.) 25; 21 Bom. L. R. 558 (P. O.). (Followed)	617
Balmukanda Marwarl v. Basanta Kumari Das, 78 Ind. Cas. 209; 3 Pat. 371; (1924) Pat. 33; 5 P. L. T. 145; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 1. (Dissented from)	491
Balwant v. Tulstibai, 46 Ind. Cas. 782. (Followed)	911
Bamasoondery Dassayah v. Radhika Chowdhraim, 13 M. I. A. 248; 4 B. L. R. P. O. 8; 13 W. R. P. O. 11; 2 Suth. P. O. J. 293; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 524; 20 E. R. 514. (Distinguished)	730
Banau v. Ranjitsingh, 89 Ind. Cas. 752; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 99. (Not followed)	522
Bansi Seth v. Pandoba, 12 O. P. L. R. 154. (Followed)	905
Banwari Lal v. Raina, 9 Ind. Cas. 427. (Referred to)	181
Bapu Apaji v. Kashinath Sadoba, 39 Ind. Cas. 103; 41 B. 438; 19 Bom. L. R. 100. (Followed)	905
Barry v. Harding, 1 Jo. & Lat. 475; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 313. (Relied upon)	213
Barton v. Fitzgerald, (1812) 15 East 530; 101 E. R. 944; 13 R. R. 519. (Relied on)	1
Baru v. Lachhman, 22 Ind. Cas. 603; 111 P. R. 1913; 228 P. W. R. 1913; 23 P. L. R. 1914. (Followed)	609

B—contd.

	Page.
Basant Singh v. Emperor, 103 Ind. Cas. 97; 28 Cr. L. J. 641; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 541; 8 A. I. Cr. R. 254. (Followed)	482
Basanta Kumar Roy v. Secretary of State, 6 Ind. Cas. 792; 14 O. W. N. 872. (Followed)	823
Bashesar Nath v. Ram Kishen Das, 54 Ind. Cas. 996; 140 P. R. 1919. (Followed)	751
Bashesar Nath v. Ramkishan Das, 32 Ind. Cas. 860; 48 P. W. R. 1916. (Followed)	596
Bebee Bachun v. Sheikh Hamid Hossein, 14 M. I. A. 377 at p. 384; 17 W. R. 113; 10 B. L. R. 45; 2 Suth. P. O. J. 531; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 39; 20 E. R. 828. (Relied upon)	581
Beharee Sahoo v. Ajnas Koonwar, 6 W. R. 86. (Relied on)	584
Behary Lal Sandyal v. Juggo Mohun Gossain, 4 O. I.; 2 C. L. R. 422; 1 Shome L. R. 185; 2 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 1. (Followed)	420
Berners v. Fleming, (1925) Ch. 39 at p. 44. (Relied upon)	440
Best v. Haji Muhammad Sait, 23 M. 18; 8 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 407. (Dissented from)	257, 753
Bhagaban Chandra Kundu v. Tarak Chandra Basak, 100 Ind. Cas. 420; 45 C. L. J. 4; A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 259. (Relied on)	355
Bhagwant Singh v. Kallu, 11 A. 100; A. W. N. (1888) 288; 6 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 492. (Distinguished and dissented from)	890
Bhagwati Dayal v. Dhan Kunwar, 92 Ind. Cas. 1027; 24 A. L. J. 331; A. I. R. 1926 All. 311; 48 A. 329. (Followed)	313
Bhairon v. Balak, 68 Ind. Cas. 558; 9 O. L. J. 331; 4 U. P. L. R. (O.) 88; A. I. R. 1922 Oudh 287. (Dissented from)	872
Bhartendu v. Yaqub Husain, 18 Ind. Cas. 701; 35 A. 159; 11 A. L. J. 120. (Relied upon)	214
Bhau v. Raghunath, 30 B. 229; 7 Bom. L. R. 936. (Followed)	198
Bhikaji Ramchandra v. Purshotam, 10 B. 220; 5 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 533. (Referred to)	726
Bhim Singh v. Ram Singh, 84 Ind. Cas. 13; 46 A. 301; 22 A. L. J. 180; A. I. R. 1924 All. 309; L. R. 5 A. 75 Civ. (Followed)	516
Bhogilal v. Amritlal, 17 B. 173; 9 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 113. (Followed)	60
Bhojohuree Bunnick v. Aka Golam Ali, 16 W. R. 97. (Relied on)	81
Bhugwandas Bagla v. Haji Abu Ahmed, 16 B. 263; 8 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 654. (Referred to)	830
Bhugwandeem Doobey v. Myna Baee, 11 M. I. A. 487; 9 W. R. P. C. 23; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 124; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 327; 20 E. R. 184. (Referred to)	699
Bibi Makbulunnissa v. Bibi Umatunnissa, 70 Ind. Cas. 312; 4 P. L. T. 272; (1922) Pat. 348; A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 33; 2 Pat. 84. (Followed)	319
Bibi Zainab v. Paras Nath, 75 Ind. Cas. 430; 2 Pat. 800; 4 P. L. T. 491; 1 Pat. L. R. 361; A. I. R. 1924 Pat. 37. (Followed)	494
Bikoo Mahton v. Narayan Sahu, 72 Ind. Cas. 431; A. I. R. 1924 Pat. 303. (Referred to)	522
Bindesri Naik v. Ganga Saran Sahu, 25 I. A. 9; 20 A. 171; 2 O. W. N. 129; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 273; 9 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 471 (P. O.). (Referred to)	710
Binod Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik, 20 O. 708; 10 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 477 (F. B.). (Distinguished)	25

B—concl.

	Page.
Birj Nath De v. Chandar Mohan Banerji, 19 A. 458; A. W. N. (1897) 108; 9 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 295. (Followed)	420
Birmingham & District Land Co. v. L. & N. W. Ry., (1887) 34 Ch. D. 261; 56 L. J. Ch. 956; 55 L. T. 699; 35 W. R. 173. (Followed)	423
Bischoffsheim, Ex parte , Aylmer, In re , (1887) 19 Q. B. D. 33 at p. 37; 56 L. J. Q. B. 460; 56 L. T. 801; 35 W. R. 532; 4 Morrell 152. (Relied upon)	433
Bishun Chand v. Audh Bihari Lal, 40 Ind. Cas. 350; 2 Pat. L. J. 451; 1 P. L. W. 615; (1917) Pat. 279. (Followed)	257
Biswanath Bhattacharjee v. Govinda Chandra Das, 51 Ind. Cas. 88; 23 O. W. N. 534; 29 O. L. J. 305. (Followed)	168
Blacket v. Blizzard, (1829) 8 L. J. K. B. (o. s.) 85; 9 B. & C. 851; 4 Man. & Ry. 641; 33 R. R. 360; 109 E. R. 317. (Relied upon)	446
Boisagomoff v. Nahapiet Jute Co., Ltd., 5 C. W. N. 230n. (Followed)	243
B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co. v. Budh Sen Pusp Chand, 79 Ind. Cas. 562; 46 A. 55; 21 A. L. J. 830; 9 O. & A. L. R. 1074; A. I. R. 1924 All. 180. (Discussed)	206
Bombay Cotton Manufacturing Co., Ltd. v. Motilal Shivalal, 29 Ind. Cas. 229; 42 I. A. 110; 19 O. W. N. 617; 17 M. L. T. 408; 28 M. L. J. 593; 21 O. L. J. 528; 17 Bom. L. R. 455; 2 L. W. 521; 39 B. 386; (1915) M. W. N. 788 (P. O.). (Relied on)	321
Bozson v. Altrincham Urban District Council, (1903) 1 K. B. 547; 72 L. J. K. B. 271; 67 J. P. 397; 51 W. R. 337; 19 T. L. R. 266; 1 L. G. R. 639. (Referred to)	313
Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad Rai, 77 Ind. Cas. 689; 46 A. 95; 21 A. L. J. 934; 46 M. L. J. 23; 5 P. L. T. 1; 28 O. W. N. 253; (1924) M. W. N. 68; 19 L. W. 72; 2 Pat. L. R. 41; 10 O. & A. L. R. 82; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 50; 33 M. L. T. 457; 26 Bom. L. R. 500; 11 O. L. J. 107; 51 I. A. 129; 1 O. W. N. 48; 41 C. L. J. 232 (P. O.). (Followed)	385, 516
Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad Rai, 77 Ind. Cas. 689; 46 A. 95; 51 I. A. 129; 21 A. L. J. 934; 46 M. L. J. 23; 5 P. L. T. 1; 28 O. W. N. 253; (1924) M. W. N. 68; 19 L. W. 72; 2 Pat. L. R. 41; 10 O. & A. L. R. 82; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 50; 33 M. L. T. 457; 26 Bom. L. R. 500; 11 O. L. J. 107; 1 O. W. N. 48; 41 C. L. J. 232 (P. O.). (Referred to)	693, 884
Brito v. Brito, 78 Ind. Cas. 908; 46 M. L. J. 357; 19 L. W. 458; 34 M. L. T. 112; (1924) M. W. N. 380; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 701. (Referred to)	313
Browne & Wingrove, In re , Debtors, Ex parte , (1890) W. N. 131. (Relied upon)	433
Buddha Singh v. Lalit Singh, 30 Ind. Cas. 529; 37 A. 604; 29 M. L. J. 434; 2 L. W. 897; 13 A. L. J. 1007; 18 M. L. T. 409; 17 Bom. L. R. 1022; 20 O. W. N. 1; 22 O. L. J. 481; (1915) M. W. N. 772; 42 I. A. 208 (P. O.). (Distinguished)	497
Buddhoo Lal v. Mewa Ram, 63 Ind. Cas. 15; 43 A. 64; 19 A. L. J. 558 (F. B.). (Relied on)	908
Budesa v. Hanmantha, 21 B. 509; 11 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 341. (Distinguished)	52

C

	Page.
Castrique v. Imrie, (1870) 4 H. L. 414; 39 L. J. O. P. 350; 23 L. T. 48; 19 W. R. 1. (Relied on)	352
Cayzer, Irvine & Co. Ltd. v. Board of Trade, (1927) 1 K. B. 269. (Referred to)	435
Champa Devi v. Pirbhu Lal, 92 Ind. Cas. 429; 24 A. L. J. 329; 27 Cr. L. J. 253; A. I. R. 1926 All. 287; L. R. 7 A. 64 Cr. (Distinguished)	561
Chandra Sekhar Patra v. Rani Manjhee, 3 C. W. N. 386. (Relied on)	357
Chandramani Sarma v. Kunja Rendi, 4 C. W. N. 824. (Distinguished)	783
Chandulal Maganlal v. Motilal Harilal, 92 Ind. Cas. 545; 27 Bom. L. R. 1492; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 43. (Referred to)	486
Channalswami Rudraswami v. Gangadharappa Baslingappa, 26 Ind. Cas. 885; 39 B. 339; 16 Bom. L. R. 954. (Relied upon)	214
Chatarbuj Das v. Ganesh Ram, 20 A. 474; A. W. N. (1898) 132; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 664. (Followed)	608
Chatenay v. Brazilian Submarine Telegraph Co., (1891) 1 Q. B. 79 at p. 85; 60 L. J. Q. B. 295; 63 L. T. 739; 39 W. R. 65. (Referred to)	560
Chaudra Hari Singh v. Tipan Prosad Singh, 46 Ind. Cas. 271; 3 P. L. J. 452; (1918) Pat. 273. (Followed)	320, 825
Chauharja Bakhsh v. Kalka Pande, 72 Ind. Cas. 394; 9 O. L. J. 543; A. I. R. 1923 Oudh 18. (Distinguished)	877
Cheda Lal v. Lachman Parshad, 37 Ind. Cas. 830; 39 A. 267 at p. 272; 15 A. L. J. 253. (Followed)	172
Chedi Prasad Singh v. Emperor, 102 Ind. Cas. 773; 8 P. L. T. 613; 28 Cr. L. J. 597; A. I. R. 1927 Pat. 325; 8 A. I. Cr. R. 271. (Followed)	817
Chet Singh v. Emperor, 94 Ind. Cas. 401; 7 Lah. 65; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 262; 27 Cr. L. J. 625; 27 P. L. R. 523. (Referred to)	495
Chhajju Ram v. Neki, 72 Ind. Cas. 566; 3 Lah. 127; 30 M. L. T. 295; 26 O. W. N. 697; 41 P. L. R. 1922; 3 P. L. T. 435; A. I. R. 1922 P. O. 112; 16 L. W. 37; 17 P. W. R. 1922; 43 M. L. J. 332; 24 Bom. L. R. 1238; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. O.) 99; 36 C. L. J. 459; 49 I. A. 144 (P. O.) (Followed)	908
Chhajju Ram v. Neki, 72 Ind. Cas. 566; 49 I. A. 144; 30 M. L. T. 295; 26 O. W. N. 697; 41 P. L. R. 1922; 3 P. L. T. 435; A. I. R. 1922 P. O. 112; 16 L. W. 37; 17 P. W. R. 1922; 3 Lah. 127; 43 M. L. J. 332; 24 Bom. L. R. 1238; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. O.) 99; 36 O. L. J. 459 (P. O.) (Relied on)	887
Ohhotalal Harkishandas v. Nabibhai Mianji, 29 B. 528; 7 Bom. L. R. 567. (Relied on)	169
Chintaman v. Gangabai, 27 B. 284; 5 Bom. L. R. 90. (Dissented from)	726
Chintamani Aditya v. Haladhar Maiti, 2 O. L. J. 153; 10 O. W. N. 601. (Relied on)	515
Chockalingam Chetty v. Seethai Ache, 84 Ind. Cas. 522. (Affirmed)	237
Chunni Lal v. Nizam's Guaranteed State Ry. Co., 29 A. 228; 2 M. L. T. 42; A. W. N. (1907) 21; 4 A. L. J. 80. (Discussed)	206
Chunni Lal v. Sheo Charan Lal Lalman, 89 Ind. Cas. 122; 47 A. 756; A. I. R. 1925 All. 787; L. R. 6 A. 362 Civ.; 23 A. L. J. 725. (Distinguished)	673

C—concltd.

	Page.
Coley v. Da Costa, 17 C. 200; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 672. (Referred to)	707
Collector of Madura v. Mutu Ramalinga Sathupathy, 12 M. I. A. 397 at p. 438; 1 B. L. R. P. O. 1; 10 W. R. P. O. 17; 3 Mad. Jur. 298; 2 Suth. P. O. J. 135; 2 Sar. P. O. J. 361; 20 E. R. 389; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1 (P. O.) (Referred to)	866
Collins v. Collins, (1884) 9 A. C. 205; 32 W. R. 500. (Referred to)	184
Comiskey v. Bowring Hanbury, (1905) A. C. 84; 74 L. J. Ch. 263; 53 W. R. 402; 92 L. T. 241; 21 T. L. R. 252. (Distinguished)	497
Corea v. Appuhamy, (1912) A. C. 230; 81 L. J. P. O. 151; 105 L. T. 836. (Referred to)	866
Corser v. Cartwright, (1876) 7 H. L. 731; 45 L. J. Ch. 605. (Applied)	747
Croosdell and Cammell Laird & Co., In re , (1906) 2 K. B. 569; 75 L. J. K. B. 769; 54 W. R. 620; 95 L. T. 411; 22 T. L. R. 759. (Referred to)	313
Cubitt v. Porter, (1823) 32 R. R. 374; 8 B. & C. 257; 2 Man. & Ry. 267; 6 L. J. K. B. (o. s.) 306; 108 E. R. 1039. (Followed)	481

D

Dadan Gazi v. Emperor, 33 C. 1023; 10 O. W. N. 890; 4 Cr. L. J. 79. (Followed)	817
Dadan Gazi v. Emperor, 33 C. 1023; 10 O. W. N. 890; 4 Cr. L. J. 79. (Relied on)	57
Damodarbhat v. Bhogilal, 24 B. 45; 1 Bom. L. R. 509; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 567. (Relied on)	136
Dandekar v. Dandekars, 6 B. 663; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 896. (Dissented from)	532
Daso Keshav Penchbhavi v. Karbasappa Kariyappa Mudhol, 94 Ind. Cas. 591; 27 Bom. L. R. 1446; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 121. (Dissented from)	50, 596
Dasrath v. Sandala, 93 Ind. Cas. 310; 3 O. W. N. 217; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 270; L. R. 7 A. (O.) 81; 13 O. L. J. 499. (Followed)	872
Datoobhoy v. Vallu, 1 Bom. L. R. 828. (Relied on)	793
Dawoodji & Son v. Sherman, 88 Ind. Cas. 339; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 238; 4 Bur. L. J. 39. (Followed)	668
Devaguptapu Rameswaramman v. Vadaddi Venkatasubba Rao, 24 Ind. Cas. 474; 38 M. 1120; 27 M. L. J. 112; (1914) M. W. N. 742. (Distinguished)	129
Dharam Das v. Ajudhia Pershad, 70 P. R. 1881. (Distinguished)	756
Dharani Mohan Ray v. Asutosh Mukerji, 82 Ind. Cas. 396; 40 O. L. J. 34; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 907. (Followed)	743
Dhondu v. Narayan, 1 B. H. C. R. 47. (Referred to)	205
Dhunmun Singh v. Lachmi Lal, 57 Ind. Cas. 492. (Followed)	821
Dilawar Khan v. Kulsüm Bibi, 93 Ind. Cas. 62; 3 O. W. N. 210; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 205; L. R. 7 A. (O.) 79; 13 O. L. J. 496. (Distinguished)	326
District Board, Sialkot v. Sultan Muhammad Khan, 106 Ind. Cas. 882. (Followed)	601
Ditcher v. Denison, (1857) 11 Moore P. O. 324 at p. 337; 6 W. R. 342; 14 E. R. 718. (Referred to)	506

D—concl'd.	Page.
Dittu Ram v. Nawab, 92 Ind. Cas. 272; 7 Lah. L. J. 448; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 639. (Distinguished)	398
Diwan Ran Bijai Bahadur Singh v. Indarpal Singh, 26 I. A. 226; 26 O. 871; 4 O. W. N. 1; 2 Bom. L. R. 1; 7 Sar. P. O. J. 578; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1158 (P. O.). (Relied on)	321
Dixon v. Winch, (1900) 1 Ch. 736; 69 L. J. Ch. 465; 82 L. T. 437; 48 W. R. 612; 16 T. L. R. 276. (Relied on)	808
Dronamraju Rama Rao v. Kissapragada Vedayya, 73 Ind. Cas. 188; 46 M. 435; (1923) M. W. N. 166; 44 M. L. J. 373; 32 M. L. T. 222; 17 L. W. 695; A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 447. (Dissented from)	517
Durga Prasad Singh v. Rajendra Narayan Bagchi, 21 Ind. Cas. 750; 41 O. 493; 18 O. W. N. 66; (1914) M. W. N. 1; 15 M. L. T. 68; 19 O. L. J. 95; 40 I. A. 223; 26 M. L. J. 25; 16 Bom. L. R. 42 (P. O.). (Followed)	201
Dwarika Nath Roy v. Mathura Nath Roy, 34 Ind. Cas. 833; 21 O. W. N. 177; 24 O. L. J. 40. (Distinguished and dissented from)	735
E
E. A. B., In re , (1902) 85 L. T. 773; (1902) 1 K. B. 457; 71 L. J. K. B. 356; 50 W. R. 229; 9 Manson 105. (Relied upon)	433
Earl of Lisburne v. Davies, (1866) 1 O. P. 259; 1 H. & R. 172; 35 L. J. O. P. 193; 12 Jur. (N. s.) 340; 13 L. T. 795; 14 W. R. 333. (Referred to)	386
East India Cigarette Manufacturing Co., Ltd. v. Ananda Mohan Basak, 58 Ind. Cas. 10; 24 O. W. N. 401. (Followed)	400
East Indian Ry. Co. v. Jagpat Singh, 79 Ind. Cas. 126; 28 O. W. N. 1001; 51 O. 615; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 725. (Followed)	540
— v. Kali Charan Ram Prasad, 69 Ind. Cas. 103; 3 P. L. T. 215; (1922) Pat. 145; A. I. R. 1922 Pat. 106. (Followed)	540
Eastern Shipping Co. v. Quab Beng Kee, (1924) A. C. 177; 93 L. J. P. O. 72; 130 L. T. 462; 40 T. L. R. 109. (Followed)	423
Raswara Aivar v. Govindarajulu Naidu, 31 Ind. Cas. 192; 39 M. 689. (Followed)	608
Ebbs v. Boulnois, (1875) 10 Ch. A. 479 at n. 484; 44 L. J. Ch. 691; 33 L. T. 342; 23 W. R. 820. (Followed)	596
Ebbs v. Boulnois, (1875) 10 Ch. A. 479 at n. 484; 44 L. J. Ch. 691; 33 L. T. 342; 23 W. R. 820. (Referred to)	596
Elderslie Steamship Co., Ltd. v. Borthwick, (1905) A. C. 93; 74 L. J. K. B. 338; 53 W. R. 401; 92 L. T. 274; 21 T. L. R. 277; 10 Asp. M. C. 25; 10 Com. Cas. 109. (Relied on)	1
Emperor v. Ali Mirza, 81 Ind. Cas. 800; 51 O. 265; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 643; 25 Cr. L. J. 1024. (Followed)	705
— v. Rudha, 49 Ind. Cas. 772; 7 P. R. 1919 Cr. 20; Cr. L. J. 212; 48 P. L. R. 1919; 8 P. W. R. 1919 Cr. (Relied on)	759
— v. Hargobind, 12 Ind. Cas. 652; 33 A. 583; 12 Cr. L. J. 564. (Distinguished)	783
— v. Jinga Gamaji, 86 Ind. Cas. 70; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 192; 27 Bom. L. R. 111; 26 Cr. L. J. 694. (Referred to)	775
— v. Kazi Dawood, 93 Ind. Cas. 225; 28 Bom. L. R. 79; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 144; 27 Cr. L. J. 433; 50 B. 58. (Not followed)	775

E—concl'd.	Page.
Emperor v. Mathro, 92 Ind. Cas. 693; 27 Cr. L. J. 309; A. I. R. 1926 Sind 101; 20 S. L. R. 7. (Referred to)	775
— v. Partab Narain, 88 Ind. Cas. 1051; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 673; 2 O. W. N. 593; 26 Cr. L. J. 1278. (Referred to)	775
— v. Ramnath Mahabir, 93 Ind. Cas. 690; 28 Bom. L. R. 111; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 151; 50 B. 111; 27 Cr. L. J. 466. (Followed)	272
Empress v. Ghuni Lal, 7 P. R. 1889 Cr. (Relied on)	759
F
Farzand Ali v. Emperor, 96 Ind. Cas. 221; (1926) Pat. 207; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 347; 27 Cr. L. J. 909. (Referred to)	826
Fateh Chand v. Rup Chand, 37 Ind. Cas. 122; 43 I. A. 183; 38 A. 446; 18 Bom. L. R. 900; 20 M. L. T. 481; 21 O. W. N. 102; 4 L. W. 597; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 567; 26 O. L. J. 182 (P. O.). (Referred to)	866
Fatehsingji v. Bamanji, 27 B. 515; 5 Bom. L. R. 274. (Distinguished)	52
Fatimatulnissa Begum v. Sundar Das, 27 O. 1004; 27 I. A. 103; 4 O. W. N. 565; 7 Sar. P. O. J. 718; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 657 (P. O.). (Followed)	60
Fazal Ahmad v. Khan Bahadur, 12 Ind. Cas. 624; 10 P. L. R. 1912; 221 P. W. R. 1911. (Followed)	596
Field v. Curnick, (1926) 2 K. B. 374; 95 L. J. K. B. 756; 135 L. T. 474; 42 T. L. R. 510. (Followed)	86
Firm Bhajan Ram-Gil Raj Mal v. Narain Devi, 96 Ind. Cas. 830; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 642. (Followed)	395
Firm Lal Chand-Mangal Sen v. Firm Behari Lal-Mehr Chand, 84 Ind. Cas. 259; 5 Lah. 288; A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 425; 6 Lah. L. J. 558; 1 Lah. Cas. 38 (F. B.). (Followed)	396
Firm of Manohar Lal-Mahabir Pershad v. Firm of Jai Narain-Babu Lal, 55 Ind. Cas. 403; 2 Lah. L. J. 283. (Referred to)	753
Framroz Eduljee Dinshaw v. Mahomed Essa, 94 Ind. Cas. 21; 50 B. 266; 28 Bom. L. R. 141; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 241. (Followed)	257, 753
France v. Datton, (1891) 2 Q. B. 208; 60 L. J. Q. B. 488; 64 L. T. 93; 39 W. R. 716. (Relied on)	184
Fyzabad Bank, Ltd. v. Ramdyaal Marwari, 74 Ind. Cas. 831; 4 P. L. T. 571; A. I. R. 1924 Pat. 107. (Followed)	533

G

Gajadhar v. Jagannath, 80 Ind. Cas. 684; 46 A. 775; 22 A. L. J. 601; A. I. R. 1924 All. 551; L. R. 5 A. 458 Civ. (F. B.). (Followed)	516
Ganda Ram v. Sundar Lal, 67 Ind. Cas. 278; 2 Lah. L. J. 673; 82 P. L. R. 1922. (Referred to)	486
Ganendra Nath Roy v. Surja Kanta Roy, 15 Ind. Cas. 39; 17 O. W. N. 462. (Relied on)	730
Ganesh Bab Naik v. Vithal Vaman Mahalya, 19 Ind. Cas. 475; 37 B. 387; 15 Bom. L. R. 244. (Followed)	494

G—contd.

	Page.
Ganesh Lal Pandit v. Khetra Mohan Mahapatra, 95 Ind. Cas. 839; 3 O. W. N. 591; A. I. R. 1926 P. C. 56; 24 A. L. J. 815; 43 O. L. J. 545; 28 Bom. L. R. 931; 24 L. W. 50; 51 M. L. J. 82; 7 P. L. T. 501; (1926) M. W. N. 535; 6 Pat. 585; 31 O. W. N. 25; 53 I. A. 134 (P. O.). (Referred to) ...	559
Gangahari Uhakrabarti v. Nabin Chandra Banikya, 34 Ind. Cas. 959; 20 O. W. N. 232; 23 O. L. J. 145. (Followed) ...	473
Gauri Shankar v. Anant Ram, 94 Ind. Cas. 646; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 403. (Distinguished) ...	756
Gauri Shankar v. Jang Bahadur Singh, 79 Ind. Cas. 1008; 27 O. C. 124; 10 O. & A. L. R. 49; 11 O. L. J. 246; A. I. R. 1924 Oudh 394. (Referred to) ...	693
George Henry Hook v. Administrator-General of Bengal, 60 Ind. Cas. 631; 48 O. 499; 19 A. L. J. 366; 40 M. L. J. 423; 29 M. L. T. 336; (1921) M. W. N. 313; 33 O. L. J. 405; 3 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 17; 23 Bom. L. R. 648; 25 O. W. N. 915; 14 L. W. 221; 48 I. A. 187 (P. O.). (Referred to and discussed) ...	149
Ghazanfar Husain v. Ram Ratan, 25 Ind. Cas. 907; 17 O. C. 306. (Followed) ...	494
Ghulam Khan v. Muhammad Hassan, 29 O. 167; 29 I. A. 51; 6 O. W. N. 226; 12 M. L. J. 77; 4 Bom. L. R. 161; 8 Sar. P. O. J. 154; 25 P. R. 1902 (P. O.). (Distinguished) ...	756
Ghulam Khan v. Muhammad Hassan, 29 O. 167 at p. 186; 29 I. A. 51; 6 O. W. N. 226; 12 M. L. J. 77; 4 Bom. L. R. 161; 8 Sar. P. O. J. 154; 25 P. R. 1902 (P. O.). (Referred to) ...	545
Ghulam Muhammad v. Emperor, 99 Ind. Cas. 314; 7 Lah. 484; 28 Cr. L. J. 136; 28 P. L. R. 802; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 88. (Followed) ...	388
Giridhari Lal Roy v. Bengal Government, 12 M. I. A. 448; 1 B. L. R. P. C. 44; 3 Mad. Jur. 386; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 159; 10 W. R. P. C. 31; 2 Sar. P. O. J. 382; 20 E. R. 408; 1 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 28. (Referred to) ...	866
Gobind Chandra Pal v. Kailash Chandra Pal, 40 Ind. Cas. 230; 25 O. L. J. 354. (Distinguished) ...	724
Gobind Krishna Gujar v. Sakharan Narayan, 28 B. 383; 6 Bom. L. R. 344. (Referred to) ...	884
Goda Copuramier v. Sundarammal, 3 Ind. Cas. 739; 33 M. 167; 6 M. L. T. 271. (Referred to) ...	596
Gohar v. Muhammad, 7 P. R. 1889. (Distinguished) ...	596
Goma Mahad Patil v. Gokaldas Khimji, 3 B. 74; 2 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 49. (Relied on) ...	479
Gonesh Das Bagria v. Shiva Lakshman Bhakat, 30 O. 583; 7 O. W. N. 414 (F. B.). (Relied on) ...	169
Gopal Chandra Mukerji v. Notobar Kundu, 15 Ind. Cas. 53; 16 O. W. N. 1029. (Relied on) ...	161
Gopal Krishna Sil v. Abdul Samad Chaudhuri, 66 Ind. Cas. 640; 34 O. L. J. 319. (Relied on) ...	769
Gopalasami Chetti v. Arunachalam Chetti, 27 M. 32. (Followed) ...	419
Gopalji Kallianji v. Chhaganlal Vithalji, 63 Ind. Cas. 929; 45 B. 1071; 23 Bom. L. R. 614. (Distinguished) ...	223
Gopalji Kuverji v. Morarji Jeram Naranji, 50 Ind. Cas. 411; 43 B. 809 at p. 830; 21 Bom. L. R. 308. (Relied upon) ...	435
Gous Mahomed v. Khawas Ali Khan, 23 O. 450; 12 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 300. (Referred to) ...	603

G—contd.

	Page.
Govinda Padayachi v. Lokanatha Aiyar, 62 Ind. Cas. 291; 40 M. L. J. 114; (1921) M. W. N. 87; 29 M. L. T. 156. (Distinguished) ...	417
Grant, In re , 14 W. R. 47. (Followed) ...	320, 825
Great Indian Peninsular Ry. Co. v. A. B. Tamboli, 96 Ind. Cas. 293. (Affirmed) ...	124
Patwari, 106 Ind. Cas. 252; 32 O. W. N. 76; 46 O. L. J. 428. (Followed) ...	540
72 Ind. Cas. 440; 2 Pat. 442; (1923) Pat. 82; 4 P. L. T. 173; 1 Pat. L. R. 169; A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 285. (Dissented from) ...	540
Gulab Chand v. Sher Singh, 35 Ind. Cas. 616; 11 P. R. 1917; 150 P. W. R. 1916; 16 P. L. R. 1917. (Followed) ...	593
Gulab Dei v. Vaish Motor Co., 88 Ind. Cas. 429; 47 A. 782; 23 A. L. J. 523; L. R. 6 A. 390 Civ.; A. I. R. 1925 All. 570. (Distinguished) ...	477
Gulbaji Ajisigi & Co. v. Rustomji Kharsedji Banatvalla, 95 Ind. Cas. 229; 49 B. 478; 27 Bom. L. R. 380; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 282. (Distinguished) ...	497
Gurusami Pillai v. Sivakami Ammal, 18 M. 347; 22 I. A. 119; 5 M. L. J. 106; 6 Sar. P. O. J. 610; 6 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 591 (P. O.). (Distinguished) ...	497
Gurushidgavda v. Rudragavda, 1 B. 531; 1 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 351. (Referred to) ...	899
H
Haji Hirji v. Kasim Hirji, 4 Ind. Cas. 603; 3 S. L. R. 115. (Dissented from) ...	397
Hakim Ali Khan v. Dalip Singh, 19 Ind. Cas. 676; 11 A. L. J. 478. (Distinguished) ...	679
Hamidalli Kadamalli v. Ahmedalli Mhibuballi, 62 Ind. Cas. 233; 45 B. 1137; 23 Bom. L. R. 480. (Followed) ...	491
Hanseswar Ghosh v. Rakhal Das Ghose, 20 Ind. Cas. 683; 18 O. W. N. 366; 18 O. L. J. 359. (Distinguished) ...	467
Har Parshad v. Bhagat Singh, 36 Ind. Cas. 594; 102 P. R. 1916; 85 P. L. R. 1917. (Followed) ...	490
Hara Kumari Dasi v. Mohim Chandra Sarkar, 12 O. W. N. 412; 7 O. L. J. 540. (Relied on) ...	497
Hardian Singh v. Sham Sundar, 69 P. R. 1888. (Followed) ...	281
Hari Charan Saha v. Baran Khan, 25 Ind. Cas. 903; 41 O. 746. (Followed) ...	596
Hari Har Guru v. Ananda Mahanty, 20 Ind. Cas. 498; 40 O. 365. (Followed) ...	320, 895
Hari Mohan Singh v. Kali Prosad Chaliba, 33 O. 11. (Distinguished) ...	756
Hari Sankar Dutt v. Kali Kumar Patra, 32 O. 734; 9 O. W. N. 690. (Referred to) ...	330
Harihar Mukherjee v. Harendra Nath Mukherjee, 6 Ind. Cas. 416; 37 O. 754; 12 O. L. J. 252. (Referred to) ...	738
Harji v. Chanan Mal, 63 Ind. Cas. 908; 2 Lah. 195. (Referred to) ...	487
Harji v. Emperor, 45 Ind. Cas. 273; 4 P. R. 1918 Cr.; 19 Cr. L. J. 513; 134 P. L. R. 1918. (Referred to) ...	761
Harnam Das v. Faiyazi Begam, 65 Ind. Cas. 645; 44 A. 354; 20 A. L. J. 172; 4 U. P. L. R. (A.) 22. (Followed) ...	899

H—conold.	Page.	H—conold.	Page.
Harper, Ex parte , (1857) 1 De G. & J. 180; 26 L. J. Bk. 24; 3 Jur. (n.s.) 724; 5 W. R. 537; 44 E. R. 692; 29 L. T. (o.s.) 168; 118 R. R. 80. (Referred to) ...	459	Israil v. Shamset Rahman, 21 Ind. Cas. 861; 41 C. 436; 18 C. W. N. 176; 19 C. L. J. 47. (Distinguished) ...	908
Hazari v. Chuni Lal, 8 A. 259; A. W. N. (1886) 75; 5 Ind. Dec. (n.s.) 51. (Followed) ...	42	Iswardas Marwari v. Biseswari Lal Marwari, 94 Ind. Cas. 31; (1926) Pat. 83; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 266; 7 P. L. T. 532. (Followed) ...	494
Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Midnapore Zemindari Co., 53 Ind. Cas. 534; 47 C. 485 at p. 495; 37 M. L. J. 525; 17 A. L. J. 1117; 24 C. W. N. 177; (1920) M. W. N. 66; 27 M. L. T. 42; 11 L. W. 301; 46 I. A. 240; 22 Bom. L. R. 488; 31 C. L. J. 298 (P. O.). (Referred to) ...	525	Jadhu Mahto v. Kali Prasonno Bhattacharjee, 34 Ind. Cas. 733; 1 P. L. J. 33; 3 P. L. W. 399. (Distinguished and doubted) ...	145
Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Midnapore Zemindari Co., 53 Ind. Cas. 534; 47 C. 485; 37 M. L. J. 525; 17 A. L. J. 1117; 24 C. W. N. 177; (1920) M. W. N. 66; 27 M. L. T. 42; 11 L. W. 301; 46 I. A. 240; 22 Bom. L. R. 488 (P. O.). (Relied on) ...	163	Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Devi, 31 I. A. 203; 32 C. 129; 8 C. W. N. 809; 6 Bom. L. R. 765; 1 A. L. J. 585; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 698 (P. O.). (Relied on) ...	738
Hiranand Mulchand v. Official Receiver, 100 Ind. Cas. 791. (Dissented from) ...	439	Jagana Nath Prasad Singh v. Ramautar Singh, 14 Ind. Cas. 39. (Followed) ...	596
Hirji Mulji v. Cheong Yue Steamship Co., (1926) A. C. 497 at p. 502; 95 L. J. P. O. 121; 134 L. T. 737; 31 Com. Cas. 199; 17 Asp. M. C. 8; 42 T. L. R. 359; 24 Ll. L. Rep. 210. (Relied upon) ...	435	Jagannath Panja v. Mahesh Chandra Pal, 36 Ind. Cas. 286; 25 C. L. J. 149; 21 C. W. N. 688. (Dissented from) ...	152
Hubdar Khan v. Gajadhar Ohaube, 25 Ind. Cas. 600; 17 O. C. 294. (Referred to) ...	612	Jagannath Pershad v. Bechu, 80 Ind. Cas. 327; 27 O. C. 89; 9 O. & A. L. R. 931; 11 O. L. J. 77; A. I. R. 1924 Oudh 349; L. R. 5 A. (O.) 78. (Dissented from) ...	877
Hukam Kaur v. Bihari Lal, 15 Ind. Cas. 192; 73 P. W. R. 1912; 110 P. L. R. 1912. (Relied upon) ...	211	Jagat Tarini Dassi v. Naba Gopal Chaka, 34 C. 305; 5 C. L. J. 270. (Referred to) ...	738
Hukum Chand Boid v. Pirthichandlal Chowdhury, 50 Ind. Cas. 444; 17 A. L. J. 514; 36 M. L. J. 557; 23 C. W. N. 721; 21 Bom. L. R. 632; (1919) M. W. N. 258; 30 C. L. J. 71; 46 C. 670; 26 M. L. J. 131; 10 L. W. 416; 46 I. A. 52 (P. C.). (Applied) ...	42	Jageshra v. Durga Prashad Singh, 24 Ind. Cas. 679; 36 A. 500; 12 A. L. J. 844. (Referred to) ...	330, 609
		Jagmohan Das v. Indar Prasad, 65 Ind. Cas. 983; 24 O. C. 366. (Relied upon) ...	214
		Jagmohan Singh v. Prayag Narayan Singh, 87 Ind. Cas. 473; 6 P. L. T. 206; (1925) Pat. 140; 3 Pat. L. R. 251; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 523. (Followed) ...	15
		Jai Berham v. Kedar Nath Marwari, 69 Ind. Cas. 278; 27 C. W. N. 582; A. I. R. 1922 P. O. 269; 4 P. L. T. 61; 32 M. L. T. 10; 37 C. L. J. 351; 44 M. L. J. 735; 21 A. L. J. 490; 25 Bom. L. R. 643; (1923) M. W. N. 368; 2 Pat. 10; 18 L. W. 802; 49 I. A. 351 (P. O.). (Distinguished) ...	476
Ibrahim Ali v. Mohsin Ali, 18 A. 422; A. W. N. (1896) 137; 8 Ind. Dec. (n.s.) 987. (Followed) ...	668	Jai Narain Babulal v. Narain Das Jani Mal, 69 Ind. Cas. 585; 3 Lah. 296; A. I. R. 1922 Lah. 369. (Relied upon) ...	220
Ikram Ullah Khan v. Muhammad Yunis Ali Khan, 30 Ind. Cas. 33; 13 A. L. J. 473. (Followed) ...	481	Jairam v. Emperor, 15 Ind. Cas. 975; 8 N. L. R. 84; 13 Cr. L. J. 559. (Followed) ...	665
Imamuddin Khan v. Kishun Deo Narain Mahatha, 63 Ind. Cas. 492; 6 P. L. J. 246; 2 P. L. T. 675. (Followed) ...	828	Jaiwanti Kumri v. Gajadhar Upadhya, 10 Ind. Cas. 334; 38 C. 783; 15 C. W. N. 676; 14 O. L. J. 226. (Followed) ...	397
Indar Singh v. Fateh Singh, 59 Ind. Cas. 734; 1 Lah. 540; 64 P. W. R. 1920; 49 P. L. R. 1921. (Distinguished) ...	252	Jalaluddin Khan v. Rampal, 105 Ind. Cas. 359; 4 O. W. N. 871; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 467. (Referred to) ...	178
Indar Singh v. Kesri Singh, 10 Ind. Cas. 179; 14 O. C. 139. (Referred to) ...	885	Jamna Kuer v. Abdul Nabi, 16 Ind. Cas. 353. (Referred to) ...	181
Indra Nath Banerjee v. Queen-Empress, 25 O. 425; 2 O. W. N. 113; 13 Ind. Dec. (n.s.) 282. (Followed) ...	242	Jamna Prasad Rai v. Damri, 1 Unpub. Dec. of the Board of Rev. (1925) p. 77. (Followed) ...	562
Intzar Husain v. Jamna Prasad, 1 A. L. J. 247. (Followed) ...	682	Jamuna Kunwar v. Madari Singh, 106 Ind. Cas. 328; 4 O. W. N. 903; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 469. (Referred to) ...	180
Ireland v. *Livingston, (1872) 5 H. L. R. 395; 41 L. J. Q. B. 301; 27 L. T. 79. (Referred to) ...	225	Janoothassan Sait v. Mahomed Ohuthu, 82 Ind. Cas. 425; 47 M. 877; 47 M. L. J. 356; 20 L. W. 677; A. R. 1925 Mad. 155. (Followed) ...	810
Ishan Chandra Bhat v. Emperor, 9 Ind. Cas. 664; 38 O. 488; 15 C. W. N. 409; 13 O. L. J. 635; 12 Cr. L. J. 111. (Relied on) ...	56	Jawala Singh v. Tara Singh, 57 Ind. Cas. 159; 1 Lah. 503 at pp. 506, 507; 2 U. P. L. R. (Lah.) 122; 2 Lah. L. J. 565. (Followed) ...	619
Ishri Pershad v. Muhammad Sami, 60 Ind. Cas. 829; 19 A. L. J. 81. (Distinguished) ...	679
Islamam v. Maqbulan, 73 Ind. Cas. 255; 9 O. & A. L. R. 74; A. I. R. 1924 Oudh 126. (Dissented from) ...	397

J—concld.

	Page.
Jawan v. Emperor, 25 Ind. Cas 634; 30 P. R. 1914 Cr. 264 P. L. R. 1914; 50 P. W. R. 1914; 15 Cr. L. J. 626. (Followed) ...	614
Jhunku Lal v. Bisheshar Das, 46 Ind. Cas. 71; 40 A. 612; 16 A. L. J. 495. (Explained) ...	887
Jiwa Ram v. Nand Ram, 66 Ind. Cas. 144; 44 A. 407; 20 A. L. J. 226; A. I. R. 1922 All. 223. (Dissented from) ...	491
Jiwan Singh v. Jora, 25 P. R. 1905; 65 P. L. R. 1905. (Followed) ...	110
Jogindra Nath Roy v. Baladeo Das, 35 C. 961; 12 C. W. N. 127; 6 C. L. J. 735. (Relied upon) ...	211
Jogodishury Debea v. Kailash Chandra Lahiry, 21 C. 725; 1 C. W. N. 374; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1152 (F. B.). (Relied upon) ...	214
Joharuddin Sarkar v. Emperor, 31 C. 715; 8 C. W. N. 910; 1 Cr. L. J. 804. (Followed) ...	783
Jovkrishna Mukhopadhyaya v. Sarfannassa, 15 C. 345; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 814. (Relied on) ...	357

K

K. K. S. A. R. A. Chettiar v. Maung Myat Tha, 100 Ind. Cas. 921; 6 Bur. L. J. 5; A. I. R. 1927 Rang. 136. (Followed) ...	394
Kadir Mohideen Marrakkayar v. Muthukrishna Ayyar, 26 M. 230; 12 M. L. J. 368. (Followed) ...	805
Kali Bakhsh Singh v. Bhagwan Das, 72 Ind. Cas. 1023; 10 O. L. J. 191; 9 O. & A. L. R. 848; A. I. R. 1924 Oudh 16; L. R. 5 A. (O.) 17. (Followed) ...	877
Kali Charn v. Jaggu, 67 Ind. Cas. 89. (Followed) ...	781
Kali Mandal v. Ramsarbaswar Chakravarti, 32 C. 957; 1 C. L. J. 476; 6 C. W. N. 721. (Referred to) ...	471
Kalka Prasad v. Mathura Prasad, 1 Ind. Cas. 175; 30 A. 510; 13 C. W. N. 1; 18 M. L. J. 424; 4 M. L. T. 380; 10 Bom. L. R. 1088; 8 C. L. J. 447; 5 A. L. J. 701; 11 O. C. 362; 35 I. A. 166 (P. O.). (Followed) ...	45
Kalkantharam Rukmani Ammal v. Ka Ki Anakma Naidu, 96 Ind. Cas. 26; 23 L. W. 664; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 744; (1926) M. W. N. 938. (Distinguished) ...	814
Kallu v. Manni, 23 A. 93; A. W. N. (1900) 212. (Referred to) ...	569
Kalu Sharif v. Akhoy Charan Karmokar, 62 Ind. Cas. 445; 25 C. W. N. 253. (Relied on) ...	335
Kamini Debi v. Promotho Nath Mookerjee, 27 Ind. Cas. 317; 19 C. W. N. 755; 20 O. L. J. 476. (Relied upon) ...	214
Kamini Debi v. Promotho Nath Mukerjee, 10 Ind. Cas. 491; 39 C. 33; 13 C. L. J. 597. (Referred to) ...	738
Kamini Kumar Deb v. Durga Charan Nag, 74 Ind. Cas. 392; 37 C. L. J. 122; A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 521. (Explained) ...	744
Kamini Kumar Roy v. Rajendra Nath Roy, 90 Ind. Cas. 432; 42 C. L. J. 219; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 233. (Followed) ...	469
Kamla Sahai v. Babu Nandan Mian, 2 Ind. Cas. 13; 11 C. L. J. 39. (Followed) ...	417
Kesho Prasad Singh v. Shamnandan Rai, 94 Ind. Cas. 28; 5 Pat. 233; (1926) Pat. 81; P. L. T. 628; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 504. (Referred to) ...	596
Kesrisang v. Naransang, 32 B. 560; 10 Bom. L. R. 733. (Followed) ...	193

K—contd.

	Page.
Keymar v. Viswanatham Reddiar, 38 Ind. Cas. 683; 40 M. 112; 15 A. L. J. 92; 21 M. L. T. 78; 32 M. L. J. 35; 5 L. W. 342; 19 Bom. L. R. 206; 21 C. W. N. 358; 25 O. L. J. 233; 10 Bur. L. T. 175; 44 I. A. 6 (P. O.) (Followed) ...	816
Khagaram Das v. Ram Sankar Das Pramanik, 27 Ind. Cas. 815; 42 C. 652; 21 C. L. J. 79; 19 C. W. N. 775. (Relied on) ...	249
Khanu Mal v. Khan Muhammad, 6 P. R. 1898. (Distinguished) ...	612
Khiaarajmal v. Daim, 32 C. 296; 9 C. W. N. 201; 2 A. L. J. 71; 7 Bom. L. R. 1; 1 C. L. J. 584; 32 I. A. 23; 8 Sar. P. O. J. 734 (P. C.). (Followed) ...	513
Khudajiatal Kubra v. Amina Khatun, 80 Ind. Cas. 413; 22 A. L. J. 122; 46 A. 250; A. I. R. 1924 All. 388; L. R. 5 A. 142 Civ. (Referred to) ...	620
Khudiram Mahto v. Chandi Charan Mahto, 35 Ind. Cas. 358; 1 P. L. J. 306; 2 P. L. W. 377. (Relied on) ...	532
Khunni Lal v. Kunwar Gobind Krishna Narain, 10 Ind. Cas. 477; 38 I. A. 87; 15 C. W. N. 545; 8 A. L. J. 552; 13 O. L. J. 575; 13 Bom. L. R. 427; 10 M. L. T. 25; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 432; 21 M. L. J. 645; 33 A. 356 (P. C.). (Followed) ...	890
King v. Beston, (1790) 3 T. R. 592 at p. 595; 1 R. R. 777; 100 E. R. 750. (Relied upon) ...	446
Kiran Chandra Bose v. Dutt & Co., 85 Ind. Cas. 522; 29 C. W. N. 94; 40 C. L. J. 500; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 251. (Relied upon) ...	209
Kishore Chand Bhakat v. Gisborne & Co., 17 O. 341; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 766. (Followed) ...	603
Knox v. Symonds, (1791) 1 Ves. Jr. 369; 30 E. R. 390 at p. 391. (Referred to) ...	545
Koer Hasmat Rai v. Sunder Das, 11 C. 396; 10 Ind. Jur. 26; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1023. (Dissented from) ...	781
Krishnasami Konan v. Ramasami Ayyar, 22 M. 519; 9 M. L. J. 127; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 371. (Distinguished) ...	129
Krishnashankar v. Chandrashankar, 5 B. 198; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 132. (Relied on) ...	169
Krishnayyan v. Muthusami, 7 M. 407; 8 Ind. Jur. 427; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 867. (Followed) ...	419
Krishnendra Nath Sarkar v. Kusum Kamini Debi, 100 Ind. Cas. 93; 54 I. A. 48; 45 O. L. J. 305; (1927) M. W. N. 41; A. I. R. 1927 P. O. 20; 52 M. L. J. 412; 54 C. 166; 31 C. W. N. 514; 25 L. W. 631 (P. O.). (Relied on) ...	730
Kristo Kamini Dass v. Administrator-General of Bengal, 7 C. W. N. 476. (Followed) ...	473
Kuchu Iyer v. Vengu Ammal, 93 Ind. Cas. 360; 50 M. L. J. 432; (1926) M. W. N. 116; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 407; 23 L. W. 728. (Followed) ...	431
Kuman Das v. Kachali Mandal, 105 Ind. Cas. 20. (Followed) ...	538
Kunjo Behary Singh v. Madhub Chandra Ghose, 23 C. 884; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 587. (F. B.). (Followed) ...	722
Kunjo Behary Singh v. Madhub Chandra Ghose, 23 C. 884; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 587 (F. B.). (Relied on) ...	721
Kunti v. Gajraj Tewari, 83 Ind. Cas. 297; 46 A. 847; 22 A. L. J. 779; A. I. R. 1924 All. 826; L. R. 5 A. 568 Civ. (Followed) ...	905

K—concl.

	Page.
Kurgodigauda v. Ningangauda, 41 Ind. Cas. 238; 41 B. 625; 19 Bom. L. R. 638. (Followed)	491
Kurrutulain Bahadur v. Nuzbat-ud-Dowla Abbas Hossein Khan, 33 C. 116; 9 C. W. N. 938; 1 C. L. J. 594; 2 A. L. J. 758; 15 M. L. J. 336; 7 Bom. L. R. 876; 32 I. A. 214; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 839 (P. C.). (Relied on)	14
L
Lachmi Narain Marwari v. Balmukund Marwari, 60 Ind. Cas. 479; 6 Pat. L. J. 116; 2 P. L. T. 155. (Distinguished)	313
Lachmi Narayan v. Damodardas, 81 Ind. Cas. 282; 20 N. L. R. 192; A. I. R. 1925 Nag. 109. (Followed)	524
Lajwanti v. Safa Chand, 80 Ind. Cas. 788; 6 P. L. T. 1; 22 A. L. J. 364; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 121; 5 Lah. 192; (1924) M. W. N. 442; 20 L. W. 10; 2 Pat. L. R. 245; 28 C. W. N. 960; 26 Bom. L. R. 1117; 47 M. L. J. 935; 51 I. A. 171; L. R. 5 A. (P. C.) 94 (P. C.). (Explained and distinguished)	151
Lakhan Chandra Malo v. Gopal Sheikh, 98 Ind. Cas. 912; 31 C. W. N. 60. (Distinguished)	465
Lakhi v. Molar, 86 Ind. Cas. 115; 26 P. L. R. 126; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 416. (Followed)	830
Lakshmi Doss v. Roop Laul, 30 M. 169; 17 M. L. J. 19; 2 M. L. T. 4. (Referred to)	897
Lakshmi Venkayamma Rao v. Venkatanarasimha Appa Rao, 34 Ind. Cas. 921; 39 M. 509; 20 C. W. N. 1054; 14 A. L. J. 797; 31 M. L. J. 58; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 23; 20 M. L. T. 137; 4 L. W. 58; 18 Bom. L. R. 651; 24 C. L. J. 279; 43 I. A. 138 (P. C.). (Followed)	905
Lal v. Gauhr, 44 Ind. Cas. 129; 5 P. R. 1918. (Referred to)	487
Lal v. Raja Uday Partap Udaya Dutt Singh, S. D. No 9 of 1892. (Followed)	896
Lal Achal Ram v. Raja Kazim Hussain Khan, 32 I. A. 113; 27 A. 271; 9 C. W. N. 477; 8 O. C. 155; 15 M. L. J. 197; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 772 (P. C.). (Applied)	744
Lal Bahadur v. Muhammad Karim Khan, S. C. 240. (Referred to)	181
Lal Mohammad Khan v. Amatul Fatima, 76 Ind. Cas. 534; 26 O. C. 239; A. I. R. 1921 Oudh 80. (Referred to)	171
Lalla Kanhoo Lal v. Manki Bibi, 6 C. W. N. 601. (Referred to)	612
Lalman v. Shiam Singh, 92 Ind. Cas. 608; 24 A. L. J. 288; A. I. R. 1926 All. 291. (Distinguished)	581
Langat Singh v. Janki Koer, 12 Ind. Cas. 151; 39 C. 265; 14 C. L. J. 481. (Followed)	390
Liverpool Corn Trade Association v. Monts, (1926) 2 K. B. 110; 95 L. J. K. B. 519; 134 I. T. 756; 10 Tax. Cas. 442; 42 T. L. R. 393. (Distinguished)	291
Lowther v. Heaver, (1889) 41 Ch. D. 248; 58 L. J. Ch. 482; 60 L. T. 310; 37 W. R. 465. (Distinguished)	637
Luchmee Chund, In the matter of the petition of, 8 C. 317; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 203. (Distinguished)	666
Luckhinarain Mitter v. Khetetro Pal Singh Roy, 20 W. R. 380; 13 B. I. R. 146; 24 W. R. 407n; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 273 (P. C.). (Relied on)	357

M

	Page.
Ma Dun v. Lu O, 2 Ind. Cas. 535; 5 L. B. R. 40. (Doubted)	165
Ma Shwe Mya v. Maung Ho Hnaung, 70 Ind. Cas. 937; 49 I. A. 395; 31 M. L. T. 301; A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 359; 17 L. W. 213; 37 C. L. J. 343; 27 C. W. N. 533; 44 M. L. J. 732; 50 C. 166; 2 Bur. L. J. 264 (P. C.). (Referred to)	710
Madan Mohun Singh v. Raj Kishori Kumari, 39 Ind. Cas. 182; 17 C. L. J. 384; 21 C. W. N. 88. (Relied upon)	209
Madar Mondal v. Mohima Chandra Mazumdar, 33 C. 531; 3 C. L. J. 343. (Followed)	735
Madari Sikdar v. Emperor, 102 Ind. Cas. 550; 51 C. 307; A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 514; 28 Cr. L. J. 582; 8 A. I. Cr. R. 112. (Dissented from)	817
Madari Sikdar v. Emperor, 102 Ind. Cas. 550; 51 C. 307; A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 514; 28 Cr. L. J. 582; 8 A. I. Cr. R. 112. (Relied on)	57
Madat Khan v. Emperor, 100 Ind. Cas. 126; 8 Lah. 193; (1927) M. W. N. 68; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 26; 31 C. W. N. 393; 28 P. L. R. 167; 52 M. L. J. 441; 28 Cr. L. J. 254; 25 L. W. 724; 29 Bom. L. R. 784; 45 C. L. J. 408; 7 A. I. Cr. R. 350 (P. C.). (Followed)	716
Madhori Saran v. Parbati, 88 Ind. Cas. 653; 47 A. 881; 23 A. L. J. 534; L. R. 6 A. 451 Civ; A. I. R. 1925 All. 552. (Followed)	596
Mahabir Prasad Singh v. Anup Narain Singh, 46 Ind. Cas. 137; 3 P. L. J. 377; (1918) Pat. 246; 5 P. L. W. 327. (Followed)	828
Mahabir Singh v. Ahsanullah, A. W. N. (1901) 53. (Followed)	562
Mahadeo Singh v. Dhobi Singh, 74 Ind. Cas. 838; (1923) Pat. 283; 4 P. L. T. 721; 2 Pat. 916; A. I. R. 1924 Pat. 111. (Referred to)	488
Mahajan Sheikh v. Emperor, 28 Ind. Cas. 672; 42 C. 708; 19 C. W. N. 224; 16 Cr. L. J. 336. (Referred to)	601
Mahant Biharidasji v. Parshotamdas Ramdas, 32 B. 345; 10 Bom. L. R. 293. (Followed)	469
Maharaj Bahadur Singh v. Karani Mai, 104 Ind. Cas. 199; 32 C. W. N. 57; 45 C. L. J. 506; A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 633. (Followed)	471
Maharajah Joymungul Singh Bahadur v. Mohun Ram Marwaree, 15 W. R. 37. (Followed)	668
Mahomed Ghasita v. Siraj-ud-Din, 66 Ind. Cas. 490; 2 Lah. 376; A. I. R. 1922 Lah. 198 (F. B.). (Followed)	493
Mahomed Kala Mea v. Harperink, 1 Ind. Cas. 122; 36 C. 323; 13 C. W. N. 249; 6 A. L. J. 34; 5 M. L. T. 126; 9 C. L. J. 165; 11 Bom. L. R. 227; 19 M. L. J. 115; 36 I. A. 32 (P. C.). (Distinguished)	295
Mahomed Musa v. Aghore Kumar Ganguli, 28 Ind. Cas. 930; 42 C. 801; 17 Bom. L. R. 420; 21 C. L. J. 231; 28 M. L. J. 548; 19 C. W. N. 250; 13 A. L. J. 229; 17 M. L. T. 143; 2 L. W. 258; (1915) M. W. N. 621; 42 I. A. 1 (P. C.). (Followed)	905
Makar Ali v. Sarfaddin, 70 Ind. Cas. 606; 50 C. 115; 27 C. W. N. 183; 36 C. L. J. 132; A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 85. (Distinguished)	67
Malhar Rao v. Martand Rao, 84 Ind. Cas. 658. (Reversed)	7
Manchester Ship Canal Co., Ltd. v. S. Pearson & Son Ltd., (1900) 2 Q. B. 606; 69 T. J. Q. B. 852; 48 W. R. 689; 83 L. T. 45. (Relied upon)	434

INDIAN CASES.

[1926]

M—contd.	Page.	M—contd.	Page.
Mangamma v. Sathiraju, 37 Ind. Cas. 681; 31 M. L. J. 816; 5 L. W. 246. (Relied upon)	218	Moharani Beni Pershad Koeri v. Goberdhan Koeri, 6 O. W. N. 823. (Relied on)	81
Mangat Rai v. Babu Singh, 103 Ind. Cas. 437; 28 P. L. R. 380; 9 Lah. L. J. 301; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 445. (Followed)	617	Mohidin v. Shivlingappa, 23 B. 666; 1 Bom. L. R. 170; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 415. (Followed)	522
Mangat Ram v. Siraj-ul-Hasan, 78 Ind. Cas. 152; A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 492; 6 Lah. L. J. 130. (Relied on)	769	Mohkam Chand v. Ganga Ram, 39 Ind. Cas. 654; 15 P. R. 1917. (Distinguished)	603
Manickam Pillai v. Mahudum Bathummal, 82 Ind. Cas. 102; 47 M. 819; 20 L. W. 427; 47 M. L. J. 398; (1924) M. W. N. 689; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 21 (F. B.). (Followed)	815	Monmatha Kumar Ray v. Josada Lal Poddar, 77 Ind. Cas. 551; 28 O. W. N. 300; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 617. (Followed)	735
Maniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand, 33 O. 1047; 4 O. L. J. 94; 8 Bom. L. R. 501; 10 O. W. N. 874; 1 M. L. T. 199; 3 A. L. J. 525; 16 M. L. J. 300; 2 N. L. R. 130; 33 I. A. 165 (P. O.). (Followed)	533	Monro v. Bognor Urban Council, (1915) 3 K. B. 167; 84 L. J. K. B. 1091; 112 L. T. 969; 79 J. P. 286; 13 L. G. R. 431; 59 S. J. 348. (Relied upon)	220
Marquis of Cholmondeley v. Lord Clinton, (1820) 22 R. R. 84; 2 Jac. & Walk. 1; 37 E. R. 527. (Referred to)	612	Moonshee Buzloor Ruheem v. Shumsaonnissa Begum, 11 M. I. A. 551; 8 W. R. P. O. 3; 2 Suth. P. O. J. 59; 2 Sar. P. O. J. 259; 20 E. R. 208. (Referred to)	607
Mathews v. Wallwyn, (1798) 4 Ves. Jun 118; 31 E. R. 62. (Relied on)	808	Mrinalini Dasi v. Abinash Chander Dutt, 6 Ind. Cas. 508; 11 O. L. J. 533; 14 O. W. N. 1024. (Referred to)	738
Maung Okkyi v. Ma Pu, 99 Ind. Cas. 519; 4 R. 368; 5 Bur. L. J. 145; A. I. R. 1927 Rang. 33 (F. B.). (Doubted)	165	Mudvirapa Kulkarni v. Fakirapa Kenardi, 7 B. 427; 8 Ind. Jur. 48; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 287. (Relied on)	479
Maung Po Thu Daw v. Maung Po Than, 83 Ind. Cas. 10; 1 R. 316; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 73 (F. B.). (Followed)	167	Muhammad Ejaz Rasul Khan v. Mubarak Hussain, 79 Ind. Cas. 1033; 27 O. C. 231; 10 O. & A. L. R. 685; 11 O. L. J. 613; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 291; 1 O. W. N. 388. (Relied on)	887
Maung San Min v. Maung Po Hlaing, 94 Ind. Cas. 567; 4 R. 1; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 291; 4 Bur. L. J. 118 (F. B.). (Relied on)	165	Muhammad Hafiz v. Muhammad Zakariya, 65 Ind. Cas. 79; 44 A. 121; 20 A. L. J. 17; 26 O. W. N. 297; (1922) M. W. N. 89; 35 O. L. J. 126; 42 M. L. J. 248; 15 L. W. 377; 24 Bom. L. R. 341; 30 M. L. T. 224; 3 P. L. T. 279; 1 P. W. R. 1922; A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 23; 49 I. A. 9 (P. O.). (Distinguished)	591
Meduru Brahmayya v. Vedulu Yellamma, 36 Ind. Cas. 437; 31 M. L. J. 509; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 278; 4 L. W. 408. (Followed)	596	Mukhtar Ahmad v. Parati Lal, 25 Ind. Cas. 316; 17 O. C. 224 at p. 229; 1 O. L. J. 335. (Referred to)	333
Mehdi Ali Khan v. Ghansham Singh, 104 Ind. Cas. 375; 53 M. L. J. 345 at p. 350; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 204; 46 O. L. J. 209; 4 O. W. N. 837; (1927) M. W. N. 723; 29 Bom. L. R. 1376; 39 M. L. T. 300; 32 O. W. N. 93 (P. O.). (Referred to)	525	Mulchand Jekisondas v. Bai Rukshmani, 72 Ind. Cas. 282; 25 Bom. L. R. 189; A. I. R. 1923 Bom. 216. (Distinguished)	497
Merchants of the Staple v. Bank of England, (1881) 21 Q. B. D. 160 at p. 165; 57 L. J. Q. B. 418; 36 W. R. 880; 52 J. P. 580. (Relied upon)	446	Mulla Ramzan v. Maung Po Kaing, 96 Ind. Cas. 773; 4 Rang. 118; 5 Bur. L. J. 41; A. I. R. 1926 Rang. 140. (Followed)	860
Midnapur Zemindary Co., Ltd. v. Naresh Narayan Roy, 80 Ind. Cas. 827; 51 I. A. 293; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 144; 26 Bom. L. R. 651; 47 M. L. J. 23; 51 O. C. 631; 35 M. L. T. 169; (1924) M. W. N. 723; 29 O. W. N. 34; 20 L. W. 770; L. R. 5 A. (P. C.) 137; 23 A. L. J. 76; 3 Pat. L. R. 193; 6 P. L. T. 750 (P. O.). (Distinguished)	895	Mumtaz Ahmad v. Sri Ram, 21 Ind. Cas. 462; 35 A. 524; 11 A. L. J. 815. (Referred to)	603
Mineral Shadiram v. Kharsetji Jivaji, 30 B. 395; 8 Bom. L. R. 296. (Referred to)	897	Mundlapati Jagannadha Rao v. Rachapudi Basawayya, 104 Ind. Cas. 614; (1927) M. N. N. 224; 26 L. W. 212; 53 M. L. J. 255; 39 M. L. T. 121; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 835. (Followed)	653
Mirza Ahmad Namazi, In re , 83 Ind. Cas. 94; 20 L. W. 74; (1924) M. W. N. 522; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 703. (Followed)	594	Murli v. Gajraj Singh, 46 Ind. Cas. 413; 21 O. C. 124 at p. 130; 5 O. L. J. 241. (Referred to)	872
Miya Vali Ulla v. Sayed Bava Saheb, 22 B. 496; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 913. (Followed)	899	Muthiah Chettiar v. Lodd Govinda Doss Krishna Doss, 69 Ind. Cas. 337; 44 M. 919; 41 M. L. J. 316; 14 L. W. 287; (1921) M. W. N. 619. (Followed)	603
Miya Vali Ulla v. Sayed Bava Saheb, 22 B. 496; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 913. (Relied on)	899	Muthukumarasami Pillai v. Muthusami Thevan, 100 Ind. Cas. 522; 25 L. W. 232; 52 M. L. J. 148; 38 M. L. T. 84; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 394; 50 M. 639. (Followed)	653
Mohammad Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Mohan Singh, 74 Ind. Cas. 476; 50 I. A. 202; A. I. R. 1923 P. C. 118; 21 A. L. J. 757; 45 A. 419; 26 O. C. 231; 45 M. L. J. 623; 9 O. & A. L. R. 901; 10 O. L. J. 383; 19 L. W. 283; 39 O. L. J. 295; 28 O. W. N. 840; 33 M. L. T. 321 (P. C.). (Followed)	52	Nabijan v. Sahifan, 67 Ind. Cas. 635; 4 P. L. T. 278; A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 153. (Followed)	319
Mohammad Saadat Ali v. Kuer Lal, 93 Ind. Cas. 912; 3 O. W. N. 228; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 519; 13 O. L. J. 641. (Followed)	191	Nagaruru Sambayya v. Tangatur Subbayya, 31 M. 330; 3 M. L. T. 317. (Dissented from)	710

N

N—conold

	Page.		Page.
Nagendra Nath Sen v. B. & N. W. Ry., 105 Ind. Cas. 546. (Followed)	158	Ochavaram Nanabhai v. Dolatram Jamietram, 28 B. 614; 6 Bom. L. R. 966. (Followed)	420
Nahanna Pachhasaheb v. Sabinibibi, 12 Ind. Cas. 583; 37 B. 217; 13 Bom. L. R. 1011. (Not followed)	110	Official Receiver v. Kewalmal Ajumal, 93 Ind. Cas. 372; A. I. R. 1926 Sind 123. (Relied upon)	210
Nainapillai Marakayar v. Ramanathan Chettiar, 82 Ind. Cas. 226; 51 I. A. 83 at p. 89; 47 M. 337; 28 C. W. N. 809; A. I. R. 1924 P. O. 65; 19 L. W. 259; 22 A. L. J. 130; 31 M. L. T. 10; (1924) M. W. N. 293; 46 M. L. J. 546; 10 O. & A. L. R. 464; L. R. 5 A. (P. O.) 33 (P. O.). (Followed)	81	v. Narain Das Lotaram, 89 Ind. Cas. 493; 20 S. L. R. 209; A. I. R. 1926 Sind 31. (Relied upon)	218
Nand Kishore Chaudhuri v. Rameshwar Singh, 78 Ind. Cas. 476; 2 Pat. L. R. 19; A. I. R. 1921 at 515. (Followed)	821	Oppenheim v. Mahomed Haneef, 74 Ind. Cas. 616; 45 M. 496; 26 C. W. N. 642; 16 L. W. 33; 30 M. L. T. 291; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. O.) 35; A. I. R. 1922 P. O. 120; (1922) M. W. N. 396; 43 M. L. J. 422; 24 Bom. L. R. 1245; 36 C. L. J. 444; 49 I. A. 174 (P. O.). (Followed)	610
Nand Ram v. Mangal Sen, 1 Ind. Cas. 797; 31 A. 339; 6 A. L. J. 415. (Referred to)	576
Narain Das v. Chiranji Lal, 86 Ind. Cas. 168; 47 A. 361 at p. 364; 23 A. L. J. 56; L. R. 6 A. 159 Civ.; A. I. R. 1925 All. 364. (Followed)	596	Pachayammal v. Davanaimmal, 91 Ind. Cas. 776; 22 L. W. 313; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1016. (Not followed)	110
Narain Singh v. Gopal Singh, 20 Ind. Cas. 2; 106 P. R. 1913; 167 P. W. R. 1913; 252 P. L. R. 1913. (Followed)	619	Padman Singh v. Subransi, 94 Ind. Cas. 791; 22 N. L. R. 28; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 291. (Followed)	528
Narayan Chettyar v. Vellayappa Chettyar, 34 Ind. Cas. 317; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 206; 19 M. L. T. 237. (Commented upon)	290	Pancham v. Ansar Hussain, 99 Ind. Cas. 650; 53 I. A. 183; A. I. R. 1926 P. O. 85; 24 A. L. J. 736; (1926) M. W. N. 520; 24 L. W. 241; 48 A. 457; 31 C. W. N. 324 (P. O.). (Referred to)	650
Narna v. Ammani Amma, 35 Ind. Cas. 418; 39 M. 981; 1 L. W. 77; 20 M. L. T. 174; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 125; 31 M. L. J. 865. (Referred to)	650	Parker v. Clarke, (1861) 30 Beav. 54; 7 Jur. (N. s.) 1267; 9 W. R. 877; 54 E. R. 809; 132 R. R. 180. (Relied on)	808
Nawab Bibi v. Allah Ditta, 73 Ind. Cas. 896; A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 188; 5 Lah. L. J. 505. (Referred to)	607	Parthasarathy Reddiar v. Kandaswami Mudaliar, 73 Ind. Cas. 954; 32 M. L. T. 349; (1923) M. W. N. 423; 18 L. W. 156; 45 M. L. J. 161; A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 711. (Not followed)	110
Nawadwip Chandra Chakravarti v. Bhagaban Chandra Chowdhury, 101 Ind. Cas. 27; 31 C. W. N. 496; A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 462. (Followed)	465	Partington v. Attorney-General, (1869) 4 H. L. 100; 38 L. J. Ex. 205; 21 L. T. 370. (Commented upon)	683
Neelamani Patnaik Mussadi v. Sukaduva Behara, 60 Ind. Cas. 255; 43 M. 803 at p. 806; 12 L. W. 269. (Followed)	808	Parvatibai Bhagirath v. Chatru Limbaji, 12 Ind. Cas. 708; 36 B. 131; 13 Bom. L. R. 1023. (Relied on)	552
Neelamani Patnaik Mussadi v. Sukaduva Behara, 60 Ind. Cas. 255; 43 M. 803 at p. 806; 12 L. W. 269. (Relied on)	808	Pazhaniandi v. Naku, 99 Ind. Cas. 32; 51 M. L. J. 684; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 109. (Dissented from)	815
Nemmannakudre v. Achmu Hengasu, 53 Ind. Cas. 855; 43 M. 319 at p. 323; 37 M. L. J. 539; 11 L. W. 49; (1920) M. W. N. 117; 27 M. L. T. 83. (Followed)	499	Pazhavathil Mavilaputhia Veetil Chindan Nambiar v. Kunhi Raman Nambiar, 45 Ind. Cas. 26; 41 M. 577 at p. 581; 34 M. L. J. 400; (1918) M. W. N. 283; 23 M. L. T. 316; 7 L. W. 543 (F. B.). (Followed)	499
Netta Karuppa Goundan v. Kumarasami Goundan, 22 M. 20; 8 M. L. J. 167; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 15. (Referred to)	650	Peary Mohun Mukherjee v. Manohar Mukherjee, 74 Ind. Cas. 373; 27 C. W. N. 989; 38 O. L. J. 5; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 160. (Not followed)	214
New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles, (1889) 14 A. C. 381; 59 L. J. Q. B. 291; 61 L. T. 201. (Distinguished)	291	Peramasami Ragudu, In re , 91 Ind. Cas. 532; 27 Cr. L. J. 100; 22 L. W. 784; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 183. (Dissented from)	817
Nirod Chandra Singha v. Harihar Chakravarti, 58 Ind. Cas. 867; 24 C. W. N. 874; 32 C. L. J. 19. (Relied on)	730	Peramasami Ragudu, In re , 91 Ind. Cas. 532; 27 Cr. L. J. 100; 22 L. W. 784; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 183. (Relied on)	57
Nittokiforee Dossee v. Jagendro Nath Mullick, 5 I. A. 55; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 792; Bald. 159; 3 Suth. P. O. J. 505 (P. O.). (Relied on)	552	Pereira v. Pereira, 5 M. 118; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 82 (F. B.). (Referred to)	184
Nityanund Roy v. Abdar Raheem, 7 C. 76; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 599. (Referred to)	618	Peruvian Guano Co. v. Dreyfus, (1892) A. C. 166; 61 L. J. Ch. 749; 66 L. T. 536; 7 Asp. M. O. 225. (Referred to)	479
Noble v. Bank of Burma, 17 Ind. Cas. 853; 5 Bur. L. T. 193. (Followed)	860	Pestonjee Nussurwanjee v. Manockjee & Co., 12 M. I. 112; 1 Ind. Jur. (N. s.) 69; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 164; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 390; 10 W. R. 51; 20 E. R. 283. (Referred to)	707
Nundo Lal Mullick v. Panchanon Mukherjee, 42 Ind. Cas. 484; 45 C. 60 at p. 66; 21 C. W. N. 1076; 26 C. L. J. 187. (Followed)	596	Phipps, In re , (1863) 11 W. R. (Eng.) 720 (Referred to)	601
Nurendro Narain Roy v. Ishan Chunder Sen, 22 W. R. 22; 13 B. L. R. 274 (F. B.). (Referred to)	181

P—conclud.	Page.	R	Page.
Piara Singh v. Peshawar Bank, Ltd., 28 Ind. Cas. 53; 54 P. R. 1915; 22 P. L. R. 1915; 235 P. W. R. 1915. (Followed) ...	492	R. v. Downes, (1876) 1 Q. B. D. 25; 45 L. J. M. C. 8; 33 L. T. 675; 25 W. R. 278; 13 Cox C. O. 111. (Relied on) ...	124
Piroj Shah v. Qarib Shah, 95 Ind. Cas. 124; 7 Lah. 161; 8 Lah. L. J. 267; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 379; 27 P. L. R. 321. (Distinguished) ...	396	— v. Duke of Leinster, (1924) 1 K. B. 311; 93 L. J. K. B. 144; (1924) B & C. R. 78; 17 Cr. App. R. 176; 130 L. T. 318; 87 J. P. 191; 27 Cox C. O. 574; 68 S. J. 211; 40 T. L. R. 33. (Relied upon) ...	442
Piroj Shah v. Qarib Shah, 95 Ind. Cas. 124; 7 Lah. 161; 8 Lah. L. J. 267; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 379; 27 P. L. R. 321. (Followed) ...	395	— v. Senior, (1899) 1 Q. B. 283; 68 L. J. Q. B. 175; 63 J. P. 8; 47 W. R. 367; 79 L. T. 562; 15 T. L. R. 102; 19 Cox C. O. 219. (Relied on) ...	124
Port Canning and Land Improvement Co., Ltd. v. Katyani Debi, 53 Ind. Cas. 522; 47 C. 280; 37 M. L. J. 578; 17 A. L. J. 1061; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 91; (1920) M. W. N. 160; 24 C. W. N. 369; 11 L. W. 296; 46 I. A. 279; 22 Bom. L. R. 437; 32 C. L. J. 1; 27 M. L. T. 195 (P. C.). (Explained) ...	730	Radha v. Kinlock, 11 A. 310; A. W. N. (1889) 94; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 625. (Followed) ...	42
Potaraju Venkata Reddy v. Emperor, 14 Ind. Cas. 659; 36 M. 216; (1912) M. W. N. 476; 13 Cr. L. J. 275; 11 M. L. T. 416; 23 M. L. J. 39. (Referred to) ...	561	Radha Kishen v. Kidar Nath, 15 Ind. Cas. 773; 96 P. R. 1912; 221 P. W. R. 1912. (Distinguished) ...	620
Prabh Dyal v. Gurmukh, 98 P. R. 1902; 18 P. L. R. 1903. (Referred to) ...	603	Radha Mohan Dutt v. Nripendra Nath Nandi, 31 C. W. N. clx (Notes). (Relied upon) ...	216
Prabhakarbhav v. Vishwambhar Pandit, 8 B. 313; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 583 (F. B.) (Distinguished) ...	620	Raghupati Chatterjee v. Nrisingha Hori Das, 71 Ind. Cas. 1; 36 C. L. J. 491; A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 90. (Followed) ...	110
Prativadi Bhayankaram Pichamma v. Kamiseti Sreeramulu, 43 Ind. Cas. 566; (1918) M. W. N. 92; 41 M. 286; 23 M. L. T. 1; 34 M. L. J. 24 (F. B.). (Followed) ...	815	Rahamtullah Sahib v. Rama Rao, 17 M. 373; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 259. (Followed) ...	420
Prayag Doss Ji Varu v. Tirumala Sriranga Charlavaru, 28 M. 319; 15 M. L. J. 133. (Relied on) ...	136	Rahim-un-nissa Begam v. Srinivasa Ayyangar, 54 Ind. Cas. 565; 38 M. L. J. 266; 11 L. W. 139. (Referred to) ...	726
Preonath Karar v. Surja Oommar Goswami, 19 C. 26; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 464. (Distinguished) ...	747	Raj Chandra Das v. Kali Kanta Das, 82 Ind. Cas. 776; A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 394. (Followed) ...	494
Promotha Nath Pal v. Sourav Dasi, 58 Ind. Cas. 327; 47 C. 1108; 24 C. W. N. 1101; 31 C. L. J. 463. (Distinguished) ...	67	Raj Krishna Dey v. Bipin Behari Dey, 17 Ind. Cas. 162; 40 C. 245; 16 C. L. J. 194; 17 C. W. N. 591. (Referred to) ...	330, 609
Promotho Nath Mullick v. Prodymno Kumar Mullick, 69 Ind. Cas. 900; 26 C. W. N. 772. (Followed) ...	473	Raja Rao v. Anantha Narayanan Chetty, 67 Ind. Cas. 369; 15 L. W. 303; 42 M. L. J. 308; (1922) M. W. N. 255; A. I. R. 1922 Mad. 228. (Distinguished) ...	476
Protap Chandra Chatterjee v. Durga Charan Ghose, 9 C. W. N. 1061. (Followed) ...	726	Raja Thakur Barmha v. Jiban Ram Marwari, 21 Ind. Cas. 936; 41 C. 590; 18 C. W. N. 313; 15 M. L. T. 137; 12 A. L. J. 156; 19 C. L. J. 161; 26 M. L. J. 89; 16 Bom. L. R. 156; (1914) M. W. N. 118; 41 I. A. 38 (P. C.). (Distinguished) ...	295
Puhup Deo Kuer v. Ram Charitar Barhi, 74 Ind. Cas. 87; 4 P. L. T. 514; A. I. R. 1924 Pat. 76. (Relied on) ...	161	Rajah Pirthees Singh v. Ramee Raj Kower, 12 B. L. R. 238; 20 W. R. 21; 1 A. Sup. Vol. 203; 3 Sar. P. O. J. 259 (P. C.). (Relied on) ...	552
Punchanun Bundopadhyaya v. Rabia Bibi, 17 C. 711; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1016 (F. B.). (Referred to) ...	856	Rajani Kanta Dutta v. Emperor, 3 Ind. Cas. 88; 36 C. 904; 10 Cr. L. J. 244. (Followed) ...	783
Puran Das v. E. I. Ry. Co., 102 Ind. Cas. 673; 8 P. L. T. 415; A. I. R. 1927 Pat. 234; 6 Pat. 718. (Followed) ...	158, 540	Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Rahaman Gazi, 82 Ind. Cas. 507; 27 C. W. N. 765; 37 C. L. J. 447; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 408. (Followed) ...	310
Purna Chandra Moulik v. Dengar Chandra Pal, 28 Ind. Cas. 658; 19 C. W. N. 334; 16 Cr. L. J. 329. (Referred to) ...	512	Rakhal Das Adhya v. Prodyot Kumar Tagore, 6 Ind. Cas. 121; 15 C. L. J. 308. (Followed) ...	91
Pyari Mohun Mukhopadhyaya v. Gopal Paick, 25 C. 531; 2 C. W. N. 575; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 352. (Distinguished) ...	81	Ram Autar v. Drigpal, 8 Ind. Cas. 725; 14 C. O. 41. (Referred to) ...	178
		Ram Bakhsh v. Durjan, 9 A. 322; A. W. N. (1887) 65; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 696. (Followed) ...	417
		Ram Bharose v. Kallu Mall, 22 A. 135; A. W. N. (1900) 12; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1120. (Relied on) ...	793
		Ram Jawaya Mal v. Devi Ditta Mal, 31 Ind. Cas. 192; 117 P. R. 1916; 107 P. W. R. 1916; 70 P. L. R. 1917. (Followed) ...	109
		Ram Krishna Misra, In re, 88 Ind. Cas. 70; 4 Pat. 51; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 355; 6 P. L. T. 776. (Dissented from) ...	830
		Ram Narain Ram v. Pati Ram Tewary, 34 Ind. Cas. 105; 1 P. L. J. 90; 2 P. L. W. 411. (Distinguished) ...	532
Qasim Ali Khan v. Ahmed Shah, 33 Ind. Cas. 516; 2 O. L. J. 758. (Referred to) ...	885
Queen v. Phomonee Ahun, 8 W. R. Cr. 78. (Referred to) ...	764
— v. Punamalai Nadan, 5 M. 199; 1 W. L. R. 80; 6 Ind. Jur. 410; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 139. (Commented upon) ...	563

R—contd.

	Page.
Ram Raj Singh v. Tej Singh, 99 Ind. Cas. 203; 3 O. W. N. 964; L. R. 8 A. (O.) 26; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 46. (Referred to)	181
Ram Sagar Mondal v. Alek Naskar, 67 Ind. Cas. 177; 49 O. 682; 26 O. W. N. 412; 35 O. L. J. 247; 23 Cr. L. J. 353 (F. B.). (Referred to)	485
Ram Sahai v. Madan Lal-Kanhaiya Lal, 98 Ind. Cas. 376; 24 A. L. J. 430; 48 A. 432; A. I. R. 1926 All. 346. (Followed)	603
Ramachandra Rao v. Ramachandra Rao, 67 Ind. Cas. 408; 45 M. 320; 30 M. L. T. 154; 26 O. W. N. 713; 25 O. L. J. 515; 16 L. W. 1; (1922) M. W. N. 359; 20 A. L. J. 684; 43 M. L. J. 78; 24 Bom. L. R. 963; A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 80; 49 I. A. 129 (P. C.). (Referred to and discussed)	149
Ramadh Bibi Ammal v. Kandasami Pillai, 51 Ind. Cas. 724; 9 L. W. 479; (1919) M. W. N. 82; 25 M. L. T. 154. (Referred to)	650
Ramalinga Muppan v. Pavadaigoundan, 25 M. 519; 11 M. L. J. 399. (Followed)	419
Ramanadan v. Rangammal, 12 M. 260; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 531 (F. B.). (Followed)	132
Ramanathan Chettyar v. Subramania Sastrial, 26 M. 179. (Relied on)	169
Ramaswami Ohettiar v. Mallappa Reddiar, 59 Ind. Cas. 947; 43 M. 760 at pp. 776, 777; (1920) M. W. N. 572; 39 M. L. J. 350; 28 M. L. T. 170; 12 L. W. 475 (F. B.). (Referred to)	897
Ramchand Gurdasmal v. Gobindram Gurdasmal, 53 Ind. Cas. 337; 13 S. L. R. 75 at p. 90. (Relied upon)	440
Ramditta v. Maru, 93 Ind. Cas. 851; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 534; 27 P. L. R. 180. (Referred to)	486
Ramesh Chandra Dhar v. Karunamoyi Dutt, 33 O. 498. (Relied on)	532
Ramgowda Annagowda Patil v. Bhansaheb, 105 Ind. Cas. 708; 4 O. W. N. 876; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 227; 53 M. L. J. 350; 46 O. L. J. 267; 39 M. L. T. 250; (1927) M. W. N. 736; 29 Bom. L. R. 1380; 32 O. W. N. 88 (P. C.). (Referred to)	180
Ramireddi Venkata Appa Rao v. Lakoojee China Ayyanna, 30 M. 209; 17 M. L. J. 194. (Relied on)	653
Ramzan Ali Khan v. Asghari Begam, 6 Ind. Cas. 405; 32 A. 563 at p. 566; 7 A. L. J. 14. (Relied upon)	581
Ranga Rao v. Rajagopala Raju, 22 M. 378; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 272. (Distinguished)	477
Rangasami v. Muthusami, 11 M. 144; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 100. (Followed)	668
Rangnath Sakharam v. Govind Narasiva, 28 B. 639; 6 Bom. L. R. 592. (Referred to)	897
Ranjit Singh v. Naubat, 24 A. 504; A. W. N. (1902) 166. (Followed)	42
Rannun v. Emperor, 94 Ind. Cas. 901; 7 Lah. 84; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 88; 27 Cr. L. J. 709; 27 P. L. R. 583. (Followed)	482
Rao Adya Saran Singh v. Jagannath, 78 Ind. Cas. 391; 22 A. L. J. 235; 46 A. 323; A. I. R. 1924 All. 561; L. R. 5 A. 49 Rev. (Referred to)	677
Ravjinarayan Mandlik v. Dadaji Bapuji Desai, 1 B. 523 at p. 529; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 345. (Referred to)	899
Read v. Brown, (1889) 22 Q. B. D. 128; 58 L. J. Q. B. 120; 60 L. T. 250; 37 W. R. 131. (Relied upon)	218

R—concl.

	Page.
Reed, Ex parte , Reed, In re , (1886) 17 Q. B. D. 244; 55 L. J. Q. B. 244; 34 W. R. 493; 3 Morrel 90. (Relied upon)	433
Reg. v. Ramchandra, Rat. Un. Cr. C. 1. (Relied on)	56
Robert Watson & Co. v. Collector of Zillah Rajshahye, 13 M. I. A. 160; 12 W. R. P. C. 43; 3 B. L. R. P. C. 48; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 269; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 500; 20 B. R. 511 (P. C.). (Referred to)	887
Robins v. National Trust Co., (1927) A. O. 515 at p. 520; 96 L. J. P. C. 84; 43 T. L. R. 243; W. N. (Eng.) 1927 P. 59. (Referred to)	233
Roghoonath Misser v. Gobindnarain, 22 O. 451; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 301. (Relied upon)	218
Rupa v. Sardar Mirza, 55 Ind. Cas. 420; 1 Lah. 376; 88 P. W. R. 1920. (Distinguished and dissented from)	890
S
Sabitri Thakurain v. Savi, 105 Ind. Cas. 271; 6 Pat. 108; A. I. R. 1927 Pat. 354. (Referred to)	313
Sahadeo Rai v. Emperor, 46 Ind. Cas. 522; 16 A. L. J. 453; 19 Or. L. J. 746; 40 A. 577. (Commented upon)	563
Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 44 I. A. 126; 21 O. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 O. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213 (P. C.). (Referred to)	693
Salaman v. Warner, (1891) 1 Q. B. D. 734; 60 L. J. Q. B. 624; 39 W. R. 547. (Referred to)	313
Salemma v. Lutchmana Reddi, 21 M. 100; 8 M. L. J. 14; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 427. (Followed)	198
Sandhu Valaji v. Bhikchand Surajmal, 75 Ind. Cas. 118; 47 B. 621; 25 Bom. L. R. 381; A. I. R. 1923 Bom. 473. (Followed)	905
Sarat Chandra Chakrabati v. Forman, 12 A. 213; A. W. N. (1890) 80; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 885. (Followed)	759
Sarat Krishna Bose v. Bisweswar Mitra, 103 Ind. Cas. 69; 31 O. W. N. 576; 54 O. 405; A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 534. (Applied)	729
Sarban v. Phudo Sahu, 69 Ind. Cas. 947; (1922) Pat. 305; 4 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 105; 4 P. L. T. 81; A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 65; 2 Pat. 110. (Followed)	542
Sardar Khan v. Aisha Bibi, 88 Ind. Cas. 72; 6 Lah. 105; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 290 (F. B.). (Followed)	620
Saroda Sundari Dassi v. Kristo Jiban Pal, 5 O. W. N. 300. (Relied on)	497
Sarup Narain v. Madho Singh, 30 Ind. Cas. 253; 2 O. L. J. 399; 18 O. C. 131. (Not followed)	110
Sarwan Pande v. Jagat Pande, 103 Ind. Cas. 315; 25 A. L. J. 741. (Applied)	756
Sathappa Chetti v. Subramanian Chetty, 101 Ind. Cas. 17; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 70; 4 O. W. N. 491; 31 O. W. N. 857; (1927) M. W. N. 500; 25 A. L. J. 687; 53 M. L. J. 245; 26 L. W. 265; 39 M. L. T. 232 (P. C.). (Distinguished)	673
Satish Chandra Chakrabarti v. Ram Dayal De, 59 Ind. Cas. 143; 48 O. 388; 32 O. L. J. 94; 14 O. W. N. 982; 22 Or. L. J. 31. (Referred to)	561

S—contd.

	Page.
Satraji Dongerchand Firm v. Mahdo Singh, 103 Ind. Cas. 339; 50 M. 711 at p. 717; 25 L. W. 640; 52 M. L. J. 622; (1927) M. W. N. 374; 38 M. L. T. 299; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 601. (Relied on)	899
Sawanmal Pinanmal v. Pinanmal Danmal, 2 S. L. R. 13. (Referred to)	221
Scott v. Avery, (1856) 5 H. L. O. 811; 25 L. J. Ex. 303; 2 Jur. (N. s.) 815; 4 W. R. 746; 10 E. R. 1121; 101 R. R. 932. (Referred to)	435
Secretary, Board of Revenue, Income Tax, Madras v. Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund, Ltd, 76 Ind. Cas. 833; 47 M. 1; (1923) M. W. N. 409; A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 684; 20 L. W. 27. (Distinguished)	291
Secretary of State for India v. Ghulam Mahabob Khan Sahib, 51 Ind. Cas. 366; 42 M. 673; 9 L. W. 587; 37 M. L. J. 71; (1919) M. W. N. 736. (Distinguished)	785
— v. Luchmeswar Singh, 16 I. A. 6; 16 C. 223; 13 Ind. Jur. 10; 5 Sar. P. O. J. 275; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 147 (P. C.). (Followed)	81
— v. Perumal Pillai, 24 M. 279; 11 M. L. J. 117. (Distinguished)	360
Separjan v. Ramdeb Rai, 55 Ind. Cas. 360; 24 C. W. N. 117. (Followed)	735
Sevak Jeranchod Bhogilal v. Dakore Temple Committee, 87 Ind. Cas. 313; 49 M. L. J. 25; 23 A. L. J. 555; A. I. R. 1925 P. O. 155; L. R. 6 A. (P. O.) 117; (1925) M. W. N. 474; 2 O. W. N. 535; 41 C. L. J. 628; 22 L. W. 246; 27 Bom. L. R. 872; 30 C. W. N. 459 (P. O.). (Explained)	136
Sewa Singh v. Bholi, 36 Ind. Cas. 382; 129 P. R. 1916; 83 P. L. R. 1917. (Referred to)	487
Sham Sundar Lal v. Achhan Kunwar, 21 A. 71; 25 I. A. 183; 2 C. W. N. 729; 7 Sar. P. O. J. 417; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 755 (P. C.). (Referred to)	897
Shamlal v. Parshotam Das, 58 Ind. Cas. 585; 42 A. 277; 18 A. L. J. 241; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 104. (Relied on)	756
Shankar Bharati v. Narasimha Bharati, 69 Ind. Cas. 80; 47 B. 106; 24 Bom. L. R. 925; A. I. R. 1922 Bom. 383. (Followed)	313
Shankarlal Tapidas v. Secretary of State, for India, 51 Ind. Cas. 910; 43 B. 583; 21 Bom. L. R. 668. (Distinguished)	785
Shanti Sarup v. Lal Ohand, 103 Ind. Cas. 444; 28 P. L. R. 388; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 530; 9 Lah. L. J. 319. (Followed)	605
Sheo Prasad Singh v. Premma Kuar, 43 Ind. Cas. 522; 40 A. 122; 15 A. L. J. 920. (Referred to)	488
Sheo Ramji v. Sri Ridhnath Mahadeoji, 71 Ind. Cas. 480; 45 A. 319; 21 A. L. J. 148; A. I. R. 1923 All. 160. (Followed)	663
Sheonath Rai v. Ali Hussain, 1 A. L. J. 118. (Commented upon)	584
Sheoshankar v. Khupchand, 83 Ind. Cas. 320; A. I. R. 1925 Nag. 233. (Referred to)	606
Shivputrappa Parappa v. Shivrudappa Kalappa Huli, 96 Ind. Cas. 432; 28 Bom. L. R. 708; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 387. (Followed)	481
Shubbrook v. Tufnell, (1882) 9 Q. B. D. 621; 16 L. T. 749; 30 W. R. 740. (Referred to)	313
Shyama Charan Pramanik v. Prohad Durwan, 8 C. W. N. 390. (Relied on)	545

S—contd.

	Page.
Sicklemore v. Thistleton, (1817) 6 M. & S. 9 at p. 12; 105 E. R. 1146; 18 R. R. 280. (Relied on)	1
Siddessury Dasse v. Janardan Sarkar, 29 C. 557; 6 C. W. N. 530. (Relied on)	552
Sidlingappa v. Harisa, 31 B. 405; 9 Bom. L. R. 542. (Not followed)	110
Simmonds v. Elliott, (1917) 2 K. B. 894; 87 L. J. K. B. 42; 15 L. G. R. 816. (Distinguished)	593
Sit Saing v. Maung Po Kaing, 1 L. B. R. 121. (Relied on)	169
Sita Ram v. Gobindi, 80 Ind. Cas. 592; 46 A. 458; 22 A. L. J. 585; A. I. R. 1924 All. 593. (Followed)	152
Sita Ram v. Janki Ram, 65 Ind. Cas. 813; 44 A. 266; 20 A. L. J. 105; A. I. R. 1922 All. 200. (Followed)	274
Sitalakshmi Achi v. Ohokkalinga Pillai, 38 Ind. Cas. 806; 40 M. 780; 5 L. W. 267. (Followed)	491
Sivarama Mudaliar v. Muthunnaiengar, 102 Ind. Cas. 502; 26 L. W. 13; 52 M. L. J. 561; 38 M. L. T. 320; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 612; 28 Or. L. J. 566; 8 A. I. Cr. R. 215; 50 M. 913; (1927) M. W. N. 925. (Followed)	42
Sivasubra Mania Pillai v. Theethiappa Pillai, 75 Ind. Cas. 572; 45 M. L. J. 166; 18 L. W. 636; (1923) M. W. N. 895; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 163; 47 M. 120. (Relied upon)	439
Sivathal Periyava Nadar v. Nana, Ohuna, Velmuruga Nadar, 64 Ind. Cas. 618; 30 M. L. T. 47. (Followed)	789
Smith v. L. & S. W. Ry., (1871) 6 O. P. 14 at p. 21; 40 L. J. O. P. 21; 23 L. T. 678; 19 W. R. 230. (Relied on)	479
Smith & Service and Nelson & Sons, In re , (1890) 25 Q. B. D. 545. (Distinguished)	434
Sobramonian Chetty v. Maung Po Tha, 11 Ind. Cas. 851; 4 Bur. L. T. 183. (Relied upon)	218
Solomon v. Attenborough, (1912) 1 Ch. 451; 81 L. J. Ch. 242; 106 L. T. 87; 56 S. J. 270; 28 T. L. R. 225. (Applied)	747
Somasundaram Chettiar v. Vaithilinga Mudaliar, 41 Ind. Cas. 546; 40 M. 846; 6 L. W. 253. (Dissented from)	726
Somchand Bhikhabhai v. Ohhagan Lal Khubchand, 10 Ind. Cas. 803; 35 B. 243; 13 Bom. L. R. 207. (Distinguished)	130
Sonba v. Ganesha, 17 Ind. Cas. 887; 8 N. L. R. 182. (Followed)	903
Sourendra Nath Mitter v. Tarubala Dassi, 89 Ind. Cas. 94; 29 C. W. N. 832; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 857. (Referred to)	313
South Indian Export Co., Ltd. v. Condiah Chetty, 29 Ind. Cas. 712. (Distinguished)	440
Sreenivasa Aiyangar v. Kuppaswami Aiyangar, 64 Ind. Cas. 698; 44 M. 801; 14 L. W. 78; (1921) M. W. N. 630. (Followed)	781
Sri Gobind Prasad v. Lalhari Kuer, 2 Ind. Cas. 402; 14 C. W. N. 118. (Followed)	420
Sri Krishn Das v. Nathu Ram, 100 Ind. Cas. 130; 54 I. A. 79; 25 A. L. J. 80; A. I. R. 1927 P. O. 37; (1927) M. W. N. 89; 38 M. L. T. 48; 4 O. W. N. 184; 8 P. L. T. 210; 31 C. W. N. 462; 49 A. L. J. 720; 26 L. W. 856 (P. O.). (Followed)	4, 555
Sri Maharani Beni Pershad Koeri v. Ramadhin Pandey, 10 C. W. N. 216. (Relied on)	81
Stead v. Salt, (1825) 3 Bing. 101; 130 E. R. 452; 10 Moore 389; 3 L. J. (O. s.) C. P. 175; 28 R. R. 602. (Relied on)	703

S—conold.

Page.

- Stirling v. John, (1923) 1 K. B. 557; 92 L. J. K. B. 353; 128 L. T. 560; 67 S. J. 168; 39 T. L. R. 123. (Relied upon) ... 213
- Subbayya v. Samindayyar, 18 M. 496; 5 M. L. J. 63; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 696. (Referred to) ... 726
- Subramania Iyer v. Hitchcock, 85 Ind. Cas. 900; 22 L. W. 26; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 950. (Distinguished) ... 637
- Sukalal v. Bapu Sakharan, 24 B. 305; 2 Bom. L. R. 18; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 738. (Referred to) ... 205
- Sumirta Kuer v. Damri Lall, 62 Ind. Cas. 61; 2 P. L. T. 336. (Dissented from) ... 494
- Sundar v. Habib Chik, 60 Ind. Cas. 81; 42 A. 626 at p. 631; 18 A. L. J. 838; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 285. (Followed) ... 596
- Sundar Lal v. Upendra Nath Seal, 35 Ind. Cas. 15; 1 P. L. J. 193. (Followed) ... 596
- Sunderbai v. Collector of Belgaum, 52 Ind. Cas. 897; 43 B. 376; (1919) M. W. N. 254; 23 O. W. N. 753; 21 Bom. L. R. 1148; 46 I. A. 15 (P. C.). (Referred to) ... 330
- Sundram Chetty v. Damodaram Chetty, 84 Ind. Cas. 146; (1924) M. W. N. 529; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 850. (Followed) ... 510
- Suradhani Debya v. Chandra Nath Pramanik, 37 Ind. Cas. 131; 20 O. W. N. 1011. (Followed) ... 469
- Surajmani v. Rabi Nath Ojha, 35 I. A. 17; 12 O. W. N. 231; 5 A. L. J. 67; 18 M. L. J. 7; 10 Bom. L. R. 59; 7 O. L. J. 131; 3 M. L. T. 144; 30 A. 84 (P. C.). (Referred to) ... 866
- Surat Lal Chowdhery v. Murlidhar, 46 Ind. Cas. 921; 4 P. L. J. 362. (Followed) ... 310
- Surendra Narain Singh v. Gopi Sundari Dasi, 32 O. 1031; 9 O. W. N. 824. (Relied on) ... 357
- Swaminatha Odayar v. Subramania Iyer, 100 Ind. Cas. 10; 51 M. L. J. 856; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 219; 25 L. W. 411; 50 M. 548. (Referred to) ... 302

T

- Taduri Ramachandra Jagannatha Rao v. Vadrevu Visvesan, 80 Ind. Cas. 228; 47 M. 621; 46 M. L. J. 590; 19 L. W. 691; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 682. (Referred to) ... 884
- Tajbi Abalal v. Mowla Khan-Alikhan, 39 Ind. Cas. 603; 41 B. 485; 19 Bom. L. R. 300. (Referred to) ... 882
- Tarabai Ramrao Patankar v. Dattaram Govindbhai Gujar, 87 Ind. Cas. 765; 49 B. 539; 27 Bom. L. R. 441; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 465. (Distinguished) ... 612
- Taylor v. Taylor, (1876) 1 Ch. D. 426 at p. 431. (Referred to) ... 596
- Tepu Muhammad v. Tefayit Muhammad, 29 Ind. Cas. 216; 19 O. W. N. 772. (Referred to) ... 386
- Thakur Sao v. Abdul Aziz, 91 Ind. Cas. 41; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 170; 4 Pat. 783; 27 Or. L. J. 9; 7 P. L. T. 136. (Followed) ... 485
- Thakur Sheodat Singh v. Thakur Bishunath Singh, 6 O. C. 255. (Referred to) ... 320
- Thakurdeen v. Dubay, 55 Ind. Cas. 250; 12 Bur. L. T. 218. (Followed) ... 608
- Thakurmani Singh v. Dai Rani Koeri, 33 O. 1079. (Referred to) ... 690
- Thomas v. Evans & Co., Jones v. South West Lancashire Coal Owners' Association, Ltd., (1927) 1 K. B. 33. (Distinguished) ... 291

T—conold.

Page.

- Tiloke Chand Surana v. Beattie & Co., 94 Ind. Cas. 538; 29 O. W. N. 953; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 201. (Relied upon) ... 209
- Tripura Charan Kul v. Shoroshi Bala, 22 Ind. Cas. 773. (Followed) ... 596
- Trustees of the firm of Motharam Dowlatram v. Pahlajrai Gopaldas, 80 Ind. Cas. 141; A. I. R. 1925 Sind 159. (Referred to) ... 221
- Tuljaram Row v. Alagappa Chettiar, 8 Ind. Cas. 340; 35 M. 1; (1910) M. W. N. 697; 8 M. L. T. 453; 21 M. L. J. 1. (Applied) ... 639
- Turner v. Smith, (1901) 1 Oh. 213; 70 L. J. Ch. 144; 83 L. T. 704; 49 W. R. 186; 17 T. L. R. 143. (Relied on) ... 808

U

- Umanath Bakhsh v. Ram Bakhsh Singh, 94 Ind. Cas. 343; 13 O. L. J. 229; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 428; 1 Luck. 202. (Referred to) ... 872
- Umrithnath Chowdhry v. Goureenath Chowdhry, 13 M. I. A. 542 at p. 549; 15 W. R. P. O. 10; 6 B. L. R. 232; 2 Suth P. C. J. 381; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 618; 20 E. R. 653. (Relied on) ... 7
- Uttam Chand v. Ganesha Mal, 3 Lah. L. J. 572. (Followed) ... 596
- Uzmat-un-Nissa v. Ganesh Parsad, 83 Ind. Cas. 51; 1 O. W. N. 515; 10 O. & A. L. R. 1305; 11 O. L. J. 750; L. R. 6 A. (O.) 6; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 262; 28 O. C. 119. (Distinguished) ... 181

V

- Vachhani Keshabhai v. Vachhani Nanbha Bavaji, 1 Ind. Cas. 108; 33 B. 307; 11 Bom. L. R. 30; 5 M. L. T. 230. (Referred to) ... 609
- Vadilal Lullubhai v. Shah Khushal Dalpatram, 27 B. 157; 4 Bom. L. R. 968. (Referred to) ... 221
- Vaithilinga Odayar v. Ayyathorai Odayar, 37 Ind. Cas. 753; 40 M. 1118. (Followed) ... 890
- Vallun Appalasuri v. Sasapu Kannamma Nayurahu, 90 Ind. Cas. 881; 49 M. L. J. 479; A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 6; 22 L. W. 287; (1925) M. W. N. 622. (Dissented from) ... 699
- Varada Pillai v. Jeevarathnammal, 53 Ind. Cas. 901; 46 I. A. 285; (1919) M. W. N. 724; 10 L. W. 679; 24 O. W. N. 346; 38 M. L. J. 313; 18 A. L. J. 274; 43 M. 244; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 64; 22 Bom. L. R. 444 (P. C.). (Referred to) ... 866
- Velayudha Mudali, In re, 62 Ind. Cas. 183; 43 M. 438; 11 L. W. 413; 39 M. L. J. 85; 27 M. L. T. 211; 22 Or. L. J. 487. (Distinguished) ... 428
- Vellaiyappa Chetty v. Natarajan, 100 Ind. Cas. 655; 50 M. 340; 52 M. L. J. 229; 25 L. W. 493; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 386. (Followed) ... 419
- Vencataramaniam v. Venkatachinulu, 3 Ind. Cas. 444; 33 M. 80; 6 M. L. T. 242 & 294. (Followed) ... 603
- Venkata Row v. Tuljaram Row, 74 Ind. Cas. 765; 45 M. 298; 20 A. L. J. 833; 26 O. W. N. 646; 30 M. L. T. 272; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 33; A. I. R. (1922) P. C. 69; (1922) M. W. N. 392; 43 M. L. J. 298; 24 Bom. L. R. 1191; 36 O. L. J. 319; 49 I. A. 91 (P. C.). (Followed) ... 431
- Venkata Seetharamayya v. Veena Tulasi Babu, 83 Ind. Cas. 548; 46 M. L. J. 463; (1924) M. W. N. 355; 34 M. L. T. 224; 19 L. W. 649; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 602. (Followed) ... 500

W-concl'd.

	Page.
Whitwham v. Westminster Brymbo Coal & Coke Co., (1896) 2 Ch. D. 538; 65 L. J. Ch. 741; 74 L. T. 804; 44 W. R. 698. (Distinquished)	175
Wiru Ram v. Amar Chand, 94 Ind. Cas. 117; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 344; 8 Lah. L. J. 170; 27 P. L. R. 710. (Followed)	395
Wood v. Riley, (1868) 3 C. P. 26; 37 L. J. O. P. 24; 17 L. T. 216; 16 W. R. 146. (Followed)	596
Wood v. Riley, (1868) 3 C. P. 26; 37 L. J. O. P. 24; 17 L. T. 216; 16 W. R. 146. (Referred to)	596

Y

Young v. Bankier Distillery Co., (1893) A. C. 691; 69 L. T. 838; 58 J. P. 100. (Followed) ...	203
Young v. Leamington Corporation, (1883) 8 A. C. 517; 52 L. J. Q. B. 713; 49 L. T. 1; 31 W. R. 925; 47 J. P. 660. (Relied on) ...	369
Yusaf v. Naza, 16 Ind. Cas. 995; 11 P. R. 1913; 17 P. L. R. 1913; 278 P. W. R. 1913. (Followed) ...	596
Yusif Ali Mamoonji v. Alibhoy, 87 Ind. Cas. 646; 255 P. L. R. 1925; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 567. (Referred to) ...	606

Z

Ziada v. Jowai, 34 Ind. Gas. 538; 46 P. R. 1916; 134 P. W. R. 1916; 148 P. L. R. 1916. (Refer- red to) .. 607

INDIAN CASES.

1928.

VOLUME 107.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE MADRAS HIGH COURT.
November 29, 1927.

Present:—Viscount Sumner, Lord
Atkinson, Lord Sinha, Sir John Wallis and Sir Lancelot Sanderson.

P. C. MUTHU CHETTIAR

—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

K. V. MEENAKSHISUNDARAM AYYAR
AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS.

Construction of document—Cardinal principle—Documents must be read as a whole—Compound interest—Interpretation of words "interest on interest" in mortgage-deed.

It is one of the cardinal principles of construction of written documents that they must be construed as a whole; each provision they contain must receive attention; and from their several provisions the true intention of the parties to them is to be ascertained. [p. 4, col. 1.]

Observations of Lord Ellenborough in Barton v. Fitzgerald (1) and in Sicklemore v. Thistleton (2) and of Lord Halsbury in Elderslie Steamship Co., Ltd. v. Borthwick (4) relied on.

The phrase 'he shall pay interest on interest' occurring in a mortgage-deed is ambiguous; and does not necessarily connote a liability to pay compound interest. These words may fairly enough refer to interest to be borne by a sum in arrear, if that sum was payable as interest. [p. 4, col. 2.]

Appeal from a judgment and decree of the High Court, Madras (Ramesam and Jackson, JJ.), dated the 18th January, 1924, allowing an appeal from the judgment of the Subordinate Judge, Dindigul, dated the 30th October, 1920, and made in Original Suit No. 77 of 1919.

FACTS.—The said suit was brought by the assignee of a mortgage, dated the 28th January, 1911, for a mortgage-deed for Rs. 21,532-8-6. During the pendency of the suit defendants paid into Court

Rs. 12,500. The Subordinate Judge made a decree for a further sum of Rs. 12,301-9-6 but, on appeal, the High Court held that by the said payment into Court the mortgage was discharged, and made a decree accordingly dismissing the suit.

Against the last-mentioned decree the plaintiff preferred this appeal to His Majesty in Council, and the question thereon was as to the rate of interest due under the mortgage. The plaintiff-appellant's contention was that compound interest on the mortgage amount was chargeable at 12 per cent. with monthly rests from June, 1912. The High Court negatived this contention as being inconsistent with the terms of the mortgage as duly construed. In their judgment the learned Judges said:—"The only point for consideration in this appeal is the construction of Ex. 'A', the deed of mortgage sued upon", and they expressed their conclusion as follows:—

"We think the proper construction of the clause is when each amount of monthly interest became overdue, it should carry interest at 12 per cent. up to payment there being no further rests. It is conceded by the parties that the amount tendered, viz., Rs. 12,500 was enough to cover the sum due up to the date of tender and the plaintiff is not entitled to any further sum."

Mr. De Gruyther, K. C. (with him Mr. Narasimham), for the Appellant.—It is a question of construction. We are entitled to charge interest on interest. Whether you call it compound interest, or interest on interest, we are entitled to the interest we claimed.

[LORD ATKINSON.—That is compound interest: adding interest on interest.]

[SIR JOHN WALLIS.—You are not to have monthly rests. The Subordinate Judge in his judgment puts the plaintiff's contentions very clearly.]

Mr. De Gruyther, cited s. 83, Transfer of Property Act, as regards payment into Court.

If you look at the accounts, all we have actually done is to charge interest on arrears of interest due.

[LORD SINHA.—Are you entitled to charge compound interest?]

[LORD ATKINSON.—Interest on interest means interest on arrears. That is the right way to look at it.]

[LORD SINHA.—If you claim monthly rests, that has to be specifically provided for in the deed.]

[LORD ATKINSON.—You must expressly indicate and provide for rests.]

[LORD SINHA.—Take an ordinary English contract. Unless you provide for rests, you cannot charge compound interest.]

[LORD ATKINSON.—Compound interest, with monthly rests, amounts to a fabulous sum.]

[LORD SINHA.—I doubt if in the case of an English deed you could charge interest with monthly rests unless it was so provided for in the deed itself.]

Mr. De Gruyther referred to Tamil Dictionaries as to the meaning of the vernacular words in dispute.

Mr. K. Brown, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Atkinson.—This is an appeal against a decree of the High Court of Judicature at Madras, dated the 18th January, 1924, allowing an appeal from the judgment of the Subordinate Judge of Dindigul, dated the 30th October, 1920. The suit was brought by the assignee of a mortgage dated the 28th January, 1911, for a mortgage-decree of Rs. 21,532-8-6. During the pendency of the suit the defendants paid into Court Rs. 12,500. The Subordinate Judge made a decree for a further sum of Rs. 12,301-9-6, but on appeal the High Court held that by the payment into Court the mortgage was discharged, and made a decree accordingly dismissing the suit. Against the last-mentioned decree the plaintiff (hereinafter referred to as the appellant) has preferred this appeal, and the question in it is the rate of interest due under the mortgage.

It is essential to examine closely the provisions of the two instruments upon which the appellant's title, to relief purports to be based. The first of these is a hypothecation bond dated the 28th January, 1911, by which Subramania Ayyar (the father of the respondents) purchased a house therein described for the sum of Rs. 20,000 from one Padmanabha Nayudu, of which sum it was by the said bond provided that the sum of Rs. 10,000 should remain outstanding on mortgage of the properties so purchased. On the 27th July, 1912, the purchaser, Padmanabha Nayudu, by written instrument, assigned his afore-said mortgage to the present appellant. It is stated in this instrument and apparently not disputed that the mortgagor had, on the 9th April, 1912, paid in part discharge of the mortgage-debt a sum of Rs. 1,000, and that the interest which had accrued on the mortgage debt up to the end of May, 1912, had been duly paid by or on behalf of the mortgagor. On the 11th February, 1917, a sum of Rs. 12,500 was tendered to the mortgagee in discharge of the mortgage. It is not disputed now that this sum was, upon the construction of the mortgage-deed adopted by the High Court, sufficient to discharge the mortgage-debt due up to that date, but the appellant refused to receive it, stating that it was insufficient. On the 21st August, 1919, the appellant instituted a suit against the mortgagor and his son, alleging, amongst other things, that, according to the terms of the deed of assignment and according to law, the first defendant was bound to pay the interest accruing on the mortgage-debt at the rate of 8-annas per month, and that on default in paying this interest the defendant was bound to pay the entire balance of the mortgage-debt due at the date of this default with compound interest thereon at the rate of Re. 1 per cent. per mensem from the date of default up to the date of payment, which liability, up to the date of the plaint, was, he alleged, found to be Rs. 21,532-8-6. In respect of this debt he prayed for the usual decree for this amount with subsequent interest thereon and costs.

On the 28th November, 1919, the said defendant filed a statement of defence in which he alleged, inter alia, that the plaintiff's construction of the clause in the deed of assignment providing that on default of payment of interest due at any time the appellant was entitled to compound interest at 1 per cent. with monthly rests, was preposterous and penal, that the tender made by him was adequate and proper, that the plaintiff was not entitled to further interest after the date of the tender, and that he, the respondent, was prepared to pay the sum of Rs. 12,500 if the plaintiff would accept it in full discharge of his claim. On the 30th October, 1920, the learned Subordinate Judge of Dindigul delivered judgment in the case, holding that on the proper construction of the vernacular words used in the document (i. e., the deed of transfer), it was clear that compound interest at 12 per cent. was agreed upon, that the rate of interest, payable under the suit-bond in default of payment of interest every month, was 12 per cent. compound interest. He also held that there was an attempt to tender some amount on the 11th February, 1917, but that Rs. 12,500 was not actually before the plaintiff, and that the tender was neither legal nor valid, and he accordingly allowed the plaintiff's claim. A formal decree was drawn up for the amount claimed by the plaintiff with further interest and costs less the sum of Rs. 12,500 paid into Court by the first defendant, and on the 4th July, 1920, drawn out by him. Their Lordships, for reasons to be presently stated, are quite unable to take the same view as the learned Subordinate Judge took as to the proper construction of this suit-deed, as it is styled—this deed of assignment.

The learned Judges in the High Court, fortunately, their Lordships think, took an entirely different view from that of the learned Subordinate Judge. They held that the proper construction of the clause in the suit-bond, on which the question in controversy was treated as turning, was to this effect, that when each amount of monthly interest became overdue it should carry interest at 12 per cent. up to payment, there being no further rests; that it was conceded by the parties that the amount tendered, Rs. 12,500, was enough to cover the sum due at the date of tender, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to any further sums; that it was admitted before them that the sum of Rs. 12,500 deposited in Court had been drawn out by the plaintiff. They accordingly set aside the decree of the Court below and held that the plaintiff was not entitled to any further decree. Their Lordships think that the conclusion at which the learned Judges of the High Courts arrived was sound and right, but on the question of the proper mode of construing the suit-bond there are some important considerations which were not fully dealt with by either Court.

When default is once made on the occasion of the first rest, the debtor thenceforth pays interest not merely on the original debt he owed, but upon a composite debt including the original debt plus the added interest. Now in the present case the loan of Rs. 10,000 is made for three years with interest at 8 annas percent. per mensem. This interest is to be paid before the 10th of every month, and a receipt obtained, but if default should be made in payment in this manner, or in getting a receipt, the rate of interest is doubled. But on what is it to be paid? If it be as compound interest the interest in arrear has sunk into the principal, and the 12 per cent. must be paid on this composite sum. If, on the contrary, interest is only to be paid on the interest in arrear and there is no such sinking, then the rate of interest on the original debt remains unchanged at 8 annas per cent. and is not doubled. Moreover, if the unpaid interest sinks into the principal debt, the debtor loses all right to have it separated again from that debt and dealt with independently. He must, therefore, pay interest on the composite sum at double the rate reserved upon the principal sum for the whole three years. From the date of default 8 annas per cent. per mensem could no longer be paid on anything.

It is scarcely possible, their Lordships think, to conceive that men of ordinary intelligence could put themselves in such a hopeless position, and a construction of the document which brings out these results must, they think, be erroneous.

Again, it appears to their Lordships that the Subordinate Judge allowed his mind to be concentrated too much on the words "pay interest on interest" used in the sentence, "If he fails to pay in that manner he shall pay 'interest on interest' at the rate of 1 per cent." These words fairly enough refer to interest to be borne by a sum in arrear, if that sum was payable as interest.

But it has been long ago, and many times, decided that written documents must be construed as a whole; that each provision they contain must receive attention and from their several provisions the true intention of the parties to them is to be ascertained.

In Barton v. Fitzgerald (1) Lord Ellenborough said :—

"It is a true rule of construction that the sense and meaning of the parties in any particular part of an instrument may be collected ex ante cedentibus et consequentibus: every part of it may be brought into action in order to collect from the whole one uniform and consistent sense."

Again, in Sicklemore v. Thistleton (2) Lord Ellenborough again said :—

"According to the authority of Browning v. Wright (3) covenants ought to be construed with due regard to the intention of the parties as it is to be collected from the whole context of the instrument, so as to make one entire and consistent construction of the whole."

In the case of Elderslie Steamship Co., Ltd. v. Borthwick (4) Lord Halsbury said :—

"My Lords, I do not think it necessary to quote any authority in this case. Construing this instrument (i. e., the Bill of Lading) and applying to it the ordinary canons of construction, I must move your Lordships that this appeal be dismissed. It seems to me that if what has been called the large print had stood alone I should not have had the smallest doubt that it would have carried the shipowner the whole way. I can give no other construction to it than that which the words express; but the difficulty in his way is that he has thought proper to execute an instrument which has two different sets of phrases in it, and one rule of construction which must prevail is that you must give effect to every part of a document if you can—you must read it as a whole. Mr.

Carver has ingeniously spoken of independent contracts and independent paragraphs and so on, but we must remember that this is one contract, and each of the parts of this contract must be read so as to give effect to the whole if it can."

Applying these principles of construction to the present case, their Lordships do not think that such dominating force and meaning can be given to the ambiguous phrase "interest on interest" as would lead to results, which clash with the plain and clear objects and meaning of the natural and unambiguous provisions of the document.

Their Lordships will, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that the appeal must be dismissed. The appellant must pay the costs.

K. J. R.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Douglas, Grant and Dold.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. Chapman, Walker and Shephard.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

July 28, 1927.

Present:—Lord Shaw, Lord Sinha and Sir John Wallis.

GAURI SHANKAR AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

JIWAN SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Sale for family necessity—Part of consideration not applied for purposes of necessity—Sale, whether liable to be set aside.

A sale of joint family property will not be set aside merely because a part of the proceeds is not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity. The real question that has to be considered is whether the sale itself was justified by necessity. If the purchaser has acted honestly if the existence of a family necessity for the sale is made out, and the price is not unreasonably low, he (the purchaser) is not bound to account for the application of the price. [p. 7, cols. 1 & 2.]

The practice under which, although it be completely established that by far the most substantial part of the consideration was for family necessity, yet if a certain balance of the price remains unaccounted for, or insufficiently proved, then by that result the parties' interests are judged; and the sale is set aside, conditionally upon the re-payment by the vendor or his

(1) (1812) 15 East 530; 104 E. R. 944; 13 E. R. 519.

(2) (1817) 6 M. & S. 9 at p. 12; 105 E. R. 1146; 18 E. R. 280.

(3) (1799) 2 Bos. & Pul. 13; 126 E. R. 1128; 5 E. R. 521.

(4) (1905) A. C. 93; 74 L. J. K. B. 338; 53 W. R. 401; 92 L. J. 274; 21 T. L. R. 277; 10 Asp. M. C. 25; 10 Com. Cas. 109.

representatives of the substantial part referred to is erroneous. [p. 6, col. 2]

Sri Krishn Das v. Nathu Ram (1), followed.

Transactions of sale of family property which in their real essence and substance, are sales made for family necessity, will not be narrowly scrutinized, especially when such transactions have stood unchallenged for a considerable length of time and go back beyond the stage at which direct evidence could possibly be expected from the vendees. [p. 7, col. 1.]

Where a sale of family property for the sum of Rs. 4,000 was justified by necessity to the extent of Rs. 3,500 and there was an unaccounted balance of Rs. 500 and the High Court held the sale invalid, subject to the condition of payment to the vendees of the items proved (namely), the said sum of Rs. 3,500:

Held, that the sale could not be set aside. [p. 7, col. 2.]

Appeal from a judgment of the High Court, Allahabad (Lindsay and Kanhaiya Lal, JJ.), dated the 30th March, 1925, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Mainpuri, dated the 19th January, 1922.

FACTS.—On the 26th February, 1910, Lal Singh, father, and Nawab Singh, uncle, of the plaintiff, sold the property in dispute to defendants Nos. 1 to 3 for a consideration of Rs. 4,000. The plaintiff alleged that the property in question was joint ancestral property and that it had been sold without legal necessity, and he brought the present suit on the 11th July, 1921, for possession of the property by cancellation of the sale-deed. The defence substantially was that the sale was for legal necessity. Three items went to make up the consideration of Rs. 4,000 recited in the sale-deed. The first item was one of Rs. 3,135 left with the vendees for payment to a prior mortgagee. The second item of Rs. 65 was recited in the deed to have been paid to the vendors before the date of the execution of the sale-deed, and lastly, a sum of Rs. 800 in cash was said to have been paid to the vendors at the time of registration before the Sub-Registrar. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit, holding on the evidence that the entire consideration money was obtained for family necessity. With reference to the third item of Rs. 800, the Subordinate Judge said:—"It is proved by the Auraiya Treasury (register) called in by the contesting defendants that sums amounting to a total of Rs. 535-2-4 were paid by the vendors into the Treasury about land revenue from the 2nd March, 1910, to 15th August, 1910. The balance out of Rs. 800 has not been very well-accounted for, but in view of the fact that a very large portion of the consideration for the sale in question has been proved to have been required by the vendors for legal necessity and that there is not even an insinuation that either of the vendors had a bad moral character, I have no hesitation in holding that the entire consideration was obtained for family necessity. It is also to be considered that the suit has been brought long after the execution of the sale-deed when it is not easy for the vendees to adduce strong and perfectly satisfactory evidence about each item of the sale consideration. I decide the issue in favour of the defendants-vendees." The plaintiff appealed from the said decree to the High Court. The learned Judges of the High Court stated that the plaintiff's Counsel had to admit that the sum of Rs. 3,135 was left for the discharge of the earlier mortgage and could not be impeached as that sum constituted an antecedent debt which was binding on the plaintiff. They agreed with the Subordinate Judge that the item of Rs. 65 also constituted legal necessity. With reference, however, to the item of Rs. 800, they did not concur in the view taken by the Subordinate Judge. They held that Rs. 257-14-8 out of that sum had been deposited in the Government Treasury on the 2nd of March, 1910, on account of land revenue. As to the other payments by Nawab Singh (vendor) into the Auraiya Treasury in July and August, 1910, on account of land revenue, the learned Judges were inclined to think that they were deposited on account of the rabi instalment and disallowed these items apparently on the ground that the sale-deed recited that the executants had to pay the revenue for kharif. They further held with reference to the balance of this item that it was the duty of the vendees or one of them at least to have entered into the witness-box and deposed as to his knowledge of the objects for which this money was taken, and that not having done so and the burden of proof being on the vendees they must take the consequences. They, therefore, found that legal necessity and antecedent debt were shown to have existed to the extent of Rs. 3,457-14-8. The learned Judges concluded their judgment as follows:—

"The balance which is unaccounted for is a sum of Rs. 500 odd and is a substantial amount. Following the practice, therefore, of this Court in cases of this kind, we think the proper line to take is to give the plaintiff a conditional decree. We, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the order of the Court below and give the plaintiff a decree declaring that if he pays into Court for payment to the vendees within three months from the date of this decree the sum of Rs. 3,457-14-8, he will be entitled to possession of the property in dispute. If payment is not made within that time his suit will stand dismissed. We do not allow the plaintiff's costs either here or in the Court below, but we direct that if he fails to pay the sum above-mentioned within the period limited the suit shall stand dismissed with costs in all Courts to the defendants-vendees."

The defendants-vendees appealed to His Majesty in Council from the said decree of the High Court.

Mr. Wallach, for the Appellants:—The whole of the consideration money was paid for legal necessity.

Even on the finding of fact of the High Court that out of the sale consideration of Rs. 4,000, Rs. 3,457-14-8 were for an antecedent debt and legal necessity, the plaintiff's suit ought to have been dismissed.

[SIR JOHN WALLIS.—In Sri Krishn Das v. Nathu Ram (1) the Board set aside a most extraordinary doctrine enunciated by the Allahabad High Court.]

[LORD SHAW.—The practice followed by the Allahabad High Court was entirely wrong.]

The principle of Krishn-Das's judgment applies to the present case.

[SIR JOHN WALLIS.—The Board have laid down that a sale will be upheld although the property is worth a little more than the consideration money. The mere fact that necessity is not proved for a small part of the consideration, cannot vitiate the sale. That is the underlying principle in such cases.]

The respondents were not represented at the hearing.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Shaw.—This appeal concerns property which is undoubtedly family property. It was sold for family necessity, so alleged, at the price of Rs. 4,000. There is no allegation made upon the record, or suggested in any respect, that the property was sold for the payment of any debts for immoral purposes. The only question is as to family necessity.

A certain practice appears to have crept up in the Allahabad High Court of investigating and settling these cases upon the principles of accounting. If, upon a strict accounting, it is found that, although it be completely established that by far the most substantial part of the consideration was for family necessity, yet if a certain balance of the price remains unaccounted for, or insufficiently proved, then by that result the parties' interests are to be judged, and the sale is set aside, conditionally upon the re-payment by the vendor or his representatives of the substantial part referred to.

It is manifest that this practice imperils transactions of sale which, in their real essence and substance, are sales made for family necessity.

The present case is interesting as illustrative of the point. It may be that in all cases of family necessity sums have been expended which, after a lapse of years, cannot be verified by entries in books or the like. It is, therefore, important to notice that in the present case the transaction of sale stood unchallenged for upwards of 11 years. The sale took place on the 26th February, 1910, and it was not until the 11th July, 1921, that this sale was put in challenge and the Court was asked to declare it void as not having been for family necessity.

In the course of the investigation, the case as to family necessity with regard to the major portion of the accounts was completely satisfied. Both Courts held that payment was made to extinguish a prior mortgage-bond, and the amount due thereunder was Rs. 3,135. Both Courts further agree in holding that the Rs. 65 was paid to the vendors before the execution of the sale deed.

The Judge who tried the case stated his conclusion upon the largest item thus:—"It is, therefore, clear that the bond of the 17th April, 1906, was executed by Meharban Singh and his sons for family necessity." He also makes the same clear statement with regard to the Rs. 65. As to the third item of Rs. 800, he holds it to be proved by the Auraiya Treasury, and its official who was called in, that sums amounting to a total of Rs. 535 were paid by the vendors into the Treasury before the 15th August, 1910. The small balance of between two and three hundred rupees, the learned Judge says, has not been very well-accounted for; but, in view of the fact that a large portion of the consideration for the sale has been proved to have been required for legal necessity, he has no hesitation in holding that the entire consideration for the sale was such necessity. He adds this pregnant remark: "It is also to be considered that the suit has been brought long after the execution of the sale-deed, when it is not easy for the vendees to adduce strong and perfectly satisfactory evidence about each item of the sale consideration." These views of the Subordinate Judge have the approval of their Lordships.

(1) 100 Ind. Cas. 130; 54 I. A. 79; 25 A. L. J. 80; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 37; (1927) M. W. N. 89; 38 M. L. T. 48; 4 O. W. N. 184; 8 P. L. T. 210; 31 O. W. N. 462; 49 A. 149; 29 Bom. L. R. 825; 45 O. L. J. 386; 52 M. L. J. 720; 26 L. W. 856 (P. C.).

The learned Judges of the High Court, however, in accordance with the practice to which allusion has been made, state that on their estimate of the consideration for sale, they do not reach the conclusion that the entire amount of the Rs. 4,000 is proved to have been justified by necessity. They admit the bond and the item of Rs. 3,135 thereunder. They admit the payment of Rs. 65. They further give credit for the payment of certain Government and other dues exigible upon the property; but they consider that there is an unaccounted balance of Rs. 500. Having reached that amount, the learned Judges of the High Court then pronounce the sale invalid, subject to the condition of payment to the appellants of the items proved.

Their Lordships think this practice to be erroneous. It is to be noted that a judgment which finally summed up the entire law on this subject was pronounced by this Board on the 10th December, 1926, in the case of Sri Krishn Das v. Naihu Ram (1). The judgment of the High Court had been given about twenty months sooner, namely, on the 30th March, 1925. In their Lordships' view, had the Krishn Das judgment been pronounced prior to the judgment of the High Court, that Court would have, in view of it, reached a different conclusion. In that case a considerable body of authority was considered by the Board; and the result was in substance that a sale of joint property will not be set aside merely because a part of the proceeds is not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity. The real question that has to be considered is this: Whether the sale itself was justified by necessity. Their Lordships cannot go back upon that decision. If the purchaser has acted honestly, if the existence of a family necessity for sale is made out, and the price is not unreasonably low, he (the purchaser) is not bound to account for the application of the price. They, however, take the case, even upon the footing, which might well be challenged, that Rs. 500 out of the price of Rs. 4,000 had not been fully accounted for. Granted that it was so, then the balance of Rs. 3,500 out of Rs. 4,000 is surely a justification of sale for a family necessity proved up to that amount.

In those circumstances their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be sustained, the decree of the High Court set aside with costs, and that of the Subordinate Court restored. The first respondent (the plaintiff) will pay the costs of the appeal.

K. J. R.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitor for the Appellants:—Mr. H. S. L. Polak.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE NAGPUR JUDICIAL
COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

November 24, 1927.

Present:—Lord Shaw, Lord Sinha and
Sir John Wallis.

MARTAND RAO—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT

versus

MALHAR RAO—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Impartible estate—Proof of impartibility—Re-grant, effect of—Amgaon zemindari (Central Provinces)—Onus of proof of special custom modifying ordinary law of succession—"Raj"—Value of "opinions" in official reports.

A special custom modifying the ordinary law of succession must be ancient and invariable and must be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence. [p. 9, col. 2.]

Observations of Lord Justice James in Umritnath Chowdhry v. Goureenath Chowdhry (4), relied on.

Where there is a dispute, with respect to an estate being impartible or otherwise, the onus lies on the party who alleges the existence of a custom different from the ordinary law of inheritance according to which custom the estate is to be held by a single member and, as such, not liable to partition. In order to establish that any estate is impartible, it must be proved that it is from its nature impartible and descendible to a single person, or that it is impartible and descendible by virtue of a special custom. [p. 9, col. 2.]

If an impartible estate existed as such from before the advent of British rule, any settlement or re-grant thereof by the British Government must, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, and unless inconsistent with the express terms of the new settlement, be presumed to continue the estate with its previous incidents of impartibility and succession by special custom. [p. 10, col. 1.]

The word 'raj' by itself does not necessarily imply impartibility. [p. 11, col. 2.]

Unless considerable age can be ascribed to any particular zemindari, of whichever class it may be, it cannot claim to be governed by either ancient or invariable custom. [ibid.]

Neither by the terms of the grant, nor by territorial or family custom, any more than by its inherent nature, can the zemindari of Amgaon (in the Central Provinces) be considered an impartible estate subject to the rule of single succession. [p. 13, col. 2; p. 14, col. 1.]

[History of the zemindari tenure in the Central Provinces discussed.]

Although official reports are valuable and in many cases the best evidence of the facts stated therein, opinions therein expressed should not be treated as conclusive in respect of matters requiring judicial determination, however eminent the authors of such reports may be. [p. 9, col. 2.]

Appeal from a judgment of the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court (Batten, J. C., and Hallifax, A. J. C.) in First Civil Appeal No. 45 of 1920 dated the 23rd February, 1923, and reported as 84 Ind. Cas. 658, reversing that of the District Judge, Bhandara, dated the 1st March, 1920.

FACTS.—The material facts are given in their Lordships' judgment, and also in the report of the case in the Court* below.

The main question for determination on the appeal to His Majesty in Council was whether the zemindari of Amgaon was impartible or partible. The District Judge decided that the zemindari was partible, but on appeal the Judicial Commissioners held that it was impartible and made a decree declaring that the respondent, who was the plaintiff in the suit, was solely entitled thereto. They concluded their judgment in the following words:—

"The Amgaon zemindari before the Thirty Years' Settlement was of the nature of a raj and, therefore, impartible and subject to the rule of single succession, the other members of the family of the zemindar of the moment being entitled to a suitable maintenance and not to any specific share in the income [Bajinath Prasad Singh v. Tej Bali Singh (1).] It was an estate of an exactly similar character that was conferred by Government on the zemindar at the Thirty Years' Settlement [Rewa Prasad Sukal v. Deo Dutt Ram Sukal (2).] In addition a custom had, by that time, grown up in the Amgaon family that the estate should be held as an estate of that nature and subject to those conditions. Nothing occurred at the Thirty Years' Settlement or has occurred since, to alter the nature of the grant or to affect the validity of the family custom [Rao Kishore Singh v. Gahenabai (3).]"

Messrs. Lowndes, K. C., Parikh and P. A. Pandit, for the Appellant.

Messrs. De Gruyther, K. C., Dube and N. B. Niyogi, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Sinha.—This is an appeal against a judgment and decree, dated the 23rd February, 1923, of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, Central Provinces,* reversing a judgment and decree, dated the 1st March, 1920, of the Court of the District Judge, Bhandara.

The suit in which the said decrees were made was brought by the plaintiff, Malhar Rao, against his younger brother, Martand Rao, claiming that, on the death of their father, Madho Rao, he alone was entitled to succeed to the Amgaon Estate, situate in the Bhandara District of the Central Provinces, to the exclusion of his younger brother, on the allegation that by the terms of the grant under which the estate was held, and by a family custom and also by a territorial custom, the said estate was impartible and succession thereto was governed by the rule of lineal primogeniture, and that the younger brother was entitled to suitable maintenance only and not to any specific share in the estate.

(1) 60 Ind. Cas. 534; 43 A. 228; 19 A. L. J. 317; 33 C. L. J. 388; 40 M. L. J. 387; (1921) M. W. N. 300; 25 C. W. N. 564; 2 P. L. T. 257; 23 Bom. L. R. 654; 3 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 35; 29 M. L. T. 358; 48 I. A. 195 (P. C.).
(2) 27 C. 515; 27 I. A. 39; 4 C. W. N. 582; 2 Bom. L. R. 558; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 653; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 338 (P. C.).

(3) 53 Ind. Cas. 630; 15 N. L. R. 175; 37 M. L. J. 562; 17 A. L. J. 1077; 26 M. L. T. 494; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 94; (1920) M. W. N. 82; 24 C. W. N. 601 (P. C.).

The pedigree of the family from its founder, Kolhu Kunbi, including the Amgaon branch (under Pandoo) and the other branches, is given below :—

Seventeen issues were framed by the trial Court, of which the following four only are material at this stage, viz., Issues Nos. 1, 2, 9 and 10 :—

(1) Was the zemindari of Amgaon conferred on Pandoo by the Bhonsla Raja subject to the condition that it was to be impartible and to devolve on the eldest son, females having no right of succession, as alleged by the plaintiff, or was it conferred on Sonba (or Sona) without any condition being attached to the grant as alleged by the defendant?

(2) In the time of the Bhonsla Raj, whenever a zemindari was granted, did the grant always carry with it the conditions mentioned in para. 5 of the plaint (i. e., impartibility and single succession) and also the incident of inalienability?

(9) Was devolution to zemindari property governed by the rule of primogeniture in the family of Pandoo and Kolhu; if so, are the parties bound by the said custom?

(10) Is there a territorial custom to the effect that zemindari property is impartible, inalienable and devolves by the rule of primogeniture as alleged by the plaintiff; if so, are the parties bound by the said custom?

After having considered the evidence minutely and elaborately on each of these issues, the District Judge held in favour of the defendant on all the four issues and dismissed the plaintiff's suit with costs. On appeal, the method adopted by the Appellate Court was different.

As their Lordships understand the judgment of the Judicial Commissioners, they accepted as conclusive the opinion which they considered to have been expressed in certain Official Reports of great authority that the estate in question was in the nature of a raj, and they then proceeded to consider whether the evidence adduced in the case in any way displaced that opinion. This is an inconvenient, if not an erroneous, method, and their Lordships consider it necessary at the outset to point out that, though such Official Reports are valuable and in many cases the best evidence of facts stated therein, opinions therein expressed should not be treated as conclusive in respect of matters requiring judicial determination, however eminent the authors of such Reports may be.

There are certain propositions of law by reference to which this case must be decided and their Lordships consider that they can all be taken as well-settled.

(a) When there is a dispute with respect to an estate being impartible or otherwise, the onus lies on the party who alleges the existence of a custom different from the ordinary law of inheritance according to which custom the estate is to be held by a single member and, as such, not liable to partition. In order to establish that any estate is impartible, it must be proved that it is from its nature impartible and descendible to a single person, or that it is impartible and descendible by virtue of a special custom.

(b) Any such special custom modifying the ordinary law of succession must be ancient and invariable and must be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence. To use the words of Lord Justice James in the case of Umrithnath Chowdhry v. Goureenath Chowdhry (4) :—

"The custom must be proved by something like what we should call in this country immemorial usage. It is a thing which cannot be predicated of a simple and single estate, the title to which dates from comparatively a short period of time back."

(4) 13 M. I. A. 542 at p. 549; 15 W. R. P. O. 10; 6 B. L. R. 232; 2 Suth. P. O. J. 381; 2 Sar. P. O. J. 618; 20 E. R. 653.

(c) That if an impartible estate existed as such from before the advent of British rule, any settlement or re-grant thereof by the British Government must, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, and unless inconsistent with the express terms of the new settlement, be presumed to continue the estate with its previous incidents of impartibility and succession by special custom.

As regards the first issue, the District Judge came to the conclusion that the estate of Amgaon was granted by the Bhonsla or Mahratta government of Nagpur in favour of one Sonba (or Sona) without any condition attached to it as regards devolution.

On the second issue he found that the plaintiff had adduced no evidence in support of his allegation that in the time of the Bhonsla Raj, whenever a zemindari was granted, the grant always carried with it the condition of succession by lineal primogeniture and inalienability. He accordingly found against the plaintiff on both the first and second issues.

On the ninth issue, the plaintiff's case was that, in the Amgaon family itself, taking either Pandoo or Sonba to be the original grantee, there was a custom of succession by lineal primogeniture which had grown up, having been derived from the parent stock of the Kampta zemindari, which started with one Kolhu, father of Pandoo and grandfather of Sonba, other descendants of whom came to be proprietors of two other zemindaris, viz., Palkhera and Kirnapur, where the same custom also prevailed. The District Judge held that the family custom relied upon by the plaintiff had not been proved.

On the tenth issue, the District Judge's conclusion, after an exhaustive survey of evidence in regard to territorial custom as set up by the plaintiff, was summarised in para. 92 of his judgment as follows:—

"The above is all the evidence in regard to territorial custom as set up by the plaintiff. It shows that a number of zemindaris, viz., Bijli, Chichwada, Gangazari, Jambhli, Palkhera, Nausari along with Maneri and Karanja, Arjuni and Kalkmeta have been actually partitioned. In regard to Chichgarh zemindari, the Judicial Commissioner has held that, though it cannot be divided by metes and bounds, the co-sharers of the zemindari are entitled to divide the profits thereof in proportion to their respective shares. In regard to Chutia, Palasgaon, Chichwada and Bijli, it has been held that those zemindaris are not impartible and that the co-sharers are entitled to share the profits of the zemindari. In regard to Gondumri, the present zemindar had actually made an application to have it partitioned between himself and his co-sharers, but the application had to be filed owing to the commencement of the settlement operations. With reference to Bhadra zemindari, the learned Judicial Commissioner had held that it is not impartible and that half share thereof could be attached and sold in execution of the decree against Faizud-din, brother of the zemindar. It has also been shown that the history of succession in the zemindaris of Kampta (including Deori-Kishori and Warad) and Hatta does not justify a finding that those zemindaris are impartible and governed, as regards succession, by the rule of primogeniture. In the face of this evidence—and there is no other evidence before me in proof of territorial custom—it would be simply absurd to contend that the territorial custom set up by the plaintiff has been proved. On the contrary, the proof is exactly the other way. My finding on issue No. 10, therefore, is that the plaintiff has failed to prove the territorial custom pleaded by him in this case."

The Judicial Commissioners, in consequence of the method they adopted, did not record their findings on the issues specifically in the same way as the District Judge. They summarise their judgment as follows:—

"The Amgaon zemindari before the Thirty Years' Settlement was of the nature of a raj and, therefore, impartible and subject to the rule of single succession, the other members of the family of the zemindar of the moment being entitled to a suitable maintenance and not to any specific share in the income.....In addition a custom had, by that time, grown up in the Amgaon family that the estate should be held as an estate of that nature and subject to those conditions. Nothing occurred at the Thirty Years' Settlement or has occurred since, to alter the nature of the grant or to affect the validity of the family custom."

Their Lordships presume that by the first portion of their finding the Court of the Judicial Commissioner came to the conclusion that the Amgaon estate was from its nature a raj and, therefore, impartible. In that view, it was unnecessary for them to consider whether it was so also by virtue of a territorial custom (Issue No. 10). But inasmuch as they say that their "decision will almost certainly govern nearly all the estates of the group known as the zemindaris of Bhandara and Balaghat or the Wainganga zemindaris," it may be taken that they found Issues Nos. 1, 2 and 10 all in favour of the plaintiff, though they do not say so specifically.

As already stated, the Appellate Court founded their conclusion chief upon a view of certain Official Reports put forward in the plaintiff's supplementary statement. This is what they say:—

"Now it is perfectly clear from the history of the estates given in the 'Report on the Zemindaris and other Petty Chieftaincies in the Central Provinces' submitted to the Government of India in 1863 by Sir R. Temple and in the Bhandara Settlement Report of 1868 and from the summaries of that history in the Note [by Sir Reginald Craddock] already mentioned, that before 1860 the Wainganga zemindaris were of exactly the same nature as the Chanda, Raipur and Bilaspur zemindaris and the Ohhindwara Jagirs, with a difference only in degree; indeed their difference from some if not all of the estates classed as Feudatories was of degree only and not of quality. Every one of these estates was before the Settlement a real zemindari of the nature of a raj..... Such an estate is impartible and subject to the rule of single succession, and does not admit of any coparcenary."

Their Lordships have carefully examined the Reports in question, as well as the earlier Report by Sir Richard Jenkins dated 1827 and a later history contained in the District Gazetteer for Bhandara by Mr. Russell, I. C. S., all referred to in the judgment of the District Judge.

Sir R. Jenkins was British Resident at the Mahratta Court of Nagpur from 1810, and submitted a Report to the Government of India on the whole administration of the Nagpur State, then conducted under British supervision, in the course of which there is given an instructive history of the Province and all the institutions thereof. Sir R. Temple was Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces after the British annexation in 1854, and submitted his Report to the Government of India with a view to the forthcoming Revenue Settlement for 30 years. Mr. Lawrence was the officer-in-charge of that Settlement. Sir Reginald Craddock, afterwards Chief Commissioner, recorded, as Secretary to the Local Government a Note for Government use on the status of the zemindars of the Central Provinces which goes exhaustively into the whole question.

All these Reports were freely referred to at the Bar, and their Lordships consider that, so far as they contain a historical narrative of the zemindari of Amgaon as well as the other zemindaris in the Central Provinces referred to therein, they are of great value, and probably the best available history thereof under the circumstances.

Before considering these Reports, their Lordships think it necessary to note that the word "raj" by itself does not necessarily imply impartibility. The State of Nagpur itself, though undoubtedly a raj, was not impartible, but was repeatedly divided, and when we consider that of these zemindaris, more than a hundred in number, some existed from before the time of the Gond Rajas, viz., from the time of the Rajputs who preceded the Gonds, some were created by the Gond Rajas, and some by the Bhonslas, who did not obtain the sovereignty of Nagpur till after 1750, it would follow that, as regards antiquity at least, there is very great difference between these estates, by whatever name they may have been called.

It may or may not be correct that many of these zemindars were merely holders of office with no interest in the soil. It is always difficult at this distance of time to distinguish between zemindaris of which the holders were entitled to the soil as ancient Chieftains, and cases where from office-holders or rent-collectors they developed in course of time into proprietors of the soil. But it is settled law that unless considerable age can be ascribed to any particular zemindari, of whichever class it may be, it cannot claim to be governed by either ancient or invariable custom.

Now, after a consideration of all these Reports, their Lordships are unable to accept the conclusion of the Judicial Commissioners that the Amgaon estate was of the nature of a raj and, therefore, impartible.

It is obvious that there is considerable difference both as regards nature, origin and quality between the different zemindars. It is true that in some parts of R. Temple's Report he described the zemindars generally as "dependent Chiefs" and said that "although there may be differences in the origin of some of the tenures, and also differences of degree, the status of their holders will be found in every case to be now essentially the same." But he was far from expressing the view that every one of them was of the nature of a raj, and was, on the contrary, urging that even those who had been previously independent Chieftains had by that time been reduced to the position of either talukdars or mere malguzars.

With regard to the zemindaris of the Wainganga District, with which only this case is concerned, this is what Sir R. Temple said in Appendix B:—

"The larger zemindars in this class do not hold their tenures by any very ancient or strong title.

"The first seven zemindaris, viz., (1) Kampta, (2) Hatta, (3) Amgaon, (4) Binjhli, (5) Pulkhaira, (6) Purara, and (7) Tikheri-Malpuri were originally included in Kampta; and Kampta was not technically a zemindari until A. D. 1843. It seems, indeed, to have been rather of the nature of a talukdari tenure. The tract was known as the Kampta Taluk, and its holder was designated a Patel..... Kampta was certainly reported by Mr. Jenkins as a zemindari; but nevertheless his Report bears out the above remarks. And, moreover, the holder's petition in A. D. 1843 begs for, and the Raja of Nagpur's takid (injunction) in reply confers, the title of zemindar for the first time on payment of a heavy nazar."

And further on:—"On the whole, the zemindars of the Wainganga District present, from one point of view, a weaker aspect as Chiefs than the zemindars of other classes.... They were situated nearer the seat of Government, and, being in a comparatively open and accessible country, they obtained less lenient terms than the zemindars of Chhattisgarh, or the Chiefs of Sambalpur, or the hill Thakurs of Ohhindwara."

With regard to Amgaon, it is stated in the same Appendix as follows:—

"This originally formed part of the Kampta Estate, the second holder of which, Gondu Patel, brother of Ram Patel, in the time of Raghoji I, apportioned Amgaon to his nephew, Sau Patel. In A. D. 1819, Sau Patel was succeeded by his nephew, Tania Bapu, who died in 1838. After this the estate remained under Government management for four years, owing to a dispute about the succession, but in A. D. 1843 the late Raja of Nagpur continued the estate, which then for the first time was called a zemindari, to an adopted son of Tania Bapu, named Chimna Patel. This individual died in A. D. 1862, and was succeeded by his son Raghoba, a minor."

It would appear from Mr. Lawrence's Settlement Report that Amgaon was not a part of Kampta Taluka, as Sir R. Temple thought. The plaintiff admitted this fact in his supplementary statement, but whichever is correct, Sir R. Temple or Mr. Lawrence, Amgaon was not conferred on Pandoo, but on his son Sonba by a patta or painama, dated 1796. It may well be doubted whether an estate of which the origin dates back only to 1796 could claim at the time of the Thirty Years' Settlement in 1863 that it was governed by an ancient and invariable custom.

It appears, moreover, from Sir Reginald Craddock's Note that after a good deal of correspondence between Sir R. Temple, as Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, and the Government of India, it was finally decided that only holders of certain estates, should be recognised as Feudatories, and all others as ordinary subjects. Sanads were granted to the former, expressly mentioning that the succession was in their case to be a single heir. That provision was omitted in the case of sanads to most zemindars of the second class, amongst whom was included the Amgaon zemindar, though with regard to some others like Chanda that condition was expressly attached.

The learned Judicial Commissioners appear to have fallen into an error in considering that it was "due to some mistake or a series of mistakes that a sanad on the lines of what is known as the Chanda Patent was never given to the proprietors of the Wainganga zemindaris." It was the result not of mistake, but of a classification deliberately made in view of the nature, origin and status of the different zemindaris in the Central Provinces.

Having regard to the fact that these experienced officials were dealing with zemindaris in the Central Provinces which belonged to all the three classes of zemindars previously mentioned, it would be strange if they were all found to be "of the same kind, with a difference only in degree," as the Judicial Commissioners assumed.

On a careful perusal, however, of all these Reports, their Lordships find that, so far from finding them all to be of "the nature of a raj, it was found necessary to divide and classify them (a) as Feudatories, having semi-sovereign rights in some degree (real Rajas), and (b) ordinary subjects. These last were again sub-divided into—

(a) Those who were recognised to have proprietary rights unrestricted, such as the zemindars of Balaghat and Bhandara.

(b) With proprietary rights restricted, such as the zemindars of Chanda, Bilaspur and Ohhindwara.

(c) Those whose proprietary rights were not yet recognised, e. g., Sambhalpur.

There are passages here and there both in Sir Richard Jenkins' Report and Sir R. Temple's Report which speak of all these zemindaris indiscriminately as Chiefs or Chieftains; but on a complete perusal it becomes apparent that they are clearly and carefully distinguished, and when the origin of the Kampta zemindari and the Amgaon zemindari, of which the former is sometimes, but wrongly, said to be the parent, as given in these Reports, is considered, it becomes fairly obvious that they are of both such comparatively modern origin (not earlier than 1796 and possibly as late as 1843 when they first obtained recognition as titular zemindaris), and the circumstances under which they came into existence and continued are such that they could not possibly be classed as appertaining to the category of sovereign or semi-sovereign Chiefs whose possessions were necessarily impartible.

Their Lordships agree with the decision of the District Judge on Issues Nos. 1, 2 and 10, and consider that neither by the terms of the grant, nor by territorial custom, any more than by its inherent nature, can the zemindari of Amgaon be considered an impartible estate.

There remains for consideration Issue No. 9—the question of family custom, which the District Judge rightly considered as the most important issue in the case. Plaintiff sought to make out this custom, first, by proving that in the family which was in possession of Amgaon itself this custom grew up, and, secondly, that it was derived from the parent stock—the family of Kolhu, the original grantee of the Kampta zemindari.

The custom alleged by the plaintiff was that in the Amgaon family only the zemindari, but nothing else, passed according to the rule of primogeniture.

The District Judge finds on the evidence that every instance of devolution in the family was in strict accordance with the ordinary rules of Hindu Law governing succession, and that not a single zemindar from Sonba downwards left more than one heir at his death; and, therefore, there was not one instance of anomalous or irregular succession in the Amgaon family. Their Lordships see no ground to differ from this conclusion.

As regards instances of such irregular succession in other branches of the family of Kolhu, the District Judge dealt with Palkhera and Kirnapur, which were two zemindaris belonging to other branches of the family of Kolhu.

With regard to Palkhera, it appears that it did not afford even a single instance of succession by primogeniture, and that there had been in fact a division of the zemindari amongst the sons of Deoo.

With regard to Kirnapur, it would appear that succession had in many instances up to 1846 depended entirely on the will of the Sovereign power. Further, at the Thirty Years' Settlement, proprietary rights were recognised as being vested in three brothers, and not in one of them only.

There have been certain decisions with regard to some of these Bhandara zemindaris in the Judicial Commissioner's Court at Nagpur which are referred to in both the judgments in this case. They are not altogether consistent and were necessarily based on the evidence adduced in those particular cases. Their Lordships do not think it would serve any useful purpose to examine these decisions for the purposes of this case.

On a consideration of the whole evidence, their Lordships are unable to concur in the conclusion of the Judicial Commissioners that by the time of the Settlement a custom had grown up in the Amgaon family that the estate should be held as an impartible estate subject to the rule of single succession. They agree with the District Judge that the family custom relied upon by the plaintiff has not been proved.

Their Lordships, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that the judgment and decree of the Judicial Commissioners dated the 1st March, 1920, should be set aside and the judgment of the District Judge restored. The plaintiff-respondent must pay the costs of the appeal in the Judicial Commissioners' Court, as also of this appeal.

K. J. R.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Solicitor for the Respondent:—Mr. H. S. L. Polak.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE PATNA HIGH COURT.

November 11, 1927.

Present:—Lord Sinha, Lord Blanesburgh and Sir John Wallis.

Musammât RAMANANDI KUER—PETITIONER—APPELLANT

versus

Musammât KALAWATI KUER—
OPPOSITE PARTY—RESPONDENT.

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 50—Revocation of Probate, grounds for—Citation on minor—Procedure—Inference from non-registration of Will—Construction of Indian Statutes founded on English Law—Probate in 'common form' and 'solemn form'—Onus of proof of genuineness of Will.

Where there is a positive enactment of the Indian Legislature, the proper course is to examine the language of that Statute and to ascertain its proper meaning, uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law—or of the English Law upon which it may be founded. [p. 16, col. 1.]

The Succession Act of 1865 and the Probate and Administration Act of 1881 (now consolidated by the Succession Act of 1925), while to a large extent embodying the rules of the English Law, yet depart in many particulars from those rules; and in the progress of the development of the law and practice in testamentary cases, the ecclesiastical origin of this jurisdiction of the Courts in England has been completely discarded; and the Indian Legislature has gradually evolved an independent system of its own, largely suggested, no doubt, by English Law but also differing much from that law, and purporting to be a self-contained system. [p. 16, col. 2.]

In interpreting, therefore, the statutory provisions of the Indian Legislature relating to testamentary cases, the Courts should proceed to examine the language of the Indian Statute uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the English Law upon which it may be founded. [p. 16, col. 1.]

Observations of Sir Arthur Wilson in Kurrutulain Bahadur v. Nuzbat-ud-Dowla Abbas Hossein Khan (1), relied on.

The introduction into Indian practice of the difference in English Law between the grant of Probate in 'common form' and in 'solemn form', is to be deprecated. [p. 16, col. 1.]

Upon an application for Probate of a Will, the citation issued must be properly and effectively served, that is to say, so served as would give to the person whose interests are, or may be, adversely affected an opportunity either to oppose the grant of Probate or to require the Will to be proved in his presence. [p. 18, col. 1.]

Where a Will of which Probate is sought affects the interest of a minor, the prudent course for the proponent is to take steps to have the Will proved per testes (i.e., in solemn form) in the presence of an independent guardian ad litem for the minor. [p. 17, col. 1.]

Although registration of Wills is not compulsory, non-registration may, when coupled with other suspicious circumstances, throw considerable doubt upon the genuineness of the document. [p. 18, col. 2.]

Probate of a Will having been granted to the defendant, the plaintiff instituted proceedings under s. 50 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, (now re-enacted as s. 263 of the Succession Act, 1925), for revocation of the Probate on two grounds, viz. (1) that citations were not served on her before the grant of Probate, and (2) that the Will was a forgery. The issues raised in the case were: (1) Was no citation served upon the plaintiff? (2) Is the Will propounded by the defendant, genuine or other wise?

Held, (1) that if these issues were tried separately and the plaintiff succeeded on the first issue, that in itself, would be sufficient for revoking the Probate; but it would still be open to the defendant to prove the Will and, if he succeeded, the Probate would stand. If, on the other hand, the plaintiff failed on the first issue, that would not preclude him from proceeding to prove his second ground, viz. that the Will was forged, and the Probate would stand or fall, according to the result; [p. 16, col. 2.]

(2) that the fact that these two issues were not tried separately, and evidence was given by each party in support of their respective cases on both issues together did not, under the circumstances, prejudice either party; [p. 17, col. 1.]

(3) that in view of the finding of their Lordship for the plaintiff on the first issue, the onus of proof on the second issue as to whether the Will was forged or genuine, was upon the defendant; [p. 17, col. 1.]

(4) that the defendant had failed to discharge the onus. [ibid.]

[Independently of any question of onus, their Lordships were of opinion, on the facts of this case, that the Will was a fabricated document.]

Appeal from a judgment of the High Court Patna (Dass and Adami, JJ.) dated the 16th March, 1925, reversing that of the District Judge, Patna, dated the 18th January, 1924.

FACTS.—The main question for determination on the present appeal was the genuineness or otherwise of a Will alleged to have been executed by the appellant.

father, Alak Prakash, on the 2nd February, 1913. The District Judge, who saw and heard the witnesses, found that it was not the Will of Alak Prakash but a fabricated document". The High Court took the opposite view.

Messrs. De Gruyther, K. C., and Dube, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Lowndes, K. C., and Wallach, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Sinha.—Harangi Singh of Bihar, a small town in the District of Patna, had two sons (1) Alak Prakash and (2) Gyan Prakash. Alak Prakash was given in adoption to Angat Singh, a wealthy inhabitant of the same town. On Angat's death, Alak Prakash, still a minor, inherited from him properties of considerable value. Harangi with his family, including Gyan Prakash, thereupon came to live with Alak Prakash in Angat's house and managed the properties as Alak's guardian till the latter attained majority. But even after that Harangi and Gyan continued to live with Alak Prakash in his house.

On the 27th February, 1913, Alak Prakash died of phthisis at Patna, leaving a young widow, Thakurani Kuer, and an infant daughter, Ramanandi Kuer, the appellant. In May following, an anonymous petition, purporting to come from a well-wisher of the minor daughter of Alak Prakash was sent to the Collector of Patna, in which it was stated that Harangi was trying to secure the property for his second son.

That petition was sent for enquiry to the Sub-Divisional Officer of Bihar, who, on the 1st June, 1913, called upon Harangi Singh "to state what he has to say to these allegations" in the petition, fixing the 16th June next for hearing. On that date a petition for two weeks' time was filed on the ground that Harangi Singh had gone on a pilgrimage to Jagannathji (Puri). Time was allowed till the 1st July, but on that day the enquiry was not further proceeded with, inasmuch as on the day previous, viz., the 30th June, 1913, application had been made to the District Judge of Patna on behalf of Gyan Prakash Singh for Probate of a Will alleged to have been executed by Alak Prakash on the 2nd February, 1913. A general citation was affixed to the house of the deceased and another to the Court House in July. Affidavits by two out of the twelve attesting witnesses to the Will were filed on the 30th July, 1913. Notices were issued to the widow and daughter of the testator and a report was made by the serving officer showing that service of the notices was acknowledged on behalf of Thakurani Kuer "for self and as guardian of Ramanandi Kuer" by one Awadh Bihari Singh, who described himself as the sister's son of Thakurani Kuer. Thereafter the order for grant of Probate was made by the District Judge on the 23rd August, 1913, though questions having arisen as to the amount of Probate duty payable, Probate was not actually issued till the 26th March, 1914.

By the terms of this Will the property was bequeathed to the son of Alak Prakash if any should be born to his wife Thakurani Kuer. In default of such male issue, one village was bequeathed to Thakurani Kuer for life, with remainder to the daughter Ramanandi and her issue with ultimate remainder in default of issue of Ramanandi to Gyan Prakash Singh. Another village was bequeathed in trust to Gyan Prakash Singh for vaguely defined charitable purposes, while the residue, forming the bulk of the property was bequeathed absolutely to Gyan Prakash.

After Probate had been granted, the name of Thakurani Kuer was entered in the Collector's Registers in respect of the village bequeathed to her, while Gyan Prakash's name was similarly entered in respect of the remaining properties.

Harangi Singh died in 1916 and Gyan Prakash died on the 23rd November, 1918, leaving a minor widow, the respondent, Kalawati Kuer. So long as Harangi and Gyan Prakash lived, Thakurani, the widow, and Ramanandi, the daughter of Alak Prakash, lived under their care and protection in the house of Alak Prakash, exactly as they would have done if Alak Prakash had not been legally separated by adoption from his natural father and brother but continued to form with them members of a joint Hindu family.

On the death of Gyan Prakash, his widow, Kalawati Kuer (who was then a minor) was entitled to succeed him, but there was an agreement in writing on the 21st December, 1918, purporting to be executed by her and Thakurani Kuer whereby the estate was to be divided equally between them for life, with remainder to the daughter, Ramanandi. This agreement was probably not legally enforceable as Kalawati was a minor at the time and at any rate it was not acceptable to the father and other relations of Kalawati Kuer, who removed her from the influence of Thakurani Kuer, in a manner which led to proceedings in the Criminal Courts. Disputes having thus arisen, proceedings for revocation of the Probate were in contemplation when Thakurani died. On the 10th January, 1922, proceedings were actually instituted under s. 50 of Act V of 1881 on behalf of the minor Ramanandi Kuer for revocation of the Probate, on two grounds principally, viz., (1) that citations were not served either on her or on her mother, Thakurani, before the grant of Probate and (2) that the Will was a forgery. Objections were filed on behalf of Kalawati Kuer and issues were framed, of which two only are material for present purposes, viz.:

(1) Was no citation served upon the plaintiff, i. e., Ramanandi Kuer? Had she no knowledge of the Probate proceedings? Was she not properly represented in the Probate proceedings?

(2) Is the Will propounded by the opposite party, i. e., Kalawati Kuer, the widow of Gyan Prakash, genuine or otherwise?

There has been some divergence of opinion in the Courts in India as regard the law and procedure governing cases for revocation of Probate, due in part to the introduction into Indian practice of the difference in English Law between the grant of Probate in common form and Probate in solemn form. It is worse than unprofitable to consider how far, if at all, that distinction has been incorporated into Indian Law. It has often been pointed out by this Board that where there is a positive enactment of the Indian Legislature the proper course is to examine the language of that Statute and to ascertain its proper meaning, uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law—or of the English Law upon which it may be founded.

These observations apply with peculiar force to testamentary cases which are governed by the Indian Succession Act of 1865 or the Probate and Administration Act of 1881 (both now repealed by the Succession Act of 1925). As Sir A. Wilson observed, in delivering the judgment of this Board in the case of Kurrutulain Bahadur v. Nuzbat-ud-Dowla Abbas Hossein Khan 1) these Acts while to a large extent embodying the rules of English Law on the subject yet departed in many particulars from those rules; and in the progress of the development of the law and practice in testamentary cases, the ecclesiastical origin of this jurisdiction of the Courts in England has been completely discarded; and the Indian Legislature has gradually evolved an independent system of its own, largely suggested, no doubt, by English Law but also differing much from that law and purporting to be a self-contained system.

Now so far as the present case is concerned, the law is to be found in the Probate and Administration Act of 1881. Section 50 of that Act, so far as it is relevant, runs as follows:—

"The grant of Probate...may be revoked or annulled for just cause.

"Explanation.—'Just cause' is—1st, that the proceedings to obtain the grant were defective in substance;

2nd, that the grant was obtained fraudulently by making a false suggestion, or by concealing from the Court something material to the case."

The relevant Illustrations to the section are:—

"(b) The grant was made without citing parties who ought to have been cited.

(c) The Will of which Probate was obtained was forged or revoked."

It is apparent that the plaintiff in this case set up both these grounds for revocation. The first issue as framed comes under Illustration (b) and the second issue under Illustration (c).

If these issues were tried separately and the plaintiff succeeded on the first issue, that in itself would be sufficient for revoking the Probate; but it would still be open to the defendant to prove the Will and, if she succeeded, the Probate would stand.

If, on the other hand, the plaintiff failed on the first issue, that would not preclude her from proceeding to prove her second ground, viz., that the Will was forged, and the Probate would stand or fall, according to the result.

It is obvious that the question of onus of proof is, therefore, of great importance in this case, and the District Judge as well as the High Court on appeal rightly lay stress as to the onus on each of these two issues, which might have been tried separately but were not so in fact, as evidence was given by each party in support of their respective ive cases on both issues together and not separately. Their Lordships agree with the Courts below that in the circumstances of this case neither party was prejudiced by the procedure adopted.

(1) 33 C. 116; 9 C. W. N. 938; 1 C. L. J. 594; 2 A. L. J. 758; 15 M. L. J. 336; 7 Bom. L. R. 876; 32 I. A. 244; § Sar. P. C. J. 889 (P. C.).

In considering the evidence on each of the two issues set out above, their Lordships bear in mind that the application for revocation was made eight years after the grant, and after the persons principally concerned in the original proceedings, viz., Harangi Singh, Gyan Prakash, Thakurani Kuer and most of the witnesses to the alleged Will were dead, and that in accordance with the practice of the Indian Courts, some portion of the original records of the Court in the Probate proceedings, including the affidavits of the two attesting witnesses, had been destroyed. These are all circumstances which would make it difficult for the defendant to prove her case.

On the other hand, certain other circumstances have to be considered in favour of the plaintiff. The Will, if not absolutely inofficious, is adverse to the interests of the widow of the alleged testator and his only child. The former was an illiterate pardanashin lady, and the latter a child only two years old when the testator died. Both mother and child were living under the immediate protection of those who were propounding the Will and, so far as appears from the evidence, there were no relations of the widow either in her husband's adoptive family or on her father's side who could protect their interests as against those of Harangi Singh and Gyan Prakash. It is true that Thakurani Kuer afterwards more or less acquiesced in the provisions of the Will and in any case took no active steps against the Will so long as Harangi and Gyan were alive; but having regard to all the circumstances, their Lordships are unable to draw any inference therefrom adverse to the plaintiff. And as against the difficulties in the defendant's way by reason of lapse of time, death of parties and witnesses and the destruction of records, it has to be remembered that much of it might have been avoided by prudent action on the part of the propounder, e. g., by taking proper and necessary steps to have the Will proved per testes in the presence of an independent guardian for the infant daughter. Their Lordships cannot endorse the view taken by Mr. Justice Das that, if a guardian ad litem had been assigned for her, Thakurani Kuer would have been so appointed, if all the circumstances were fully placed before the Court.

On the first issue, the conclusion of the District Judge may be best given in his own words:—

"I cannot definitely find that the citation was not served upon her (Thakurani Kuer) but I do not consider that it has been proved that she was served or that she had any knowledge of the application for Probate."

As regards the daughter, he considered that:

"If the special citation had been properly served upon Thakurani Kuer, Ramanandi would have been properly represented in those proceedings."

On these findings, it is hardly correct to say, as Mr. Justice Das does, that the District Judge was satisfied that citation was properly served on Thakurani. It would be more accurate to say that though the District Judge was doubtful as to the actual service, he did not feel justified in definitely finding that she had not been served with the citation. In other words the District Judge found himself unable to come to any conclusion whether the notice was actually served upon her or not. The High Court considered that the failure on the part of the plaintiff to examine Awadh Behari was fatal to her case that no citation was served on Thakurani.

This renders it necessary to examine the position of Awadh Behari.

Mr. Justice Das was not prepared to hold that Awadh Behari was related either to Thakurani, as defendant's witnesses deposed, or to Harangi Singh, as plaintiff's witnesses said; but he concluded that Awadh Behari was more or less under the control of the plaintiff and should have been called by her as a witness on her behalf, chiefly for the reason that there was evidence of her own witnesses on two points (1) that at the dates when these proceedings were going on before the District Judge, Awadh Behari was actually in the service of Thakurani's sister as a cook and (2) that Awadh in Thakurani's lifetime signed many documents on her behalf.

Their Lordships think little importance can be attached to the first; nor to the second either inasmuch as all the documents in question, except one, were signed at a time when Thakurani was still living as a dependent female member of the family of which the actual head was either Harangi or Gyan. The only document referred to in this connection and bearing date subsequent to the death of Gyan Prakash is Ex. P, which Awadh signed on behalf of both Thakurani and Kalawati and in which he described himself as the sister's son of Thakurani and as brother of Kalawati—both statements being equally incorrect.

It would rather appear from the evidence that Awadh Behari, though belonging to the same caste occupied at the time of the alleged service the position of a servant in the family, and was presumably under the control of the male head thereof and subject to his direction.

Under these circumstances, their Lordships do not consider that the plaintiff could be reasonably required to call Awadh Behari as her witness for the purpose of contradicting his own previous statement.

In their Lordships' opinion, even if some kind of formality was gone through on the occasion when service of notice is said to have been effected, it was not such as would give to the person alleged to have been served an opportunity either to oppose the grant of Probate or to require the Will to be proved in her presence. In the peculiar circumstances of the case the service, if any, was of no greater effect in law than personal service on an infant of tender years.

The result is that the first issue must be decided in favour of the plaintiff.

With regard to the second issue as to whether the Will was forged or genuine, the onus of proof depends upon the finding on the first issue. If citations were not served, i. e., properly and effectively served, on Thakurani, the daughter is entitled to ask that Probate which was obtained in her absence should be re-called and the executor or his representative called upon to prove the Will in the present proceeding. In other words, the onus of proving that the Will was genuine is in view of their Lordships' conclusion upon the first issue upon the defendant. It was candidly admitted by Counsel on the latter's behalf that if it was held that the onus was on her to prove the genuineness of the Will, he could not contend that she had discharged that onus. He rested her case on the ground that the onus was on the plaintiff to prove that the Will was forged, and that the plaintiff's evidence fell short of proving that the Will was a forgery even if the circumstances connected with it might appear suspicious.

Their Lordships have, however, come to the conclusion that apart from any question of onus, the plaintiff has succeeded in proving that the Will is not a genuine document for the reason given below.

It is a circumstance which cannot be ignored that though care was taken to obtain as many as 14 attesting witnesses to the Will, the simple precaution of getting the Will registered at the local registration office was not adopted, even though registration of Wills is not compulsory. Nor can it be considered anything but unusual and suspicious that no doctor or lawyer attested this Will, specially in view of its provisions practically disinheriting the widow and the only daughter and the serious nature of the illness. Immediately after the testator's death, Harangi Singh purported to act as proprietor of the estate in paying Government revenue and in granting receipts to tenants of the estate—a position wholly inconsistent with the provisions of the Will. Then again the Will was not produced or Probate applied for until Harangi Singh had been called upon to explain his above-mentioned conduct. There is further the evidence of at least three witnesses, viz., Khan Bahadur Saujid Mahomed Nur of Bihar and Babu Dhanukdhari Tewana, Pleader of Bihar, that after the Collector directed enquiry to be made into the allegations made in the anonymous petition mentioned earlier in this judgment, Harangi Singh tried to get these witnesses to attest a Will in favour of Gyan Prakash. The District Judge, before whom these witnesses were examined, believed their evidence. Their Lordships do not agree with the High Court that their story is inherently improbable or that any suspicion attaches to it because they did not of their own motion inform the authorities of such contemplated forgery.

There is a total lack of evidence as regards the preparation of the draft and the engrossment of the Will and the whole case for the Will rests on the bare testimony of two out of the four attesting witnesses, whom the trial Judge did not believe. The two other attesting witnesses admitted their signatures on the Will but alleged that their signatures were obtained by Harangi Singh by false representations as to the nature of the document, which they did not read at the time when they put their signatures upon it. The story related by these two latter may not be worthy of credit in all respects, and if it rested by itself would be of little use to the plaintiff's case. The District Judge also rightly refused to attach any importance to such evidence as was given as to the signature on the Will not being that of Alak Prakash. It was certainly not expert evidence in any sense.

But the crucial point in the case is—where was Alak Prakash living on the 2nd February, 1913, (the date of the alleged Will)—at Patna, or in Bihar?

The plaintiff's case is that at the date of the alleged execution of the Will, Alak Prakash was in Patna under the treatment of Dr. Jyotish Chandra Sen, L. M. S. (Calcutta), who practised at Patna, and also of Dr. Barat, a teacher of the Temple Medical School.

On the defendant's side, a number of witnesses were called to prove that Alak Prakash came to Patna on the 4th or 5th February, that while there he was treated only by hakims and not by any doctors, and that he did not stay in that quarter of Patna which is called Jhauganj but in quite a different quarter called Badshahganj.

Both the District Judge and the High Court have disbelieved these witnesses for the defendant and found that Alak Prakash rented a house in Jhauganj-Patna, and was treated, not by hakims, but by Dr. Sen and Dr. Barat. The District Judge came to the conclusion upon the evidence that Alak Prakash was at Patna before the 2nd February and, therefore, that the story of his having executed the Will at Bihar on that date was false.

The High Court, however, came to a different conclusion, and Mr. Justice Dass says with regard to that part of the case:

"The critical question then is, did Alak Prakash come to Patna before the 2nd February, 1913? On this point the petitioner relies on the evidence of Dr. J. C. Sen and Dr. Barat.....Dr. Barat is an Assistant Surgeon and is a witness of undoubted position and respectability. His evidence is to the effect that he was called to see a patient of Dr. J. C. Sen at Jhauganj in a house on the bank of the Ganges. He visited the patient in consultation with Dr. J. C. Sen on four or five occasions spread over one or two weeks. He made a report on the urine of the patient on the 13th February, 1913.....I have no doubt whatever that Dr. Barat actually treated Alak Prakash and made a report on the urine of Alak Prakash. But the report is dated the 13th February, 1913, and it is impossible on the evidence of Dr. Barat to say that Alak Prakash came to Patna before the 2nd February, 1913. I entirely accept the evidence of Dr. Barat, but, in my opinion, it does not touch the point which we have to consider in this case. I now come to the evidence of Dr. J. C. Sen."

Then, after quoting the evidence of Dr. Sen, the learned Judge proceeds:

"Giving his evidence on the 20th December, 1921, and without any documents to support his evidence, Dr. J. C. Sen was able to say that Alak Prakash came to Patna six weeks or two months before his death (in 1913). He admits that he has no documentary record of his treatment of Alak Prakash. It may be that Dr. Sen has a prodigious memory, but, in my opinion, it would be most unsafe to act on this evidence given nine years after the death of Alak Prakash in support of the case of the petitioner that Alak Prakash was not residing in Bihar on the day on which he is alleged to have executed the Will. In my opinion, it has not been established that Alak Prakash was not actually residing in Bihar on the 2nd February, 1913."

Apart from the fact that there is other evidence to prove that Alak Prakash resided in Patna for nearly two months before his death, it does not appear to their Lordships that in the case of Dr. Sen, it was such a prodigious feat of memory as the learned Judge supposed. Alak Prakash was an old patient of Dr. Sen who had treated him three years before his death, and had been to Bihar three or four times to treat him, the last time in December, 1912. When Alak Prakash came on the last occasion to Patna, he rented a house on the banks of the river which Dr. Sen had himself occupied before and which was under half a mile from the house in which Dr. Sen was himself residing. He visited him three or four times daily all the time he remained in Patna. He said that he treated him in Patna, for two or three weeks before calling in any consultant and that Dr. Barat came in as consultant during the last two or three weeks of the illness, and that Colonel Sunder also came three or four times, i. e., after the first two or three weeks of Alak Prakash's stay in Patna.

The District Judge who saw and heard Dr. Sen in the witness-box believed his evidence on this material point, and their Lordships consider it impossible to reject it without ascribing to a member of an honourable profession deliberate falsehood, for which no ground has been made out.

Taking the whole of the evidence and considering the position of both the doctors concerned, their Lordships agree with the finding of the trial Court that Alak Prakash was in Patna and not in Bihar on the 2nd February, 1913, and that the Will bearing date the 2nd February, 1913, of which Probate was granted on the 25th March, 1914, is not the Will of Alak Prakash Singh and is a fabricated document.

Their Lordships will, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that the judgment of the High Court should be set aside and the judgment of the District Judge restored, with costs of the appeal to the High Court and of this appeal.

K. J. R.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondent:—Messrs. W. W. Box & Co.

[Note.—Proceedings for the revocation of a Probate are "miscellaneous proceedings" (cf. s. 141, Civil Procedure Code, 1908), and although the procedure is generally regulated by the Civil Procedure Code (see s. 55 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, now s. 268 of the Succession Act, 1925), there is no "suit" and, consequently no 'plaintiff' or 'defendant'. According to the practice of the Indian Courts, the party applying for revocation of Probate is called "petitioner" and the executor or person opposing the petition is generally styled "opposite party". In the above judgment, however, their Lordships throughout refer to the parties as 'plaintiff' and 'defendant' respectively. In this connection, reference may usefully be made to s. 83 of the Probate and Administration Act (now s. 295 of the Succession Act, 1925), as regards procedure in contentious cases.—K. J. R.]

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE LAHORE HIGH COURT.

December 2, 1927.

Present:—Viscount Sumner,
Lord Sinha, Sir John Wallis and
Sir Lancelot Sanderson.

BHAGWAN SINGH AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

UJAGAR SINGH—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Widow—Alienation—Necessity—Consent of father, whether binding on son—Attestation of deed, when estoppel—Appellate Court—Finding of fact by trial Court which saw and heard witnesses, not to be lightly reversed.

Where a Hindu widow, holding the usual 'widow's estate' in her deceased husband's property, executed a mortgage of it, and it was found that the income from the lands at the material time was hardly sufficient to meet the ordinary expenses of the family, that she had no alternative and was compelled to resort to borrowing in order to meet the extraordinary expenses of the marriages of her daughters:

Held, on the evidence, that necessity for the alienation had been established. [p. 22, col. 2.]

Where the managing member of a joint Hindu family acting not only on behalf of himself, but also on behalf of all the members of the family who were alive at that time consented to and acquiesced in a mortgage executed by a Hindu widow:

Held, that his son, who was not then born, was not entitled to contest the validity of the mortgage, inasmuch as at the time when it was executed he had no interest in the family property. [p. 24, col. 2.]

Wasantrao v. Anandrao (2) and Anandrao v. Wasantrao (3) and Baboo Beer Kishore Suhye Singh v. Baboo Hur Bullub Narain Singh (4), distinguished.

Attestation of a deed by itself estops a man from denying nothing whatever except that he witnessed the execution of the deed, and by itself it does not show that he consented to the transaction which the document effects. When, however, in addition to the fact that he attested the deed, there is evidence to show that he took an active part in the consultation which resulted in the transaction and acquiesced in it afterwards, it is a legitimate inference to draw from such evidence that he not only witnessed the execution of the mortgage by the mortgagor, but also that he consented to the transaction. [p. 24, col. 1.]

On a question of pure fact, namely, whether the signature on a certain document was genuine, the trial Court, which had the opportunity of seeing the witnesses give their evidence, accepted their evidence and decided in favour of the genuineness of the signature. The learned Judges of the High Court, who did not see the witnesses, rejected their evidence and came to the contrary conclusion:

Held, by the Judicial Committee, that there were no cogent reasons for overruling the finding of fact arrived at by the trial Court. [p. 23, col. 2.]

• Appeal from a judgment of the High Court, Lahore (Harrison and Zafar Ali, JJ.), dated the 22nd July, 1923, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 18th October, 1918.

Messrs. De Gruyther, K. C., and Dube, for the Appellants.

Mr. Raikes, for the Respondent.

[LORD SINHA.—Bhagwan Singh was acting for himself and as managing member of the family, in consenting to the mortgage. Whatever he did, he did on behalf of the family and his two nephews. It was a recognition of the mortgage by himself and the two boys.]

Mr. Raikes refers to s. 115 of the Indian Evidence Act.

[LORD SUMNER.—Estoppel against the father is estoppel against all.]

[LORD SINHA.—Bhagwan Singh recognized the mortgage on behalf of the family.]

[SIR LANCELOT SANDERSON.—This Board has held that mere attestation of a deed is not an estoppel. We must distinguish that case here.]

Mr. Raikes cites Pandurang Krishnaji v. Markandaya Tukaram (1).

[LORD SINHA.—Here we have much more than mere attestation.]

JUDGMENT.

Sir Lancelot Sanderson.—This is an appeal by the legal representatives of Bishen Singh, who was the defendant No. 1 in the suit, against the judgment and decree of the High Court of Judicature at Lahore, dated the 22nd July, 1923. The High Court's judgment reversed the judgment and decree of the learned Subordinate Judge, who tried the suit.

The suit was brought in July, 1917, by the plaintiff, Ujagar Singh, against Bishen Singh and two other defendants, viz. Abdul Rahman Khan, sometimes called Balwant Singh, and Jaswant Singh, sons of Gurbaksh Singh, to recover possession of the land mentioned in the plaint, situate in the Gujranwala District, which was alleged by the plaintiff to have been part of the ancestral property of Hira Singh, the grandfather of the plaintiff.

The plaintiff alleged that the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 had a half-share in the said property, but that, by reason of a private partition, they had taken other lands in exchange for their share in the suit land, that consequently they had no further interest therein, and that they have recognised the claim of the plaintiff to the lands in suit, which had been held by Musammatal Malan.

The defendant, Bishen Singh, was in actual possession of the lands in suit, and relied upon a mortgage executed on the 6th May, 1896, by Musammatal Malan, who was one of the widows of Hira Singh. A pedigree of the family is included in the respondent's case in this appeal, and is as follows:—

The plaintiff alleged that Musammatal Malan had no power of alienation of the land in dispute and that he was in no way bound by the mortgage.

The defendant, Bishen Singh, then put in a further pleading, alleging that Musammatal Malan mortgaged the land for valid necessity, for payment of debts, and for expenses incurred in connection with the marriages of her daughters.

The defendant further stated that if the mortgage money, interest and costs were paid he had no objection to release the land.

The learned Subordinate Judge held that Musammatal Malan had limited powers of alienation but that the mortgage was executed for valid necessity, and that it was binding on the plaintiff. He held further that the suit was barred by the Indian Limitation Act.

(1) 65 Ind. Cas. 954; 49 O. 334; 26 O. W. N. 201; 3 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 85; 20 A. L. J. 305; 42 M. L. J. 436; 15 L. W. 486; 30 M. L. T. 249; 35 O. L. J. 409; 24 Bom. L. R. 557; 18 N. L. R. 1; A. I. R. 1922 P. O. 20; 49 I. A. 16 (P. O.).

In the ordinary course the plaintiff's suit would have been dismissed, but the learned Judge said that "Having regard to the fact that the case has been dragged on for pretty long time, and the defendant No. 1 is not disinclined to redeem the lands provided he is paid his charges and the costs of improvements, I think the plaintiff may be allowed to redeem the lands in this case."

He accordingly made a decree in the plaintiff's favour for possession of the land in dispute, provided the plaintiff paid Rs. 8,734-4-0 in addition to the cost of buildings to be determined thereafter which had been built by the defendant, Bishen Singh; and he directed that the parties should bear their own costs.

Both the plaintiff and the defendant, Bishen Singh, appealed to the High Court; the two appeals were heard together, and disposed of by one judgment on the 22nd July, 1923.

The learned Judges of the High Court were of opinion that no necessity whatever had been proved for the mortgage. They, therefore, allowed the plaintiff's appeal, and gave the plaintiff a decree for possession of the land in suit without any payment.

The defendant's cross-appeal was dismissed, and it was directed that his representative should pay the plaintiff's costs in both appeals and in the trial Court.

The High Court did not deal with the question of limitation; but this is now of no importance in view of the fact that the learned Counsel who argued this appeal on behalf of the appellants stated that he did not rely on that point.

In the first place the question of necessity may be dealt with.

The learned Judges of the High Court came to the conclusion that Musammat Malan had ample funds to meet the expenses of the marriages of her daughters, and that the defendant No. 1 had failed to establish any necessity whatever for borrowing money.

This opinion was largely based upon the interpretation which the learned Judges placed upon what is referred to in the judgment as "the estimate."

Their Lordships were informed that the so-called "estimate" is contained in a statement made by one Amir Shah before a Munshi in certain proceedings in which Bishen Singh was the decree-holder and Musammat Malan was the judgmentdebtor. The learned Judges said that—"At the time, therefore, that the money was borrowed the income of the widow, far from having been Rs. 1,921, as shown in the estimate, must have been approximately Rs. 3,350, thus leaving a margin over and above her ordinary expenditure of over Rs. 1,300 per annum."

It was argued on behalf of the appellants that the above-mentioned "estimate" did not show the widow's income to be Rs. 1,921, as stated by the learned Judges, but that it appeared from the statement that the income available to the widow, Musammat Malan, in respect of the lands referred to therein was Rs. 420-5-2 only, and that her expenses amounted to about Rs. 396.

It was admitted by the learned Counsel, who appeared for the plaintiff-respondent, that in this respect the learned Judges of the High Court had made a slip, and that he could not support the finding of the High Court on this point on the grounds stated in the judgment.

The hearing was adjourned in order that the learned Counsel should consider whether the finding of the High Court on the issue of necessity could be supported on other materials in the record.

Having heard the learned Counsel further their Lordships are of opinion that no sufficient ground has been shown for interfering with the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge on this question, viz., that the income from the lands at the material time was hardly sufficient to meet the ordinary expenses of the family, that Musammat Malan had no alternative and was compelled to resort to borrowing in order to meet the extraordinary expenses of the marriages of her daughters, and that the mortgage-deed was executed for consideration and valid necessity.

It was, however, further argued by the learned Counsel for the plaintiff-respondent that, even assuming the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge on the question of necessity to be correct, that did not dispose of the case, and that the plaintiff was entitled to hold the decree, which he obtained in the High Court on other grounds.

It appears that Hira Singh died in 1875, leaving two widows, viz., Musammat Rajindar Kuar and Musammat Malan; two sons by the first-named wife, viz., Bhagwan

Singh and Gurbaksh Singh; and two daughters by Musammatt Malan.

On the 17th December, 1887, an agreement was entered into by Gurbaksh Singh, Musammatt Malan, Musammatt Rajindar Kuar, and Raiman Singh, as guardian for Bhagwan Singh, who was then a minor.

It was recited that Hira Singh, deceased, owned the lands therein described, that they were then entered in the names of Gurbaksh Singh and Bhagwan Singh in the official papers, that for settlement of mutual disputes and to make arrangements for maintenance and expenses the parties had agreed to divide the entire estate into the following shares, viz.—

Gurbaksh Singh one-fourth share, Bhagwan Singh (minor) one-fourth share, Musammatt Malan with her daughter till death, without power of alienation one-fourth share, and Musammatt Rajindar Kuar till her death, without the power of alienation one-fourth share.

It was agreed that the lands in dispute were part of the one fourth share allotted by the agreement to Musammatt Malan.

The agreement further stated as follows:—

"As for the marriage of the daughter of Musammatt Malan, which is yet to be celebrated, a mutual settlement in regard to the expenses thereof shall at the time of the marriage be made through a panchayat."

The agreement was executed "by way of a deed of mutual partition," so that no dispute might arise.

It was argued on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent that Musammatt Malan had not the estate of a Hindu widow, that no question of necessity for alienation arose, but that she had merely a one-fourth share in the estate for her life, with no power of alienation whatever, and that, therefore, the mortgage which she executed in favour of Bishen Singh was invalid and of no effect.

One answer set up on behalf of Bishen Singh to this case was that, after the death of Hira Singh, entry as to ownership was made in the Revenue Papers according to the aforementioned shares, that he had no knowledge of the agreement, and that such agreement was never acted upon.

The defendant further alleged that the plaintiff's father and the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 admitted by their acts and conduct that no such agreement existed, and that, if there was one, it was cancelled.

Issues were raised at the trial in respect of this point, viz.:

4 (a) Did the plaintiff's father attest the deed (i. e., the mortgage-deed), and by so doing, was he estopped from challenging its validity, and was the plaintiff for this reason estopped from contesting it?

4 (b) Did the plaintiff's father and defendants Nos. 2 and 3 acquiesce in the alienation in favour of defendant No. 1 by their conduct?

The learned Subordinate Judge decided these issues against the plaintiff, and held that the plaintiff was debarred from contesting the validity of the mortgage.

The High Court held that the evidence given on behalf of the defendant was not sufficient to establish the genuineness of the signature of the plaintiff's father on the mortgage-deed.

Evidence on this point was given by Bishen Singh, the defendant, who said that Bhagwan Singh (the father of the plaintiff) asked him to get the deed written and that he would attest it and get it registered, and that the mortgage-deed was executed with the consent of the plaintiff's father, and that it was attested by him.

Amir Shah, a patwari confirmed this evidence, and said that Bhagwan Singh signed the mortgage-deed in his presence, that Musammatt Malan and Bhagwan Singh consulted together, and that in order to pay off debt they mortgaged the lands.

The learned Subordinate Judge had the opportunity of seeing these witnesses give their evidence, and he accepted it.

The learned Judges of the High Court, who did not see the witnesses, rejected their evidence as insufficient to establish the genuineness of Bhagwan's signature on the mortgage-deed, for the reasons stated in this judgment.

Their Lordships are unable to agree that the reasons given by the High Court are sufficient to justify the overruling of the finding of fact arrived at by the learned Subordinate Judge on this point, and they are of opinion that the signature of Bhagwan Singh as a witness to the mortgage-deed must be taken to be a genuine signature for the purposes of this case!

This does not conclude the matter, for attestation of a deed by itself estops a man from denying nothing whatever except that he witnessed the execution of the deed, and by itself it does not show that he consented to the transaction which the document effects.

In this case, however, in their Lordships' opinion, there is abundant evidence, in addition to the fact that Bhagwan Singh attested the deed, to show that he consented to and acquiesced in the execution of the mortgage by Musammam Malan. There is the evidence, to which reference has already been made, which goes to show that Bhagwan Singh not only consented to the transaction, but took an active part in the consultations which resulted in the mortgage of the lands by Musammam Malan.

Further, there is the significant fact that in June, 1896, i. e., a month after the mortgage was executed, Bhagwan Singh entered into an agreement with Bishen Singh, whereby in effect he obtained an option to have the mortgage transferred to him.

On the consideration of all the evidence their Lordships are of opinion that Bhagwan Singh not only witnessed the execution of the mortgage by Musammam Malan, but also that he, in his capacity of managing member of the joint family, consented to and acquiesced in the mortgage being given, and that this appeal must be decided upon the basis of that finding.

The learned Counsel for the plaintiff-respondent further contended that, even if Bhagwan Singh would have been estopped from denying the validity of Musammam Malan's mortgage, the plaintiff is not so estopped, because the plaintiff does not claim through his father, but as a member of a joint Hindu family to which the Mitakshara Law applies, and he cited the cases of Wasantrao v. Anandrao (2), Anandrao v. Vasantrao (3) and Baboo Beer Kishore Suhye Singh v. Baboo Hur Bullub Narain Singh (4).

These decisions are not applicable to the facts of this case. It appears from the plaint that the plaintiff was only five months old at the time when Bhagwan Singh died, viz., in 1899. The mortgage was executed in May, 1896; it is, therefore, clear that the plaintiff was not born at the time when the mortgage was executed; so that even if the Mitakshara Law applies without any qualification, the plaintiff is not entitled to contest the validity of the mortgage, for at the time when it was executed the plaintiff had no interest in the family property, and Bhagwan Singh acquiesced in the execution thereof; and in the circumstances of this case it is clear that he was acting not only on behalf of himself, but also on behalf of all the members of the family who were alive at that time.

The result is that the plaintiff's claim fails and that the appellants are entitled to possession under the mortgage, and such consequential relief as can be given under s. 144 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Their Lordships, therefore, will humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be allowed, that the judgment and decree of the High Court, dated the 22nd July, 1923, should be set aside, that the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed, and that the plaintiff should pay the costs of the appellants in this appeal and the costs of the defendant Bishen Singh and his legal representatives in both the Courts in India.

K. J. R.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitor for the Appellants:—Mr. H. S. L. Polak.

Solicitors for the Respondent:—Messrs. Ranken, Ford & Chester.

[Note.—The plaintiff's family in the above case were Jat zemindars (Sudras) and were governed, in matters of alienation, not by the orthodox Hindu Law, but by the Customary Law of the Punjab applicable to agricultural classes. As Sir John Edge observed, in delivering the judgment of the Board in Ramkishore v. Jainarayan, 64 Ind. Cas. 782; 49 C. 120; 17 N. L. R. 163; 15 L. W. 144; (1922) M. W. N. 125; 30 M. L. T. 144; 42 M. L. J. 80; A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 2; 26 C. W. N. 881; 20 A. L. J. 857; 48 I. A. 405 (P. C.), "in some parts of Northern India customs which are at variance with the law of the Mitakshara, as recognized by the School of Benares, have been for long consistently followed and acted upon." The distinction here pointed out is not adverted to in their Lordships' judgment, now reported, but apparently nothing material turned upon it—K. J. R.]

(2) 6 Bom. L. R. 925.

(3) 9 Bom. L. R. 595; 11 C. W. N. 478; 5 C. L. J. 338; 2 M. L. T. 151; 17 M. L. J. 184 (P. C.).

(4) 7 W. R. 502.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

November 24, 1927.

Present.—Viscount Sumner, Lord Sinha, Sir John Wallis, and Sir Lancelot Sanderson.

SIR BISSESSAR DAS DAGA AND OTHERS

—DECREE-HOLDERS—APPELLANTS

versus

EMMANUEL VAS AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-

DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Compromise decree—Construction—Provision for payment of damages no bar to specific enforcement—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 20.

A compromise decree provided (by cl. 2) that the judgment-debtors would be restrained from selling or otherwise alienating manganese ore from their mines to any third party until they had delivered certain quantities of the ore to the decree-holders, the deliveries being spread over a period of 8 years. Clause 10 of the compromise made provision for non-delivery in any particular year and imposed a liability on the judgment-debtors to pay damages to the decree-holders at a rate therein specified.

Held, reading the contract (i. e., the compromise decree) as a whole and taking all its terms together, that the judgment-debtors could not repudiate their obligations under the contract by merely paying to the decree-holders the penalty calculated in accordance with cl. 10 aforesaid, that the compromise agreement was one for the non-performance of which mere payment of the specified sum of money would not be an adequate relief and, that in spite of cl. 10, the contract could be specifically enforced. [p. 28, col. 1.]

Appeal from a judgment of the Court of the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner (Baker, J. C., and Kotval, A. J. C.), dated the 24th March, 1924, dismissing an appeal from an order of the District Judge, Nagpur, dated the 5th November, 1923, rejecting the appellants' application for execution of a decree of the District Judge, Nagpur, made on the compromise of a suit between the parties and dated the 28th February, 1922.

FACTS.—As the appeal to His Majesty in Council turned on the construction of the said compromise decree, the relevant passages are quoted here in full:—

By cl. 2 the defendants "are restrained from selling the ore from their mines mentioned in the agreement, dated 1st March, 1916, or mortgaging, or otherwise alienating their mines or any interest therein, or the ore thereof, except the excess quantity specifically allowed to be sold under cl. (8) of this decree, until they have delivered the whole of the balance of 31,234 tons of ore containing 48 per cent. of metallic manganese, which has remained to be delivered to the plaintiffs and which they agree and are hereby ordered to deliver in the following manner and subject to the following conditions".

Clause (3) deals with the delivery of 4,000 tons of ore per annum during the years beginning on the 15th February, 1922, and ending on the 14th February, 1929, and of 3,234 tons during the year 15th February, 1929, to 14th February, 1930.

Clause (4) provides that the ore should not contain less than 46 per cent. metallic manganese.

Clauses (5), (6) and (7) refer to the manner in which the ore has to be tendered, analysed, weighed and paid for, and lays down that disputes regarding the analysis shall not excuse the defendants from delivering the full quantity of ore of stipulated grade in the course of the year.

Clause (8) allows the defendants to sell any surplus quantity of ore in any year after delivery of the full quantity of 4,000 tons to the plaintiffs.

Clause (9) refers to payments, the price being Rs. 8 per ton of 48 per cent. of metallic manganese ore with a reduction of 8 annas per unit in the event of falling below that standard.

Clause (10) is the most important clause for the purpose of the present appeal and must be given in full: It recites: "That in the event of the defendants failing to deliver the full quantity of 4,000 tons of ore of the stipulated grade in any particular year, or violating any of the conditions of this compromise, the defendants shall pay to the plaintiffs damages at the rate of Re. 1 (rupee one) per ton on the whole of the quantity which may then have remained undelivered out of the total quantity of 31,234 tons and the same shall be recovered by execution of this decree."

Mr. Lowndes, K. C. (with him Mr. Pritt, K. C.), for the Appellants.—Refers to National Provincial Bank v. Marshall (1).

[LORD SUMNER.—Can we import all the doctrines of Equity in India?]

(1) (1889) 40 Ch. D. 112; 58 L. J. Ch. 229; 60 L. T. 311; 37 W. R. 183; 53 J. P. 356.

Mr. Lowndes reads from the judgment in National Provincial Bank v. Marshall (1), and argues that the doctrines of the English Courts of Equity are applicable to India. The Courts there are Courts of Equity and are directed to act according to equity, justice and good conscience.

[LORD SINHA.—It is purely a question of construction of the compromise decree in the present case.]

Mr. Lowndes cites s. 20, Specific Relief Act: "A contract, otherwise proper to be specifically enforced, may be thus enforced, though a sum be named in it as the amount to be paid in case of its breach, and the party in default is willing to pay the same." The principle underlying that section is also applicable here.

[LORD SINHA.—After all, it is a question of construing cl. 10 of the compromise.]

Mr. Raikes, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Viscount Sumner.—On the 5th November, 1923, two applications came on for hearing before the Additional District Judge of Nagpur in execution proceedings taken in Suit No. 4 of 1921. The first in date was that of the present respondents, defendants and judgment-debtors in the suit, for leave to deposit Rs. 28,649-2-9 to be paid over to the decree-holders, and for an order declaring the decree to have been thus fully satisfied. The other was that of the decree-holders for execution of their decree by seizure and delivery to them of certain manganese ore, alleged to be lying at several mines and railway sidings and by the appointment of a receiver and other relief. The respondents, having got wind of the appellants' intention to apply to the Court, lodged their application first, but nothing turns on this. The learned Judge, holding that under the decree the judgment-debtors were entitled to take the course proposed, granted their application and held that the decree-holders were not entitled to the relief prayed but must take in satisfaction the amount deposited by the judgment-debtors, and his determination was affirmed on appeal by the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces. The case now comes to their Lordships' Board on the construction of the decree in question and particularly of cl. 10, which is as follows:—

"10. That in the event of the defendant failing to deliver the full quantity of 4,000 tons of ore of the stipulated grade in any particular year or violating any of the conditions of this compromise, the defendants shall pay to plaintiffs damages at the rate of Re. 1 (rupee one) per ton on the whole of the quantity which may then have remained undelivered out of the total quantity of 31,234 tons and the same shall be recovered by execution of this decree."

On the 1st March, 1916, the respondents, a syndicate possessed of and working manganese mines and dealing in the ore produced there, had contracted with K. Ettlinger & Co., of London, for the purchase of 38,000 tons of their manganese ore by instalments over an extended period. The contract contained provisions to secure to the buyers the exclusive supply of the sellers' ore till the contract quantity had been worked out. At the end of the year the benefit of this contract was assigned to the present appellants by the Official Liquidator under the war legislation applicable, and deliveries of ore under it and payments for purposes connected with it were made for some time. In 1921 the buyers commenced the suit, No. 4 of 1921, above mentioned, alleging deliveries of ore by the defendants to third parties in breach of the contract to the extent of over 1,000 tons and claiming a mandatory injunction and other relief. The defendants in their written statement alleged that the contract was all along wholly void as constituting a trading with the enemy; that the assignment of it was invalid; that their deliveries of ore to third parties were justifiable on various grounds; and that the appellants on their side were guilty of numerous breaches of contract.

The suit proceeded as far as the formulation of the issues, but they were never tried. The parties arrived at an agreement of compromise, and the terms, with one variation, which their Lordships agree with the Judicial Commissioner's Court in thinking immaterial for present purposes, were embodied in the compromise decree of the 28th February, 1922, out of which the execution proceedings now in question arose. It is entitled in the suit; it recites that "this suit coming on this day for final disposal.....it is hereby ordered and decreed in terms of the compromise arrived at between the parties and sanctioned by the Court," and it then sets out the agreed clauses. The second of these restrains the defendants from selling ore from the mines mentioned in the agreement of the 1st March, 1916, or alienating the mines themselves (except as provided in cl. 8), till they have delivered the whole remaining balance of 31,234 tons. The third provides for deliveries at the rate of 4,000 tons per year for seven successive years ending in February, 1929, with a balance delivery of 3,234 tons in the next and final year. Then follow provisions for the quality of the ore to be delivered and for determination of that quality by analysis; for tender of each lot in writing, with particulars of the mine of origin and the place of delivery, each lot not being less than 500 tons, with liberty to the defendants in case they raise more than 4,000 tons in one year to sell the surplus to third parties, giving notice of the same with full particulars to the plaintiffs. Clause 9 fixes the price payable by the plaintiffs at Rs. 8 per ton. Then follows cl. 10 quoted above. The general tenor of this agreed decree shows that, like the original agreement on which it is founded, the parties had in contemplation the execution and completion of this contract by actual deliveries in annual instalments, the performance being secured by the present grant of an injunction preventing the defendants from finding any alternative market for their ore.

Seventeen months later the decree-holders filed their application for execution, alleging that the first 4,000 tons had been short-delivered by about 1,240 tons, and that only 60 tons more had been delivered in the first half of the second year. In the judgment-debtors' statement in reply to the application the substantial correctness of these figures is admitted with the additional allegation that their best efforts had not enabled them to deliver any more. It also mentions, what was no doubt a material factor in the dispute, that "price of the manganese has at present gone very high," and in their judgment of the 24th March, 1924, the Judicial Commissioner's Court mention that the price was then, as they were informed, about Rs. 25. It may accordingly be taken that the business object of the compromise was to get the supply of ore at Rs. 8 continued for years to come, and the business object of the breach was to put an early stop to so ruinous a loss by bringing the contract to an end. The question is whether cl. 10 permitted this to be done,

The appellants point out that this clause provides for liquidated damages and that without it the decree would only be capable of execution by enforcing the injunction. In order to ascertain the sum, for which execution should go, it would be necessary to bring a suit or suits to have the damages ascertained. Clause 10 is, therefore, a clause in the decree-holders' favour in the first instance. Though by saving time and costs it may really benefit the debtor as well in the long run, it is not framed as a clause mainly intended for the debtor's convenience. In a sense it is an option to the buyer, for, if he does not choose to seek an order for delivery of specific ore, he is able to ask for execution as of a judgment for a calculable sum of money, but in no sense can it be construed as an option to the seller, when it no longer suits him to go on with the contract, to buy back at an advance of only Re. 1 per ton the whole of the undelivered portion of the contract. Why restrain the judgment-debtors from delivering their ore to third parties, if in effect they can do so at will on merely paying the agreed forfeit? This virtually makes cl. 2 inoperative. It would be a strange result of a compromise, aiming at the continuance of deliveries, to authorise the seller to repudiate his obligations and, taking advantage of his own wrong, to end the matter at his own selected moment by a pre arranged payment, which might not be an adequate compensation at all.

The argument for the respondents and the reasoning, on which both Courts below proceeded, is the same. All the clauses of the decree are indeed to be read together, but cl. 10 controls cl. 2. Payment of sums calculated in accordance with cl. 10, if the seller chooses to make it, will be a sufficient compliance with the whole decree and, in spite of non-delivery, of by far the greater part of the deliverable quantity, no further relief will be available to the decree-holders. The clause contains no words limiting the case provided for to failures arising from causes beyond the sellers' control; but it does say that the provision as regards the damages "shall" operate on the defendants' violating any of the conditions of the compromise and it must be enforced as it stands. Among the principal conditions are the sellers' obligation not to deliver to third parties, an act from which they consented to be restrained, but, if they delivered to others in violation of this restriction as the Court plainly understood that they had done, it was also in violation of the conditions of the contract, and would only result in bringing into play the penalty named in cl. 10. The learned Judges recognised that this construction rendered nugatory the stipulated restraint upon selling elsewhere, and enabled the defendants to escape the consequences of a wilful breach of contract, consisting in the withholding from the decree-holders of ore actually in their possession and capable of being delivered to the plaintiffs, by simply paying Re. 1 per ton as liquidated damages. Why the decree should begin by forbidding delivery to third parties except in a named case under cl. 8, and then end by giving permission to do so to any extent in case a different event happened under cl. 10, is not explained or explicable.

It must be borne in mind that there are two distinct breaches, for which the decree provides. There is delivery of ore to third parties, except as authorised by cl. 8, for which an appropriate relief is an injunction, and there is failure to deliver the agreed quantities to the decree-holders, for which damages, liquidated or not, will be the proper remedy. Their Lordships do not think that they are constrained to a construction of cl. 10, which will enable the judgment-debtors to render nugatory all their obligations under the prior part of the contract, whenever it suits their pockets to do so. Clause 10 provides that they shall pay at the specified rate, if they fail to perform the contract in any respect, but it does not say that such payment is to be [a full and exclusive satisfaction of all obligations under the contract. The payment into Court does not make the decree a satisfied decree. It provides a mode of enforcing such payment—"the same shall be recovered by execution of this decree"—but it does not say that the other terms shall not be enforced by execution of the decree, namely, by applying to the Court to enforce the injunction. The sellers have to show some cause in argument why they should not obey the injunction to which they have consented. They cannot do so merely by pointing to a clause, which provides an alternative remedy, under which they "shall" pay so much by way of liquidated damages, if a money payment is sought at all. Reading the contract as a whole and taking all its terms together is a very different thing from reading it so that its final clause defeats the whole object of the agreement. Such a meaning even the debtors never could have intended unless they deliberately proposed to lay a trap for the decree-holders. As the clause stands it provides a remedy for the decree-holders without stipulating for the debtors any corresponding discharge of the injunction. It does not even cover all the possible events, in which the contract might be broken, for, if before the time had arrived for any performance at all, the judgment-debtors had announced that they would never perform it in any respect, this would have been an anticipatory breach, for which unliquidated damages would be recoverable if the decree-holders chose so to treat it, but, not being a breach of any of the conditions, that is the expressed conditions, it would be outside of cl. 10. On the other hand, an unintentional failure to satisfy all the requirements of cl. 5 would be as much a violation of a condition as a deliberate diversion of the ore to other buyers and failure to deliver the full or any quantity to the decree-holders, and, on the respondents' contention, would equally imperatively require payment of the expressed forfeit, cl. 2 notwithstanding. The chapter of accidents equally with the deliberate pursuit of gain might thus bring the whole scheme to an end at the outset before any ore had been delivered, or again, by a combination of luck and care the sellers might keep the contract going till it became profitable to them to break it, and then bring it to an end whenever they pleased. This is not giving to a business contract a construction that will give it the efficacy which the parties must have intended at the outset. The compromise agreement is one for the non-performance of which mere payment of this sum of money would not be an adequate relief and, in spite of cl. 10, the contract is otherwise proper to be specifically enforced. Accordingly their Lordships think that this appeal succeeds.

In the view which they took of the construction the Courts below rightly refrained from expressing any opinion as to the relief, which might be proper, if the contrary construction were adopted or as to the extent to which a remedy under cl. 10 would be available to the decree-holders concurrently with other appropriate remedies in the circumstances. These and similar questions remain to be determined by the Court, which will dispose of the decree-holders' application. The proper course will be to declare, that cl. 10 of the compromise decree of 28th February, 1922, does not, on a true construction, afford to the judgment-debtors any answer to the petition for execution of it, presented by the decree-holders; to allow the appeal of the decree-holders with costs here and below; to set aside the decisions of both Courts in favour of the judgment-debtors, and to remit the application of the decree-holders to the Court of the District Judge of Nagpur to be dealt with, in accordance with the above declaration and otherwise as may be right, and their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

K. J. B.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. Lattey & Dave.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. Watkins & Hunter.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE MADRAS HIGH COURT.

November 17, 1927.

Present:—Lord Chancellor, Lord Carson and Lord Darling.

SUKDEVDOSS RAMPRASAD—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Diwan Bahadur GOVINDOSS

CHATHURBHUJADOSS AND COMPANY—

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 30—Wagering contract—Contract for sale and purchase of goods—Speculation not equivalent to wagering—Contract contemplating payment of differences only—“Patta patti.”

The mere fact that a contract for sale and purchase of goods is of a highly speculative character, cannot alone vitiate the transaction as a wagering contract within the meaning of s. 30 of the Contract Act, 1872. To produce that result there must be proof that the contract was entered into upon the terms that performance of the contract should not be demanded, but that differences only should become payable. [p. 32, col. 1.]

[Where no such definite agreement or understanding was proved, and it appeared that delivery of the goods might always have been insisted on, the Judicial Committee held (differing from the Court of Appeal in India) that the contract was not bad on the ground of wagering, notwithstanding that it would have been considered bad form, among the parties (merchants of Madras), to have made such a demand for delivery].

[The incidents of patta patti considered.]

Appeal from an appellate decree of the High Court, Madras (Justice Sir Kumaraswami Sastri and Krishnan, J.), dated the 29th April, 1925, and reported as 93 Ind. Cas. 169, varying a decree of the same Court on the Original Side made by Mr. Justice Coutts Trotter, dated the 4th October, 1923.

FACTS.—The material facts are given in their Lordships' judgment, and also in the judgments of Sastri and Krishnan, J.J., in the Court of Appeal (reported as 93 Ind. Cas. 169), where all the relevant authorities are cited and elaborately discussed.

As the Privy Council approve of the reasoning of the learned trial Judge, and the question is one of far-reaching importance, Coutts-Trotter, J.'s judgment is reproduced below verbatim:—

“The plaintiffs' case on the face of their plaint is simply a claim for the price of goods sold and delivered. It is not contended that the actual goods were delivered. It is admitted that documents purporting to be delivery orders on which delivery of the goods could be demanded passed between the parties. The defence is a somewhat unusual one, namely, that the transactions were not really sales of goods at all, but were in the nature of gaming and wagering. The only thing that I find in the evidence in support of that contention is the fact that the goods after passing from the plaintiffs to the defendants and going through other hands ultimately reverted by purchase to the plaintiffs. That is obviously not conclusive. A buyer may sell with the knowledge that the person to whom he sells will pass on the goods, and if the market is rapid and transfers take place quickly he may very well contemplate that the person who ultimately claims the goods may be the last of a long chain of buyers, and if the market were against him when he is called upon to deliver he might well think it to be the wisest course to buy back the goods at the end of the circle and wait for an advance in the market price. Thus it may happen that a perfectly legitimate series of transactions take place without the goods having physically left his possession and it may well be that the state of the market was such that the documents of title to the goods, in this case called patta pattis, changed hands so rapidly that the seller in each particular case may have thought it extremely improbable that he would ever be called upon to give delivery to his immediate buyer. As I understand the law as laid down in the leading English cases and it is obvious that the defence in this case is based upon those cases—that is not enough; you must not only have a state of things in which both parties contemplate that delivery would not in fact be likely to be demanded, but you must have a definite agreement that delivery could not in any event be demanded without a breach of the understanding between the parties. The defendants' own witnesses negate the supposition that such an understanding existed here. They all agree that they would have been compelled to take, or entitled to ask for delivery, as the case may be, unless and until they had passed a patta patti, which is in fact a document of title to the goods, to their sub-purchaser. That being the defendants' evidence, I think their case fails on their own showing, and that, however much one may suspect that the speculative element entered into these transactions, as no doubt it did, that suspicion cannot translate itself into a determination that these were gaming transactions. If the merchants of Madras desire to enter upon the dangerous and slippery path of gambling in differences and at the same time reserve to themselves the right of setting up that not over honest defence, they must learn its technique a little better than they have done in this case. My judgment is that the goods were sold, that the transfer of patta pattis was in fact a delivery, and that the plaintiffs must have a decree for the amount claimed with costs and interest at 6 per cent. till payment. The defendants, of course, will have their remedy over against the persons who bought on the same terms from them."

Messrs. Stuart Bevan, K. C., and K. Brown, for the Appellant.

Messrs. A. T. Miller, K. C., and Narasimham, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Darling.—This is an appeal against a decree of the High Court of Judicature at Madras, dated the 29th April, 1925, varying a decree of the same Court on the Original Side made by Mr. Justice Coutts-Trotter on the 4th October, 1923.

In the original suit the plaintiffs (the present appellants) claimed the sum of Rs. 65,255, the price of goods sold and delivered by the appellants to the respondents.

In answer to this claim, the respondents pleaded as follows:—

"The plaintiffs, defendants and certain other merchants formed a group, and it was agreed by and between the merchants of the group that the transactions had among them should take place on the footing that no deliveries should be intended or asked for, that patta pattis or delivery orders should be issued to the respective purchasers, that after the delivery orders were sent round and the same ultimately reached the hands of the original vendors; the patta pattis should be exchanged and hawala chits issued, that accounts should be taken thereafter on the footing of the exchange of patta pattis or delivery orders, and that the respective vendors should be entitled to the difference in prices from the respective purchasers."

The respondents also pleaded that there was no actual delivery of the goods of which the price was sued for, that appellants never were in a position to deliver them, and that it never was intended that delivery should take place. The respondents further pleaded that the contracts were void as being wagering contracts for the payment of differences only.

It was proved or conceded that as regards the goods in question no delivery took place, but that documents purporting to be delivery orders were made which passed through several hands, and that within one week all the goods—so far as any ever existed—were in the hands of the appellants, which, indeed, they had never left.

This resulted from the fact that in respect to each re-sale what is described as patta patti was made—a process which resulted in differences merely, according to the fluctuations of the market, being recoverable, instead of the goods or their price.

The trial Judge held that the documents which purported to be orders for delivery were so in fact, and were equivalent to delivery of the goods themselves. He rejected the contention that these dealings were wagering contracts merely, and he gave judgment in favour of the appellants for Rs. 65,255 and interest. This judgment was set aside by the Court of Appeal, the Judges holding that the contracts were entirely wagering ones incapable of giving any right of action. Judgment in regard to them was, therefore, entered for respondents.

To succeed in this action for the price of goods it is necessary for appellants to prove that the goods were actually delivered—and this was never contended—otherwise that some document of title was given to the respondents which would oblige the custodian of the goods to hand them over to the holder of it.

On the Madras market were several merchants who bought and sold amongst themselves such goods as those to which this suit relates—and it was proved that the very goods here in question had first been sold by the appellants to the respondents. No delivery of the goods was then made, but they were sold by the respondents, and re-sold by the purchasers again and again—no delivery of goods ever being made—until at last the goods were re-purchased by the appellants themselves, who now claim against the respondents the full price, as for goods sold and delivered.

It was proved that whenever one of these particular sales was made a document was given to the purchaser. Many of these documents were exhibited in this case, notably the one now to be set out.

EXHIBIT III.

Delivery order given to Govindoss Chathurbujadoss.

Dated 27-11-1922.

No. 784.

Delivery order.

Sukdevadoss Ramprasad,

Bankers, Importers, Yarn Merchants and Commission Agents,

101, Mint Street, Georgetown, Madras.

To

Govindoss Chathurbujadoss.

Description.	Bales.	Bundles.
No. 40s Japan.	25	1,000

November vaida.

Received 25 bales of 40s Japan patta patti with M. Amritlal

(Signed) Trimbaklal, for B. G. C. & Co.
27-11-1922.

It will be observed that this document is headed "delivery order"—and for the appellants it was contended that this entitled the holder of it to demand the actual delivery of the goods.

But it was replied that, however, that might have been originally, the words "received 25 bales of 40s Japan patta patti with M. Amritlal" showed that it is not now a document of title giving its holder a right to demand delivery of the goods, but simply a link in a chain or series of notes showing that no actual transfer of goods was contemplated, but merely a final payment of differences resulting from the making—and non-performance—of a number of contracts of sale.

A good deal of evidence was given as to the meaning of the words "patta patti with," and it appears certain that when once patta patti is made the buyer has no longer a right to demand the goods themselves, nor is the seller obliged to deliver them, but the matter should be settled by the payment and acceptance of the difference resulting from the sale and re-sale of the goods.

This being so, it was contended on behalf of the respondents that the contract in question was a wagering contract. There can be no doubt that these various contracts were in character highly speculative; but, as was pointed out by the trial Judge and by the Judges on appeal, that is insufficient in itself to render them void as wagering contracts. The authorities cited show that to produce that result there must be proof that the contracts were entered into upon the terms that performance of the contracts should not be demanded, but that differences only should become payable.

Now, in the present case no such definite agreement or understanding was proved; in some instances of other sales between these parties there was no patta patti and delivery was given and taken, and so here, unless and until patta patti was made, delivery might always have been insisted on. There can be little doubt, however, that to have made such a demand would, among these merchants, have been considered bad form. Gamblers have their own code of honour, and expect its observance, although they cannot ensure it; and we know that "even the wild outlaw in his forest walk keeps yet some touch of civil government." But the law does not affect to enforce mere courtesies.

The trial Judge held that notwithstanding the fact that patta patti had been made or agreed in the contracts relating to these goods, the appellants were still entitled to recover the price of them, since the documents which passed between the parties were valid delivery orders on presentation of which the goods might be demanded. This was evidently not the view taken by the Judges in the Court of Appeal; but they did not go at length into this matter, because they held that the contracts represented nothing but wagering transactions—and, therefore, gave the appellants no rights whatever.

In the opinion of their Lordships the contracts relied on were not bad on the ground of wagering, and that for the reasons given by the trial Judge. They, therefore, do not concur in the judgments appealed from in so far as wagering is concerned. But from those judgments it appears that the Judges of the Court of Appeal were prepared to hold that the appellants were not in a position to deliver the goods they had sold, and also that the respondents had not agreed to accept what are called delivery orders, directed to third persons, as something equivalent to delivery so as to exonerate the appellants from liability to deliver the goods, and to entitle them to sue for the price.

In the opinion of their Lordships this view is correct. The making of patta patti resulted in an agreement that the obligation to deliver the goods should not remain effective, that the price of them should neither be demanded nor paid, but merely the resulting differences. These differences have been paid or tendered and nothing is due in regard to them. Their Lordships will, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be dismissed, with costs, including those of the petition by the appellants for the admission of further documents which is also dismissed.

K. J. R.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Pugh & Co.

Solicitor for the Respondents:—Mr. H. S. L. Polak.

Note—[As regards teji mandi transactions, see 68 Ind. Cas. 481; 47 Bom. 263; 24 Bom. L. R. 812 and 85 Ind. Cas. 613; 26 Bom. L. R. 1097, the decision in the latter case being upheld by the Privy Council in 98 Ind. Cas. 338; 28 Bom. L. R. 1376; 51 M. L. J. 809, where analogous cases are considered.—K. J. R.]

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

PRIVY COUNCIL APPEAL No. 18 OF 1927.

June 7, 1927.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Lindsay.

MATHURA KURMI—DEFENDANT—

APPLICANT

versus

JAGDEO SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS —OPPOSITE PARTIES.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 110—Appeal to Privy Council—‘Substantial question of law,’ meaning of—Construction of documents—Sale or conditional mortgage—Test—Intention—Question of fact.

The application of well-defined legal principles to a particular set of facts does not raise a question of law which can fairly be described as ‘substantial’ within the meaning of s. 110 of the Code of Civil Procedure. [p. 34, col. 1]

The test to be applied in determining whether a transaction is a sale subject to an option of re-purchase or a mortgage by conditional sale, is the intention of the parties at the date of the transaction, and such intention is a matter of fact and not of law. [p. 33, col. 2.]

Application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council.

Mr. Kamla Kant Verma, for the Applicant.

Mr. Rama Kant Malaviya, for the Opposite Parties.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council against the decree of a Bench of this Court in First Appeal No. 459 of 1923, decided on the 21st December, 1926*. The appeal was dismissed and the decree of the trial Court was affirmed. The value of the subject-matter in the first Court was over Rs. 10,000 and the value of the subject-matter of the proposed appeal to His Majesty is also above that sum. But we are asked to certify that the case fulfils the conditions of s. 110 of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground that the appeal involves a substantial question of law, or, in the alternative, to certify that it is otherwise a fit case for appeal.

The question which arose for decision in the Court below and in this Court was with regard to the legal relation of the parties arising out of the execution of three documents executed on the 22nd May, 1915. The case for the plaintiffs was that they were mortgagors and that the defendant, Mathura Kurmi, was their mortgagee. The defendant's case was that he was the purchaser of the property in dispute subject to an option of re-purchase of which the plaintiffs had failed to take advantage.

*See 104 Ind. Cas. 504—[Id.]

The decision of the trial Court, affirmed in this Court, was that the three documents were evidence of a single transaction, namely, a mortgage by conditional sale, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the property by redemption. As is pointed out in the judgments delivered in this Court, cases of this nature are frequently brought before the Courts in India, and many of them have been taken in appeal to His Majesty in Council. We may refer in particular to the following three cases:—Balkishen Das v. Legge (1), Jhanda Singh v. Wahid-ud-din (2) and Narasingerji Gyanagerji v. Panuganti Parthasradhi Rayanagar Garu (3). It has been settled definitely that the test to be applied in such cases is the intention of the parties at the date of the transaction which has to be construed and the decisions lay down the various matters which may legitimately be considered by the Courts in order to determine what the intention of the parties was. Intention is a matter of fact and not of law and where, as in the case now before us, both Courts find that the parties stand in the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee, the finding is one of fact, namely, that on the date on which the parties entered into the transaction their intention was to constitute that relation between themselves.

If it be admitted, however, that the question is not one of pure fact because the decision involves the construction of legal documents, the point remains whether any question of law is raised which can be deemed to be a substantial question. Obviously any question of law arising upon the interpretation of the documents considered in this case is not substantial in the sense of being a question of general interest: it is of importance only to the present parties. But in view of a recent decision of their Lordships, it is contended that a question of law, in order to be substantial, need not be a question of general interest: it may still be substantial although it concerns only the parties to the litigation. And so it is sought to be argued that we have here a question of substance because, it is suggested, that the tests and principles of interpretation prescribed by the Privy Council have not been correctly applied to the facts.

(1) 22 A. 149; 27 I. A. 58; 4 C. W. N. 153; 2 Bom. L. R. 523; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 601; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1130 (P. C.).

(2) 36 Ind. Cas. 38; 38 A. 570; 31 M. L. J. 750; 21 C. W. N. 66; 20 M. L. T. 529; 14 A. L. J. 1189; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 570; 19 Bom. L. R. 1; 5 L. W. 189; 25 C. L. J. 524; 10 Bur. L. T. 131; 43 I. A. 284 (P. C.).

(3) 82 Ind. Cas. 993; 47 M. 729; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 226; 20 L. W. 701; 10 O. & A. L. R. 1172; 47 M. L. J. 809; (1924) M. W. N. 915; 40 C. L. J. 481; 27 Bom. L. R. 4; 29 C. W. N. 246; 51 I. A. 305; 26 P. L. R. 18; 23 A. L. J. 161; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 41; 1 O. W. N. 684 (P. C.).

We are not prepared to hold that for this reason the question of law between the parties here, assuming it to arise at all, is a substantial question. It is not made to appear that the appeal, if allowed to proceed, could furnish an occasion for the discussion or enunciation of any fresh legal principle. The matter has been agitated time and again before their Lordships who have repeatedly laid down the law in the sense indicated above. In these circumstances we do not think that the application of well-defined legal principles to a particular set of facts raises any question of law which can fairly be described as substantial.

The case does not, in our opinion, fulfil the requirements of s. 110 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Nor is it a case which we could certify as being otherwise fit for appeal to His Majesty.

We dismiss the application with costs.
A. N. A. Application dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 479 OF 1921.

June 9, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sulaiman and
Mr. Justice Banerji.

Bohra KANHAIYA LAL AND OTHERS—]

OBJECTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

GENDO—PETITIONER—RESPONDENT.

Allahabad High Court Rule, Chap. XVI, r. 2—General Rules (Civil), Chap. XXI, rr. 22, 26—Application for Probate—Taxation of costs.

An application for Probate, though contested, is not a 'suit', and for purposes of taxation of costs falls within the purview of r. 26 of Chap. XXI of the General Rules (Civil) of the Allahabad High Court and not within r. 22. [p. 35, col. 1.]

Rule 2 of Chap. XVI of the Allahabad High Court Rules refers to suits and applications tried by the High Court itself on the Original Side and does not apply to suits and applications tried by subordinate Courts. [p. 34, col. 2.]

First appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Agra.

Mr. Shiam Krishna Dar, for the Appellants.

Mr. Narain Prasad Asthana, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a Probate proceeding and relates to the costs which have been taxed in the decree of the Court below. It raises a question of principle affecting the practice in subordinate Courts. An application for Probate was made on the 18th January, 1924, and on the 1st of March a caveat was entered. On the 30th of August evidence was recorded and Probate was ordered to be granted to the applicant. The office of the District Judge taxed the costs on the scale fixed for original suits. An objection was raised by the caveator to the amount taxed, but the learned Judge, relying upon Chap. XVI, r. 2 of the High Court Rules dismissed the objection.

In our opinion Chap. XVI, r. 2 of the High Court Rules had no direct application to the case at all. The suits and applications spoken of there refer to suits and applications which are tried on the Original Side by the High Court itself and do not refer to suits tried by subordinate Courts. The case had to be decided in accordance with Chap. XXI of the General Rules (Civil) for subordinate Civil Courts. A graduated scale is prescribed for calculating fees in "suits, or appeals from original and appellate decrees in suits for money, effects or other personal property, or for land or other immoveable property of any description, when such suits or appeals are decided on the merits after a contest." On the other hand, r. 26 prescribes a different scale for miscellaneous judicial cases. It is conceded that if r. 22 is not applicable then the only other rule which would apply would be r. 26.

Rule 22 refers to suits and to appeals. It does not refer to applications. If, therefore, the Probate proceedings are a suit, r. 22 would apply.

Under the Probate and Administration Act of 1881, which was in force when this case was decided by the Court below, applications for Probate are throughout the Act called 'petitions' and the applicant is called 'petitioner'. Section 33 of the Act provides that in any case in which there is contention, the proceeding shall take, as nearly as may be, the form of a suit, according to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, in which the petitioner for Probate shall be the plaintiff, and the person who may have appeared as aforesaid to oppose the grant shall be the defendant. In our opinion this section, instead of helping the respondent, is really against him, for it clearly implies that the proceeding is not itself a suit but is to take, as nearly as may be, the form of a suit. If the proceeding were itself a suit, there would be no necessity to say that it should take the form of a suit when there is a contention. In the case of Sundrabai Saheb v. Collector of Belgaum (1) a Bench of the Bombay High Court held that the proceedings in an administration case were not a suit. A similar view was expressed in the case of Bajinath Prosad Singh v. Sham Sundar Kuar (2).

This view is further strengthened by the circumstance that in the corresponding High Court Rules, Chap XVI, r. 2, the language is "in a suit and in an appeal from the original decree in a suit, effects or other personal property, or for land and other immoveable property, or for specific performance, or for an injunction, or for damages in a suit under s. 42 of Act I of 1877, and in a contested application for Probate or Letters of Administration." It is obvious that a contested application for Probate is mentioned separately and is not considered to be included in the expression "in a suit." It was apparently considered that in a contested Probate proceeding in the High Court the scale of Counsel's fee should be the same as that of original suits, and it is on that account that such an application was expressly mentioned in r. 2.

We are, therefore, of opinion that the rule applicable to the case was r. 26 of Chap. XXI, General Rules (Civil) for Civil Courts and not r. 22, and that the taxation of the costs was not correct.

The last ground of appeal is based on the circumstance that the applicant engaged a Vakil on the 26th January, 1924, who filed a certificate of fees on the 1st March, 1924 on which date caveat was entered. Later on, on the 30th August, 1924, he wished to offer himself as a witness and asked the permission of the Court to do so. The permission having been granted, he was examined as a witness. He did not, however, subsequently take any part in the conduct of the proceedings. The contention on behalf of the appellant is that his certificate of fee should not be taken into account.

It is likely that the Pleader did not expect that the application would be contested, and he would have to appear as a witness because he had been consulted in the preparation of the draft. Had he expected that his evidence would be required, we assume that he would have considered it undesirable to agree to be engaged in the case. Under the circumstances we are of opinion that the certificate filed by him before he was examined as a witness cannot be ignored, especially when permission was granted to him by the Judge to give evidence in the case. The appeal is accordingly allowed and the amount of costs entered in the decree of the Court below varied, so as to bring it in harmony with the scale prescribed in r. 26. The appellant will have the costs of this appeal. The costs of this appeal, however, will have to be calculated in accordance with the High Court Rules.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 2 Ind. Cas. 283; 33 B. 256; 10 Bom. L. R. 1197.

(2) 22 Ind. Cas. 402; 41 C. 637; 18 C. L. J. 643.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 1312 AND 1315
OF 1925.

June 28, 1927.

*Present:—*Mr. Justice Mukerji and Mr.
Justice Ashworth.LACHMI PRASAD—PLAINTIFF—*APPELLANTversusLACHMI NARAIN AND ANOTHER—*DEPENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 51—Transfer by manager of joint Hindu family—Suit to set aside transfer—Transferee's right to compensation for improvements—Failure to enquire as to necessity, effect of—'Good faith,' meaning of.Per Ashworth, J.—*A transfer by a Hindu father and manager of a joint family is a valid transfer until it is avoided by the son, and a transferee who has made improvements on the property before the transfer is avoided must be held to have believed himself in good faith to be the absolute owner thereof within the meaning of s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act even if he has failed to satisfy himself at the time of the sale that it was necessary. [p. 37, col. 1.]*Per Mukerji, J.—*It is always a question of fact whether a transferee believes or not that he is absolutely entitled to a property. It is not possible to hold in every case of a transfer by a qualified owner, alleging circumstances which would enable him to give absolute title, that the transferee should be treated as believing that he holds the property in good faith. [p. 38, col. 2.]*The definition of the term 'good faith' in s. 3 (20) of the General Clauses Act, 1897, as meaning merely 'honestly' is not applicable to the Transfer of Property Act. [p. 39, col. 1.]*Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Ghazipur.*Messrs. Kashi Narain Malaviya, Mushtaq Ahmad and Benod Behari Lal, for the Appellant.Sir. Tej Bahadur Sapru and Mr. Uma Sankar Bajpai, for the Respondents.JUDGMENT.*Ashworth, J.—These two second appeals arise out of a suit brought by Lachmi
Narain, minor, against his father, Munni Lal, defendant No. 2, and Ganpat Rai, a purchaser of house property from the father, by a sale deed, dated the 29th April, 1927, for possession (by which must be meant joint possession with the father) of the property. The plaintiff alleged that the sale by his father was not binding on him on the ground that the father was insane at the time of execution of the deed. Alternatively he pleaded that the property being ancestral joint property, his father could only sell it if the sale was necessary, and that the sale was unnecessary. The defence was that the father was never insane butcompetent to execute the deed, and that the sale was necessary. It is to be noted that the sale purported to be executed by the father both on his own account and also as guardian of the plaintiff.Both the lower Courts have decided that the father was not incompetent on the score of his mental condition to make the transfer, and in second appeal we are bound by this finding of fact which is not impugned.
The first Court found that the sale was necessary and for adequate consideration.
It, therefore, dismissed the suit. In appeal the District Judge of Ghazipur set aside this finding of the first Court. It held that the sale of the house by the father was not necessary, and that of the total sale price
Rs. 1,350, the only consideration binding on the plaintiff was Rs. 425 due for principal and interest on a bond, dated the 24th October, 1916, due by the family to one Ma-kund Lal. He held, however, that the defendant No. 1 had spent Rs. 25,000 in rebuilding the house or houses and was entitled to this sum for improvements under s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act. Without giving the option to the plaintiff to recover the property by payment of the present increase in the value of the property by reason of these improvements, he assumed that the plaintiff would not or could not pay this compensation, and accordingly he, in effect, required the plaintiff to sell his interest in the property to the transferee. He held that the plaintiff's interest was the total purchase-money Rs. 1,350 minus the Rs. 425 required to pay the joint family debt existing at the time of the sale.Against this decision there are cross-appeals. The plaintiff in Appeal No. 1312 maintains that he should have been given a decree for possession of the property on a payment of the Rs. 425 found to be valid consideration, and that no account should have been taken of the improvements. I will deal with this appeal first. I consider that in second appeal this Court is bound by the finding of the lower Appellate Court that of the whole Rs. 1,350 only Rs. 425 was a debt binding on the family. The lower Appellate Court has found that the circumstances were as follows:—The defendant
No. 1 was anxious to acquire this property as it was situated between other properties which belonged to him. He, in vain, during the minority of the defendant No.
attempted to get a transfer from the defenant No. 2's mother. As soon as the defenant No. 2 came of age the sale was effected. The consideration of Rs. 425 for a debt due by the family to Makund Lal he found to be good consideration. The rest of the money was paid to Munnu Lal and used by him for his own purposes. The recital in the deed that Rs. 700 was paid to one Bawan Das on an I. O. U. (sarkhat) was false. This finding had no doubt some evidence to support it. In particular Bawan Dass' accounts failed to support the fact of any money being owed to him at the time by the family. As regards the liability of the plaintiff to reimburse defendant No. 1 for the money spent on improvements, the lower Appellate Court invoked the doctrine of equitable estoppel. This plea was never set up by the defendants and was clearly unsupported by any evidence sufficient to establish equitable estoppel. The lower Appellate Court, therefore, was not justified in taking the improvements into consideration on the grounds stated by it. On the other hand, I consider that s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act justified the plaintiff being required to credit the defendant No. 1 with the present value of the improvements. Section 51 applies to a transferee who makes any improvement on the property believing in good faith that he is absolutely entitled thereto. Now a transfer by a father and manager of a joint Hindu family is a valid transfer until it is avoided by the son. A defeasible title is not the same thing as a defective title, and s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act applies only to defective and not to defeasible transfers. At the date when the improvement was made this transfer had not been avoided. The defendant No. 1 was, therefore, the absolute owner and must be held to have believed himself in good faith to be the owner. It makes no difference that he failed to satisfy himself at the time of the sale that it was necessary. Section 65 of the Contract Act is a guide as to the principle to be invoked. When a contract becomes void, as it did in this case by the plaintiff repudiating the sale by his father, the plaintiff, as a person who has received advantage, is bound to restore that advantage or make compensation for it. The transfer only became voidable at the instance of the plaintiff. Consequently the lower Court was right in taking into consideration the plea of the defendant No. 2 under s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act. The method in which the lower Appellate Court has applied that section is not impugned by the plaintiff in his appeal. We are not, therefore, concerned with examining that method to see if it is correct. The plaintiff's appeal must, in my opinion, fail.

The defendant No. 1 also appeals. So far as his appeal calls in question the finding of the lower Appellate Court that the sale by the father was not necessary, and that only Rs. 425 of the purchase price was good consideration, I hold that we are bound by the findings of fact of the lower Appellate Court. In this appeal also the way in which the lower Appellate Court has applied s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act is not called in question. This appellant merely says that he should not have been called on to pay anything to the plaintiff. Consequently I would dismiss his cross-appeal also.

Inasmuch as I have held above that the purchaser of property from a guardian or from a manager or from a Hindu widow in possession of her husband's property is absolute owner until the sale is repudiated by the minor, the co-parcener or the reversionary heir, as the case may be, the question as to the meaning of the words "in good faith" in s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act does not arise. If it did, I should hold that a finding that the impugned sale could not be sustained because the purchaser had not made sufficient inquiry as to its necessity would amount to a finding that the transferee did not in good faith believe himself to be the absolute owner. It appears to me impossible to say that a transfer which is bad for want of proper inquiry by the purchaser may still be a transfer which the purchaser may believe in good faith to make him owner, unless we invoke the reasoning adopted by me above that the transferee is absolute owner until repudiation of the transfer. I would point out that the definition of "in good faith" contained in the General Clauses Act, s. 3 (20) as meaning merely "honestly" does not apply to Acts passed before 1897 (see s. 4). When s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act was passed the only definition of "good faith" on the Indian Statute book was that in the Indian Penal Code (s. 52), namely, "not done or believed without due care and attention." In my opinion the Legislature had this meaning of "good faith" in mind when they enacted s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act. It has been contended that the expression "in good faith" in the said s. 51 would cover failure to make proper inquiry provided that the necessity for further inquiry did not occur to the transferee. Assuming this, it is clear that the necessity did occur to the transferee in this case, because, on the finding of the lower Appellate Court, he was party to a false recital in the sale-deed.

For the above reasons I would dismiss both the appeals with costs.

Mukerji, J.—I entirely agree with my learned brother that these two appeals should be dismissed. My reasons are, however, slightly different.

A father sold for himself and as the guardian of his minor son a house to defendant No. 1, Ganpat Rai, who has since died and is represented by his minor son. The sale was made on 24th April, 1917, and the present suit was instituted by the son, on 27th of June, 1923. The plaintiff was only six years old, and apparently was just born when the sale was effected.

The plaintiff's case was that the property sold was ancestral, and it was sold without any legal necessity and for inadequate consideration. His case further was that his father was insane when he conveyed the property. The defence was that the father was capable of contracting, and sale was effected for full consideration and for legal necessity. The defence further said that the defendant had built on the site and had repaired a portion of the building sold all told at a cost of about Rs. 25,000.

The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, holding that the sale was made for legal necessity. It framed an issue as to whether the defendant was entitled to be compensated for any expenditure made by him over the property in dispute. It was of opinion that if the question of legal necessity and the question of the sanity of the vendor had not been decided in defendant's favour, the defendant would not have been entitled to any compensation whatsoever. The plaintiff appealed, and the learned District Judge affirmed the decision of the Court of first instance on the question of the father's sanity and on the question whether the property had been sold for its full value. The learned Judge, however, held that there was no legal necessity for the sale except as to the sum of Rs. 425. The lower Appellate Court framed no issue whatsoever as to the question of compensation unless we consider that it is included in the 5th issue which ran:—"Whether the defendant No. 1 built any house on any portion of the houses in dispute? If so, at what costs, and how does it affect the case?"

After having arrived at the conclusion that the sale was for legal necessity to the amount of Rs. 425 out of Rs. 1,350, the entire consideration, the learned Judge decreed the suit for a sum of Rs. 925 being the difference between the sale price of Rs. 1,350 and the sum of Rs. 425, the amount to the extent of which the legal necessity had been established.

As my learned brother has pointed out, no question of equitable estoppel was raised in the case, and if the learned Judge purported to decide the case on that basis he was wrong.

The question of compensation has, however, been definitely raised in this Court and we have to see how far it is applicable.

The law on the point is contained in s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act, which runs (omitting less important words) as follows:—

"When the transferee..... makes any improvement on the property, believing in good faith that he is absolutely entitled thereto, and he is subsequently evicted therefrom by any person having a better title, the transferee has a right to require the person causing the eviction....."

The question is whether in this particular case the transferee Ganpat Rai, when he made the improvement, believed in good faith that he was absolutely entitled to the property. In my opinion it is always a question of fact whether a transferee believes or not that he is absolutely entitled to a property. As at present advised I am not prepared to hold that in every case of a transfer by a qualified owner, alleging circumstances which would enable him to give absolute title, the transferee should be treated as believing that he holds absolutely the property in good faith. I need not discuss the point, because, as I said, I consider that it is always a question of fact whether a particular man holds a particular belief. The difficulty in this interpretation may be this. A man loses his property because of a defect in it and yet he is supposed to believe that he is an absolute owner of it. But ex hypothesi, the rule of law enacted under s. 51 applies to such a case. There should be two persons, one the transferee who has a defective title and a claimant who succeeds in establishing a better title. This state of things being accepted, we have to find out whether the man with the defective title is really a man described in s. 51.

The words "in good faith" were not defined in the General Clauses Act of 1868, They are defined in the General Clauses Act of 1897, and the definition is as follows:—

"A thing shall be deemed to be done in 'good faith, where it is in fact done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not."

This definition does not apply to the Transfer of Property Act. "Good faith" is defined in the Indian Penal Code; but in my opinion that definition too is not applicable. When a person is supposed to be guilty of an act, which would be an offence except for certain belief held by him; the law would require, and should require, that that belief should be held on substantial grounds. It was for this reason that "good faith" in the Indian Penal Code was defined as follows:—

"Nothing shall be deemed to have been done in good faith which is not done without due care and attention."

If we import this definition into s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act, we shall find that we shall make the section entirely unworkable. If a transferee, as in this case, from a Mitakshara father has taken a transfer with due care and attention, he is not at all liable to be evicted at the instance of his son. The son would be bound simply because the transferee had taken "due care and given attention." I, therefore, think that the words "good faith" have a meaning which is somewhat between the two definitions quoted above. I would not be prepared to hold that a man who has been quite negligent as to investigation of title of the vendors, and has acquired the property recklessly should have the advantage given to him of the rule in s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act. This, however, is only an obiter dictum. It is always dangerous to lay down a general rule in discussing a particular case.

I think I have indicated sufficiently what is in my mind as to the interpretation of s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The Court below has held that the transfer was made without legal necessity except as to the sum of Rs. 425. From this it does not follow that the defendant No. 1 had no grounds for believing that he was not holding absolutely the property purchased by him. No doubt there are certain remarks of the learned Judge, which if taken literally, would imply that the defendant No. 1 was a party to a fraud on the infant son and was a party to concoction of evidence for the purposes of the sale. The learned Judge was not trying the question of 'belief in good faith,' and I am not prepared to accept his statements as a finding of a Court of first appeal on facts relating to "belief in good faith."

I find that the defendant No. 1 got the entire consideration money in cash before the Sub-Registrar. It was found that the father (the vendor) was a same person. It was found that to the extent of Rs. 425 there was a legal necessity. The Judge is prepared to believe that some money was received by the father for his own purposes. Then there was at least a sarkhat in favour of Bawan Das. If all this be true, I do not see what justification the Court below had in saying, at one place of its judgment, that the consideration money that was paid before the Sub-Registrar was returned. This finding is absolutely inconsistent with its other findings. In the absence of any finding of fact on the question of 'belief in good faith' I would take it upon myself to decide on the question of fact in second appeal, and would unhesitatingly come to the conclusion that the defendant No. 1 had sufficient justification for holding the belief (good faith) that he was absolutely entitled to the property he had purchased. I need not point out that the lower Court has found that he spent the solid and large sum of Rs. 25,000 over additional buildings and improvements.

Such being my finding, the question would be whether the plaintiff should be allowed to pay for the improvement and take the entire property, or whether he should be called upon to accept the price of such interest as he possessed in the property. The plaintiff's circumstances are too poor to permit of any purchase by him of the improved property. In the circumstances the lower Court's decision was the only one possible.

The result is that I would dismiss the plaintiff's appeal with costs.

There is no substance in the defendant's appeal. It is concluded, as pointed out by my learned brother, by the finding that the sale was supported by legal necessity only to the extent of Rs. 425.

I would, therefore, dismiss these appeals with costs.

By the Court.—The appeals are dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeals dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

EXECUTION SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1321 OF 1926.

June 22, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Mukerji and Mr. Justice Ashworth.

PEARE MOHAN PRASAD—DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

RAGHUNATH LAL AND ANOTHER

—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 20—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 2—Application for execution—Limitation—Payment of decree debt—Time, whether runs from date of payment or date of certification—Contemporaneous certification, effect of.

In applying the provisions of s. 20 of the Limitation Act to an application for execution of a decree, the Executing Court must compute limitation not from the date of payment but from the date of certification of the payment under O. XXI, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 42, col. 1.]

The certificate under O. XXI, r. 2 (3) of the Code in such a case has always to precede the application for execution and cannot follow it. [p. 41, col. 2; p. 42, col. 1.]

Baij Nath v. Panna Lal (1), followed.

Execution second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Ghazipur, confirming that of the Munsif, Ballia.

Mr. A. P. Pandey, for the Appellant.

Mr. Shiv Dihal Sinha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Mukerji, J.—This is a decree-holder's second appeal against a judgment by which the execution application has been declared as time-barred.

The facts briefly are these :—The decree-holder obtained the decree in question on the 29th of October, 1919. The first application for execution was made on the 18th of March, 1922. The second application was made on the 12th of October, 1925, that is to say, more than three years after the date of the first application. On the face of it, the application would be time-barred. The decree-holder, however, alleged in the application for execution that between the 14th of May, 1923, and the 22nd of September, 1925, he received several payments towards interest, and his case is that these payments save limitation. The Court refused to execute the decree for want of a certificate of payment on behalf of the decree-holder. Thereupon, on the 14th of October, 1925, the decree-holder made an application certifying the payments. The judgment-debtor appeared (it appears without any notice) and contended that the application for execution was time-barred. As already stated, the Courts below have held that the application was time-barred. In this Court the learned Counsel for the appellant, who has argued the case extremely well, has put forward before us two contentions in support of his appeal. His first contention is that the statement contained in the application for execution, that certain payments towards interest had been received prior to the execution application and on certain specified dates, would serve the purpose of certification, as contemplated by O. XXI, r. 2 (3). His second contention is that, at any rate, his certificate of the 14th of October, 1925, that payments had been received, would be good enough for the purpose of removing the bar imposed by O. XXI, r. 2 (3).

As regards the first point, the learned Counsel has frankly admitted that the trend of rulings in this Court is against him. He has quoted the rulings that are against him and these rulings are all mentioned in the latest ruling on the point, viz., Baij Nath v. Panna Lal (1). He has argued that the first case in this Court, viz., Gokal Chand v. Bhika (2) does not go entirely against him inasmuch as Knox, J., mentioned it as an important matter, that the factum of payment was not mentioned in the proper column in the execution application. In the cases Chatter Singh v. Amir Singh (3) and Baij Nath v. Panna Lal (1) the learned Counsel pointed out, the expressions "certified" and "recorded" have been mixed up by the addition of the word "and" in the judgments, while there is the word "or" in the Code itself—Order XXI, r. 2 (3). He has also pointed out that almost all other High Courts have held that a contemporaneous statement as to payment with the application for execution itself is good enough to satisfy the provision of sub-r. (3), r. 2, O. XXI. Civil Procedure Code. He has quoted for his authority the cases of Eusuffzeman Sarkar v. Sanchia Lal Nahata (4), Pandurang Balkrishna Golvankar v. Jagya Bhai Shagat (5), Masilamani Mudaliar v. Sethuswami Aiyar (6) and Elahi Bux v. Nawab Lall (7).

(1) 83 Ind. Cas. 737; 22 A. L. J. 581; 46 A. 635; A. I. B. 1924 All. 706; L. R. 5 A. 348 Civ.

(2) 23 Ind. Cas. 753; 12 A. L. J. 387.

(3) 32 Ind. Cas. 590; 38 A. 204; 14 A. L. J. 132.

Speaking for myself, I am of opinion that the contention of the learned Counsel for the appellant ought to prevail. I would state my reasons very briefly, for I do not propose to decide the point according to the opinion held by me individually. The reason is this that my learned brother is against the view I am just going to propound; and the view I am taking is against the trend of authorities in this Court. In the circumstances, it would not be of much use for me to raise my voice in favour of a new interpretation, although that interpretation has found favour with other Courts. The reasons for my opinion are these. There is a clear distinction between a decree-holder certifying payment and a judgment-debtor alleging payment. Order XXI, r. 2 does not, in itself, deal with any rule of limitation. It says that where a decree-holder has received payment, or a decree has been adjusted, it is the duty of the decree-holder to inform the Court of the fact. Then it goes on to say that where a judgment-debtor has made a payment, or there has been an adjustment of a decree, the judgment-debtor is at liberty to bring the matter to the notice of the Court and ask the Court to call upon the decree-holder to show cause why such alleged payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified; that is to say, as certified by the decree-holder. In the first case a certificate by the decree-holder would be a statement against the decree-holder himself; and prima facie, there would be some truth in the statement. In the second case a payment alleged by the judgment-debtor is always a statement in his favour, and it would be necessary before making a record of that statement to verify it. The rule, therefore, provided for a notice to the decree-holder and a decision, if necessary. We need not suppose that the Legislature was blind to the fact that the statement by the decree-holder that he had received payment might, in some cases, be to his own advantage and to the disadvantage of the judgment-debtor. The Legislature did not provide any rule of limitation for the decree-holder to certify, although it did provide for a short period of limitation where the judgment-debtor's application is concerned. It follows that the decree-holder is at liberty to certify the payment at any time he likes. In any case he is at liberty to certify the payment within three years of the payment if Art. 181 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act applies. That being so, it would be open to the decree-holder to notify to the Court, at any time before he makes his application for execution, that he has received a payment. Now, the question is whether he cannot notify the factum of the payment to the Court simultaneously with his application for execution. Sub-rule (3) of r. 2, O. XXI, says: "A payment..... which has not been certified..... shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree." The meaning of this would be that when the Court has to consider whether it should recognise an alleged payment, it will have to see whether that payment is certified or not. Where the payment has been alleged in the execution application itself, it would be doing no violence to the language of the law if it be said that the Court, at the time of considering the question, would find that the decree-holder has already certified the payment. I need not point out that in every case of a certificate, how long so ever made before the execution application, if the judgment-debtor contests the allegation of payment, the decree-holder has always to prove it.

For the foregoing reasons I was inclined to accept the appellant's appeal and to allow the appellant an opportunity to prove whether he has actually received the alleged payments towards interest or not; but, as already stated, my voice would be too feeble to be effective and I do not propose to record a dissentient judgment for pure academic purposes.

The second contention of the learned Counsel for the appellant is, in my opinion, untenable. The certificate under the language of sub-r. (3), r. 2, O. XXI has (4) 34 Ind. Cas. 606; 43 C. 207; 20 O. W. N. 272; 23 I. L. J. 390.

(5) 59 Ind. Cas. 399; 45 B. 91; 22 Bom. L. R. 1120.

(6) 41 Ind. Cas. 701; 41 M. 251; (1917) M. W. N. 502; 3 M. L. J. 219; 22 M. L. T. 115.

(7) 50 Ind. Cas. 364; 4 P. L. J. 159; (1919) Pat. 50.

always to precede the application for execution and cannot follow it.

In the result I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

Ashworth, J.—I concur in the dismissal of the appeals but for different reasons. Section 20 of the Limitation Act enacts that a fresh period of limitation shall be computed from the time when payment of interest on a debt is made. Order XXI, r. 2 (3), Civil Procedure Code, enacts that an uncertified payment shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree. Reading these two provisions together I hold that an Execution Court must compute limitation from the date not of payment but of certification. To do otherwise would be recognising, to some extent, an uncertified payment. When, then, a decree-holder applies for execution he can only invoke a payment certified before execution became time-barred.

This is the view which has been taken by this High Court in several decisions, though it was not based on the precise reason that I have set forth. As that view accords with reasons commending themselves to me, I see no reasons for departing from the position taken up hitherto by this High Court.

I would, however, point out that this view does not involve the extension of the period of limitation beyond the period prescribed from the date of actual payment. The view contracts the period of limitation by exclusion (at the beginning of such period) of the period between payment and certification but does not lengthen it at the other end.

I would hold, therefore, that both the applications now in question are time-barred.

By the Court.—The appeal is dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No 463 of 1924.

June 7, 1927.

Present.—Mr. Justice Sulaiman and Mr. Justice Banerji.

SALIG RAM MISIR—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

LACHHMAN DAS—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 134—Suretyship—

Allowing remedy against principal debtor to become time-barred—Discharge of surety—Execution of decree—Sale set aside—Application for fresh execution—Limitation—Cause of action—Appeal, effect of.

A surety will be discharged where the remedy against the principal debtor is allowed to become barred by time. [p. 45, col. 1.]

Hazari v. Chuni Lal (9), Radha v. Kinlock (10), and Ranjit Singh v. Naubat (11), followed.

Once it is declared by a Court that a judgment-debtor had no interest in the properties sold, the cause of action for making a fresh application for execution arises in favour of the decree-holder-purchaser and the mere fact that an appeal has been preferred from the decree would not prevent time from running against the decree-holder. [p. 45, col. 2.]

Under the Indian Law and procedure an original decree is not suspended by presentation of an appeal nor is its operation interrupted when the decree is one of dismissal. [ibid.]

Hukum Chand Boid v. Pirthichand Lal Chowdhury (12), applied.

Obiter.—Where no application has been made by an auction-purchaser, under O. XXI, r. 91, Civil Procedure Code, for setting aside an auction sale on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest, he has no further remedy to claim a refund of the amount by a separate suit. [p. 44, col. 1.]

First appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Benares.

Dr. K. N. Katju and Mr. Harmandan Prasad, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Peary Lal Banerji and Gopi Nath Kunzru, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit brought by Salig Ram Misir, creditor, to recover the amount due from his principal debtor, the suit being brought against Lachhman Das surety. It appears that on the 28th March, 1912, a mortgage-deed was executed by Musammatt Tulsa Kunwar and Lachhmanji, respondent, acting for himself and guardian of his minor son Dauji, for a sum of Rs. 2,000 under which a house in Benares was mortgaged. The deed stood in the name of Musammatt Sumitra, wife of Saling Ram, but it is the case of both parties that she was a mere benamidar. On the same date a security bond was executed by Lachhman Das, the present defendant in the suit, as a surety undertaking that if the amount of the mortgage money was not recovered from the property mortgaged under the deed or from the mortgagors, the mortgagee would be entitled to recover the whole of the amount together with the costs and the damages from the personal property of the surety. Under this bond the surety hypothecated certain immoveable property.

Salig Ram brought a suit on the basis of his mortgage for sale of the house against Lachhmanji, Musammatt Tulsa

Kunwar and the minor Dauji. A defence was put forward on behalf of the minor son that there was no legal necessity for the mortgage of the house which was ancestral joint property. On the 22nd January, 1916, the Court held in favour of the minor that no legal necessity for the transfer had been established and accordingly declined to enforce the mortgage against the property. As, however, the suit was brought within six years of the mortgage, a simple money decree was passed against the executants Musammatt Tulsa Kunwar and Lachhmanji. The decree-holder then proceeded to execute the decree by attaching the very house which had been released from the charge. Objections were raised to the attachment by one Chaturbhuj to the effect that the house did not belong to Lachhmanji at all but belonged to the objector. In support of his claim Chaturbhuj produced a sale-deed of the year 1867 standing in his ancestor's name. The objections were summarily dismissed under O. XXI, r. 58. The house was in due course put up for sale and purchased at auction in two lots for Rs. 900 and Rs. 1,250, aggregating Rs. 2,150, by the decree-holder himself. On the 23rd April, 1917, the auction-sale was confirmed and soon after that Salig Ram obtained possession of the house. Chaturbhuj, on the 1st September, 1917, instituted a suit for declaration of his title and for possession of the house. This claim was contested by Salig Ram, but was ultimately decreed on the 31st July, 1918, by the trial Court. Salig Ram in the meantime had made certain new constructions and additions to the house and pleaded that he was entitled to some compensation for the improvements. The Court granted a decree conditional on the payment of an amount to represent the cost of the improvements. Two appeals were preferred from this decree. One by Salig Ram challenging the finding that the property belonged to Chaturbhuj and not Lachhmanji, and the other by Chaturbhuj challenging the amount of the compensation awarded to Salig Ram. These appeals were disposed of on the 4th May, 1921, on which date Salig Ram's appeal was dismissed, and the decree of the trial Court declaring Chaturbhuj's title and granting him possession was affirmed. The appeal preferred by Chaturbhuj, however, was allowed in part and the amount of compensation was reduced slightly. The result of the first Court's decree was that during the pendency of the appeal, Salig Ram was dispossessed from the house on the 26th December, 1918.

We may mention another proceeding which took place in the meantime. Salig Ram had executed his decree against Musammatt Tulsa Kunwar also and had got attached certain ornaments in the house occupied by her. Objections were raised by Musammatt Jasoda Kunwar that the articles attached belonged to her exclusively. The Court ordered that the ornaments should be released on condition that security was furnished of their full value. One Gopal Mukhia stood surety and deposited Rs. 1,200 which sum was considered to be the value of the ornaments. The ornaments were allowed to be taken out of Court by Musammatt Jasoda Kunwar and Rs. 1,200 deposited as security remained. Ultimately the objection by Musammatt Jasoda Kunwar was dismissed summarily and she brought a suit for a declaration that the ornaments actually belonged to her. While this suit was pending, the house was sold in March, 1917, in execution of the simple money decree, in favour of Salig Ram. After the execution case had been struck off and the decree satisfied on full payment, Musammatt Jasoda Kunwar applied to the Court for permission to withdraw the suit on the ground that it was not necessary to proceed with it. The Court allowed her to withdraw the suit. Later on the surety Gopal Mukhia was allowed to take away the amount of Rs. 1,200 lying in deposit with the Court apparently on the ground that the decree in favour of Salig Ram had been fully satisfied.

After having been dispossessed from the house in execution of the decree in favour of Chaturbhuj, Salig Ram took no further steps against his principal debtors Lachhmanji and Musammatt Tulsa Kunwar. He did not for instance try to revive the execution proceedings or to execute the decree by arrest of the person of the judgment-debtors or by attachment of their properties. He also does not appear to have requested the Court not to allow the sum of Rs. 1,200 to be taken away until the period of one year allowed to Chaturbhuj to bring the suit had expired. He also did not file any application under s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code.

What he did was that he instituted the present suit which was filed on the 29th January, 1924, against the surety Lachhman Das only. The principal judgment-debtors are not even parties to the present suit.

The claim was contested by Lachhman Das who pleaded that the remedy against the principal debtors had been exhausted and no claim lay against him. There was a further plea that in consequence of several acts and omissions committed by Salig Ram the surety has been discharged. The learned Subordinate Judge has acceded to the contention of the defendants and has dismissed the suit. Hence this appeal. The first point for consideration is whether the plaintiff, Salig Ram, having got his decree satisfied by purchase of the house is entitled to re-open the matter and to assert that there has in fact been no satisfaction because the property purchased by him has ultimately gone out of his possession. It is clear on the authorities that if the purchase had been made by a stranger and no application by him had been preferred for setting aside the sale under O. XXI, r. 91 on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest, he would have no further remedy by a separate suit to claim a refund of the amount paid by him as purchase-money from the decree-holder. This was the view expressed by this Court in two cases, namely, Nannu Lal v. Bhagwan Das (1) and Ram Sarup v. Dalpat Rai (2) the last case having been decided by a Bench of which one of us was a member. After some conflict of opinion in the other High Courts, all the High Courts in India have now come to the conclusion that no such separate remedy is available to an auction-purchaser. We may only refer to the following cases, namely, Habib-ud-din v. Hatim Mirza (3), Jurani Mohammad v. Jathi Mohammad (4), Balwant Rangnath v. Bala Malu (5), Tirumalaisami Naidu v. Subramanian Ghattiar (6) and Ram Dayal v. Rampal Singh (7). The basis of the decision is that at an auction the purchaser acquires the rights and interests of the judgment-debtor there being no warranty of title at all at

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 9; 39 A. 114; 14 A. L. J. 1216.

(2) 58 Ind. Cas. 105; 43 A. 60; 18 A. L. J. 905; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 318.

(3) 86 Ind. Cas. 622; 6 Lah. 283; 1 Lah. Cas. 552; A. L. R. 1925 Lah. 467.

(4) 46 Ind. Cas. 783; 22 C. W. N. 760.

(5) 67 Ind. Cas. 360; 46 B. 833; 24 Bom. L. R. 808; A. I. R. 1922 Bom. 205.

(6) 45 Ind. Cas. 109; 40 M. 1009.

(7) 51 Ind. Cas. 95; 22 O. C. 42; 6 O. L. J. 160.

a compulsory sale. Thus if the house had been purchased by a third party he would not have been entitled to get back the purchase-money on the ground that Chaturbhuj in a subsequent suit had been dispossessed. Of course in such a case the purchase-money would have been retained by the decree-holder himself.

The question before us is whether the decree-holder who purchased the property himself is in a better position than an innocent third party. It is the decree-holder himself who took the mortgage of the house and when the charge failed attached the property and put it for sale. It was he himself who purchased it in spite of the fact that objections were raised by Chaturbhuj that the property had belonged to him and had been acquired by him under the sale-deed of 1867. The question is whether Salig Ram can even after the confirmation of the sale apply under s. 47 of the Code and claim that the decree has nevertheless not been satisfied. The only case on this point which has been cited by Counsel before us is the case of U Paw v. N. R. M. A. Chetty (8), which strongly supports the contention of the respondent that even the decree-holder purchaser is debarred from going behind the confirmation of the sale. In this case, however, we do not feel that we are called upon to decide this point finally, as we are of opinion that the suit must fail on a different ground.

Under s. 134 of the Indian Contract Act, a surety is discharged by any act or omission of the creditor, the legal consequence of which is the discharge of the principal debtor. So far as this High Court is concerned, it is now well settled that if the remedy of the creditor against the principal debtor is allowed to become barred by time, the surety is deemed to have been discharged. No doubt the other High Courts have taken a contrary view but we are bound to follow our own rulings unless overruled by their Lordships of the Privy Council. We may further note that the words in s. 134 are not that by any act or omission by the creditor the debt became extinguished. The words are that the "legal consequence of which is a discharge of the principal debtor". The view taken by this Court is that when the remedy against the principal debtor is barred by time and ceases to be enforceable, the legal consequence of this circumstance is that the principal debtor is discharged. If the surety were still liable to pay the amount, he would in his turn be entitled to proceed against the debtor and recover the amount from him even after limitation has set in. We may only refer to the cases of this Court Hazari v. Chunni Lal (9), Radha v. Kinlock (10), and Ranjit Singh v. Naubat (11). The point has been discussed at considerable length in these cases and it is not necessary for us to go into it in any detail. It must be taken that if Salig Ram allowed his remedies to become barred as against Lachhmanji and Musammal Tulsa, it is no longer open to him to proceed against the surety.

(8) 61 Ind. Cas. 805; 13 Bur. L. T. 152.

The point that now remains to be considered is whether Salig Ram's remedies against Musammal Tulsa were barred on the 29th January, 1924, when the plaintiff's suit was instituted. The learned Advocate for the appellant has contended that after dispossession the remedy open to Salig Ram was to revive the execution proceedings inasmuch as the auction-sale had been automatically set aside and that under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, he was entitled to proceed against the judgment-debtors, and on the ground that the decree had not been in fact satisfied. If an application of this nature could be maintained, it would, however, be an application for execution of the decree which would be governed by Art. 182 of the Limitation Act, or by an application for revival of execution proceedings which would be governed by the general Art. 181 of the Act. In either case, the right to apply would accrue on the 31st July, 1918 when the suit was decreed by the Court of first instance and in any case on 26th December, 1918, when Salig Ram was actually dispossessed. The mere fact that an appeal from the first Court's decree preferred by Salig Ram himself was pending in the High Court and was ultimately dismissed, would not prevent the first Court's decree from being operative. Once it had been declared by the first Court that his judgment-debtor had no saleable interest, the cause of action for making the application certainly arose in favour of Salig Ram. Once time began to run it could not be suspended. As authority for this proposition we may refer to the case of Hukum Chand Boid v. Pirthichand Lal (9) 8 A. 259; A. W. N. (1886) 75; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 51. (10) 11 A. 310; A. W. N. (1889) 94; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 625.

(11) 21 A. 504; A. W. N. (1902) 166.

Chowdhury (12), decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council. At page 514* their Lordships observed that "under the Indian Law and procedure an original decree is not suspended by presentation of an appeal nor is its operation interrupted where the decree on appeal is one of dismissal" and that the cause of action arises on the passing of the first Court's decree and is not suspended till that decree is finally affirmed on appeal. It has been urged on behalf of the appellant that inasmuch as the appeal preferred by Chaturbhuj was allowed in part, the decree of the first Court was modified and the case, decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council is distinguishable. We, however, think that the two appeals stood on a different footing. In Bhaturbhuj's appeal no question of the validity of the decree as regards title was at all raised. He was only challenging the amount of the compensation awarded. The question of title was raised in the appeal preferred by Salig Ram and the case is, therefore, very much similar to the present case. The present suit was not filed till more than three years after the first Court's decree and even after the delivery of possession to Chaturbhuj. We must, therefore, hold that the remedies of the creditors, if any, had become barred by time when the present suit was filed. In view of the authorities of this Court the plaintiff has disqualified himself from seeking any relief against Lachhman Das. The result, therefore, is that this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(12) 50 Ind. Cas. 444; 17 A. L. J. 514; 36 M. L. J. 557; 23 C. W. N. 721; 21 Bom. L. R. 632; (1919) M. W. N. 258; 30 C. L. J. 71; 46 O. 670; 26 M. L. J. 131; 10 L. W. 416; 46 I. A. 52 (P. O.).

*Page of 17 A. L. J.—[Ed.]

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 206 OF 1924.

May 23, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sulaiman and
Mr. Justice Banerji.

RUP KISHOR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

PATRANI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 32 (5)—Statement post litem motam, admissibility of—Question in issue raised in previous litigation, whether admissible—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 141—Starting point of limitation—Subsequent disability, effect of.

The words 'before the question in issue was raised' in s. 32 (5) of the Evidence Act do not necessarily mean before it was raised in the particular litigation in which such statement is sought to be adduced in evidence. A statement which was made after the question had been raised in a previous litigation is inadmissible in evidence in a subsequent suit even though it was made before the question was raised in the latter suit. [p. 47, col. 1.]

Kalka Prasad v. Mathura Prasad (3) and Bahadur Singh v. Mohar Singh (4), followed.

The cause of action for a suit by a Hindu reversioner for possession of an estate on the death of a Hindu female arises under Art. 141 of the Limitation Act on the death of the widow and once limitation has begun to run under the section no subsequent disability can stop it. [p. 48, cols. 1 & 2.]

First appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Shahjahanpur.

Mr. N. P. Asthana, for the Appellant.

Mr. Peary Lal Banerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit for recovery of possession of a share in villages Lilhar and Karanpur Pindri, by avoidance of a deed of relinquishment and a deed of transfer, dated the 7th of May, 1911, executed on behalf of the plaintiff, when he was a minor, by his natural father, Damodar Das.

The plaintiff's case briefly put is as follows:—Brij Kishor was the original owner of this property and had no child. Shortly before his death he gave an oral permission to his wife, Musammatt Durga Dei, to adopt a son, and then died in 1878. In 1905 Musammatt Durga Dei, acting on this permission, adopted the plaintiff, and a deed of adoption was duly executed by her on the 11th March, 1905. The plaintiff alleged that in a suit brought by Jivan Das and others, claiming to be the collaterals of Brij Kishor against the present plaintiff Rup Kishor, a compromise was arrived at under which the estate was divided in the ratio of 6 annas and 10 annas between the claimants and the present plaintiff, and a tamliknama, dated the 10th August, 1906, was duly executed by the parties concerned. He then goes on to allege that a suit was brought by Kishan Chand claiming to be the bandhu of the deceased son against the collaterals of the present plaintiff, which was ultimately struck off on a compromise having been arrived at by the parties to that suit. In that suit the plaintiff was represented by his natural father, Damodar Das, who signed a deed of relinquishment and a deed of transfer, acting as the plaintiff's guardian. Under this deed the plaintiff relinquished all rights so far as the villages Lilhar and Karanpur Pindri were concerned. We may note in this connection that these villages had been recovered by Kishan Chand from the transferee of Musammatt Durga Dei by a separate suit in 1908 to which the present plaintiff was not a party. Kishan Chand had then succeeded as against the transferee in proving that he was the next heir of the last male owner. These villages were not in dispute in the suit brought by Kishan Chand in 1910 against the present plaintiff but were dealt with by the deeds of relinquishment and transfer mentioned above. The plaintiff's case is that these deeds are in no way binding upon him, inasmuch as they were executed without the sanction of the Court, and his natural guardian had no authority to bind him.

The contesting defendants are Kishan Chand's widow and her transferees. They deny that there was any permission given by Brij Kishor to adopt. The factum of adoption, however, is not disputed before us and is proved by overwhelming evidence. They further plead that the present claim is barred by limitation.

The learned Subordinate Judge has dismissed the suit; hence this appeal.

It may perhaps be difficult to support the finding that the plaintiff is bound by the compromise effected by his natural father Damodar Das. We however do not think it necessary to go into this question in detail because the appeal must fail on other grounds.

We take up first the question of the oral permission to adopt. This is said to have been given in 1878, and was certainly not acted upon for nearly 27 years. The burden, therefore, lies heavily on the plaintiff to establish that such an oral permission had actually been given.

There is now no oral evidence available of witnesses who could testify to the permission having been given in their presence. The plaintiff relies on certain documentary evidence in support of his case.

Reliance is placed on the deposition of Musammatt Durga Dei, dated the 20th May, 1905, in Suit No. 2 of 1905 brought by Jivan Das and others to contest the adoption. It is obvious that the dispute had then clearly arisen between the alleged reversioners and the widow and her alleged adopted son, and any statement made by Musammatt Durga Dei in the course of that litigation cannot be used in evidence against Kishan Chand and his representatives, who were no parties to that suit.

Section 32, sub-cl. (5) would be inapplicable as the statement was made after the dispute had arisen. Section 33 cannot apply inasmuch as the present defendants had no opportunity to cross-examine Musammât Durga Dei.

Reliance is next placed on the statement of two witnesses, Kewal Kishan and Kundan, who were examined in another Suit No. 202 of 1906, brought by the plaintiff Rup Kishor against a third party Batuk Nath Sircar. To this suit also the present defendants were no parties. Batuk Nath Sircar denied the adoption of Rup Kishor and some evidence was led on the question. The case, however, was ultimately compromised. In our opinion the depositions of these witnesses are not admissible against Kishan and his representatives. Section 32, sub-cl. (5) cannot apply because the dispute had arisen previously and also arose in that particular case. Section 33 is not applicable because the present defendants had no opportunity to cross-examine these witnesses.

There is a third ground on which also these depositions are not admissible. In their statements the witnesses, Kewal Kishan and Kundan, merely tried to prove the oral permission given by Brij Kishor to his wife and did not say a word as to the adoption of Rup Kishor. Their statements, therefore, did not relate to the existence of any relationship by adoption inasmuch as they did not state that Rup Kishor was the adopted son of Musammât Durga Dei.

A question of law has been raised by the learned Advocate for the appellant in respect of these three depositions. His contention is that s. 32, sub-cl. (5) becomes applicable when the statement was made before the question in issue was raised which according to his contention means before the commencement of the present litigation. For this view he relies on the head-note* in the case of Mauladad Khan v. Abdul Sattar (1), which says that the statement to be admissible must be before the litigation in the present case arose. That head-note*, in our opinion, is misleading. The learned Judges in their judgment at page 358† had used a different language, namely, that the plaintiff contained a statement made before the question in dispute in the present suit was raised.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 666; 15 A. L. J. 349 at p. 350; 39 A. 426.

*Head-note of 15 A. L. J.—[Ed.]

†Page of 15 A. L. J.—[Ed.]

The plaintiff which was referred to in that case had been filed before any dispute had arisen. The head-note of the same case, as reported in Ram Charan Sahu v. Goga (2), does not contain any such passage. The point, in our opinion, is concluded by the case decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council, viz., Kalka Prasad v. Mathura Prasad (3). In this case a dispute arose in 1896 on the death of Musammât Parbati. In 1898 in a suit brought by one Sheo Sahai a pedigree was filed. After this the suit, which went up in appeal to their Lordships of the Privy Council, was filed in 1901. At page 522* their Lordships held that the pedigree filed in 1898 was inadmissible having been made post litem motam. We may also refer to another case decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council, Bahadur Singh v. Mohar Singh (4), where statements made in 1847 were held to be admissible on the ground that it did not appear that the heirship of the then claimants was really in dispute at that time. No such point could have arisen for consideration if the statements made prior to the suit before their Lordships were automatically admissible. We must, therefore, exclude from consideration the depositions of Musammât Durga Dei, Kewal Kishan and Kundan.

The last piece of evidence relied upon is the deed of adoption executed by Musammât Durga Dei. It does undoubtedly contain a recital that she had the permission from her deceased husband. In ordinary circumstances a recital of this kind made by the widow may be of some weight. There are, however, circumstances which, in our opinion, destroy its value. In the first place, as soon as this deed was executed, the reversioners challenged the statements and actually brought a Suit No. 2 of 1905, followed by another Suit No. 14 of 1906. In the second place, the recital in the document is not consistent with the statement of Musammât Durga Dei when made in the reversioners' suit. In the deed she had alleged that the permission was given to her four days before Brij Kishor's death. In her deposition, on the other hand, she alleged that

(2) 102 Ind. Cas. 96; 25 A. L. J. 425; A. I. R. 1927 All. 446; 49 A. 565.

(3) 1 Ind. Cas. 175; 30 A. 510; 13 C. W. N. 1; 18 M. L. J. 42; 4 M. L. T. 380; 10 Bom. L. R. 1088; 8 C. L. J. 447; 5 A. L. J. 701; 11 O. C. 362; 35 I. A. 166 (P. C.).

(4) 24 A. 94; 29 I. A. 1; 6 C. W. N. 169; 12 M. L. J. 56; 4 Bom. L. R. 233; 8 Sar. P. O. J. 152 (P. C.).

*Page of 30 A.—[Ed.]

the direction to adopt was given at the time of his death—in fact when the husband was at the point of death and had been brought downstairs and that he died an hour and a half after giving this direction. It is, therefore, apparent that Musammatt Durga Dei herself was not consistent in her statements. We, therefore, decline to accept the recital in the deed of adoption as any satisfactory evidence of the truth of the statement.

There is no other evidence in support of this alleged permission, and in the absence of any satisfactory evidence we must uphold the finding of the Court below that no such permission has been proved. The result, therefore, is that the plaintiff's claim as the adopted son of Brij Kishor falls to the ground.

In para. 4 of the plaint the plaintiff had set forth the particulars of the compromise and the tamliknāma between himself and the reversioners, Jivan Das and others. Although he did not expressly base his claim on a title derived from these reversioners, he claimed only a $\frac{10}{16}$ share which was given to him under that compromise. The learned Advocate for the plaintiff, therefore, contends that even independently of his claim as the adopted son, the plaintiff is entitled to recover this property as a representative of the reversioners Jivan Das and others, and that if Kishan Chand is not an heir, the plaintiff can succeed against Kishan Chand's representatives on the strength of an assignment from the reversioners Jivan Das and others.

But before succeeding on this second ground the plaintiff will have to show that his claim on such a new case is within time, and that Jivan Das and others were in fact the next heirs of the deceased.

Musammatt Durga Dei died on the 8th of June, 1905. The present suit was instituted more than 12 years from her death. The claim by the plaintiff, as a representative of the reversioners Jivan Das and others, would fall under Art. 141 of the Indian Limitation Act, being a suit by a Hindu entitled to the possession of an immoveable property on the death of a Hindu female. Prima facie the suit was filed beyond time. Under O. VII, r. 6 the plaintiff ought to have shown the ground upon which exemption from the Law of Limitation was claimed. Time began to run against Jivan Das and others as soon as Musammatt Durga Dei died in 1905. Once time began to run there could be no suspension. Section 9 of the Indian Limitation Act prescribes that once time has begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability to sue stops it. The present plaintiffs, therefore, cannot take advantage of his minority so far as this question of limitation is concerned. It was the duty of the plaintiff or his predecessors Jivan Das and others to have instituted the suit within 12 years of the death of the widow. We have already remarked that in the previous litigation, to which the present plaintiff was a party, the villages Lilhar and Karanpur Pindri were not the subject-matter of dispute at all. Kishan Chand only brought a suit to recover these from the transferee of Musammatt Durga Dei, and Kishan Chand and his representatives have been in possession all along. Even when the compromise of the 7th of May, 1911, was arrived at, Kishan Chand's right to retain possession of these villages was not challenged. There was in fact no acknowledgment by Kishan Chand of any title of the plaintiff with regard to these properties. The present claim for recovery of these villages, therefore, must be held to be barred by time.

The learned Advocate for the plaintiff contends that in view of the compromise effected in 1911 the running of limitation must be deemed to have remained suspended till the plaintiff was able to institute the present suit to set aside that compromise. In our opinion it is impossible to hold that there was any such suspension at any time or that the Court ever recognised the right of Rup Kishor or his predecessor to get these villages as against Kishan Chand. It cannot, therefore, be suggested that Rup Kishor having got what he wanted, it was not incumbent upon him to bring a suit. This question has been considered at some length in the case of Ram Charan Sahu v. Goga (2), and it is, therefore, not necessary for us to discuss the point at any length. We hold that the present claim is barred by limitation.

In view of our finding that the claim is barred by limitation it is not necessary to go into the question of Jivan Das' pedigree, which the Court below has found not proved.

The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.CIVIL REVISION APPLICATION No. 293
OF 1926 AND

FIRST APPEAL No. 311 OF 1926.

August 12, 1927.

Present:—Sir Amberson Marten, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.
NATHABHAI DEVIDAS AND OTHERS—TRUSTEES—OPPONENTS—APPELLANTS IN F. A. No. 311 OF 1926.

versus

VAGHJIBHAI JHAVERBHAI AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Trusts Act (II of 1882), ss. 73, 74—Application for removal of trustee—Proper procedure—Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 7 (3), 39, 41—Testamentary guardian, removal of.

A person who is not the beneficiary has no right to apply for removal of a trustee under s. 74 of the Trusts Act. [p. 49, col. 2.]

An application for removal of a trustee should be brought by a suit, and where it is alleged that the trustees have committed a breach of trust, the suit should pray that the delinquent trustees should make good their breach of trust. Such a suit should further normally ask for the administration of the trust estate by the Court. [ibid.]

A Court should not appoint a fresh guardian in place of a testamentary guardian under s. 7 of the Guardians and Wards Act until the powers of the latter have ceased under the provisions of the Act. [p. 50, col. 1.]

Application against an order of the District Judge, Kaira, in Miscellaneous Application No. 25 of 1926.

First Appeal against an order of the District Judge, Kaira, in Miscellaneous Application No. 7 of 1926.

Messrs. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. U. L. Shah), for the Applicants.

JUDGMENT.—In this matter the learned District Judge on a petition under the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, has purported to remove from their office the trustees appointed by the Will of the father of the minor. This he has done on a petition presented not by the next friend of the minor but by his uncle Vaghjibhai. As the learned Judge in his judgment puts it, although the application refers to other sections of the Indian Trusts Act, viz., 72 and 74, yet it is really founded on s. 73 on the ground that the trustees have become unfit to act in the trust.

The view generally adopted in the English Courts is that those words imply something in the nature of personal incapacity like, for instance, paralysis or personal unfitness which in many cases has been held to apply to insolvency. In this particular section insolvency has been provided for,

But whatever the true construction of the words "unfit or personally incapable" in s. 73 may be, one has also to see who are the new trustees to be appointed by. This section provides that the appointment may be made (a) by the person nominated for that purpose by the trust instrument. There is no such person in the present case. Then (b), if there be no such person, the author of the trust, if alive, may appoint. But the author of this trust is dead. Then we come to the "surviving or continuing trustees for the time being." But the present appointment has not been made by them. So stopping there s. 73 could not apply. The old trustees obviously have not removed themselves.

Next, if one turns to s. 74: "Whenever any such vacancy or disqualification occurs and it is found impracticable to appoint a new trustee under s. 73, the beneficiary may, without instituting a suit, apply by petition." But the present petition is not by any beneficiary, but by the uncle Vaghjibhai on his own account. He is not, however, even mentioned in the Will of the minor's father. Under these circumstances the Court had no jurisdiction to grant the relief asked for on the petition of the present petitioner. And so on that ground alone this order of the learned Judge must be set aside.

But I wish to put the matter on rather broader grounds by way of warning. Speaking generally, applications for the removal of a trustee should undoubtedly be brought by a suit. And where, as here, it is alleged that the trustees have committed a breach of trust, that suit should ask for the delinquent trustees to make good the breach of trust. Further, the suit should normally ask for the administration of the trust estate by the Court. Nothing of that has been done here. All that has been done is to appoint the Deputy Nazir the sole trustee, because the Court finds that the petitioner himself is not to be trusted as he is a man who has his own axe to grind, so the Court says.

I may refer to Lewin on Trusts, 9th Edition, page 1166: "If there be ground for removing a trustee for misconduct or other cause, the application to the Court should be by suit." Similarly if one looks at Seton, Vol. II, 6th Edition, page 1224, it is stated: "There is no jurisdiction under the Trustees Act to remove a trustee for misconduct." Reference is there made to certain authorities.

If, on the other hand, a suit was brought here to remove the trustees, that could be brought by the uncle acting as the next friend of the infant. And if it was alleged that specific breaches of trust had been committed, then those could be inquired into in the ordinary way on oral evidence and not on affidavit evidence without any cross-examination—the course that has been adopted by the learned Judge in the present case.

Next turning to First Appeal No. 311 of 1926, the learned Judge there has, under the Guardians and Wards Act, appointed the mother to be the guardian of the person, and the Deputy Nazir to be the guardian of the property of the infant. Now s. 7 is the ordinary section giving the Court power to make an order as to the appointment of a guardian of the person or property of a minor, if it is satisfied that it is for the welfare of the minor that an order should be made. But sub-s. (3) provides: "Where a guardian has been appointed by Will or other instrument or appointed or declared by the Court, an order under this section appointing or declaring another person to be guardian in his stead shall not be made until the powers of the guardian appointed or declared as aforesaid have ceased under the provisions of this Act." Then if one turns to s. 39 or s. 41, the Court has power on the application of any person interested, or of its own motion, to remove a guardian.

Here the guardianship must not be muddled up with the trust. Under the Will the trustees were given definite powers of management, and to apply the property for the education, amongst other things, of the minor, and to hand it over to him when he attained his majority. Therefore, in one sense if the trustees are not removed from their office, there is little for the guardian of the property to do and no adequate reason for his appointment. Technically the guardian of the property on being appointed could only receive such income as the trustees under the Will allotted for the education and maintenance of the minor, and could then personally apply it for such purposes.

But the ground on which the learned Judge has made his order is that he has removed the trustees from their office as trustees under the other application. We have already pointed out that that order cannot be upheld. Consequently the grounds on which the learned Judge appointed a guardian of the property cannot be supported. The mother opposes the present application, and under the circumstances and on the materials at present before us we do not think an order should be made either appointing a guardian of the person or a guardian of the property.

This, of course, will not prevent a guardianship order being made on some other application at some future date on proper materials before the Court. We only determine the present matter on the present materials. In our opinion this order of the learned Judge must be discharged.

As regards costs, we think the uncle must bear the costs throughout of both applications. The learned Judge in the Court below seems to have doubted his bona fides, and under these circumstances we see no reason why the infant should be saddled with the costs of these irregular applications.

Therefore, in Civil Revision Application No. 293 of 1926, the Rule is to be absolute. Order discharged. Vaghjibhai to pay the costs throughout. In First Appeal No. 311 of 1926 appeal allowed. Order of the lower Court discharged. Vaghjibhai to pay the costs throughout. In Stay Application No. 748 of 1916 Rule made absolute. Order discharged.

A. N. A.

Rule made absolute;
Appeal allowed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 55 OF 1926.

July 22, 1927.

Present:—Sir Amberson Marten, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

KUNVERSI RATANSI PATEL—

—APPELLANT

versus

PITAMBERDAS RAMDAS AND OTHERS

—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. XLIII, r. (1) (w); O. XLVII, r. 7—Order granting review—Appeal—Grounds for appeal—Interference in revision.

An appeal from an order granting a review is governed in the Bombay Presidency by the provisions of O. XLVII, r. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure and not by O. XLIII, r. (1) (w) of the Code, inasmuch as the latter provision has been deleted from the Code by the Bombay High Court in exercise of its powers under s. 122 of the Code.

Daso Keshav Panchbhavi v. Karbasappa Kariyappa Mudhol (1), dissented from.

It is inexpedient to interfere with an order which is not appealable by having recourse to the exceptional powers under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Appeal against an order of the Joint First Class Subordinate Judge at Ahmedabad, in Suit No. 1312 of 1925.

Mr. Amin (with him Mr. N. P. Desai), for the Appellant.

Mr. P. B. Shingne, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against an order by the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ahmedabad granting a review of a judgment. The facts shortly are that on July 23, 1926, the Court upon the evidence came to the conclusion that the defendants in the suit were not agriculturists. There was then an application to review that decision, and the Court granted that application on the ground that there was a mistake or error apparent on the face of the record. Though other grounds were suggested in the application, it is plain that it was on that ground alone that a review was allowed. From that order an appeal is made to us, and a point arises whether any such appeal lies or not.

The appellant's Counsel bases his right of appeal on O. XLIII, r. 1 cl. (w), but it has unfortunately escaped the attention of the Bar that that clause of O. XLIII, r. 1, has been deleted by a rule made by this High Court in exercise of the powers conferred by s. 122 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That rule was published in the Bombay Government Gazette on March 11, 1926, and must be taken to have been in force at least from that date. Therefore, O. XLIII, r. 1, cl. (w), cannot help the appellant, and the decision of this Court in Daso Keshav Panchbhavi v. Karbasappa Kariyappa Mudhol (1) can no longer be supported on the grounds on which it was based.

We must fall back, therefore, on the provisions of O. XLVII and any appeal against the order granting review must be conditioned by the provisions of that Order. Rule 7 of that Order lays down three cases and three only in which an appeal is available, and it does not appear that the present matter falls under any one of these three cases. The first deals with contravention of r. 2 which lays down to whom applications for review are to be made. Clearly that does not apply here as the review was granted by the Judge who himself made the previous order. The second case is where there has been a contravention of r. 4. That rule requires that there shall be previous notice to the opposite party and that where the application is granted on the ground of discovery of new matter or evidence there shall be strict proof that such new matter or evidence was not within the power or knowledge of the party who seeks to rely upon it. That has no application here. The third case is where the application for review has been granted after the expiry of the period of limitation, and that too clearly does not apply in the case before us. It thus appears that no appeal lies in the present matter, and whatever view we may take as to the proceedings of the learned Subordinate Judge, they cannot be challenged before us in the form of an appeal.

We have been asked to deal with this matter as coming under s. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. No doubt, we have a wide discretion in such cases, but it might be doubted whether this is a decided case within the meaning of that section. And apart from that we do not think that it is a matter in which we should interfere. The finding as to the status of an agriculturist is not appealable in itself, and that being so, it would be, we think, inexpedient to interfere with an order which is not appealable [see Rupchand Ganesh Shet v. Bhogilal Ratanchand (2)], by having recourse to our exceptional powers under s. 115. The appellant will have an opportunity to raise the question of status should he find it expedient to appeal against the final decree. For these reasons the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 94 Ind. Cas. 72; 28 Bom. L. R. 307; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 237.

(1) 94 Ind. Cas. 591; 27 Bom. L. R. 1446; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 121.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 800 OF 1923.

August 23, 1927.

Present:—Sir Amberson Marten, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

BHAILAL NATHABHAI—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

KALANSANG GULABSANG—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Adverse possession—Landlord and tenant—Unsuccessful plea of permanent tenancy—Possession for twelve years thereafter—Acquisition of permanent tenancy.

A person who is in fact in possession as an annual tenant cannot by the mere unsuccessful assertion of a permanent tenancy in a judicial proceeding and the lapse of twelve years without that assertion having been challenged by the landlord obtain a title to permanent tenancy by adverse possession. [p. 53, col. 2.]

Mohammad Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Mohan Singh (3), followed.

Budesab v. Hanmantha (1) and Fatehsingji v. Bamanji (2), distinguished.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Ahmedabad, in Appeal No. 183 of 1923, varying the decree of the Subordinate Judge at Kaira, in Civil Suit No. 203 of 1921.

Mr. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. R. J. Thakor for Mr. M. K. Thakor), for the Appellant.

Mr. H. C. Koyajee (with him Mr. P. N. Desai), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Crump, J.—The material portion of the judgment is as follows:—I now turn to the second question which has been raised in this case, and that is that even though the defendants may have been at one time annual tenants, they have by adverse possession acquired the rights of permanent tenants. The argument proceeds thus. Before the suit in the Mamlatdar's Court in 1898 the defendants asserted their right to hold as permanent tenants. True those rights were not allowed in those judicial proceedings, but the assertion of those rights made it necessary for the plaintiffs to take some action to assert their title and they did not do so, the possession being adverse for twelve years, ripened into a title by prescription. Now, here again, the first answer is to be found in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court. It is significant, as I have said before, that the appellant's Counsel can point to no assertion of adverse title of this nature after the decision in the Mamlatdar's Court, and the Judge has held upon the facts, though he expresses his conclusion in somewhat different language, that the inference really is that the defendants agreed to continue in possession as annual tenants after these decisions by the Mamlatdar for possession. If that is so, there is, of course, an end of the matter, and here again that is a conclusion which it was open to the Judge to draw upon the evidence in the case, and one, therefore, which cannot properly be challenged in second appeal.

But even supposing that was not so, though, no doubt, there are decisions of this Court in Budesab v. Hanmantha (1) and Fatehsingji v. Bamanji (2), that a limited interest can be acquired by adverse possession, it will be seen that the facts upon which at least the former of these cases proceeds are very different from the facts now before us. There the tenant successfully resisted an attempt by the landlord to oust him pleading a permanent tenancy. And it was held, that being so, adverse possession for twelve years of the limited interest thereby set up was sufficient to confer upon the defendant the character which he claimed. But we have not got here facts resembling those. Here there was no successful resistance by the tenants of a claim to recover possession. The matter was the precise contrary. The plaintiffs succeeded, and though the defendants did remain in possession it is not shown that they remained in possession in assertion of an adverse title. For no such assertion is proved after the date of the decision in that case. As for the second case, Fatehsingji v. Bamanji (2), the facts there were of a special and peculiar nature, and can certainly not form a precedent for the present case.

Further with reference to these cases and with reference to the general question it is important to bear in mind the remarks of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Mohammed Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Mohan Singh (3). Their Lordships say at page 208* of the report:—

"The Board are unable to hold that the simple assertion of a proprietary right in

(1) 21 B. 509; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 341.

(2) 27 B. 515; 5 Bom. L. R. 274.

(3) 74 Ind. Cas. 476; 50 I. A. 202; A. I. R. 1923 P. C. 118; 21 A. L. J. 757; 45 A. 419; 26 O. C. 231; 45 M. L. J. 623; 9 O. & A. L. R. 901; 10 O. L. J. 383; 19 L. W. 283; 39 C. L. J. 295; 28 C. W. N. 840; 33 M. L. T. 321 (P. C.).

*Page of 50 I. A.—[Ed.]

a judicial proceeding connected with the land in dispute which ex hypothesi was unfounded at the date when it was made, can, by the mere lapse of six or twelve years, convert what was an occupancy or tenant title into that of an under-proprietor. It is true that the defendant might, if he had chosen, have at once instituted proceedings for a declaratory decree that the plaintiff was not an under-proprietor, but such a course was equally open to the plaintiff. Each party had had his supposed rights judicially challenged by the other, the plaintiff by the notice of ejectment, of which he had obtained cancellation, the defendant by the assertion in the proceedings for cancellation of the notice for ejectment that he was not liable to be ejected because of his rights as under-proprietor."

That is very much the case which we have here. Then further on they say (page 209*):—

"They (the Board) are unable to affirm as a general proposition of law that a person who is, in fact, in possession of land under a tenancy or occupancy title can, by a mere assertion in a judicial proceeding and the lapse of six or twelve years without that assertion having been successfully challenged, obtain a title as an under-proprietor to the lands. Such a judgment might have very far-reaching results and would almost certainly lead to a flood of litigation."

Those remarks are pertinent to the present case, and were affirmed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Madhavrao Waman Saundalgekar v. Raghunath Venkatesh Deshpande (4). In that case their Lordships say (page 264*):—

"The defence of 12 years' adverse possession as permanent tenants is set up by persons who, and their predecessors-in-title, always claimed to be and were tenants of service watan lands; and in the opinion of their Lordships neither the defendants nor their predecessors-in-title could have acquired any title to a permanent tenancy in the lands by adverse possession as against the watandars from whom they held the lands."

Comment is made upon this that it is a case of watan lands and may depend in some way upon the special Statute which governs property of that kind; but in a further case in Nainapillai Marakayar v. Ramanathan Chettiar (5), their Lordships lay down a far broader proposition. The passage is at page 98*; and runs as follows:—

"One of the reasons for these consolidated appeals as stated in the case for the appellants is: '4. Because the appellants have acquired permanent occupancy right by prescription.' No tenant of lands in India can obtain any right to a permanent tenancy by prescription in them against his landlord from whom he holds the lands: see Madhavrao Waman Saundalgekar v. Raghunath Venkatesh Deshpande (4)."

Thus the proposition in the second case in Madhavrao Waman Saundalgekar v. Raghunath Venkatesh Deshpande (4) has been given a very wide extension in this latter case. Therefore, apart from the finding of the lower Appellate Court to which attention has been drawn, it would appear upon these authorities that no title to a permanent tenancy could have been acquired by prescription in such a case as the present.

It follows that the decree of the lower Appellate Court must be affirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs.

Marten, C. J.—I agree. We have here the advantage of a clear and concise judgment from the learned District Judge with which I quite agree. It is unnecessary, therefore, so far as the findings of fact or law are concerned, for me to add anything to what my brother Crump has just stated. But, as regards the second point about prescription in connection with a permanent tenancy, I may state that in the present case we are not called on to decide whether the statement in Nainapillai Marakayar v. Ramanathan Chettiar (5) would necessarily prevent a title by adverse possession being ever obtained to a permanent tenancy in our Presidency. It is sufficient in the present case to apply what their Lordships have laid down in Mohammad Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Mohan Singh (3) and to say that applying those principles they would clearly prevent the appellants from successfully establishing their right to a permanent tenancy by adverse possession after 1894 or 1898, having regard to the findings against them by the lower Appellate Court.

(4) 74 Ind. Cas. 362; 50 I. A. 255; 25 Bom. L. R. 1005; (1923) M. W. N. 689; A. I. R. 1923 P. C. 205; 33 M. L. T. 389; 47 B. 798; 28 C. W. N. 857; 20 L. W. 248; 47 M. L. J. 248 (P. C.).

*Page of 50 I. A.—[Ed.]

(5) 82 Ind. Cas. 226; 51 I. A. 83; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 65; 19 L. W. 259; 20 A. L. J. 130; 34 M. L. T. 10; (1924) M. W. N. 293; 46 M. L. J. 546; 10 O. & A. L. R. 464; 47 M. 337; 28 C. W. N. 809; L. R. 5 A. (P. C.) 33 (P. C.).

I respectfully agree that the landlord here established his title by judicial proceedings, and that the true inference is that the tenant accepted that position and took their khatas acquiescing in the view that they were annual tenants. That being so, as in my judgment they took their khatas as ordinary annual tenants, prescription would not run in their favour by mere assertions that they were permanent tenants notwithstanding these existing annual tenancies. Nor, indeed as my brother Crump has pointed out, is there on the evidence any real assertion of their rights as permanent tenants after 1898.

Therefore, the facts of this case are clearly distinguishable from those of the earlier Bombay authorities, such as Budesab v. Hanmantha (1) where it was held that a tenant successfully denying in 1862 the landlord's right to possession could claim that he was holding adversely as permanent tenant to the landlord. Further, as regards the khatas that were passed in the present case, I think there is a broad distinction between them and other cases where an isolated khata has been passed in a long series of years under circumstances pointing otherwise to a permanent tenancy, or where the evidence points to the fact that the tenant who passed the khata did not appreciate the precise significance of the document he was executing. I, accordingly, agree that these appeals should be dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE No. 87 OF 1927.

November 10, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Fawcett and Mr. Justice Mirza.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

UKHA MAHADU BARASE—

ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195 (1) (b)—Complaint to Police—Subsequent complaint to Magistrate on same facts—Merger—Prosecution for false charge—Complaint by Magistrate, whether necessary—Committal before filing of complaint to Magistrate, validity of:

The accused made a complaint to the Police which was found to be false and he was committed for trial to the Sessions Court for an offence under s. 211 of the Penal Code. Subsequently he made a similar complaint to a Magistrate and contended that the committal proceedings should be quashed as there was no complaint in writing by the Magistrate within the meaning of s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code:

Held, that the principle that where a complainant makes a complaint to the Police and subsequently makes a similar complaint to the Magistrate, the complaint to the Police merges in the complaint to the Magistrate and the complainant cannot be prosecuted for having made a false accusation without a complaint by the Magistrate, was not applicable to the case inasmuch as there was no complaint to the Magistrate at the time of the committal order, and that the committal order was, therefore, perfectly valid. [p. 55, col. 2.]

Criminal reference made by the Sessions Judge, Nasik.

Mr. Rege (with him Mr. A. A. Adarkar), for the Accused.

Mr. P. B. Shingne, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Fawcett, J.—In this case on May 4, 1926, accused No. 1 made a complaint to the District Superintendent of Police, Nasik, that one Bai Saru had been murdered by her mother-in-law, and had been thrown into a well by two other persons. The Police investigated the petition, and coming to the conclusion that it was false, obtained a summary in form B from the First Class Magistrate, Malegaon. The papers were then laid before the Assistant Superintendent of Police, Malegaon, who sanctioned the prosecution of Ukha and his witnesses. The First Class Magistrate, Nandgaon, on April 30, 1927, committed these persons for trial before the Sessions Court of Nasik under s. 211 of the Indian Penal Code. After the committal order had been passed, and on the same day, Ukha made a complaint to the same First Class Magistrate under s. 302, Indian Penal Code, accusing the mother-in-law and three other persons of murder. The Magistrate eventually committed these four persons for trial in the Sessions Court on a charge of murder. That case was tried first by the Sessions Court and resulted in an acquittal. Then the Sessions Judge took up the earlier case, but at the outset the Assistant Public Prosecutor conducting the prosecution submitted that further proceedings would be improper in view of the terms of s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code. He contended that, although the original application of Ukha was made to the Police and a Police Officer is not a "Court," yet the complaint to the Police in effect merged in the subsequent complaint to the Magistrate, and, therefore, no proceedings in regard to the alleged falsity of the first complaint could be taken without the sanction of the First Class Magistrate under sub-s. (1) (b) of s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code. The learned Sessions Judge has adopted this view and has submitted the case to this Court with a recommendation that the committal order should be quashed, and adds that "upon return of the papers they will be sent to the First Class Magistrate, Nandgaon, for such action as he may deem necessary." This recommendation is supported by Counsel for the persons charged and by the Government Pleader.

As pointed out in the letter of the Sessions Judge, there is, no doubt, authority for the view of merger that I have referred to. The rulings in Tayabullar v. Emperor (1), Brown v. Ananda Lal Mullick (2) and Muhammad Yassin v. Emperor (3) have ruled that, where a complainant has made a complaint to the Police and subsequently makes a similar complaint to the Magistrate, he has shown that he wants to insist upon a judicial investigation, and he must be deemed to have made his complaint to the Magistrate, so that under the present Code he cannot be prosecuted for having made a false accusation without a complaint by the Magistrate. The Sessions Judge mentions in his letter that in this case the committal order was passed before any complaint was made to a Magistrate, but he thinks this immaterial. "The point is," he says, "that by making his complaint to the Court the informant has withdrawn the information from the category of mere Police proceedings and has raised it to the category of a proceeding in Court. This necessitates a complaint by the Court if any proceedings are to be taken against Ukha and his witnesses. The matter is no longer in the hands of the Police but within the cognizance of the Court, that is, the First Class Magistrate or the Sessions Court of Nasik."

We do not, however, agree with this contention, which has also been put before us by Counsel for the accused. The committal order, when it was passed, was perfectly valid, because (even adopting the view taken by the Calcutta and Patna High Courts) there had been no complaint made to a Magistrate, which could supersede the complaint to the Police. Section 195, at the time of that committal order, would not require any complaint in writing by a Court, because the offence under s. 211, Indian Penal Code, was not "alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court" within the meaning of cl. (b) of sub-s. (1) of s. 195. In our opinion it was not open to the accused in this case to make the committal order invalid by merely making a subsequent complaint to the Magistrate. There is nothing in the Code which would justify the principle adopted by the Calcutta and Patna High Courts being applied to a case of the present kind; and in the absence of some specific provision such as s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, to prevent the Sessions Judge exercising jurisdiction, he clearly has power to try the case. If, for any reason, the authorities think that the case ought not to be tried, then the proper course, in our opinion, is the withdrawal of the case under s. 494, Criminal Procedure Code. But as it at present stands, in our opinion, there is no legal ground for quashing the committal order under s. 215, Criminal Procedure Code. The papers to be returned to the Sessions Judge with this intimation.

Mirza, J.—I agree.

A. N. A.

Answer accordingly.

(1) 36 Ind. Cas. 845; 43 C. 1152; 24 C. L. J. 134; 20 C. W. N. 1265; 18 Or. L. J. 13.

(2) 36 Ind. Cas. 857; 44 C. 650; 20 C. W. N. 1347; 18 C. L. J. 25; 25 C. L. J. 59.

(3) 86 Ind. Cas. 825; 4 Pat. 323; 6 P. L. T. 457; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 483; 26 Or. L. J. 889.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION FOR REVISION No.

268 of 1927.

October 19, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Patkar and Mr.
Justice Baker.In re BAJIRAO ABAJI KULKARNI—APPLICANT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 4 (1) (r), 435, 439—Mukhtyar—Right to appear in Criminal Courts—General order prohibiting Mukhtyars from practising, legality of—Pleader, meaning of—Revision—Interference.

A District Magistrate has no power, in view of s. 4 (1) (r) of the Criminal Procedure Code, to pass a general order prohibiting Mukhtyars from practising in the Criminal Courts. [p. 57, col. 1.]

There is no reason why a Mukhtyar, though he has no general power to appear in any Court, should be debarred from appearing in any proceeding in a Criminal Court with the permission of the Court. [ibid.]

An order prohibiting Mukhtyars from practising can be revised by the High Court under ss. 435 and 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code. [p. 56, col. 2.]

Reg. v. Ramchandra (1), In the matter of the petition of Anant Ram. (2) and Ishan Chandra Bhat v. Emperor (3), relied on.

Criminal application against an order of the District Magistrate, Nasik.

Mr. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. A. A. Adarkar), for the Applicant.

Mr. P. B. Shingne, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application filed by one Bajirao Abaji Kulkarni who has been practising as a Mukhtyar for the last six years since 1921 in the Sinnar Taluka in the Nasik District. It appears that the Bar Association of Sinnar made a representation to the District Magistrate of Nasik who passed an order that in future the services of Mukhtyars should not be employed in criminal or other cases at Sinnar unless the Magistrate certifies under his own hand that the party is too poor to engage the services of a qualified Pleader.

The first question which arises for consideration in this case is whether this is an order of a Criminal Court which falls within ss. 435 and 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Our attention has been invited to the precedents of this Court in the cases of Tamannacharya alias Narsinh Guracharya Shiggaon, [(1924) Criminal Revision No. 407 of 1924] and Reg. v. Ramchandra (1) and to the decision of the Allahabad High Court in the case of In the matter of the petition of Anant Ram (2) in which similar applications were entertained by the High Court. We have decided to hear the application on the merits.

Under s. 340 of the Criminal Procedure Code, an accused person has a right to be defended by a Pleader. "Pleader" is defined in the Criminal Procedure Code, s. 4 (1) (r). Under the old Code of 1882, "Pleader" included any Mukhtyar or other person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in such proceeding. Sections 6, 7 and 10 of the Legal Practitioners Act XVIII of 1879, make provision for the issue of a certificate to Mukhtyars. But the Legal Practitioners Act does not apply to Bombay, and even in the Provinces to which the Act applied, it was held that the Mukhtyars could not be given general permission to practise, but the Court must decide in each particular case whether a Mukhtyar should be allowed to appear. See Ishan Chandra Bhat v. Emperor (3) and In the matter of the petition of Anant Ram (2). But these decisions are no longer law having regard to the change in the definition of "Pleader" by Act XXXV of 1923 which may now render it unnecessary that Mukhtyars should have special permission in each case in the Provinces to which the Legal Practitioners Act applies. But ss. 6, 7 and 10 of the Legal Practitioners Act do not apply to Bombay and the Bombay Pleaders Act, XVII of 1920, does not make any provision for issuing any certificate to Mukhtyars. There are in the Bombay Presidency no Mukhtyars authorized under any law for the time being in force to practise in any Court within the Presidency. The question, therefore, has to be decided on the wording of s. 4 (r) of the Criminal Procedure Code. It is conceded by Mr. Thakor that the applicant does not fall under the first clause of s. 4 (r), that is "a Pleader or a Mukhtyar authorized under any law for the time being in force to practise in such Court," but he contends that he falls within the words "any other person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in such proceeding." Having regard to the ruling of this Court in Dorabsha Bomanji Dubash v. Emperor (4) in which an Estate Manager was allowed to appear for an accused in his stead and plead and do other acts on his behalf in the case against him, we think that a Mukhtyar would fall within s. 4, cl. (r) of the Criminal Procedure Code, and represent an accused as a Pleader with the permission of the Court in any proceeding. If an Estate Manager can be allowed to appear on behalf of an accused with the permission of the Court there is no reason why a Mukhtyar, though he has no general power, to appear in any Court, should be debarred from appearing in any proceeding in a Criminal Court with the permission of the Court.

(2) 30 A. 66; 5 A. L. J. 40; A. W. N. (1908) 11; 7 Cr. L. J. 21.

(3) 9 Ind. Cas. 664; 38 O. 488; 15 C. W. N. 409; 13 O. L. J. 635; 12 Cr. L. J. 111.

(4) 93 Ind. Cas. 232; 50 B. 250; 28 Bom. L. R. 102; 27 Cr. L. J. 440; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 218.

The matter was considered recently in Chambers, and the Circular No. 5216 of 1927 dated October 17, 1927, is to this effect:—

"It has been represented to the High Court that in certain Districts non-qualified persons have been allowed generally to practise in all Criminal Courts as Mukhtyars. Under s. 4 (1) (r) of the Code of Criminal Procedure a criminal Court can grant permission to an individual to act in a particular proceeding pending before it. But the law in this Presidency does not allow Mukhtyars to be given general permission to practise in all cases or in all Courts. The Honourable the Chief Justice and Judges are, therefore, pleased to direct that general permission to appear in Criminal Courts should not be given to any Mukhtyar and that no Mukhtyar should be allowed to appear in any case in any Court before he obtains the special permission of the Magistrate before whom the case is to be heard to appear in that case only."

The order passed by the District Magistrate in this case is a very general order, and he has imposed a condition which is not recognised by the Criminal Procedure Code.

We would, therefore, set aside the order of the District Magistrate of Nasik, and direct that the District Magistrate and the Magistrates subordinate to him should follow the circular mentioned above.

A. N. A.

*Rule made absolute.BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION FOR REVISION No. 155 OF 1927.

October 19, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Patkar and Mr. Justice Baker.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

SHAIKH USMAN SHAIKH UMAR—

ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) as amended by Act XVIII of 1923, s. 162—Application for copy of statement of prosecution witness—Proper time for making such application—Proof of statement, mode of.

An accused is not entitled under s. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code to a copy of the statement made by a prosecution witness before the witness on behalf of the prosecution, who is sought to be cross-examined by such statement is in the witness-box. The request has to be made to the Court when the witness on behalf of the prosecution is under cross-examination. [p. 59, col. 1.]

Dadan Gazi v. Emperor (1), In re Peramasami Ragudu (2) and Madari Sikdar v. Emperor (3), relied on.

The statement by which it is sought to contradict the prosecution witness under s. 162, Criminal Procedure Code, must be either proved by the investigating officer, or must be admitted by the witness in his cross-examination, or must be proved in some other way before it is put to the witness under s. 145 of the Evidence Act, 1872. [p. 58, col. 2; p. 59, col. 1.]

Criminal application against conviction and sentence passed by the Second Class Magistrate at Nandurbar, confirmed in appeal by the District Magistrate, West Khandesh.

Mr. D. G. Dalvi, for the Accused.

Mr. P. B. Shingne, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Patkar, J.—In this case, the accused, Shaikh Usman Shaikh Umar was tried on charges under ss. 277 and 295 of the Indian Penal Code. He was convicted by the Second Class Magistrate, Nandurbar, and the convictions and sentences have been upheld by the District Magistrate, West Khandesh.

It appears that on December 14, 1926, the prosecution case was finished, the charge was framed, and after the examination of the accused the case was adjourned to December 22, 1926. On December 15, 1926, an application was made on behalf of the accused, requesting that he should be furnished with the copies of the statements of the witnesses on behalf of the prosecution under s. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code as he had to cross-examine the witnesses on December 22, 1926, and stating that he would not be in a position to cross-examine the witnesses unless the copies were given to him. The Police Prosecutor made an endorsement on the application that he objected to the copies being granted as there was nothing on the record to show that the statements of any of the witnesses were recorded by the Police. The learned Magistrate on December 22, 1926, made an order that under the circumstances no copies could be granted.

It is urged on behalf of the accused that he was entitled to get copies of the statements of the witnesses on behalf of the prosecution under s. 162 of the amended Criminal Procedure Code. Under s. 162, no statement made by any person to a Police Officer in the course of an investigation or any record thereof in the Police diary or otherwise or any part of such statement or record shall be used for any purpose at any inquiry or trial. The first proviso deals with the case where witnesses are called for the prosecution whose statements have been taken down in writing as aforesaid. Under the proviso, the accused has to make a request to the Court and the Court shall on the request of the accused refer to such writing and direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof in order that any part of such statement, if duly proved, may be used to contradict such witness in the manner provided by s. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. Under the old Criminal Procedure Code, the accused was not entitled to obtain a copy of such statement, and it was left to the discretion of the Court, if the Court thought it expedient in the interest of justice, to direct that the accused be furnished with copies of the statements. Under the second proviso to s. 162, if the Court is of opinion that any part of such statement is not relevant to the subject-matter of the inquiry or trial or that its disclosure to the accused is not essential in the interest of justice and is inexpedient in the public interests, the Court shall record such an opinion and exclude such part from the copy of the statement furnished to the accused. Under the new Criminal Procedure Code, subject to proviso 2, the accused is entitled to a copy of the statement under s. 162 for the purpose of contradicting the prosecution witness in the manner provided by s. 145.

The important question is as to the point of time when the accused is entitled to make his request under the first proviso to s. 162. I think that the application to get a copy of the statement must be made at the time when the prosecution witness, whom it is desired to cross-examine by reference to his previously recorded statement, appears in the witness box. That view was taken, before the amendment, in the case of Dadan Gazi v. Emperor (1), and there is nothing in the amended Code to show that the accused is entitled to a copy of the statement at any time before the witness appears in the box. The reference in the first proviso to s. 145 points to the time when the request is to be made. The time when such request is to be made is when the witness is sought to be cross-examined and the statement, if duly proved, is to be used to contradict such witness under s. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act. This view was taken by the Madras High Court in In re Peramasami Ragudu (2), where it was held that the accused is not entitled to copies of the statements made by prosecution witnesses at the Police investigation before their cross-examination is opened. The same view is accepted by the Calcutta High Court in the case of Madari Sikdar v. Emperor (3), where it was held that under the first proviso to s. 162 the accused was entitled to be furnished with a copy of such statement only after the witness had been examined by the prosecution and his cross-examination had laid a foundation for the suggestion that this evidence in Court was contradicted by the previous statement recorded under s. 161 of the Code and not at any antecedent stage of the inquiry or trial. The words "if duly proved" indicate that the record of the statement cannot be admitted in evidence straightway, but the officer before whom the statement was made should ordinarily be examined as to any alleged statement that is relied upon by the accused for the purpose of contradicting the witness: Vithu Balu Kharat v. Emperor (4). The statement by which it is sought to contradict the prosecution witness under s. 162 must, therefore, be either proved by the investigating officer, or must be admitted by the witness in his cross examination, or must be proved in some other way before it

(1) 33 O. 1023; 10 O. W. N. 890; 4 Cr. L. J. 79.

(2) 91 Ind. Cas. 532; 27 Cr. L. J. 100; 22 L. W. 784; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 183.

(3) 102 Ind. Cas. 550; 54 C. 307; A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 514; 28 Cr. L. J. 582; 8 A. I. Cr. R. 112.

(4) 83 Ind. Cas. 1007; 26 Bom. L. R. 965 at p. 967; A. I. R. 1924 Bom. 510; 26 Cr. L. J. 223.

is put to the witness under s. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

Though I am not prepared to hold that the cross-examination must lay a foundation for the suggestion that the evidence given by the witness before the Court is contradicted by the statement recorded under s. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code before the accused is entitled to request the Judge to refer to the writing and grant him a copy, I think that the accused is not entitled to a copy of the statement before the witness on behalf of the prosecution, who is sought to be cross-examined by such statement, is in the witness-box, and that the request has to be made to the Court when the witness on behalf of the prosecution is under cross-examination. In this case, some of the witnesses on behalf of the prosecution have not at all been cross-examined, and the request was not made when the witnesses were in the witness-box for cross-examination, but the application was made some time before the case was fixed for hearing and cross-examination of the witnesses. I think the application made on behalf of the accused on December 15, 1926, was misconceived, and that the accused was not entitled to copies of the statements under s. 162 on the application made on December 15, 1926. I cannot, therefore, say that the learned Magistrate committed any error in declining to furnish the accused with the copies at that stage.

It appears from the remark made by the learned District Magistrate on appeal that he was not aware that the application of the accused to get copies of the depositions of witnesses was on the record. But, as I have said above, the application was premature.

I think, therefore, that the refusal of the Magistrate to give copies of the statements before the prosecution witnesses were in the box for the purpose of cross-examination is not, in my opinion, illegal.

We have sent for the statements of witnesses recorded during the Police investigation under s. 161 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and on perusing them we are satisfied that they do not contain anything favourable to the accused, and that the accused is not in any way prejudiced in this case.

We would, therefore, discharge the Rule.

Baker, J.—The applicant, in this case, was convicted by the Second Class Magistrate, Nandurbar, of offences under s. 277 of the Indian Penal Code, for fouling the water of a public reservoir and s. 295 of the Indian Penal Code, for injury to or defiling a place of worship with intent to insult the religion of any class, and was sentenced to a fine of Rs. 25, in default to undergo fifteen days' rigorous imprisonment under s. 277 and a fine of Rs. 60 in default to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one month under s. 295. The conviction and sentence were confirmed in appeal by the District Magistrate, West Khandesh.

The applicant applies in revision on the ground that he was not furnished with a copy of the statements of witnesses before the Police under s. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code. After the charge, the accused was asked if he wished to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses, and he stated, on December 15, 1926, that he wanted to do so. The case was adjourned to December 22, and on December 15 he presented an application asking for copies of statements to the Police. The Police Prosecutor objected to the statements being given on the ground that there was so far nothing on the record to show that any statements had been made. The Magistrate refused copies of the statements, and the prosecution witnesses were not cross-examined with the exception of (Ex. 1), the complainant, and (Ex. 7). This point was raised in appeal and overruled. The statement in the Appellate Court's judgment that there is nothing on the record to show that such an application was made appears to be incorrect. The case raises an important point of law, viz., the right of the accused to get a copy of the statements under s. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code as amended by Act XVIII of 1923. There does not appear to be any direct ruling on the point since the amendment. It is to be noted that while the amendment of s. 162 is in favour of the accused, the section lays down certain formalities which must be observed, and it is not the case, as appears to be generally supposed, that the amended section gives the right to the accused to demand copies of the statements made by the prosecution witnesses to the Police until the formalities laid down by the section have been complied with. The section says:—

"When any witness is called for the prosecution in such inquiry or trial whose statement has been reduced into writing as aforesaid, the Court shall on the request of the accused, refer to such writing and direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof in order that any part of such statement, if duly proved, may be used to contradict such witness in the manner provided by s. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. When any part of such statement is so used, any part thereof may also be used in the re-examination of such witness, but for the purpose only of explaining any matter referred to in his cross-examination.

"Provided, further, that, if the Court is of opinion that any part of any such statement is not relevant to the subject-matter of the inquiry or trial, or that its disclosure to the accused is not essential in the interests of justice and is inexpedient in the public interests, it shall record such opinion (but not the reasons therefor) and shall exclude such part from the copy of the statement furnished to the accused."

This latter proviso appears frequently to be overlooked, and reading the section as a whole it is clear that the grant of copies as a matter of course without the Court first referring to the statements with the object of excluding any portion which it considers irrelevant to the subject-matter of the trial, or any portion whose disclosure is not essential in the interests of justice and is inexpedient in the public interests, is not a compliance with the section as it stands and is in disregard of its provisions. It may, therefore, be laid down that the accused is not entitled; as a matter of course, to a copy of the statements, unless the Court has previously referred to them and has exercised its discretion in the light of the second proviso to the section. It has been held in the case of In re Peramasami Raghudu (2), which was followed by the Calcutta High Court in Madari Sikdar v. Emperor (3) that the proper time at which an application under s. 162 should be made is when the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses commences. It must, therefore, be held that in the present case the application made on behalf of the accused before the cross-examination of the witnesses had commenced is not a compliance with s. 162, and that, strictly speaking, the Court was justified in refusing it. But, had the accused, after the cross-examination commenced, made an application asking the Court to refer to the statements and to direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof for the purpose of contradicting the witnesses, the Court would have been bound to comply with the request. In the present case, it does not appear from the record whether any of the witnesses had been examined by the Police and the learned Government Pleader had had no instructions on the point and was unable to state definitely, whether the witnesses were examined or not. We have accordingly found it necessary to direct him to obtain information on the point from the Police.

The statements have now been received and do not contain anything which would affect the cross-examination, nor has the accused been prejudiced by their non-production. The Rule will, therefore, be discharged.

A. N. A.

Rule discharged.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 841 OF 1923.

August 17, 1927.

Present:—Sir Amberson Marten, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

NARAYAN BALAJI BANDIVDEKAR—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GOVIND SAKHARAM NIMKAR

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (XIV of 1859), s. 1, cl. 15—Limitation Act (IX of 1871), s. 29—Limitation Acts (XV of 1877 and IX of 1908), s. 19—Acknowledgment by manager of joint family, validity of—Right to sue for redemption barred under Act of 1859—Revival by later Acts.

The plaintiff's great-grandfather mortgaged to the defendant's predecessor-in-interest certain property in 1807. In 1860, the mortgagee's son who was the manager of the joint family at that time acknowledged this mortgage in a sub-mortgage executed by him. The plaintiff sued for redemption in 1920:

Held, (1) that the acknowledgment of 1860 was not a valid one inasmuch as the manager of a joint family could not bind the family by an acknowledgment under the Limitation Act of 1859; [p. 62, col. 2.]

Bhogilal v. Amritlal (1), followed.

(2) that the suit for redemption became barred in 1868 and the mortgagor's rights were extinguished under the provisions of s. 29 of the Limitation Act of 1871; [ibid.]

Fatimatunnissa Begum v. Sundar Das (4), followed.

(3) that the rights were not in any way revived by the Limitation Acts of 1877 and 1908 and that the plaintiff's suit for redemption could not be maintained. [p. 63, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Ratnagiri, in Appeal No. 97 of 1922, reversing the decree of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ratnagiri, in Civil Suit No. 84 of 1920.

Messrs. Y. N. Nadkarni (with him Mr. D. S. Varde), for the Appellant.

Messrs. V. B. Virkar and G. B. Chitale, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Crump, J.—The plaintiff in this action sued to redeem a mortgage of the year 1807. The first Court held that the suit was within time. The suit was filed on June 18, 1920, that is to say, 113 years after the date of the mortgage. But the trial Court held that, by reason of a certain acknowledgment of June 27, 1860, the suit, being within sixty years from the date of that acknowledgment, was not time-barred. The lower Appellate Court took a different view, and held that the acknowledgment in question was ineffectual to give a fresh starting point of limitation inasmuch as it was not signed by a person who could give an effectual acknowledgment having regard to cl. 15 of s. 1 of Act XIV of 1859 which was in force at that date.

The question which we have to determine is which of these two views is correct. The mortgagee under the mortgage of 1807 was one Bachaji, and though the facts are not very clearly ascertained, it appears that in 1860 the family consisted of Sakharām, the son of Bachaji, and possibly his eldest son the 1st defendant, and also Moreshwar, the son of Bachaji's brother. The acknowledgment on which reliance is placed is signed by Sakharām. It is contained in a sub-mortgage to a third party, and in the course of the document, the following passage occurs: "We mortgage to you the same fourth takshim of the whole village of Mouje Karade which we hold under mortgage." It has been found from other documents that the mortgage alluded to in these words is the mortgage of 1807. Therefore, we must consider the effect of this acknowledgment by Sakharām in the year 1860. It appears to have been found that Sakharām was the manager of the joint family, and though it is rather difficult to feel entirely satisfied with the finding upon that point which rests on grounds which are somewhat conjectural, still we take that to be so for the purposes of the present appeal.

Turning then to the Act of 1859, which was in force at this date, there will be found in cl. 15 a reference to acknowledgments in the following words "if in the meantime an acknowledgment of the title of the...mortgagor, or of his right of redemption, shall have been given in writing signed by the...mortgagee or some person claiming under him, (a period of 60 years) from the date of such acknowledgment in writing." Therefore, we have to decide whether Sakharām was such a person as would come within these words. Now that very point came before this Court in Bhogilal v. Amritlal (1), with reference to Art. 148 of the Indian Limitation Act of 1871, where practically the same form of words are used. The facts there were that one Jagjivandas was the manager of a joint Hindu firm, and also the manager of the joint family estate, and the question before the High Court was whether an acknowledgment by Jagjivandas satisfied the requirements of cl. 15 of s. 1 of Act XIV of 1859, or Art. 148 of Act IX of 1871. It was held that it did not. The decision was based upon the view that Jagjivandas in that case might have been regarded as an agent, but that an acknowledgment by an agent was not sufficient for the purposes of the law in force at that date.

In the same volume, is another decision of this High Court, Bhasker Tatya Shet v. Vijalal Nathu (2), in which the validity of an acknowledgment by the manager of a joint Hindu family was considered with reference to s. 19 of the Indian Limitation Act XV of 1877. It may be remarked here that it was in s. 19 of the Act of 1877 that an agent was introduced for the first time as a person competent to give an acknowledgment for the purpose of giving rise to a fresh starting point for limitation. Upon that point, the High Court held that the manager of a joint Hindu family could, for the purposes of s. 19 of the Indian Limitation Act of 1877, give a valid acknowledgment, and they base their decision upon this that the manager must ordinarily be held to be an agent duly authorised in this behalf within the meaning of s. 19.

Those two decisions bring out very clearly the views of this High Court as to the provisions of the law in the Act of 1859 and the Act of 1871 as compared with the provisions of the law in the Act of 1877. The effect of the two decisions together is plainly this: that the manager of a joint Hindu family should be regarded as an agent, and, therefore, a person who could give an acknowledgment for the purposes of the latter Act, but though he is an agent, he cannot give an acknowledgment for the purposes of the former Act, because the former Act does not provide for an acknowledgment by an agent. It has been conceded before us that the earlier of these two decisions has never been overruled, and the only criticism offered upon it is that it is in some way inconsistent with the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Annamalai Chetty v. Murugasa Chetty (3). The point before the Privy Council there was not whether there was a good acknowledgment for the purposes of limitation, but whether the manager of a joint family was a person on whom proper service could be effected for the purposes of s. 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882. Their Lordships say with reference to the relation between the manager of joint family property and the agent of the members of the family (page 228*):

(1) 17 B. 173; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 113.

(2) 17 B. 512; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 333.

"The relation of such persons is not that of principal or agent, or of partners; it is much more like that of trustee and cestui que trust."

But how that decision on an entirely different point can be invoked as casting any serious doubt upon the decision in Bhogilal v. Amritlal (1) is, in my opinion, difficult to understand. It was further suggested that in Bhogilal's case (1) the Court had to deal with the manager of a Hindu family firm, and that in some respects for the present purpose the manager of a joint family firm stands upon a different footing from the manager of a joint Hindu family. We are, however, unable to see any substantial difference so far as the present purpose is concerned. No doubt the manager of a joint family firm is not in all respects identical with the manager of a joint Hindu family. But in Bhogilal v. Amritlal (1), it is relevant to observe that Jagjivan held both capacities, and the Courtsays (page 176†):—

"Jagjivan was then manager of the mortgagee firm for and on behalf of the Hindu family to which the firm belonged, and was not sole owner thereof, but like the present defendant only one of several co-parceners."

(3) 30 I. A. 220; 5 Bom. L. R. 494; 26 M. 544; 7 O. W. N. 754; 13 M. L. J. 287; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 523 (P. C.).

*Page of 30 I. A.—[Ed.]

†Page of 17 B.—[Ed.]

Nothing really turned upon the distinction now sought to be made, nor are we able to see that that distinction in any way detracts from the value of the authority in question for the purpose of the present case. It follows then that the acknowledgment of 1860 was not such an acknowledgment as was required by Act XIV of 1859 which was then in force. It is, therefore, further clear that had a suit for redemption been brought in the year 1868, that suit would have been barred. In other words, the mortgagors allowed the time within which they could sue for redemption to expire.

We have next to consider the effect of that inaction on their part upon their right to redeem. Upon this point a reference may be made to the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Fatimatunnissa Begum v. Sundar Das (4). Their Lordships were there dealing with a mortgage and a suit to redeem. That mortgage was in the year 1788, and, therefore, the suit to redeem became barred in 1848 unless in the meantime the required acknowledgment was given. Their Lordships say at page 1010* of the report:—

"The Act of 1871 provided the same limits of time for suits of this kind, and it added the provision (s. 29) that at the expiration of the period thereby limited to any person for instituting a suit for the possession of any land his right to such land shall be extinguished. The period thereby limited in the case of this mortgage was the 17th October, 1848, and the title of the mortgagors was extinguished on that day unless they can show a previous acknowledgment in writing."

Now an acknowledgment which is infelicitous for the purpose of the law is no acknowledgment at all, and, therefore, precisely, as in the case before their Lordships of the Privy Council, the effect of s. 29 of the Act of 1871, in the present case would be to extinguish the rights of the mortgagors. That would appear to put an end to the present action, unless it can be shown that in some way or other those rights have been revived by something that has taken place after the year 1868. Clearly the Act of 1871 did not revive those rights but rather extinguished them. The Act of 1877 specifically provides in

(4) 27 O. 1004; 27 I. A. 103; 4 C. W. N. 565; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 718; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 657 (P. C.).

*Page of 27 O.—[Ed.]

s. 2 that "all references to the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, shall be read as if made to this Act; and nothing herein or in that Act contained shall be deemed to affect any title acquired, or to revive any right to sue barred, under that Act or under any enactment thereby repealed."

This is not merely a case of reviving a right to sue barred under the provisions of the Act. It is a case of reviving a right which has become extinguished by the operation of law. The word "extinguished" is a very strong word—almost as strong a word as could be used, and nothing has been shown to us which can be invoked as an authority for holding that the right extinguished has been in any way revived. Much reliance was placed upon the decision of the Privy Council in Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal (5). It is argued that here, as in that case, we must apply to this suit the Indian Limitation Act of 1908. That may be conceded, and the Article applicable is, no doubt, Art. 148 of that Act. But that does not touch the real point which, as I have said, is whether the extinguished right can be revived. Now in that case their Lordships of the Privy Council were considering a mortgage of 1842, the period of limitation for that mortgage expired in 1902, and it was not barred when the Act of 1877 came into force, and, therefore, it was not touched by s. 2 of that Act. Their Lordships say that the case must be approached from the stand-point of the Act of 1908. There were certain acknowledgments round about the year 1866, and with reference to those acknowledgments their Lordships say that (page 236*) "an acknowledgment of liability only extends the period of limitation within which a suit must be brought and does not confer title, and is not a 'thing done' within the meaning of s. 6 of the General Clauses Act." The case was heard ex parte, and though their Lordships took that view they held in effect that the acknowledgment on which reliance was placed was not an effectual acknowledgment, and that, therefore, the suit was time-barred. They did not consider, nor was it necessary for them to consider, whether the right had been extinguished by the failure of the mortgagees to sue within sixty years from the date of the mortgage or sixty years from the date of the acknowledgment. The grounds on which they base their judgment were sufficient for the decision of the appeal before them, and, therefore, that case cannot be cited as an authority with reference to the operation of s. 29 of the Act of 1871 on the rights of these mortgagors.

It is not necessary in this view of the case to consider the decision in Mahomed Mehdi Faya Tharia v. Sakinabai (6), which lays down that a right to sue once lost cannot be revived by the enactment of subsequent Act of Limitation—a principle which is also expressed in the judgment of the Privy Council in Mohesh Narain Munshi v. Taruck Nath Moitra (7). The precise point which we have here did not come up for consideration in those cases. The real point here is that the acknowledgment of 1860 was not a valid acknowledgment for the purposes of the Act of 1859, and, therefore, must be regarded as no acknowledgment at all, and the rights of the mortgagors were, therefore, extinguished in 1868 or thereabouts and nothing has occurred which can be held to revive them.

Therefore, the decision of the Court below appears to be correct and the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Marten, C. J.—I agree. On the points of law I would hold that the effect of s. 29 of the Act of 1871 was to extinguish the plaintiff's right to possession of the land, because sixty years had expired from the date of the mortgage, and under the law then in force there had been no valid acknowledgment, and that in particular the alleged acknowledgment, Ex. 77, in 1860 was insufficient for that purpose. The fact that there was a subsequent Act in 1877 which altered the clauses dealing with acknowledgment by an agent, is to my mind immaterial, because there are words in the later Act, either the general Act or otherwise, which prevent rights which have been once extinguished from being revived.

The right to sue then having been barred by the Act of 1859, and the right to the land itself having been extinguished, in my

(5) 19 Ind. Cas. 291; 35 A. 227; 15 Bom. L. R. 489; 13 M. L. T. 437; 17 C. W. N. 605; 11 A. L. J. 389; (1913) M. W. N. 470; 17 C. L. J. 488; 25 M. L. J. 131; 40 I. A. 74 (P. C.).

*Page of 35 A.—[Ed.]

(6) 17 Ind. Cas. 629; 37 B. 393; 14 Bom. L. R. 908.

(7) 20 I. A. 30 at p. 38; 29 C. 487; 6 Sar. P. O. J. 261; 17 Ind. Jur. 164; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 330 (P. C.).

judgment the plaintiff is not entitled to sue for redemption and possession of the land in the year 1920. A somewhat similar provision as to extinguishment will be found in the English Limitation Acts. There too a title once extinguished by limitation cannot be revived by a subsequent acknowledgment. (See Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. XIX, page 155.)

Then on the second point of law as to whether this acknowledgment of 1826 was given by the mortgagee or some person claiming under him, in my judgment, the decision in Bhogilal v. Amritlal (1) of Mr. Justice Jardine and Mr. Justice Telang is binding on us. That decision decided that on the construction of that particular Act, viz., the Act of 1859, the manager of a joint Hindu family firm was not a person claiming under a mortgagee within the meaning of that Act. That decision has not been dissented from or questioned in this Court, and, therefore, I do not think it is for us, sitting as a Division Bench, to question it now.

I have only some general observations to make. This case is an apt illustration of the possibilities of litigation in India that are caused by this excessive period of sixty years being allowed for limitation in the case of mortgages. I doubt whether in any civilised country in the world a law suit of the present nature would be possible. It would be quite impossible in England. The parties begin first of all with a long discussion as to whether the plaintiff is an agriculturist. Then there is another issue as to whether the old mortgage of 1807 is proved. Then there is another long discussion whether the family was joint or separate in 1860. Then there is a further point—and an important point—whether Sakharam was then the manager or not. That was at one time is some doubt. There is another point, viz., Does this acknowledgment of 1860 clearly refer to the mortgage of 1807. The acknowledgment only says that the sub-mortgagor holds the land under a mortgage. No express reference is made to the mortgage of 1807. Once more we go on presumption or inference. Then, when the learned trial Judge has given judgment on all these disputed points, including the two main points of law which my brother Crump has just dealt with, there is even yet a question left as to whether all the lands in suit are covered by the mortgage in question. So an inquiry has been ordered as to the identity of some of the lands.

Then to complete the story, my brother Crump at the end of Counsel's arguments said: "Are you quite satisfied that even now the suit is within time?" In fact the plaintiff has left it almost to the last possible date. The plaint itself was presented on June 18, 1920. I have had that date checked by the translator and the sheristadar, and I understand Counsel agree on that date. But when we come to check the date of the acknowledgment, which was stated in the judgments of the lower Courts to be June 27, 1860, our interpreter now tells us the real date is May 24, 1860. If that latter date is correct, then the suit is in any event out of time. We have accordingly thought it right to send for the Chief Translator, to see whether the date given by the Court Translator is correct. I will only add that all these things show the difficulties and ambiguities that arise in certain classes of Hindu litigation, more especially where there is a joint Hindu family. They also show partly why some of these suits drag on for years and years, and why a law suit of this type is a curse to the people of India. If the Legislature would cut down the period of sixty years to something like twenty years I have no doubt, speaking for myself, that benefits would result from it.

We have now called on the Chief Translator, and he confirms what the original interpreter told us, viz., that the true date of Ex. 77 is May 24, 1860, and not June 27, 1860. Counsel for the appellant is not able to dispute that.

Under these circumstances on that finding the suit must in any event fail. But our prior judgments nevertheless stand. It might possibly be contended that sitting here in second appeal, we are bound by the findings of fact, and that both Courts below have given the date as being June 27, 1860, and that no point as to a different date has arisen in the Courts below. My brother Crump also mentions that it is conceivable that if the date expired in the vacation, the plaintiff might have had some few extra days to file his plaint, viz., at the beginning of term. But to ascertain that we should have to enquire of the lower Courts.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION
No. 82 OF 1927.

August 25, 1927.

Present :—Sir George Claus Rankin, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Mitter.

SALAM CHAND KANAYRAM—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

JOOGUL KISHORE RAMDEO—

DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 36, 136, O. XXXIX, r. 2—Appointment of Receiver by Original Side of High Court—Refusal to hand over books to Receiver—Contempt of Court—Jurisdiction of Judge of Original Side to send warrant of arrest for execution to District Judge—Proper procedure—Application for injunction—Appointment of Receiver, whether operates as injunction.

An application was made to a Judge on the Original Side of the High Court of Calcutta for an order directing the District Judge of Nadia to execute a warrant of arrest of a person who was guilty of contempt of Court in not having handed over certain articles to a Receiver appointed by the Court. The application was refused and the petitioner appealed:

Held, (dismissing the appeal), that although the High Court in its Appellate Side could make such an order as was asked for, it was extremely doubtful whether it could do so on its Original Side, and that it was eminently desirable that the petitioner should proceed regularly under the Code so far as possible by asking for an injunction in express terms, in which case s. 136 of the Civil Procedure Code could be applied and the High Court would have statutory power to make the kind of order sought for. [p. 66, col. 2.]

The appointment of a Receiver so far as regards parties bound by the order operates against them as an injunction. It is an injunction necessarily against interference with the Court's Receiver whether by withholding possession of property or otherwise. [p. 66, col. 1.]

Appeal against an order of Mr. Justice Gregory, dated the 15th of June, 1927, passed in the exercise of Original Civil Jurisdiction.

Mr. S. N. Banerji, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.

Rankin, C. J.—In this case an order was made on the 26th of August, 1925, appointing a Receiver and directing that the defendant firm do make over to the Receiver the books of account of their firm for a certain year and the hatchittas standing in the benami name of one Ramdeo's brother Baijnath Motilal and those executed by various debtors of the defendant firm in acknowledgment of their debts. It was further ordered that the defendant firm do make over to the Receiver or to this Court to be placed to the credit of the suit all moneys realised by them in contravention of a certain order. By another order made on the 5th of July, 1926, it was ordered that the Official Receiver be appointed Receiver in the suit under the order already mentioned and that the said Receiver do stand committed to the custody of the Superintendent of the Presidency Jail for contempt of Court for having failed to make over to the said Receiver the hatchittas mentioned in para. 22 of the said petition and that a warrant do issue directed to the Sheriff of Calcutta and to the Superintendent of the Presidency Jail commanding the Sheriff to arrest the said Ramdeo wherever he may be found within the local limits of the jurisdiction of this Court and to convey him to the said Jail.

It appears that Ramdeo was not within the limits of the Ordinary Civil Jurisdiction of the Court but was residing and staying within the District of Nadia in this Province. Accordingly the warrant directed to the Sheriff failed to take effect. In consequence of this the application which is now before us was launched on the 31st of March, 1927, and it asks the learned Judge on the Original Side for an order directing the District Judge of Nadia to execute the said warrant, seize the person of the defendant wherever found within the said District and convey it to the Sheriff of Calcutta to be by him conveyed over to the Superintendent of the Presidency Jail. The learned Judge, Mr. Justice Gregory, dismissed this application not being satisfied that he had any jurisdiction to make such an order. It would appear from the minutes of the proceedings before him that s. 136 of the Civil Procedure Code was relied upon by the applicants and that the applicants also claimed to be entitled to the exercise of the inherent powers of the Court and also to powers under s. 151 of the Code. Section 36 of the Civil Procedure Code was also referred to.

Mr. S. N. Banerji has argued upon this appeal that ss. 36 and 136 must between them cover this case. It is necessary, therefore, to observe that any order for arrest for contempt of Court committed by breach of an injunction or by defiance of the Court's Receiver may be regarded in the High Court in different ways. In so far as the order is made under a provision of the Code that is another thing. Viewed merely as an order in the exercise of the Court's inherent jurisdiction to punish for contempt, I am not of opinion that it is made out that any such order as is here asked for can be made by this Court. There can be no doubt as it seems to me that for the purposes of execution of decrees and orders the Ordinary Original Jurisdiction is confined within the local limits of Calcutta. The question of the Court's power derived from the old Supreme Court to arrest for contempt of Court a person in the Mofussil has not been argued before us and I make no pronouncement with regard to that. There can be no doubt that this Court on its Appellate Side in a case arising in the Mofussil would have the power to make such an order as is here asked for. That on its Original Side the Judge would have any right to direct the District Judge of Nadia to execute a warrant of arrest for contempt is a proposition which I doubt extremely. That matter, however, need not be further discussed. It was to be observed that this question is one which might arise just as easily in a Mofussil Court as in the High Court. Any Mofussil Court may appoint a Receiver and if a person residing outside its jurisdiction interferes with the Receiver then the same problem arises as arises here. In my judgment it is eminently desirable to proceed regularly under the Code so far as possible. It is trite law that the appointment of a Receiver so far as regards parties bound by the order operates against them as an injunction. It is an injunction necessarily against interference with the Court's Receiver whether by withholding possession of property or otherwise. Under the Code permanent injunctions are enforced in execution but under O. XXXIX interlocutory injunctions are enforced under a special power which is given to Courts in the Mofussil as well as to the High Court notwithstanding that such Courts have no inherent right of arrest for contempt. The provision is contained in r. 2 of O. XXXIX where it says:—"In case of disobedience, or of breach of any such terms, the Court granting an injunction may order the property of the person guilty of such disobedience or breach to be attached, and may also order such person to be detained in the civil prison for a term not exceeding six months." It seems to me that instead of appealing to this Court the applicants here would have been better advised to make a fresh application to the learned Judge on the Original Side asking for an injunction in express terms. In case of breach of that injunction an order could be made under O. XXXIX, r. 2 directing the arrest and detention of the offender. In that case there would be no difficulty in holding that s. 136 of the Civil Procedure Code would apply. This Court would have a statutory right to make the kind of order which is now asked for. If there be any objection to this course—and after all it is no part of the duty of this Court to give advice to these appellants—then these appellants must discover some other method of procedure for themselves. In the case of Rajah of Ramnad v. Seetharam Chetty (1) it was held that the High Court on its Original Side could not execute decrees by arrest outside its territorial limits, but there are observations which would appear to distinguish the case of arrest for contempt on the ground that that is in its nature a criminal matter. Accordingly the same reasoning may not apply in such a case. But apart altogether from any question of jurisdiction it has to be remembered that there is a question of machinery to be considered and as the Sheriff of Calcutta no longer functions outside the limits of the Ordinary Civil Jurisdiction of this Court grave difficulties arise if it be attempted in any way to exercise criminal jurisdiction by this summary proceeding over a person in the Mofussil. That, however, was not touched upon in the arguments before us and it is a question upon which it is not necessary now to pronounce any opinion.

In my opinion this appeal must be dismissed. We make no order as to costs.

Mitter, J.—I agree.

A. N. A.

(1) 26 M. 120.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.APPEAL FROM APPELLATE ORDER NO. 2107
OF 1924.

January 6, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Duval and Mr.
Justice Mallik.

MUNSHI FUZZLUR RAHAMAN,

Mukhtear—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SADAR ALI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

RESPONDENTS.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 65, 66—
Benami purchase in execution sale—Sale held before passing of new Code but confirmed after new Code—Suit by real owner against transferee of benamidar, whether maintainable—Difference between old and new Codes.*

A benami purchase in a Court sale held before the passing of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 but confirmed after the passing of that Code is governed by the provisions of s. 66 of the Code of 1908 and not by those of s. 317 of the Code of 1882, notwithstanding the provisions of s. 65 of the Code of 1908 under which, on confirmation of a sale, the title of the auction-purchaser vests back with retrospective effect from the date of sale. [p. 67, col. 2.]

Promotha Nath Pal v. Sourav Dasi (1) and Makar Ali v. Sarfaddin (2), distinguished.

The chief difference between s. 66 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 and s. 317 of the Code of 1882 is that whereas under the old Code a suit would lie against the heirs or assignees of a benamidar though not against the benamidar, under s. 66 of the new Code no suit would lie against anyone claiming a title under the certificated purchaser. [ibid.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Chittagong, dated the 28th of June, 1924, affirming that of the Munsif, First Court at Patiya, dated the 11th of July, 1922.

Babu Narendra Cumar Das, for the Appellant.

Babu Chandra Sekhar Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Duval, J.—In this case the plaintiff sued for declaration of his title to, and for possession of, a certain land. His case was that he purchased it in auction-sale in the benami of defendant No. 6 on the 8th August, 1908, and that subsequently he got possession in the name of his benamidar who was in possession for sometime, but that in 1915 his benamidar sold the land to defendants Nos. 1 and 2 and he was dispossessed. He brought a case under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act and lost it and so he brought this suit. The defence set up in the written statement of the ven-dees was that the plaintiff was never in possession and that defendant No. 6 was not a benamidar and that the suit was barred under s. 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Defendant No. 6 who purported to sell the property has put in a written statement stating that he was a benamidar. After issues were framed the first Court tried the issue as to whether the suit lay in view of the provisions of s. 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure and held that it did not. This finding has been upheld in appeal. The second appeal is directed on this point only.

Now the sale took place as we have stated on the 8th August, 1908. At that time the Code of 1882 was in force and under s. 316 of that Code the property purchased in execution of the decree vested on the confirmation of the sale; but the sale was not confirmed until 6th January, 1909, when the Code of 1882 had ceased to operate and had been superseded by the Code of 1908. Under s. 65 of the present Code on the confirmation of the sale, the title to the property is to vest back with retrospective effect from the date of the sale. The argument, therefore, addressed to us is that by the confirmation of the sale under s. 65 of the new Code the plaintiff's title to the property accrued on the 8th August, 1908, and, therefore, s. 66 of the Code has no application but that s. 317 of the old Code applies. The chief difference between the two sections is that whereas under the old Code a suit would lie against the heirs or assignees of a benamidar though not against the benamidar, under s. 66 of the new Code no suit would lie against anyone claiming a title under the certificated purchaser. The learned Vakil for the appellant has referred to two decisions of this Court, being the case of Promotha Nath Pal v. Sourav Dasi (1) and the case of Makar Ali v. Sarfaddin (2) to support his argument. But in both those cases the sale was confirmed before the new Code came into force, that is to say, before the 1st January, 1909, though in one of them the sale certificate did not issue until after the new Code came in force and there it was held that the real

(1) 50 Ind. Cas. 327; 47 C. 1108; 24 C. W. N. 1101;
31 C. L. J. 463.
(2) 70 Ind. Cas. 606; 50 C. 115; 27 C. W. N. 183; 36
C. L. J. 132; A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 85

purchaser could maintain a suit against the transferee as his right had already accrued under the old Code. The present case, however, is clearly different. No doubt, s. 65 of the new Code states that when the sale has become absolute the property shall be deemed to have vested in the purchaser from the time when the property is sold and not from the time when the sale becomes absolute. But the question really before us is whether on the 1st January, 1903, when the new Code came into force the plaintiff's rights had accrued as a purchaser through the benami of defendant No. 1. In my opinion it had not. In this connection reference must be made to s. 6 of the General Clauses Act which says that when an Act repeals any enactment hitherto made or hereafter to be made, then, unless a different intention appears, the repeal shall not affect any right, acquired or accrued under any enactment so repealed.

The only point, therefore, is whether, as a matter of fact, on the 1st January, the plaintiff's right had accrued. Now even if we take s. 65 as dating back the right, it is clear that on the 1st January this sale had not become absolute and so the plaintiff's right had not accrued. Now if the plaintiff's right did not accrue on the 1st January he is clearly bound by s. 66 and if he is bound by s. 66 the plaintiff cannot maintain this suit.

In this view, therefore, I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

Mallik, J.—I agree.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MATRIMONIAL JURISDICTION APPLICATION

No. 6 of 1927.

July 14, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Costello.

PAULINE WHITE—PETITIONER.

versus

S. W. WHITE—RESPONDENT.

Divorce Act (IV of 1869), ss. 7, 55—Order for payment of alimony pendente lite—Mode of enforcement—Proceedings for contempt of Court, whether can be taken.

An order for payment of alimony pendente lite made in a suit under the Divorce Act has to be enforced in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to execution of decrees and cannot be enforced by sending the person against whom the order is made to Jail for contempt of Court. [p. 69, col. 2.]

Although non-compliance with an order made by a Divorce Court in England is contempt of Court, an order for payment will not be enforced by attachment. [p. 69, col. 1.]

Application by the petitioner in a suit for judicial separation.

Mr. Barwell, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Langford James, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application on behalf of the petitioner in a suit for judicial separation who had obtained an order for alimony pendente lite. The application is made on behalf of the petitioner for an order that the respondent should carry out the terms of an order made by Mr. Justice Gregory, dated the 7th April, 1927, whereby he was ordered to pay a certain sum to the petitioner by way of alimony pendente lite, and the application further asks that in default of compliance with the order to pay the respondent be committed to Jail as for a contempt of Court.

On the previous occasion when the matter came up before me, by consent of Counsel for the respective parties it was agreed that the order made by Mr. Justice Gregory should be varied and that in future the respondent should pay to the petitioner's Solicitors the sum of Rs. 400 or rather the equivalent of it in English money, that is to say, £30, by delivering to them a cheque upon an English Bank on the 7th of each month. That agreement will be embodied in an order of this Court.

The question then remains as to whether or not any order should be made with regard to the costs of the proceedings.

It is said on behalf of the respondent that the procedure adopted for the enforcement of the order of Mr. Justice Gregory will not lie and in fact it is incompetent for the Court to enforce an order of this character as for contempt.

It was very ably argued by Mr. Barwell that proceedings by way of contempt will still lie in this country for the enforcement of an order of this kind, and he bases his argument upon this footing that in England until the passing of the Debtors' Act in the year 1869 it was the practice to enforce orders for the payment of alimony pendente lite by means of proceedings in contempt and that it was only by reason of s. 4 of the Debtors' Act that such procedure was abolished.

That would indeed appear to be the case; and indeed Mr. Justice Hill so held in the case of Leavis v. Leavis (1). It also appears from that case and from other authorities that although non-compliance with an order for payment of alimony cannot be enforced by attachment by reason of s. 4 of the Debtors' Act, it nevertheless remains a contempt and has certain effects as a contempt, as for example, in preventing a contumacious respondent himself from obtaining relief. It is clear from the English authorities, which I need not go into in any detail, that other orders made by the Divorce Court in England, as for example, an order requiring a respondent to furnish security for his wife's costs, may still be enforced by proceedings for contempt of Court. From all the authorities it indeed appears that non-compliance with any order made by the Divorce Court in England is a contempt of Court, but so far as an order which directs the payment of money is concerned, although it is a contempt, it cannot be enforced by attachment.

Mr. Barwell argued that as there is no counterpart in this country of s. 4 of the Debtors' Act of 1869, the English procedure not only survives but is imported into the machinery of the Courts of India, and that—partly, if not wholly, by the operation of s. 7 of the Indian Divorce Act of 1869.

It is perhaps a little difficult to follow the reasoning of that argument, because Mr. Barwell admitted quite frankly—and indeed there are plenty of authorities to show that—that s. 7 is concerned not with adjective law, but with substantive law, and it applies to matters which are not specifically otherwise dealt with in the Divorce Act.

However be that as it may, even if it were the intent of s. 7 to bring into this country all the rules of procedure in the Divorce Court in England, it would no avail the petitioner in the present instance not only because it is no longer the practice in England to enforce order for payment of money made by the Divorce Court by means of contempt, but because there is in the Indian Divorce Act itself an express direction as to the method by which orders of this kind are to be dealt with. Section 55 of the Divorce Act provides that all decrees and orders made by the Court in any suit or proceeding under this Act shall be enforced and may be appealed from in the like manner as the decrees and orders of the Court made in the exercise of its Original Civil Jurisdiction. They may be appealed from under the laws, rules and orders for the time being in force.

Therefore, in order to ascertain how orders made by the Court in any suit or proceeding under the Divorce Act should be enforced, it is necessary to turn to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and to see how orders of the Court made in the exercise of its Original Civil Jurisdiction are to be enforced and upon turning to the Code we find that by s. 76 it is laid down that the provisions of this Code relating to the execution of decrees shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to execution of orders; and by s. 2, cl. 14, "order" is defined as meaning a formal expression of any decision of the Civil Court which is not a decree. There can be no doubt, in my opinion, that the order made by Mr. Justice Gregory on the 7th July was an "order" within the definition of s. 2, cl. 14, and reading that in conjunction with s. 36, that order has to be enforced in accordance with the provisions of the Code relating to the execution of decrees, and there is an appropriate part of the Code dealing with the matter, into which I need not go at this moment. Suffice it to say that the provisions relating to the execution of decrees or the enforcement of orders do not contemplate the Court dealing with the matter purely as one of contempt. On the contrary, there are various specific provisions laying down how the matter should be dealt with and how the debtor in default should be brought before the Court.

In these circumstances it seems to me that it is not competent for a Court to send a defaulting respondent to Jail straightway. The machinery dealing with the execution of orders must be complied with and then ultimately if there is a failure to pay the respondent may be committed to Jail.

(1) (1921) P. 299; 90 L. J. P. 302; 125 L. T. 28; 65 S. J. 456; 37 T. L. R. 578.

From what I have said the consequence is that these proceedings are in a sense misconceived. In so far as they purport to be an application to commit the respondent to Jail they are not in order. I will also observe that the petition itself prays that there shall be an order directing payment, which is inconsistent with a proper application for commitment into prison as for a contempt.

Having regard to all the circumstances I think the proper method of dealing with this question of costs is to say that there shall be no order as to costs.

A. N. A.

Order accordingly.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL ORDER No. 347
OF 1927.

August 16, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Mukerji and Mr. Justice Mallik.

JNANENDRA NATH MUKHERJEE AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus

JITENDRA NATH MUKHERJEE

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Executor—Acceptance of office—What constitutes acceptance—Effect of acceptance—Dispute as to construction of Will—Reference to arbitration empowering arbitrators to decide in contravention of Will—Award contrary to Will, validity of—Award dealing with rights of strangers, effect of.

It is not open to a person who has been appointed as an executor to refuse the office or renounce it after he has once elected to act as executor. [p. 72, col. 1.]

An executor may determine such election by acts which amount to an administration. The acts which amount to an administration, so that the party cannot afterwards refuse, are (1) anything done by the executor with relation to the effects of the testator which shows an intention in him to take upon him the executorship, and (2) whatever acts will make a man not named executor in the Will, liable as executor de son tort. [ibid.]

Where certain persons who had been appointed as executors under a Will without acting in any way in defiance of its terms put forward the Will and relied on its contents, but, being unable to agree as to its construction, referred the matters in dispute between themselves and the legatees to arbitrators to settle the matters in the best way they could either in accordance with or in contravention of its terms, and the arbitrators made an award in violation of the terms of the Will :

Held, (1) that the reference amounted to acceptance of the office on the part of the executors; [ibid.]

(2) that the reference and the award were illegal inasmuch as the object of the agreement of reference was to attain something which the law did not permit, namely, to allow the parties to acquire title to property in contravention of the terms of a Will in a case where the title was claimed under the Will itself, to allow the executors to have the Will construed by a tribunal of their own choice without proving the Will and evading the duty fixed by law, and to allow the executors and some of the legatees to join together and make an arrangement for the distribution of the properties contrary to the testator's intention and to the prejudice and detriment of the remaining legatee or legatees under the Will. [p. 72, col. 2.]

An award is not invalid as between the parties to the reference merely because it purports to determine the rights of strangers. [p. 71, col. 2.]

Appeal against an order of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Hooghly, dated the 28th of April, 1924.

Babus Bibhuti Bhusan Lahiri and Surendra Nath Basu (II), for the Appellants.

Dr. Bijan Kumar Mukherji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Kailas Chandra Mukherji died in November, 1910, leaving a Will, dated the 28th August, 1908. He left two sons Jnanendra and Debendra by his first wife and four sons Jogendra, Jatindra, Jitendra and Jonendra by his second wife. He also left a daughter Ashalata by his second wife, who was unmarried at the time of his death. Jnanendra, Debendra and Jogendra had attained majority at the date of the Will, and Kailas Chandra Mukherji appointed all the said three sons as executors. Jogendra, however, died during the lifetime of his father and a few months before the death of the latter. No Probate was taken of the Will but on the 17th January, 1921, there was an agreement between the first party consisting of Jnanendra and Debendra and the second party consisting of Jatindra, Jitendra and Jonendra by which the disputes between them were referred to the arbitration of three gentlemen, Babu Nanda Lal Pal, Babu Hari Charan Chatterji and Babu Kanti Chandra Ghose. The arbitrators made their award on the 25th November, 1921. On the 1st February, 1922, Jnanendra and Debendra applied to the Court against Jatindra, Jitendra and Jonendra that the award might be filed. This gave rise to the suit which was tried by the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Hooghly. The Subordinate Judge made an order refusing to file the award and dismissed the suit. Hence this appeal.

It was stated in the agreement that a dispute had arisen between the two parties for the partition of the moveable and immoveable properties left by their father and in respect of the construction of the Will and also with regard to the accounts connected with the estate left by him. It was stipulated that—"Both the parties shall be bound by the award that may be given by the said arbitrators on making a partition or any other settlement in respect of the self-acquired moveable and immoveable properties of our father, by relying on the evidence and documents that may be put forward. None of the parties shall be competent to raise any objection or plea thereto. The parties shall all be bound by the decisions arrived at by the arbitrators, with respect to the respective assets or liabilities of the parties after examining and looking through the accounts of the income and expenditure of the estate left by our father since his death." The Will was put forward as one of the documents in the case, but the arbitrators thought, to quote their own words, that it was "unworthy of evidence." The arbitrators nevertheless referred to the Will, but only for the purpose of ascertaining the testator's intention and not with the object of giving effect to the same, and, on the other hand, the arrangement contemplated by the testator was freely departed from in the award. As regards partition the allotments were made in contravention of the terms of the Will in order to suit the desire of the parties or their mutual convenience. The unmarried daughter Ashalata who was not a party to the agreement or the suit had been given certain ornaments by the Will, but the arbitrators held that Kailas had no authority to dispose of them and they awarded the same to the plaintiffs. There were other variations made though they were of minor importance. The award also gave credit in favour of the plaintiffs in respect of a sum of Rs. 4,500 on the ground of maintenance charges incurred by them on account of the defendants.

The Subordinate Judge has dismissed the suit upon three main grounds, and these grounds have been challenged before us.

The first ground on which the Subordinate Judge has proceeded is that in his opinion the arbitrators exceeded their authority. In his opinion the arbitrators had no power to partition the properties or award the ornaments in violation of the terms of the Will as the parties did not challenge its propriety, and any intention on their part to do away with it was not apparent. So far as this ground is concerned I am unable to agree in the view of the learned Subordinate Judge, for the terms of the agreement left it open to the arbitrators to make any award they thought fit either in accordance with or in contravention of the Will. In my opinion the arbitrators did not exceed their authority. It is true that the award purported to interfere with the rights of strangers—notably the daughter Ashalata, and the strangers would not in any event be affected by it; but as between the parties to the award its provisions must be held to be operative, if there is no other question about its validity.

The next ground on which the learned Subordinate Judge rested his decision is that one of the arbitrators Babu Nanda Lal Pal did not assent to one of the terms of the award, namely, that about the credit of Rs. 4,500 in favour of the plaintiffs on account of the maintenance of the defendants. The finding has been assailed before us and reliance in this respect has been placed upon certain passages in the deposition of the said arbitrator Babu Nanda Lal Pal as indicating a failure of memory on his part and also upon the deposition of another arbitrator Babu Kanti Chandra Ghose as establishing that there was such assent. A careful study of the evidence of these two gentlemen has convinced me that there must have been a misunderstanding in the matter, that is to say, Babu Nanda Lal Pal never assented to this particular provision, while Babu Kanti Chandra Ghose on his part honestly thought that Babu Nanda Lal Pal had given his assent. It is impossible to believe that such a positive statement as the one which Babu Nanda Lal Pal made in answer to the Court towards the end of his deposition, was due to a failure of memory. Both the witnesses are quite respectable and their integrity is beyond reproach. On this ground alone the dismissal of the suit is amply justified.

Another ground on which the judgment of the Subordinate Judge rests is that the plaintiffs being executors could not legally make any reference to arbitration which would go against the terms of the Will. This proposition has been challenged, it being urged that it will not hold good in this case as the plaintiffs have not taken Probate of the Will and have not accepted their office as executors. Now, the office of executor being a private office of trust named by the testator and not by the law, one named executor may refuse the office or renounce it. It is, however, too late to refuse or renounce when one has once elected to act as executor; and he may determine such election by acts which amount to an administration. The acts which amount to an administration, so that the party cannot afterwards refuse, are (1) anything done by the executor with relation to the effects of the testator which shows an intention in him to take upon him the executorship, and (2) whatever acts will make a man not named executor in the Will, liable as executor de son tort (Williams on Executors, 11th Edition, Volume I, page 194). In the present case the plaintiffs, and for the matter of that the defendants as well, put the Will forward and relied on its contents, and were unable to agree as to its construction, but never showed any intention to act in defiance of its terms beyond leaving it to the arbitrators to settle the dispute in the best way they could and agreeing to abide by the award that they would make. The plaintiffs who are two of the executors named in the Will, have been handling the estate and effects of the testator ever since his death which took place so far back as 1910. Far from refusal or renunciation, the reference to the arbitration, one of the matters referred thereby being the construction of the Will itself, affords ample indication of the plaintiffs having accepted the office. They cannot be permitted to enter into an agreement the result of which may be, and in this particular case has been, to bring about an award nullifying the intention of the testator.

The object sought to be attained by such an agreement is something that the law does not permit, namely, to allow the parties to acquire title to property in contravention of the terms of a Will in a case where the title is claimed under the Will itself, to allow the executors to have the Will construed by a tribunal of their own choice without proving the Will and evading the duty fixed by law, and to allow the executors and some of the legatees to join together and make an arrangement for the distribution of the properties contrary to the testator's intention and to the prejudice and detriment of the remaining legatee or legatees under the Will. The Court which is asked to pass a judgment and issue a decree in accordance with such an award may very well refuse to do so treating the award as an invalid one. Under the English Law when it is too late for an executor to renounce, he having once elected to act as such, he may be cited to take Probate and his disobedience will amount to a contempt of Court.

In my opinion, therefore, the decision of the Court below is right and this appeal should be dismissed with costs—hearing-fee being assessed at three gold mohurs.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 25
OF 1926.

May 3, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose and Mr. Justice Page.

H. R. CHAMARIA AND COMPANY—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus

SONATON PAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS
—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Mortgagee obtaining possession with consent of mortgagor—Liability to ejectment—Person claiming under mortgagee, whether trespasser—Purchaser of equity of redemption, rights of.

The possession of a mortgagee, who though not entitled to possession under his mortgage, enters into possession of the mortgaged property with the express or tacit consent of the mortgagor, continues to be lawful until such assent is withdrawn, and neither the mortgagee nor a person who is holding under him can be treated as a trespasser by a purchaser of the mortgagor's rights. [p. 76, col. 2.]

"Owing to the exceptional severity with which a mortgagee in possession is treated in taking the accounts, the Courts are slow to decide that such possession has been taken, and will only do so when it is proved that the mortgagee had no reasonable ground for believing himself entitled to take the rents and profits in any other capacity. The mortgagee may relieve himself of the liability to account as a mortgagee in possession by showing that he entered into possession in some other character. If he fails to establish that fact in order to exonerate himself from the liability to account as a mortgagee in possession he is held to be accountable as such." [p. 77, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Dacca, dated the 21st December, 1925.

Sir P. C. Mitter, Mr. Charu Chandra Biswas and Babu Monindra Kumar Biswas, for the Appellants.

Babus Joges Chunder Roy, Rajendra Chandra Guha and Prokas Chandra Mazumdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

B. B. Ghose, J.—This is an appeal on behalf of the principal defendant H. R. Chamaria and Company, who may shortly be described as Chamaria, against a judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Dacca, dated the 21st December, 1925. The suit as framed was on the ground that Chamaria was a tenant-at-will under one J. B. Sukeas who was the owner of the property in question. The plaintiff had purchased the right, title and interest of the legal representative of J. B. Sukeas in execution of a money-decree on the 2nd May, 1919. He was put into symbolical possession by virtue of his purchase on the 18th July, 1919. The purchase was made in the benami of his son named Bepin Behary Pal who was joined as defendant No. 2 in the suit. On the 4th August, 1919, the plaintiff served notice on Chamaria determining the tenancy under which Chamaria was alleged to have held the property in question as from the end of August, 1919. The present suit was brought on the 17th September, 1919, and the claim was for rent at the rate of Rs. 600 per month from 2nd May to 31st August, 1919, and for damages at a certain rate, which it is unnecessary to mention, from the 1st September to 17th

September, 1919. The plaint was subsequently amended by an application made on the 23rd January, 1925, asking for mesne profits or damages up to the date of delivery of possession. By this amendment the original valuation of the suit which was Rs. 10,000 odd was increased to Rs. 80,000 odd. The defendant objected to the application for amendment which was overruled by the lower Court. The defendant's main defence was that he was never a tenant of the land under the plaintiff or his predecessor-in-interest, and the plaintiff has no right to maintain the suit against him. His case was that one J. O. Galstaun held an equitable mortgage—or as it may be properly described as a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds, which was effected in the town of Calcutta under s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act by J. B. Sukeas; and that Galstaun was in possession of the property in suit along with other properties as a mortgagee and while in such possession Galstaun let out the property at first to a brother of J. B. Sukeas and then to the defendant Chamaria at a rent of Rs. 600 per month. But sometime in April, 1918, an agreement was entered into between Galstaun and Chamaria that Chamaria would purchase the property in dispute for Rs. 85,000 and that he would have to pay no rent but would have to pay interest on the purchase-money agreed to between them. The sale could not be effected because Galstaun had no right to effect a sale of the property at the time. But the stipulation was that Galstaun would either take the permission of the Court to sell the property on behalf of the infant heir of J. B. Sukeas or he would himself effect the sale after purchasing the property in execution of the decree on his mortgage which he intended to have. On these pleadings several issues were framed in the lower Court. The main questions are covered by issues Nos. 3, 7 and 11. Issue No. 3 was "Is there any relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and the defendant?" Issue No. 7 was "Was the plaintiff aware of the equitable mortgage in favour of J. O. Galstaun at the time when he purchased the property in suit? If so, can he get khas possession without redeeming plaintiff's mortgage?" The 11th issue was "Whether Mr. J. O. Galstaun is mortgagee in possession in respect of the properties in suit. If so, whether the plaintiff is entitled to recover any amount by way of damages? It should be stated here that the plaintiff did not at the commencement admit the mortgage of Galstaun. When the suit was brought by Galstaun on his mortgage the present plaintiff was joined as a defendant as he ought to have been joined as a purchaser of a portion of the equity of redemption. Galstaun's suit on his mortgage was brought on the 14th of May, 1919, four months prior to the present suit by the plaintiff. The plaintiff disputed the mortgage and in that suit he took up a plea that Galstaun having got into possession of the property and having realised the profits he was bound to account for the receipts and those must be debited against the debt if any was found due to Galstaun. That suit was decided in the trial Court on the 23rd September, 1921. There was an appeal against that decision and this Court modified the decree of the Subordinate Judge by its judgment dated the 23rd January, 1924. I shall speak later on about this judgment. The judgment and decree of the High Court were affirmed by the Judicial Committee in January, 1927.

In the present case before the Subordinate Judge the trial proceeded upon the ground that Galstaun had a mortgage on the property in question. The sole question upon which the parties seem to have been in controversy was whether Galstaun was ever in possession of the property in question as a mortgagee or in other words whether Galstaun's position was that of a mortgagee in possession. The Subordinate Judge found as it was found in the previous litigation that the purchase of the plaintiff was with notice of Galstaun's mortgage. The Subordinate Judge found in the present case in deciding issue No. 7 as stated above that Galstaun took possession of the property as guardian of the infant son of J. B. Sukeas and did not take possession as a mortgagee. That being so, he held with regard to issue No. 7 that the brother of J. B. Sukeas was a tenant of Owen Sukeas, the infant son of the original mortgagor, when Galstaun let out the property to him and that Chamaria was similarly a tenant under Owen Sukeas when Chamaria was let into possession by Galstaun in his capacity of guardian of Owen Sukeas.

In that view it was held that the plaintiff as a purchaser of the right title and interest of Owen Sukeas stepped into his shoes and thus Chamaria became a tenant under the plaintiff and that tenancy was terminated at the end of August, 1919, by notice to quit which was served by the plaintiff upon Chamaria and upon that basis the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for rent for the period of the tenancy and also for damages by way of mesne profits till the date of delivery of possession. The property, however, was sold in execution of the mortgage decree obtained by Galstaun on the 23rd October, 1925, and purchased by himself. The value fetched for the property at the execution sale was far below the amount of the mortgage decree. By reason of that sale no decree could have been made by the Subordinate Judge for ejectment of the defendant as the plaintiff's title to the property ceased to exist by virtue of that sale. But he made a decree for damages up to that date and the total amount of the decree made by the Subordinate Judge, who modified the claim for damages made by the plaintiff to a considerable extent, was Rs. 46,660. The defendant Chamaria has appealed to this Court.

The first ground taken on behalf of the appellant is that the amendment asked for by the plaintiff should not have been allowed by the lower Court. We do not think that there is any substance in this objection. If the plaintiff had not specified in his plaint that he asked for mesne profits till the date of the suit, that is to say, till the 17th of September, 1919, the Court might have been in a position to make a decree for mesne profits up to the date of delivery of possession. But if the suit is otherwise properly framed there was no harm in allowing the plaintiff to amend his plaint by striking out from his prayer for recovery of mesne profits the words "up to the date of the suit" and by substituting in their place the words "up to the date of delivery of possession."

The appellant then takes up the position that he was brought on the land by the mortgagee Galstaun who was in possession at the time and that so long as the possession of Galstaun could not be got rid of the plaintiff was not entitled to sue him as there was no privity between him and the plaintiff. As I have already stated Chamaria never acknowledged that he was on the land as tenant of Sukeas. Galstaun's possession was not admitted by the plaintiff in this suit either in the plaint or in the evidence on his side. The Subordinate Judge, however, has found that Galstaun was in possession. But he has held that as Galstaun was in possession as a guardian of Owen Sukeas the relationship of landlord and tenant existed between Owen Sukeas and the defendant. The question, therefore, is whether that position is at all maintainable. The learned Vakil on behalf of the plaintiff respondent does not seek to support the decree of the Subordinate Judge on that ground. The position that he takes up is this, that Galstaun got into possession without any right. His position was that of a mere trespasser and Chamaria who was brought on the land by Galstaun was in no better position. They were joint trespassers upon the facts as established by the evidence. That being so, the plaintiff was entitled to claim damages from any one of them, both of whom were jointly and severally liable. So long as it is not established that the plaintiff has recovered any damage from the other joint trespasser the plaintiff is entitled to recover damages from this tortfeasor that is, Chamaria, and upon that ground the decree of the Subordinate Judge is unassailable.

The appellant, on the other hand, contends that Galstaun was in possession as a mortgagee. He brought a suit on his mortgage. In that suit he admitted in his plaint, as would appear from a recital in the judgment of the Subordinate Judge in the mortgage suit (at page 42 of the second part of the paper-book), that he had obtained possession of the mortgaged properties and some moveables belonging to J. B. Sukeas, after the death of J. B. Sukeas. He had sold some of the moveables and realised the rents and profits of the mortgaged properties and credited the price and rent and profits towards the satisfaction of his debt. He took upon himself the liability to account as a mortgagee in possession. The present plaintiff was defendant No. 3 in the previous mortgage suit who practically alone contested the suit. He also referred to the fact that Galstaun had taken possession of the property left by J. B. Sukeas and that he was bound to account for all the moneys that he had received, (which the present plaintiff described as mis-appropriation) and also to make good the amount of the loss which he had caused by his neglect to get in any part of the property of the deceased. In substance the present plaintiff as a defendant in the mortgage suit pleaded that not only Galstaun was liable to account for what he had actually received or might have received but he was also liable to account for his wilful default. Upon that an issue was framed as to how much was realised and that was the 6th issue before the Subordinate Judge in the mortgage suit. Galstaun produced his account books in the mortgage suit. What the receipts were is evident from the fact which was stated in the judgment of the Subordinate Judge (at page 53 of the same part of the paper-book) where the Judge stated "The plaintiff, it is true, credited in his accounts the moneys received from the estate of J. B. Sukeas after his death and these should be held as payments made in reduction of the plaintiff's dues." It should be stated that the decree made by the Subordinate Judge was merely a money decree as against the representative of the original debtor J. B. Sukeas and the sums which were found in the accounts to have been realised from the property by Galstaun were debited against his dues.

Against that decree Galstaun appealed to the High Court and in the High Court the decree of the Subordinate Judge was modified to this extent that a decree was made in favour of Galstaun as a mortgagee and he was held entitled to recover his dues from the mortgaged property. With regard to the accounts it appears that neither party pressed for an account being taken and a decree which in ordinary case is made to the effect that accounts should be taken of what was due to the mortgagee by taking accounts of what was due under the bond and what was received by the mortgagee from the mortgaged properties was not made. Instead of that a decree was made for the sum that was found by the lower Court with interest and costs. The reason evidently seems to have been that both the parties knew that the receipts were less than the interest and outgoings and that on taking accounts the dues of the mortgagee would be found to have been much larger than what was found by the Subordinate Judge and the mortgaged property not being of sufficient value it would be mere waste of time and money to take further accounts which would have the effect of increasing the debt which was found to be due to the mortgagee. There was an appeal from the decision of the High Court to the Privy Council by the present plaintiff. The judgment and decree of the High Court were affirmed by the Privy Council on the 21st January, 1927*. No objection was made in that appeal to the accounts nor to the nature of the decree that was made by the High Court. The only ground upon which the present plaintiff chose to fight the case before the Privy Council was whether there was a mortgage or not. The position of the parties, therefore, stands thus, that if there was a mortgage the equity of redemption purchased by the plaintiff was worth nothing as the mortgage-debt of Galstaun would far exceed the value of the property in whichever way the accounts might have been taken.

It is contended on behalf of the appellant that it is quite clear from the facts that Galstaun was in possession as a mortgagee. That being so, Chamaria had been brought on the land by the mortgagee in possession and the plaintiff as a purchaser of the equity of redemption could not treat Chamaria as his tenant so long as the property was not redeemed by him. It is conceded on the part of the respondent that if Galstaun was a mortgagee in possession and if Chamaria was brought on the property by Galstaun as such mortgagee the plaintiff would have no case. But his contention is that Galstaun never took possession as a mortgagee and that contention is sought to be supported by the fact that the plaintiff was not drawn up in the mortgage suit in the form which is prescribed in Appendix 'A,' form No. 45 of the Code of Civil Procedure for a plaintiff by a mortgagee who had entered into possession; and the decree is not also in the form given in Appendix 'D' of the Code of Civil Procedure. I have already stated why the decree was not in that form. The plaintiff, although it is not precisely in the form prescribed in Appendix 'A,' sufficiently indicates the position of Galstaun. When he stated in his plaintiff that he had a mortgage and that after the death of the original mortgagor he got into possession of the property and realised rents and profits which he was willing to debit against the mortgage amount, this is a sufficient statement that the mortgagee was liable to account as mortgagee in possession and I have already indicated the defence in which it was alleged that the mortgagee was not only bound to account for what he received or what he might have received but also to account for the loss to the estate by his default. Under the circumstances it seems to me difficult to hold that the position of Galstaun was anything but that of a mortgagee in possession. The Subordinate Judge has held that Galstaun went into possession as a guardian. It is undoubtedly true, as it appears from the record, that after the death of J. B. Sukeas, who had himself written a pencil note before his death to the effect that Galstaun should look after his minor son, Galstaun thought that he would act as a sort of a guardian of the minor son of J. B. Sukeas as Galstaun seems to have been very much interested in the welfare of the family. With that view he took possession of not only the mortgaged property but also some moveable properties belonging to Sukeas and tried to carry on his business. It is apparent that when he found that the debts of the estate of Sukeas were so great that it would be hopeless to try to save the estate he ceased from acting as a sort of guardian of the infant. Subsequently, a lady who was the grandmother of Owen Sukeas took out Letters of Administration of the estate of J. B. Sukeas. Galstaun was certainly not entitled to enter into possession under his mortgage. But it is quite clear that he got into possession either with the express or tacit consent of the persons who were really interested in the estate of the mortgagor, J. B. Sukeas. This question does not seem to have been properly investigated and that must have been due to the fact that the plaintiff altogether ignored the existence of Galstaun with reference to this property in the present litigation. It appears quite clear from the evidence on the record that Galstaun entered into possession peacefully and without objection on the part of the persons interested in the mortgaged property. That being so, he cannot be treated as a wrong-doer as he is sought to be treated by the respondent here and unless the plaintiff can maintain the position that Galstaun was a wrong-doer and Chamaria was equally a wrong-doer the present suit cannot, in my opinion, be maintained as against Chamaria.

*See 101 Ind. Cas. 50—[Ed.]

It is contended on behalf of the respondent that there is nothing to show that Chamaria paid any money to Galstaun for the period of his occupation or that any sum which he might have paid was taken into account in the mortgage suit and, therefore, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the money from Chamaria for the period of his occupation. We are not concerned in this case, in my judgment, with the question whether proper accounting was made in the mortgage suit of Galstaun. That question does not arise in the present case. The short question which seems to arise here is that if Galstaun was in possession as a mortgagee and was accountable as such in his mortgage suit any person who has been brought on the mortgaged property by Galstaun has no privity between himself and the mortgagor so as to be liable to the mortgagor for his occupation of the mortgaged property. It may be conceded that the plaintiff after his purchase of the equity of redemption could by giving proper notice to Galstaun claim to recover possession of the property. In other words he might withdraw by notice to Galstaun the consent that was either actually or tacitly given by his predecessor-in-interest to the taking of possession by Galstaun; but it is unnecessary to discuss what the position would have been in that case as there is no allegation anywhere on the record that any such notice was given. The plaintiff was, therefore, bound by the consent given by or on behalf of the owner of the equity of redemption before his purchase to the taking of possession by Galstaun and he cannot on that ground maintain this suit against the defendant for damages or rent.

There is another matter with regard to which I propose to make a few observations. The discussion by the learned Subordinate Judge in his judgment as regards the question whether Galstaun was a mortgagee in possession or not, is based upon a discussion in the books as to whether the mortgagees should in certain cases be treated as having taken upon himself the onerous position of a mortgagee in possession. When a mortgagee enters into possession he is bound to account as a mortgagee in possession. But owing to the exceptional severity with which a mortgagee in possession is treated in taking the accounts, the Courts are slow to decide that such possession has been taken, and will only do so when it is proved that the mortgagee had no reasonable ground for believing himself entitled to take the rents and profits in any other capacity. The mortgagee may relieve himself of the liability to account as a mortgagee in possession by showing that he entered into possession in some other character. If he fails to establish that fact in order to exonerate himself from the liability to account as a mortgagee in possession he is held to be accountable as such; for example, in this case if in the mortgage suit Galstaun had taken up the position that he did not enter into possession as a mortgagee but simply as guardian of Owen Sukeas, I think his plea could not have been given effect to. He was not the legal guardian of Owen Sukeas and, therefore, as there is no other legal ground, which he could maintain for being in possession of the property he would be liable to account as a mortgagee in possession. My view, therefore, is that Chamaria may shelter himself under the plea that Galstaun took possession of the property as a mortgagee after the death of J. B. Sukeas and that he was brought on the land by Galstaun.

There was no relationship of landlord and tenant between him and the plaintiff and the plaintiff, therefore, is not entitled to claim anything from him. The plaintiff purchased the equity of redemption which unquestionably was worth nothing and he is not, in my judgment, entitled to recover anything from Chamaria.

In that view this appeal must be allowed and the suit dismissed with costs in all Courts.

Page, J.—I agree. This is a suit brought to recover khas possession of certain immoveable property together with arrears of rent and mesne profits. The property in suit was the subject-matter of an equitable mortgage of the 22nd May, 1914, created by one J. B. Sukeas in favour of J. G. Galstaun.

It was common ground at the hearing of the appeal that even if the sums decreed for rent and mesne profits in the suit had been added to the mortgage security it would have been insufficient to meet the sum due to Galstaun under the mortgage of the 22nd May, 1914. The ground upon which the decree was based is set out in the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge as follows: "Defendant No. 1 (that is appellant) got into possession admittedly as tenant at a monthly rent of Rs. 600. They were let into possession by Mr. Galstaun in his capacity as a guardian of Owen Sukeas in 1917, and they paid rent as they had agreed to pay for a period of one year. In March or April, 1918, they entered into an infructuous verbal contract with Mr. Galstaun to purchase the property for Rs. 85,000, but they did not pay the money as Mr. Galstaun could not execute any valid deed of transfer and it was settled and agreed that reasonable interest upon the sum of Rs. 85,000 should be paid by H. R. Chamaria & Co. As there was no sale the interest payable as mentioned above was really the rent payable for the property and thus the tenancy created at first was practically continued. The relationship of landlord and tenant, therefore, in my opinion, existed as between Owen Sukeas and defendant No. 1 till the interest of Owen Sukeas was purchased by the plaintiff on the 2nd May, 1919, in the benami of his son defendant No. 2 in auction-sale. On purchase of the equity of redemption the plaintiff stepped into the shoes of Owen Sukeas and thus H. R. Chamaria & Co. became tenants under him. The tenancy terminated with the end of August 1919 as it was put an end by a notice to quit." It is quite clear that Galstaun could not legally enter into an agreement for a tenancy with H. R. Chamaria & Co. in the capacity either of guardian or of agent of the minor son of Sukeas. It follows, therefore, that the suit as framed must fail, for no privity of estate at any time existed between the plaintiff and Chamaria. At the hearing of the appeal, however, the learned Vakil for the respondent contended that, although he could not support the decree upon the ground upon which it was based by the learned Subordinate Judge, it ought to be affirmed upon an entirely different basis. He urged that Chamaria must have been in possession of the property at all material times either without any title or claiming title through the mortgagor or the mortgagee.

As the learned Vakil for the appellant admitted that he could not claim title through the mortgagor Chamaria either had no title to be in possession at all or he must rest his claim to be in possession upon the title of Galstaun, the mortgagee. Upon that assumption the learned Vakil for the respondent further contended that Galstaun took possession without any pretence of legal right, and was liable to be ejected as a trespasser; and that Chamaria, who admittedly was put into possession by Galstaun acting in some capacity or other, was in a like predicament. Being trespassers both Galstaun and Chamaria were jointly and severally liable to pay damages for having been in wrongful possession of the property. That is a different cause of action—involving the consideration of entirely different issues—from the cause of action that was set out in the plaint and canvassed at the trial, and learned Counsel who appeared for the appellant strenuously contended that the Court ought not to permit the respondent to set up a new cause of action of this nature for the first time in appeal. It is necessary to decide that question, because, in my opinion, upon the evidence the learned Subordinate Judge ought to have held that at all material times Galstaun was in possession of the property in suit as mortgagee and not as a trespasser. The oral evidence upon this matter, in my opinion, supported the view that Galstaun took possession of this property as mortgagee with the assent of the mortgagor. That being so, his possession was lawful possession unless and until the assent of the mortgagor to Galstaun remaining in possession of the mortgaged property was withdrawn. At the hearing of the suit no allegation was made, no issue was raised, and no evidence was led by the plaintiff to prove that any time after he purchased the property the plaintiff had refused or withdrawn his assent to Galstaun remaining in possession of the property as mortgagee under the mortgage of 12th May, 1914. It may be that if such an issue had been raised at the trial the defendant might have been in a position to prove that the plaintiff in fact consented to Galstaun remaining in possession as mortgagee. But once it is found that Galstaun took possession of the property as mortgagee with the assent of the mortgagor, in my opinion, the mortgagee's possession continued to be lawful possession until the assent of the mortgagor was withdrawn; and if Galstaun's possession was lawful possession it follows that Chamaria's possession was also lawful.

The result is, therefore, that, even as suming that the respondent ought to be allowed at this stage of the proceedings to put forward the case that Chamarra was trespasser, such a contention must fail having regard to the evidence that has been adduced. It is unnecessary to consider the legal position of the plaintiff vis-a-vis the mortgagee Galstaun, and I refrain from expressing any opinion with respect to the legal obligations that existed or may exist between them.

For these reasons I agree that the appeal should be allowed and the suit dismissed.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed;

Suit dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL ORDER NO. 466
OF 1925.

July 22, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Page and
Mr. Justice Graham.

MAHESH CHANDRA SADHU AND OTHERS DECREE-HOLDERS—APPELLANTS
versus

JOGENDRA LAL SARKAR AND OTHERS—
JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 29—Order for stay of execution, operation of—“Until the pending suit has been decided”—“Suit”, whether includes “appeal”.

The words “until the pending suit has been decided” in O. XXI, r. 29 of the Civil Procedure Code mean until the claim in the pending suit has been finally decided, that is to say, after all rights of appeal have been exhausted. [p. 80, col. 2.]

Appeal against an order of the Subordinate Judge, Asansole, District Burdwan, dated the 29th of August, 1925.

Mr. Ram Chandra Majumdar and Dr. Bijan Kumar Mukherjee, for the Appellants.

Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherji and Babu Shib Saran Sarkar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Page, J.—The determination of this appeal depends upon the true construction of O. XXI, r. 29 of the Civil Procedure Code. The question raised is one of first impression, for in none of the High Courts in India does it appear to have been considered or decided. Order XXI, r. 29 runs as follows :—“Where a suit is pending in any Court against the holder of a decree of such Court, on the part of the person, against whom the decree was passed, the Court may, on such terms as to security or otherwise, as it thinks fit, stay execution of the decree until the pending suit has been decided.” The question to be determined is whether the words “until the pending suit has been decided” mean until a decree has been passed by the Court in which the suit is pending, or until the claim in the pending suit has finally been determined. The material facts are not in dispute.

The present appellants or their predecessors-in-title obtained a decree in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Asansole against the respondents for Rs. 10,939-14 and costs on the 22nd March, 1915. This decree was affirmed on appeal to the High Court on 14th January, 1918. On the 18th April, 1925, the appellants applied to the Subordinate Judge of Asansole for execution of the decree which they had obtained in the High Court on 14th January, 1918 to the extent to which it had not already been satisfied. On the 29th August, 1925, the learned Subordinate Judge of Asansole dismissed the appellants' application upon the ground that it was barred by limitation. Against this order the appellants-decree-holders have preferred the present appeal. The appeal is supported upon two grounds, (i) that the present application for execution must be treated as a continuation of a previous execution case (No. 101 of 1919); (ii) that an order under O. XXI, r. 29 staying the execution of the decree of 14th January, 1918, had been passed by the learned Subordinate Judge of Asansole on the 14th April, 1920, that the stay order remained in force until the 24th November, 1924; and that, if the time during which the execution of the appellants' decree was stayed was excluded from the period during which limitation would run, the application for execution of the 18th April, 1925, was not time-barred.

Now, it appears that in the execution case No. 101 of 1919 (31st July 1919) Rs. 7,844-4-0 were realised in part satisfaction of the decree, and this case was dismissed on part satisfaction on 30th April, 1920. On the 19th May, 1920, the appellants again applied for execution of the decree in case No. 129 of 1920, and on the 23rd June, 1920, this execution case was dismissed for default. In these circumstances it cannot reasonably be contended that the application for execution of the 18th April, 1925, was in continuation of the former execution cases which had been determined; and the first contention urged on behalf of the appellants, therefore, fails. Raghunath Sahay Singh v. Lalji Singh (1) and Dhukiram Srimani v. Jogendra Chunder Sen (2).

On the 14th April, 1920, however, the learned Subordinate Judge of Asansole had passed the following stay order:—

"As it appears that the judgment-debtors, Jogendra Lal Sarkar and others, have instituted a suit for recovery of Rs. 3,170-15 6 for royalties against the decree-holders (in M. Suit No. 58 of 1918), on the petition of the judgment-debtors let the execution be stayed under O. XXI, r. 29."

The judgment-debtors' suit was decreed by the Subordinate Judge of Asansole on 16th June, 1920. Against that decree an appeal was lodged, and the judgment-debtors' claim against the decree-holders was finally determined by a decree of the learned District Judge of Burdwan of the 24th November, 1924. By this decree the learned District Judge of Burdwan awarded the judgment-debtors a sum of Rs. 2,253-14-0 and costs.

Upon these facts the appellants urged that the stay order of the 14th April, 1920, remained in force until the claim in the judgment-debtors' suit was finally decided by the decree of the learned District Judge of Burdwan of the 24th November, 1924, and that if the time that elapsed between the 14th April, 1920, and the 24th November, 1924, is excluded from the period of limitation, the present application for execution was presented within the time limited by the Statute of Limitation. On the other hand, the respondents contend that the stay order remained in force only while the judgment-debtors' suit was pending in the trial Court, and ceased to be operative after the decree was passed by the learned Subordinate Judge on the 16th June, 1920. The adoption of the literal construction for which the respondents contend would provide an easy solution of the problem. But, in my opinion, such a construction would render nugatory the two-fold object which, I think, the Legislature had in view when enacting O. XXI, r. 29, namely, to prevent (1) the judgment-debtor being compelled to satisfy the decree by providing the sum due when it might be proved (after his claim against the decree-holder was finally determined) that on balance he owed the decree-holder less than the decretal sum or, it might be, nothing at all; (2) the multiplicity of execution proceedings. Now, it may well happen, after a stay order has been passed under O. XXI, r. 29, that the trial Court might dismiss the suit, while on appeal a sum might be decreed in favour of the judgment-debtor, and on a further appeal he might be awarded a sum larger than that for which the decree-holder had obtained his decree. In that event the result of adopting the construction which the respondents have urged upon us would be that both the objects which the Legislature had in mind when enacting O. XXI, r. 29 would be defeated. On the other hand, if the view for which the appellants contend is accepted the decree-holder need suffer no hardship by reason of the delay necessarily incident to an appeal by the judgment-debtor, for under r. 29 the executing Court is at liberty to grant a stay of execution upon whatever terms it thinks meet. There is no magic in the words "until the pending suit has been decided," for it is conceded by the learned Advocate for the respondents that the executing Court in any case would have jurisdiction under s. 151 to grant a further stay if the judgment-debtor preferred an appeal. In my opinion the words "until the pending suit has been decided" mean until the claim in the pending suit has finally been decided. The result, therefore, is that the application for leave to execute the decree of the 14th January, 1918, that was preferred on the 18th April, 1925, was not barred by limitation; the appeal will be allowed and the order under appeal set aside. It is represented to us that an appeal has been preferred to the High Court from the order of the learned District Judge of Burdwan of the 24th November, 1924. The execution proceedings will be returned to the learned Subordinate Judge of Asansole to be disposed of according to law. Whether the learned Subordinate Judge adjourns or dismisses or otherwise determines the present application for execution is a matter that must be left to the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge; and the costs of this appeal will abide the event;

(1) 23 O. 397; 12 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 264.

(2) 5 O. W. N. 317.

the hearing-fee is assessed at two gold mohurs.

Graham, J.—The sole question involved in the appeal is whether the application for execution was time-barred or not, and the answer turns upon the proper construction of O. XXI, r. 29 of the Code of Civil Procedure and in particular upon the meaning of the words "pending suit has been decided" which occur therein. Do these words merely refer to the suit or do they include an appeal, if any, and mean "finally decided," that is to say, after all rights of appeal have been exhausted? If the former is the case then the plea of limitation must prevail, while if the latter view is correct then that plea fails.

The learned Vakil for the respondents has called our attention to O. XXII, r. 11 whereby that Order is made applicable to appeals as well as suits and argued that from the fact that there is no similar provision in the case of O. XXI, r. 29, it may be inferred that the word "suit" in the latter rule was not intended to include appeal. The word "suit" has not been defined in the Code, and it is possible to interpret it in two ways either as restricted to the suit itself, or as meaning a suit from commencement until final decision, that is to say, as including the period of appeal, if any.

On the whole I am of opinion that the better view is that the word was intended to include the period of appeal and that "decided" means "finally decided." The adoption of the other view would entail multiplicity of proceedings which it has always been the object of the Legislature to avoid.

For these reasons I agree with my learned brother that the appeal must be allowed.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 2058 OF 1924.

June 29, 1927.

Present :—Sir George Claus Rankin, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Mitter.

ROY MONMATHA NATH MITRA

BAHADUR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RAJESWAR RAI CHOUDHURI

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Permanent tenancy—Inference from proved facts—Question of law—Burden of proof of permanency—Mere unaltered rent and transfer of holding, effect of—Permanent structures—Amalgamation of permanent and precarious holdings—Consequences—Admission of permanency by gomashta in rent receipt, whether binding on landlord—Gomashta's powers.

The question whether a tenancy is permanent or precarious is a question of legal inference from proved facts and, consequently, a question of law. [p. 82, col. 2.]

When a tenant of lands in India in a suit by his landlord to eject him from them, sets up a defence that he has a right of permanent tenancy in the lands, the onus of proving that he has such right is upon the tenant. [p. 84, col. 2.]

Nainapillai Marakayar v. Ramanathan Chettiar (6) and Secretary of State for India v. Luchmeswar Singh (7), followed.

An entry with regard to the nature of the tenancy in a rent receipt is superfluous and unnecessary in the case of tenancies governed by the Transfer of Property Act and the admission of the nature of tenancy by a gomashta in such rent receipt is gratuitous and not binding on the landlord. [p. 84, col. 1.]

There is no inflexible rule of law that a landlord is bound by every statement made by his gomashta in a rent receipt. [ibid.]

Moharani Beni Pershad Koeri v. Goberdhan Koeri (2), Sri Maharani Beni Pershad Koeri v. Ramdakin Pandey (3) and Bhojohuree Bunick v. Aka Golam Ali (4), relied on.

Pyari Mohun Mukhopadhyaya v. Gopal Paik (5), distinguished.

Ordinarily the gomashta is authorised to receive rents, to give a discharge to tenants for such rents and in some cases even to recognise the transferee of an occupancy holding, but it certainly is not usual for a gomashta to confer any permanent right on tenants or to make any admission in respect of tenants' rights which may be binding on the landlord. [p. 83, col. 2.]

Mere unaltered rents for a number of years and a single instance of transfer of the holding are not sufficient to raise the inference of permanency. [p. 84, col. 2.]

The fact that holdings which were not permanent were amalgamated with a holding on which at one time a pucca structure stood cannot give these holdings the character of permanency [ibid.]

The mere fact of amalgamation of four holdings into one would not change the respective incidents of the holdings in the absence of a contract to the effect that it was intended to change those incidents and give a higher status to the tenant of the amalgamated holding. [p. 86, col. 1.]

A document in which a right is asserted is admissible under s. 13 of the Evidence Act even though it is not inter partes. [p. 85, col. 2; p. 86, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, 24-Parganas, dated the 21st July, 1924, affirming that of the Munsif at Alipur, dated the 15th December, 1921.

Messrs. N. C. Bose, A. N. Bose and Babu Satyendra Nath Mitter, for the Appellant.

Babus Brojo Lal Chakraborty and Suresh Chandra Taluqdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Mitter, J.—The suit in which this appeal arises was for ejectment of the respondents from some 25 cottas of land in punja nyabasti, within the Municipal boundaries of Calcutta. The plaintiff-appellant alleges in his plaint that the defendants-respondents are tenants-at-will liable to ejectment on a proper notice to quit and that such notice had been served upon the defendants' predecessor, one Biseswar Roy Chowdhuri.

The claim of the respondents is that the disputed land has been held by them and their predecessors on a permanent tenure and that no notice to quit was served on them.

The Munsif of Alipur who tried the suit held that the notice to quit was properly served but decided in favour of the respondents on the ground that the respondents' tenure is permanent. The plaintiff appealed to the Subordinate Judge of 24-Parganas who came to the conclusion that the holding in suit is permanent and that the defendants are not liable to ejectment and on this finding dismissed the plaintiff's appeal.

In second appeal the learned Advocate on behalf of the plaintiff-appellant contends that the findings of fact arrived at by the lower Appellate Court do not give rise to the legal inference that the tenure of the respondents is a permanent tenure. It has not been seriously contended before us by the learned Vakil for the respondents that the finding of the Subordinate Judge that the respondents' tenancy was permanent, was one of fact and was binding on us in second appeal; nor could such a contention be successfully raised. The question here, as in all other similar cases, is whether the true inference from the facts is that the tenure is permanent or precarious, the burden of proof being on the tenants-respondents. In this connexion I need only refer to the following observations of the Judicial Committee in a recent case: "A third question, more formidable in character, must be disposed of before their Lordships further proceed. The learned District Judge, on appeal here, dismissed the respondent's suit, finding that the appellants' tenancy was permanent. It is thereupon contended by the appellants that this finding was one of fact by the learned Judge not open to review either by the High Court on second appeal or by this Board.

"Now their Lordships would be the last to seek to abridge the effect of ss. 100 and 101 of the Code of Civil Procedure or weaken the strict rule that on second appeal the Appellate Court is bound by the findings of fact of the Court below. They are well aware, moreover, that questions of law and of fact are often difficult to disentangle. It is clear, however, that the proper effect of a proved fact is a question of law, and the question whether a tenancy is permanent or precarious seems to them, in a case like the present, to be a legal inference from facts and not itself a question of fact.

"The High Court has described the question here as a mixed question of law and fact—a phrase not unhappy if it carries with it the warning that, in so far as it depends upon fact, the finding of the Court of first appeal must be accepted. On these lines, which the High Court appears strictly to have observed, the appeal to that Court was competent and it was in their Lordships' judgment open to the learned Judges there to entertain it as they did." [See Dhanna Mal v. Moti Sagar (1).]

The facts found by the lower Appellate Court are these:—The disputed land which is now one holding originally consisted of 4 separate holdings which were subsequently amalgamated into one. The area of land, the name of the tenant and the rental payable for each holding are given in the table below.

Tenant.	Land.	Rent.
		Rs.	As.	Gds.	K.
1. Jagannath Misty	7½ cottas	3	1	1	1
2. Abhoy Charan Shah.	16 "	12	0	0	0
3. Sreenath Sarkar	1½ "	1	1	1	1
4. Gopal Bairagi ...	½ "	1	4	0	0

The date of creation of the first of these holdings is unknown. The other three tenancies were created after 1258 B. S. (1851 A. D.) and before 1268 B. S. (1861 A. D.). The last two holdings were amalgamated in 1268 when the rent was increased to Rs. 2-8. The rent of the second holding was increased to Rs. 24 in 1265 B. S. (1858 A. D.) and the rent of the first holding was increased to Rs. 10 in 1261 B. S. (1864 A. D.). There has been no change in the rental of any of these four holdings since 1271 B. S. (1864 A. D.). On the 6th of Aghrayan 1289 B. S. (1882 A. D.) defendants' predecessor Barada Kristo Roy purchased these holdings from Anandamoyi Dasi, wife of the tenant Abhoy Charan Saha in the benami of Rakhal Chandra Mukherjee. Biseswar was the son of Barada Kanta Roy and the defendants are the sons of Biseswar. Notice to quit was served on Biseswar by the plaintiff. The conveyance in favour of Anandamoyi from the original tenant of these four holdings has not been produced in this case. But the conveyance in favour of Barada by Anandamoyi Ex. "B" shows that the four holdings were regarded as two; one was the amalgamation of holdings Nos. 1, 3 and 4 with the consolidated increased rental of Rs. 12-8 and the other was holding No. 2 with the increased rental of Rs. 24. In Ex. "B" holdings were described as kayemi mourashi (permanent). Exhibit "B" also shows that the second holding of 16 cottas was Anandamoyi's dwelling-house and that she had one pucca one-storied house on the same, besides there was one "golepata" hut on the amalgamated holdings of Rs. 12-8. The lower Appellate Court also referred to certain dakhilas (rent-receipts) from 1295 B. S. (1888 A. D.) to 1303 B. S. (1896 A. D.). In each of those dakhilas there is an entry made by the gomashta of the plaintiff that the holding was a mokarrari mourashi one. No document has been produced in this case to show to what extent the gomashta had authority to bind the plaintiff by an admission of the kind made in the dakhilas as to the permanent character of the holding in question. If these admissions can be regarded as admissions made by or on behalf of the plaintiff, they would be very strong evidence in support of the defendants' case. Apparently it was considered in the lower Court that unless the plaintiff could displace the statements of his gomashta by showing his ignorance of their being made, his case would be defeated or seriously damaged. Indeed the lower Appellate Court goes to the length of holding that the statement in the dakhilas would conclusively prove that the holding is a mokarrari mourashi holding. Although there is a column in the rent-receipts showing the nature of the tenancy, in cases governed by the Transfer of Property Act it is not usual to indicate the nature of the tenancy in the rent-receipts. The admission made by the gomashta was a gratuitous admission and may be withdrawn unless there is some obligation not to withdraw it. Ordinarily the gomashta is authorised to receive rents, to give a discharge to tenants for such rents and in some cases even to recognise the transferee of an occupancy holding, but it certainly is not usual for a gomashta to confer any permanent right on tenants or to make any admission in respect of tenants' rights which may be binding on the landlord. It is true the landlord might have proved the extent of the authority of his gomashta but in the absence of such authority it cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule that the presumption must be that the gomashta had authority for doing everything which he may do even to the detriment of his master in connexion with matters which are not properly within the scope of his employment. In this case a former naib of the plaintiff deposed that the gomashta had no authority for writing the words "mokarrari mourashi" in the rent-receipts. The lower Appellate Court does not refer to this evidence. All that it says is that the onus lay on the plaintiff to prove the extent of his gomashta's authority as that fact was within the special knowledge of the plaintiff and the plaintiff has not proved it and he presumes from this that the gomashta had authority to give the description in the dakhilas as to the permanent nature of the tenancy. It cannot be affirmed as a general proposition of law that a landlord is always bound by every statement given in the receipts of rent by his gomashtas. There are cases in the books which go to show that when an agent of the landlord has accepted from the various tenants in the occupation of a holding at one rental proportionate parts of the rents, it does not bind the landlord to recognise a separation of the tenancy in absence of evidence to connect the landlord with the receipt of any proportionate rate of rent by the agent. See Moharani Beni Pershad Koeri v. Gober- dhan Koeri (2) and Sri Maharani Beni Pershad Koeri v. Ramdahn Pandey (3).

(1) 101 Ind. Cas. 355; 31 C. W. N. 677 at p. 681; 52 M. L. J. 663; A. I. R. 1927 P. C. 102; 29 Bom. L. R. 870; (1927) M. W. N. 481; 39 M. L. T. 161; 8 Lah. 573; 26 L. W. 634; 25 A. L. J. 959; 28 P. L. R. 658 (P. C.).

In the case of Bhojohuree Bunick v. Aka Golam Ali (4) this Court held that the purchaser of a raiya tenure is bound to communicate with the zemindar and obtain his consent to the transfer of the tenure; without this being done, a gomashta's receipts of rent are not binding on the zemindar. On the other hand, in a Full Bench case—Pyari Mohun Mukhopadhyaya v. Gopal Paik (5), it was held that a landlord was bound by a receipt given by his agent consenting to a division of the holding and a distribution of the rent payable in respect thereof, within the meaning of s. 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. In this Full Bench case it was assumed that the agent was duly authorised to give such a receipt. It seems to me that no inflexible rule of law can be laid down to the effect that the landlord is bound by every statement made in receipt. It has been conceded by the learned Vakil for the respondent in this case that the entry with regard to the nature of the tenancy in a rent receipt would be a superfluous and unnecessary entry in cases of tenancies governed by the Transfer of Property Act. So this admission of the nature of the tenancy by the gomashta as I have already pointed out was a gratuitous admission. There was not here any title on which such an admission can rest. No papers have been produced to show that the landlord before the admission treated the tenancy in question as a permanent tenancy. It is to be noticed also that this admission of the gomashta is contained in receipts for eight years ending with the year 1896 and since 1896 no receipts were granted because of the dispute between the parties as to the nature of the tenancy. The admission, therefore, being out of the way, we have now to consider whether the findings lead to the inference that all these four tenancies aforesaid are permanent tenancies.

Summarising the findings of the lower Appellate Court we find the broad facts to be these:—With regard to the first holding of 7½ cottas the origin is unknown; its rent was enhanced to Rs. 10 in 1271 B. S., it was amalgamated with holdings Nos. 3 and 4 sometime before 1289 B. S. (1882 A. D.). Some "golepata" huts stood on this consolidated holding at some time. With regard to holdings Nos. 3 and 4 their origin is traceable and they were created between 1258 and 1268 B. S., they were amalgamated in about 1268 and the rent was increased to Rs. 2.8 in about the same time; these two amalgamated holdings were again amalgamated with holdings Nos. 1 and 2 in about the year 1289. With regard to holdings Nos. 1, 3 and 4 rent had not remained unchanged before 1271 but there has been uniformity of rent since 1271; it does not appear that these three holdings were let for residential purposes; the land is a homestead land within the Municipality and has been used as an "Arat," i. e., for the purposes of a shop. These circumstances alone, namely, unaltered rents for 57 years and one transfer of these holdings are not sufficient to raise the inference of permanency. It has not been shown that the claim of permanent tenure as asserted in Ex. "B," i. e., the kabala by Anandamoyi in favour of defendants' predecessor-in-interest Barada Kristo Roy in the benami of Rakhal Chandra Mukherji was brought home to the knowledge of the appellant or his predecessor-in-title and was acknowledged by them. There are no pucca structures in the land. It has not been shown that they were let for residential purposes. It is not shown that they were being used for residential purposes. And the fact that they were amalgamated with holding No. 2 on which at one time a pucca structure stood cannot give to these holdings the character of permanency.

In the case of Nainapillai Marakayar v. Ramanathan Chettiar (6), the Judicial Committee laid down the law in regard to the matter in hand in the following words:—"It cannot now be doubted that when a tenant of lands in India in a suit by his landlord to eject him from them, sets up a defence that he has a right of permanent tenancy in the lands, the onus of proving that he has such right is upon the tenant. In Secretary of State for India v. Luchmes-

(2) 6 C. W. N. 823.

(3) 10 C. W. N. 216.

(4) 16 W. R. 97.

(5) 25 C. 531; 2 C. W. N. 375; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.)

852.

(6) 82 Ind. Cas. 226; 51 L. A. 83 at p. 69; 47 M. 337; 28 C. W. N. 809; A. I. R. 1924 P. O. 65; 19 L. W. 259; 22 A. L. J. 130; 34 M. L. T. 10; (1924) M. W. N. 293; 46 M. L. J. 546; 10 O. & A. L. R. 464; L. R. 5 A. (P. C.) 33 (P. C.).

war Singh (7) it was held that the onus of proving that they had a permanent right of occupancy in lands was upon the defendants who alleged it as a defence to a suit by their landlord to eject them, and that proof of long occupation at a fixed rent did not satisfy that onus." And again—"A permanent right of occupancy in land in India is a right, subject to certain conditions, of a tenant to hold the land permanently which he occupies. It is a heritable right, and in some places it possibly may be transferable by the tenant to a stranger. That permanent right of occupancy can only be obtained by a tenant by custom, or by a grant from an owner of the land who happens to have power to grant such a right, or under an Act of the Legislature." Having regard to these pronouncements we are not satisfied that the defendants have satisfied the onus of proving that they have a right of permanent tenancy in these holdings.

The learned Vakil for the respondent has relied on two decisions of the Judicial Committee, Upendra Krishna Mandal v. Ismail Khan Mahomed (8) and Nilratan Mandal v. Ismail Khan Mahomed (6). In the first of these cases the case of the tenants rested on a series of transmissions of properties by sale and mortgage which went back as far as 1826 and the continued possession of the tenants and their predecessors-in-title at an unaltered rent and on a kabuliyat which shows that these transmissions of property as permanent tenancy was brought home to the landlord who recognised the right created by this document by accepting a kabuliyat. In the second case the land had been occupied by the tenants' predecessors at an unaltered rent for 100 years. They had built on it and had dealt with the property by sale and mortgage. A kabuliyat and a patta were executed which brought home to the landlords' knowledge and recognition of the tenants' transmission of the property by sale in an instrument which purported to convey a permanent and inheritable right.

Reliance has been placed by the learned Vakil for the respondent on the case of Caspersz v. Kader Nath Sarbadhikari (10). That case is also distinguishable. For in that case the following facts co-existed:—

(i) Long possession by the defendants and their predecessors;

(ii) the landlord's permission to the defendants' predecessors to build a pucca house upon it;

(iii) the existence of the house there for a considerable time;

(iv) the addition to the building by successive tenants;

(v) the transfers of the tenure from time to time by succession and purchase;

(vi) the acquiescence of the landlord in such transfers of which he could not have been ignorant as he accepted rent from the transferees.

So far as holdings Nos. 1, 3 and 4 are concerned all these elements do not exist in the present case. For the reasons above stated the legitimate inference to be drawn from the facts in the present case is that with regard to 9 cottas of land covered by holdings Nos. 1, 3 and 4 the position of the defendants is that of a tenant-at-will.

The case with regard to holding No. 2 (16 cottas of land) stands on a somewhat different footing from that of other holdings. It appears from the kabala (Ex. B) by which defendants' predecessor Barada Kristo purchased the holdings along with three other holdings from Anandamoyi that this holding was her (i. e., Anandamoyi's) bhadrasanbati (dwelling house) and that she had one pucca one-storied house on this holding. This holding was created between 1258 and 1268 B. S., and we find that some time before 1289 B. S. there were pucca structures on the holding so that at any rate the inference might be legitimately drawn that the land of this holding which was being used for residential purposes was let for such purposes. The rent had not varied for 57 years and the transfer was recognised by the landlord and in all these circumstances it may be legitimately inferred that the appellant through his agent had notice of the existence of pucca structure on it. It has been argued on behalf of the appellant that Ex. B is not admissible in evidence against him as he was no party to the said document. But I think that this argument has no substance, (7) 16 A. 6; 16 C. 223; 13 Ind. Jur. 10; 5 Sar. P. O. J. 275; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 147 (P. O.).

(8) 31 I. A. 141; 32 C. 41; 8 C. W. N. 889; 8 Sar. P. O. J. 632 (P. O.).

(9) 31 I. A. 149; 32 C. 51; 8 C. W. N. 895; 8 Sar. P. O. J. 695 (P. O.).

(10) 28 C. 738; 5 C. W. N. 856.

for the document although not inter partes is admissible in evidence as a transaction within the meaning of s. 13 of the Evidence Act by which the right to this property was asserted, so that we have it that the buildings which were of a substantial character were erected so far back as 1882 and that the predecessor-in-title of the defendants lived for some time in it. In these circumstances it is indeed difficult to say that the inference drawn by the Courts below that this holding No. 2 is a tenancy of a permanent character is wrong.

If we consider the incidents of the four holdings together after amalgamation into a single holding we find that an unaltered rent has been paid for 57 years and that there existed a pucca building on a small portion of it at some distant time. These two elements alone are not sufficient to raise the presumption of permanency. But it has been possible in the present case by reason of the evidence furnished by Ex. "B" to distinguish between the lands of holdings Nos. 1, 3 and 4 on which no permanent structures stood and the lands of holding No. 2 on which such structures existed. The mere fact of amalgamation of four holdings into one would not change the respective incidents of the holdings in the absence of a contract to the effect that it was intended to change those incidents and give a higher status to the tenant of the amalgamated holding. No such contract has been proved in the present case and it is not suggested that any existed. We are, therefore, left to infer from proved facts the nature of the new consolidated tenancy. The fact of unaltered rent and existence of a pucca structure on a portion, as I have already stated, is not sufficient to raise the inference of permanency. It is because of the fact that buildings existed on the 16 cottas holding that we are able to infer that the purpose for which the said land was held was a residential purpose and this fact brings the case within the purview of the decision of Sir Richard Garth, O. J., in the case of Gangadhar Shikdar v. Ayimuddin Shah Biswas (11) which was cited on behalf of the respondent.

The result, therefore, is that the decrees of the Courts below are set aside and in lieu thereof there will be a decree in favour of the plaintiff for ejectment from the 9 cottas of land covered by the holdings Nos. 1, 3 and 4. The claim of the plaintiff for ejectment from holding No. 2 (16 cottas of land) will be dismissed.

The plaintiff will be entitled to mesne profits from the date on which the tenancy was determined by notice to quit. The mesne profits will be ascertained in the execution Court.

Each party will bear its costs throughout.

Rankin, C. J.—I agree.

A. N. A.

Decree set aside.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION.

No. 42 OF 1927.

November 11, 1927.

Present:—Justice Sir Charu Chunder Ghose, Kt., and Justice Sir Philip Lindsay Buckland, Kt.

EZRA MEYER AARON COHEN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Kumar DEBENDRA LALL KHAN—
PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Covenant to repair—New building, whether covered by covenant—General covenant and covenant to repair demised premises only, distinction between.

A general covenant to repair in a lease deed includes not only buildings in existence when the demise is made but all those which may be erected during the term. A covenant to repair the demised premises applies only to those existing at the date of the demise unless the new buildings are made a part of the old ones. [p. 88, col. 2.]

An indenture of lease provided that the lessee shall "at all times during the said term of years keep the said premises in good and substantial repair and the same in good and substantial repair deliver up to the lessor, his heirs or assigns at the expiration or sooner determination of the said term." There was also a subsequent clause which ran as follows: "And it is hereby agreed and declared by and between the parties hereto notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained that the said lessee shall be at liberty to make all necessary additions and alterations to the demised premises to improve the buildings with the written consent of the lessor at his own costs during the continuance of the said term and all such changes, additions, fittings and fixtures so made shall become and be considered the property of the said lessor and the lessee shall have no right to remove the same either before or after the expiration of this lease." The lessee erected certain new buildings which formed additions to and became part of the buildings originally demised:

Held, (1) that the covenant to repair was a general one and applied to the new buildings; [p. 88, col. 2.]

(2) that even if it was a covenant to repair the demised premises alone it applied to the new buildings as they were so erected as to become a part of the old buildings. [p. 89, col. 1.]

Field v. Curnick (1), followed.

Appeal from a judgment and decree of Mr. Justice Page, dated the 25th February, 1927, reported as 106 Ind. Cas. 477.

Messrs. N. N. Sircar and A. K. Roy, for the Appellant.

Sir Binode Mitter, Mr. A. N. Chaudhuri and S. S. Roy, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

C. C. Ghose, J.—This is an appeal against a judgment and decree passed and made by my learned brother Mr. Justice Page on the 25th February, 1927, in an action by the plaintiff to recover possession of a block of buildings lying at the corner of Wellington Street and Dhurramtolla Street. The plaintiff based his cause of action for recovery of possession of the premises upon the breach of (1) a covenant to pay rent and (2) a covenant to repair contained in the Indenture of lease, dated the 3rd August, 1906. As regards the covenant to pay rent, it appears that, before the suit came on for hearing, the defendant who is the assignee of the original lessee had deposited in Court the amount of rent due by and from him to the lessor. Mr. Justice Page came to the conclusion that, in these circumstances, the Court was entitled to exercise its powers under s. 114 of the Transfer of Property Act and give the necessary relief to the tenant. On the question whether there had or had not been a breach of the covenant to repair, Mr. Justice Page came to the conclusion that, so far as the demised premises were concerned, there had been no breach of the covenant to repair but that, in respect of certain buildings which were erected after the date of the Indenture of lease and which buildings had been so constructed that they, in his opinion, formed part of the demised premises, there had been a breach of the covenant to repair, and accordingly he passed a decree in ejectment in favour of the lessor.

On appeal before us, it has been contended that the additional buildings referred to in the judgment of Mr. Justice Page and which were subsequently erected on a part of the demised premises which was then vacant land, did not form part of the two-storeyed house as it stood at the date of the Indenture of lease but were entirely separate buildings, having no connection with the original buildings and that, therefore, the covenant to repair did not extend to the new erections, and accordingly there had been no breach of the covenant to repair, and in the circumstances no decree for ejectment should have been made in favour of the lessor.

Apart from what is contained in the said Indenture of lease, Mr. Justice Page relied in support of his finding that the new erections had been and were made part of the original buildings, upon the evidence of the original lessee Sassoon Jacob Cohen wherein he stated that the new buildings were joined on to the original buildings and made a portion of the same so that the buildings, i. e., the original buildings and the subsequent erections became thereafter one whole building. The expression "joined on to the old buildings" is somewhat misleading and it does not convey with any degree of precision what exactly became the state of things after the new buildings had been erected. In these circumstances, Sir Binode Mitter for the respondent and Mr. Sarkar for the appellant invited us to go down to the spot and see for ourselves the state of things and appreciate the evidence on record on the question whether or not the old buildings were joined on to the new buildings in such a manner that the new buildings became part of the old buildings, or whether the new buildings were separate by themselves having no sort of connection whatsoever with the original buildings. Having regard to the evidence to which our attention was drawn and having regard to the difficulty which we experienced in understanding and appreciating the evidence on record, we thought it proper to accept the invitation and to go down to the spot and see for ourselves the state of things for the purpose of understanding and appreciating the evidence. Having seen the premises as they stand now, I have no difficulty in understanding the evidence of Sassoon Jacob Cohen and I have no hesitation whatsoever in saying that, on the evidence on record, the new buildings were so constructed that in various portions thereof they were made part of the original buildings and in other portions they were so constructed that they could be made part of the original buildings at a moment notice. The beams supporting the roof of the new one-storeyed buildings had been introduced into the walls of the original buildings and the roof of the new buildings is used as a terrace by the occupants of the first floor of the original building. In these circumstances, it is difficult to resist the conclusion that the new buildings were so constructed as to form part of the original buildings and that they have been treated ever since as parts of the original buildings. Therefore, on the question of fact bearing on this issue, I am in entire agreement with Mr. Justice Page in holding that the new buildings could not be treated as separate by themselves but were, in fact and in truth, made part of the original buildings.

Now the question arises whether the covenant to repair contained in the Indenture of lease extended to such new erections. It has already been stated above that Mr. Justice Page did not find that there could be any reasonable complaint on account of the breach of the covenant to repair so far as the original buildings were concerned. The only question that arises, therefore, is whether the covenant to repair extended to such new erections. It is unnecessary, in my opinion, to go through the cases on the subject from 1683 downwards. The cases are all collected in a very concise form on pages 325 and 326 of Vol. XXXI of the English and Empire Digest and it would be sufficient for our purpose if we refer for the enunciation of the law on the subject to the last case bearing on it, namely, the case of Field v. Curnick (1). In that case, it appears that by a lease, dated 1837, the lessors demised to the lessee for 99 years a piece of ground "together with the messuages or tenements and all other erections and buildings which at any time thereafter during the said term should be built on the same piece of ground or any part thereof" and the lessee covenanted to build on the lands demised two good and substantial brick messuages or tenements, and to repair and keep repaired "the said premises." The lessee built six houses as to which it was impossible to say which two were actually completed first. In that state of things, the learned Judge came to the conclusion, on the evidence on record, that the six houses were built simultaneously and finished at the same time. He further held that the covenant to repair extended not only to the two houses which the lessee covenanted to build but to all the six houses. Mr. Justice Sankey then observed as follows:—"In my view, the law is as follows: If a lessor demises a house and there is an express covenant to repair, the lessee is, of course, bound by it. If, on the other hand, the lessor demises a piece of land and there is an express covenant by the lessee to repair any houses subsequently erected thereon, equally the lessee is bound by it. Further, a general covenant to repair includes not merely buildings existing when the demise is made, but all those which may be erected during the term: See Cornish v. Cliefe (2) and Foa on Landlord and Tenant, 6th Edition, page 248. If, however, the covenant to repair is only one to keep in repair the demised premises, it applies to those existing at the date of the lease only unless the new buildings are made part of the old ones."

Now, in this case the Indenture of lease contained the following proviso:—"And at all times during the said term of years keep the said premises in good and substantial repair and the same in good and substantial repair deliver up to the lessor, his heirs or assigns at the expiration or sooner determination of the said term." Further: "And it is hereby agreed and declared by and between the parties hereto notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained that the said lessee shall be at liberty to make all necessary additions and alterations to the demised premises to improve the buildings with the written consent of the lessor at his own costs during the continuance of the said term and all such changes, additions, fittings and fixtures so made shall become and be considered the property of the said lessor and the lessee shall have no right to remove the same either before or after the expiration of this lease."

Having regard to the terms of the Indenture of lease in the present case, there is no doubt that the covenant to repair is in very general terms and it would, in my opinion, extend to the subsequently erected buildings. But, even if it be held that the covenant to repair does not extend to the subsequently erected buildings, in this case there could not be much doubt on the evidence that the new buildings were, in fact, additions to and had become part of the two-storeyed buildings which were originally demised and that, therefore, the covenant to repair would extend to the subsequently erected buildings. It follows, therefore, that the finding of Mr. Justice Page on the evidence on record that the covenant to repair extended to the newly erected buildings is one that cannot be seriously quarrelled with and that the appeal so far as it relates to that point must fail.

(1) (1926) 2 K. B. 374; 95 L. J. K. B. 756; 135 L. T. 474; 42 T. L. R. 510.

(2) (1864) 3 H. & C. 446; 34 L. J. Ex. 19; 11 Jur. (N. s.) 181; 13 W. R. 389; 11 L. T. 606; 140 R. R. 547; 159 E. R. 605.

A small point has been taken that there is internal evidence in the Indenture of lease that the covenant to repair is restricted to what is described as the demised buildings, that is, the original buildings as they stood at the time of the grant of the lease. The argument is as follows:—It is said that the landlord is under no obligation to restore any portion of the subsequently erected buildings if and when they are destroyed by reason of the causes specified in the Indenture of lease, whereas if any portion of the original building is destroyed by any of the said causes the landlord is under an obligation to repair. In the second place, it is stated that no additional rent was payable by reason of the erection of the subsequently erected buildings. So far as the last point is concerned, it may be stated that the lessee was under no obligation to erect new buildings. But if he did erect additional buildings with the consent of the lessor, they were to be considered the property of the lessor and the lessee would have no right to remove the same before or after the expiration of the lease. As Mr. Justice Page points out, the special provisions introduced into the lease with respect to the additions and alterations were inserted for two reasons; first, in order to get out of the provisions of s. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act, and, secondly, in order that it should not be open to the defendant in the event of some part of the additional premises that he might erect being destroyed in the manner set out in the lease to escape proportionate payment of rent so long as the additional structures were not re-built or repaired. I think, therefore, that the appellant cannot derive any comfort whatsoever from the provisions in the lease last referred to.

There is still a further small point to be noticed. It is stated that at the time when the lease was executed a sum of Rs. 2,500 was deposited with the lessor for the due fulfilment of the terms of the lease. The lease having now come to an end, the appellant urges that he should be given credit for this sum in calculating the amount ultimately payable to the lessor. Sir Binode Mitter on behalf of the respondent states that there has been no question at any time that the appellant is entitled to the credit of the said sum and he is willing that, in the accounts, when they are taken, credit should be given to the appellant for the said sum of Rs. 2,500.

The result, therefore, is that the appeal fails on all the points which the learned Counsel for the appellant has taken and it must stand dismissed with costs subject to credit being given to the defendant for Rs. 2,500 as stated above.

Buckland, J.—I agree. I only desire to add a few words with regard to the principal question of fact which has been argued on this appeal; that is, as to whether or not the state of the premises is such that the general covenant to repair applies to the additional premises. The evidence on that point has been quoted in extenso by the learned Judge in his judgment. What has to be proved is expressed in the passage which my learned brother has referred to in the judgment of Mr. Justice Sankey in the case of Field v. Curnick (1). It is necessary to establish that the new buildings are made part of the old ones. All the evidence has not been read to us; but we have been informed by learned Counsel for the appellant that the passages quoted in the judgment of Mr. Justice Page are all the evidence on the point and he has also informed us that no evidence was given on behalf of the plaintiff on this point and that the answers on which the plaintiff relied were elicited in the cross examination of the witness for the defendant. On two occasions, this witness, Sassoon Jacob Cohen was asked whether or not the new rooms were made part of the premises of the two-storeyed building and to each question, his answer was that they were joined. He did not accept the questions in the form in which they were put and he expressed his answer in different words. In consequence, I felt considerable difficulty in knowing what the witness meant by using the word "joined." A horse is joined to a cart, but nobody suggests that the horse becomes a part of the cart. The word "joined" is not necessarily, therefore, conclusive on the point and I was very glad to welcome the invitation of learned Counsel on both sides that we should go and see the buildings for ourselves. We have done so and, having seen the buildings, what I have observed with my own eyes has enabled me to understand the witness's evidence. I am satisfied that when the witness Cohen used the word "joined," he referred to conditions and a state of facts which brings the matter within the passage in the judgment of Mr. Justice Sankey to which I have referred. The view which I have had of the premises has enabled me to understand what the witness meant and his evidence, therefore, in my judgment, supports the finding beyond all question. I concur in the order to be made in this appeal.

A. N. A.

*Appeal dismissed.CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

GOVERNMENT APPEAL No. 4 OF 1927.

August 24, 1927.

Present:—Justice Sir Oharu Chunder Ghose, Kt., and Mr. Justice Cammiade.

THE LEGAL REMEMBRANCER—

APPELLANT

versus

JAHEY SHEIKH AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 297, 307—Jury trial—Verdict of 'guilty'—Judge preparing reference to High Court in anticipation of first verdict—Second charge—Verdict of 'not guilty'—Procedure, illegality of.

Where a Jury returned a unanimous verdict of 'guilty', but the Sessions Judge charged them again and they returned a unanimous verdict of 'not guilty' and it also appeared from the record that the Sessions Judge had before his second charge anticipated the Jury bringing in a verdict of 'guilty' in the first instance, and written out a letter of reference to the High Court disagreeing with the Jury:

Held, that the procedure followed by the Sessions Judge was entirely illegal and unwarranted by law and that the accused should be re-tried. [p. 91, col. 1.]

Appeal against an order of the First Additional Sessions Judge, Mymensingh, dated the 9th March, 1927.

Mr. Khundkar, Deputy Legal Remembrancer for the Appellant.

Babu Sachindra Kumar Roy, for the Accused.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the Local Government under the provisions of s. 417, Criminal Procedure Code, against an order of acquittal passed by the First Additional Sessions Judge of Mymensingh in a case in which the two accused before us were charged before him and a Jury under s. 395, Indian Penal Code. The case is in many ways an extraordinary one, and it is desirable, therefore, to set out the facts briefly.

The two accused Jahéy Sheikh and Katua alias Javed Ali were charged with having committed an offence punishable under s. 395, Indian Penal Code. They were duly committed to take their trial in the Sessions Court. The First Additional Sessions Judge of Mymensingh, Mr. N. V. H. Symons, tried the case with the aid of a Jury. On the 9th March, 1927, the trial was concluded and the Jury were directed to retire and bring in their verdict. What happened thereafter is set out below as appears from the record:—

Q.—As regards both accused are you unanimous?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What is your verdict?

A.—Guilty under s. 395, Indian Penal Code.

Q.—Did you find that Ismat mentioned Katua's name immediately after the occurrence?

A.—We thought it unlikely that the family could have made up the story so soon and we did not think that the explanations of the accused about enmity were sufficient to enable Abdul to bring a false case.

The Jury is then charged again on the matter concerned in the last question. They retired at 3-53 P. M. and returned at 4-30 P. M.

Q.—Do you find that Ismat mentioned Katua's name immediately after the occurrence?

A.—No, we find that he did not.

Q.—Does the Jury wish to make any statement about their verdict of guilty?

A.—We did not follow the meaning of "fair complexion" nor did we understand fully the importance of the passage in the ejahar, and the evidence of the independent witnesses. We now see that Katua is a dark man, and that Ismat could not have mentioned his name as he has said that he only knew him by sight. We wish to amend our verdict and return a unanimous verdict of "not guilty."

As will be seen from the above the Jury at first brought in a unanimous verdict of guilty against the accused under s. 395, Indian Penal Code. The learned Additional Sessions Judge apparently was of a contrary opinion and he proceeded to charge the Jury again. After the second charge was finished the Jury retired again and returned at 4-30 p. m. What the learned Additional Sessions Judge stated to the Jury in the course of the second charge does not appear from the record. But it appears from the record that he had previously anticipated the Jury's bringing in, in the first instance, a verdict of "guilty" against the accused and that he had intended to refer the case to this Court for final orders. With that view he had written out a letter of reference and signed the same, but it appears that having regard to the events which subsequently happened, he placed the letter of reference on the record though he had not despatched the same to this Court. The procedure adopted by the learned Additional Sessions Judge is one which is entirely opposed to the procedure laid down in the Criminal Procedure Code and is one for which there is no warrant anywhere in the law obtaining in British India.

In this view of the matter we cannot allow the verdict of the Jury to remain. We must set aside the verdict of the Jury and set aside the order of acquittal, dated the 7th March, 1927, and direct that the matter be sent back in order that the accused may be re-tried in accordance with law before the Sessions Judge of Mymensingh.

A. N. A.

Order set aside;
Case remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 12 OF 1927.

July 22, 1927.

Present:—Sir George Claus Rankin, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice
Mitter.

NARIPENDRA NATH MUKHERJI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus

DHARENDRA NARAYAN NANDI

AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Land Registration Act (VII of 1876), s. 78—and comprised in several estates—Right of co-sharer indlord to recover his share of rent—S. 78, whether applicable—Entry in Collector's register, effect of—apportionment of rent—Principles—Long payment of rent—Inference.

Section 78 of the Bengal Land Registration Act has no application to a case where the land in the possession of the tenant is comprised in more than one estate. [p. 94, col. 1.]

Rakhal Das Adhya v. Prodyot Kumar Tagore (1), allowed.

The plaintiffs whose names were registered in the Collectorate for a share of 4-annas 8-gandas in three touzis and of a 19½ gandas in another touzi, and who were receiving their share of rent at the rate of Rs. 49-4-8 gandas for over thirty years from the defendants, sued the defendants for arrears of rent at that rate alleging that they were entitled to a share of 4-annas 12-gandas in all the four touzis. The defendants contended that in view of the entry in the Collector's register and s. 78 of the Bengal Land Registration Act the plaintiffs' claim could not be decreed in full:

Held, (1) that s. 78 of the Bengal Land Registration Act had no application to the case as the lands were comprised in more than one estate; [p. 94, col. 1.]

(2) that the rent could not be apportioned upon the assumption that each of the touzis was of equal value; [p. 94, col. 2.]

(3) that the rent which was being paid by the defendants must under the circumstance be held to be correct amount of rent due to the plaintiffs on account of their share in the touzis, and that the plaintiffs' claim must be decreed. [p. 95, col. 1.]

Letters Patent Appeal against the decision of Mr. Justice Majumdar, dated the 7th March, 1927, in Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 2103 of 1921, against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, 24-Parganas, modifying that of the Munsif, Second Court, Barasat, dated the 6th July, 1922.

FACTS are set out in the following judgment of Majumdar, J.—(March 7, 1927).—This appeal arises out of a suit for arrears of rent from 1324 to Falgoon 1327 at the rate of Rs. 49-4-8 gandas per year with cesses at the rate of Rs. 2-8-14 gandas per annum. It is stated in the plaint that the plaintiffs have been realising their share of rent from the tenants separately. It appears that the tenancy extends to entire lands of four touzis, namely, Touzis Nos. 843, 2482, 2527 and 2524 of the Collectorate of the 24-Parganas. It is stated in the plaint that the plaintiffs have got 4-annas 12 gandas share in all the touzis, and that the defendants hold all the lands of the said four touzis at a consolidated rent of Rs. 179-2-18 gandas and have been paying Rs. 49 odd to the plaintiffs as their share of rent. With reference to the first three touzis it is admitted that the plaintiffs' share is 4-annas and 8 gandas and not 4-annas 12 gandas as stated by mistake in the plaint. But with reference to the last touzi, namely, No. 2524 the plaintiffs' names were registered only with reference to 19½ gandas.

The defendants' main contentions were that plaintiffs not being in separate collection of their share, the suit was not maintainable, and secondly, the amount of rent claimed was not actually payable to the plaintiffs.

The first Court held that the plaintiffs' share with reference to the first three touzis was 4-annas 8-gandas and not 4-annas 12-gandas but with reference to the last touzi plaintiffs' share was only 19½ gandas. He found further that the plaintiffs were in separate collection of their share from the defendants. He also found that the plaintiffs had been collecting on account of their share rent from the defendants at the rate of Rs. 49-4-8 gandas for about 30 years but he thinks that under s. 78 of the Land Registration Act because the plaintiffs' names are registered to the extent of 19½ gandas and not to the extent of 4-annas 8-gandas they are not entitled to the entire amount claimed at the rate stated in the plaint but only at the rate of Rs. 39-10-6 gandas. So far as the present record goes there is absolutely no evidence to show that the lands of the four touzis are separate and there is nothing further to show what respective areas of these respective four touzis are. How the learned Munsif came to find Rs. 39-10-6 gandas to be the share of the plaintiffs taking their share of the last Touzi No. 2524 to be 19½ gandas, I fail to understand, unless it is on the supposition that the lands of all the four touzis are equal in extent and equal in value. There is nothing in record to raise any inference upon which such calculation can be made, though in the plaint it was wrongly stated that they have got 4-annas 12-gandas share in all the four touzis but it is stated in the plaint in clear terms that the entire amount of rent on account of the share of all the landlords was Rs. 179-2-18 gandas, and that the defendants have been paying rent to the plaintiffs at the rate of Rs. 49-4-11 gandas from a long time past.

Against the decision of the learned Munsif an appeal was preferred by the plaintiffs in the lower Appellate Court. The learned Subordinate Judge before whom the appeal came on for hearing held that as the defendants had been paying rent at the rate of Rs. 49 and odd the amount might be the result of an understanding among the proprietors and that as such they were bound to pay the same to the plaintiffs and he decreed the appeal and passed a decree in favour of the plaintiffs at the rates claimed.

Two points have been taken in second appeal before me by the learned Advocate on behalf of the defendants. First, that the plaintiffs are not entitled to get rent at the rate of Rs. 49 and odd regard being had to the provision of s. 78 of the Land Registration Act; and second the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge on appeal was wrong as it proceeded upon certain suppositions and surmises not warranted by the evidence on the record.

With regard to the first point the learned Advocate argued that though the defendants had been paying at the rate of Rs. 49 and odd that would not operate as estoppel as there cannot be any estoppel against the express wording of a Statute, and furthermore, that the plaintiffs would be entitled to rent only in proportion to their shares in the Touzi No. 2524 and that the calculation arrived at by the learned Munsif was the amount really due to the plaintiffs. With reference to this first point, the question is whether s. 78 of the Land Registration Act applies to this case or not. There is no question that there cannot be any estoppel as against the express wording of the Statute but that question hardly arises in this particular case. As to the question whether s. 78 of the Land Registration Act applies to this case or not, I think it does not. My first ground is that there is absolutely no data in the record to find out that Rs. 49-4 and odd gandas does not represent the plaintiffs' share in the four touzis taking their share in the last one, i.e. No. 2524 to be 19½ gandas. It might be perfectly consistent if the area of the different touzis are found to be different and the area of the last touzi is much more than the area of the other three touzis. In that case it is possible that notwithstanding the fact that the plaintiffs' share in the last touzi is 19½ gandas and not 4 annas, and odd gandas still in the aggregate their share of rent might amount to Rs. 49-4 and odd gandas. When there is no such data on the record it is impossible to say that the rent of Rs. 49 does not bear the same proportion to the whole of such rent as the extent of the interest in respect of which such proprietor is registered to the entire estate. My second ground on which I hold that s. 78 of the Land Registration Act has no application to the facts of the present case is based upon the view that that section applies only to the tenure or holding which lies entirely within the ambit of one touzi and to cases where such a holding or tenure lies within touzis more than one when the extent of such holding or tenure which lies in any particular touzi is known or specifically ascertainable. In that case alone s. 78 would apply. Similar view was expressed by the learned Judges of this Court in the case of Rakhal Das Adhya v. Prodyot Kumar Tagore (1). The learned Judges say at page 309*: "Section 78 provides that no person shall be bound to pay rent to any person claiming such rent as proprietor of an estate in respect of which he is required by the Act to cause his name to be registered, unless the name of such claimant shall have been registered under the Act. The section further provides that no person being liable to pay rent to two or more such proprietors holding in common tenancy, shall be bound to pay to any one such proprietor more than the amount which bears the same proportion to the whole of such rent as the extent of the interest in respect of which such proprietor is registered bears to the entire estate. It is clear that the proprietor mentioned in the section is the proprietor of one estate within the ambit of which the lands in possession of the tenants are comprised. The Legislature had not in view the contingency which has happened in the present case, namely, a case where the lands in occupation of the tenants are comprised in a number of estates in one or more of which alone the plaintiff is interested." Reliance is placed upon the case of Gobinda Chandra Patra v. Ishan Chandra Singh (2). The facts of this case are altogether different and distinct from the facts of the present case. In that case the plaintiffs were the proprietors to the extent of 14 annas and the defendants were tenants under them and they were also proprietors to the extent of the remaining 2 annas. But the plaintiffs were recorded in the Collectorate sherista as proprietors to the extent of $8\frac{1}{2}$ annas only. When the case came on for hearing an objection was taken that under s. 78 of the Land Registration Act as their names were not recorded to the extent of 14 annas the whole suit should be dismissed, and the plaintiffs were not entitled to get rent even according to the share in which their names were recorded in the Collectorate's sherista. Their Lordships held that this could not operate as a forfeiture. At least the plaintiffs would be entitled to $8\frac{1}{2}$ annas for which they were recorded as proprietors in the Collectorate's sherista. The only question that was before their Lordships was whether there would be any entire forfeiture or there would be a partial decree. The exact point which now arises in the present case was never before their Lordships and was not so decided. In this view I think the first point taken by the learned Advocate fails.

Then as to the second point, namely, the judgment is based upon surmise. He draws my attention to one passage of the lower Appellate Court, namely, that "evidently the owners of the four touzis have some mutual understanding among them by which the plaintiffs have been allowed to realise the rent at the rate claimed in spite of the fact that their names are registered in respect of $19\frac{1}{2}$ gandas share in one touzi." The learned Advocate says that there is nothing to support this surmise. But I do not think so. The facts of this case are that the defendants have been paying rent to the plaintiffs at this very rate of Rs. 49 for a period extending over 30 years. No objection was ever taken by the plaintiffs nor by the other co-sharers of the plaintiffs. Under such circumstances the Court of Appeal below was perfectly justified in coming to an inference that might have been due to the same mutual understanding among the proprietors themselves.

That being so, both the points fail and the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Mr. Sarat Chandra Roy Chaudhury and Babu Indu Bhusan Roy, for the Appellants.

Babu Nanda Gopal Banerjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Rankin, C. J.—This is the defendants' appeal from the judgment and decree of my learned brother Mr. Justice Majumdar affirming a decision of the lower Appellate Court.

The plaintiff is one of several co-owners of four revenue-paying estates with separate touzi numbers. It appears that the whole of the area of these four touzis has been settled in talukdari right with the defendants for a consolidated jama of Rs. 179-2-8 gandas

(1) 6 Ind. Cas. 121; 15 C. L. J. 308.

(2) 2 C. W. N. 600.

*Page of 15 C. L. J.—[22]

In my judgment, the circumstance that the tenure is co-extensive with the whole area of the four touzis is of no importance for the present purpose, but it is a fact, as I understand, that the whole of the land comprised in the four touzis is comprised in this tenure at the consolidated rent of Rs. 179-2-8 gandas.

The facts are these that the plaintiff is registered in the Collectorate as having in three of the touzis a share of 4-annas 8-gandas and in one of the touzis as having a share of 19½-gandas not quite one anna. The suit was brought on the footing that the plaintiff had an equal share in all the four that being put as 4-annas 12-gandas. In point of fact the share of the plaintiff is now admitted to have been wrongly stated in the plaint, and the facts are as I have given. Upon that footing the plaintiff bringing his suit for rent is met with the provisions of s. 78 of the Land Registration Act (VII B. C. of 1876). It is said that it is wrong to give judgment for the amount claimed by the plaintiff because under that section a tenant is entitled to say that he will pay no greater share of the rent to a co-sharer landlord than the landlord is registered in the Collectorate as having.

Mr. Justice Majumdar has disagreed with the figure found by the learned Munsif and has criticized his calculation in a way which seems to me to be sound, that is to say, he has shown that the Munsif's calculation is based upon an assumption that one can treat each of the touzis as of equal value for the purpose of apportioning rent. On the question whether s. 78 applies to a case like this Mr. Justice Majumdar has followed the decision of Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Teunon in Rakhal Das Adhya v. Prodyot Kumar Tagore (1). He has held that it is not right to apply s. 78 to any case except the case of a holding under one single estate or revenue-free property. The case before Mr. Justice Mookerjee was a case where the plaintiff was a co-sharer landlord, the tenancy lands comprised lands in more than one touzi and the plaintiff was interested as co-sharer in one or more touzis but not in all. The Court disposing of that case gives as its opinion that a close examination of the section makes it reasonably plain that it has no application to cases where the land in possession of the tenant is comprised in more than one estate; and, again, that the proprietor mentioned in the section is the proprietor of one estate within the ambit of which the lands in possession of the tenants are comprised. It has been pointed out to us that that reasoning goes further than was necessary for the decision of that case because, on the facts of that case, it was found to be one where the lands in occupation of the tenants were comprised in a number of estates in one or more of which alone the plaintiff was interested. In my judgment, the present case where the plaintiff is interested in all the touzis but not to the same extent in each is just as strong a case on the facts for the purpose of excluding s. 78 as the case before Mr. Justice Mookerjee. In both cases s. 78 is inapplicable because it cannot be applied. It is not possible in this case to say, without assuming that each of those touzis is of the same value for purposes of apportioning rent, what is the share that these tenants are bound to pay; and, in my judgment, therefore, whether that case went beyond what was necessary or not the present case is just as strong as that in favour of the landlord. I think, however, that the proposition that the section has no application to cases where the land in possession of the tenant is comprised in more than one estate is a sound proposition, particularly as regards the second part of s. 78. It is quite true that s. 78 is enacted to compel people or to give them an adequate motive to obey the provisions which require registration to be made of these interests in land. Section 78 is controlled by s. 81 which contains a saving for the conditions of any written contract, but it is a section in aid of s. 38.

It is quite true that one might be disposed to argue that for that reason s. 78 must apply to all cases of revenue paying estate or revenue-free property and that as nothing is intended to be left uncovered under s. 38 so nothing is left to be uncovered or out of the reach of s. 78. That, however, is not, I think, a valid argument. Section 78 gives a certain sanction inducing people to make sure to register their interests, but it may well be that the Legislature has thought it sufficient sanction if in all cases where there are tenancies confined to one revenue-paying estate the proprietor is apt to lose what he does not register. From the nature of the case it could not well go further without creating difficulties. It does not follow that the sanction will hit every case because the intention is to require a complete registration.

In my judgment, in this case the learned Judge has rightly decided that s. 78 was of no avail to the defendants. Had it been, I think, the result of the case would have been different, because no estoppel would prevail against the Statute. But, in my judgment, the estoppel by the Statute not being shown, there is in the rest of the case no difficulty in holding that the rent which the defendants have been in the habit of paying for many years is really due as between the plaintiff on the one hand and the defendants on the other.

I think, therefore, that the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Mitter, J.—I agree.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 3
OF 1925.

June 24, 1927.

Present:—Sir George Claus Rankin, Kt.,
Chief Justice and Mr Justice Mitter.

MOHESH CHANDRA CHAKRABARTY

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

HEMENDRA NATH SEN CHOWDHURY

AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 144—Suit for possession of waste land—Limitation—Presumption of possession from title—Landlord and tenant—Bona fide settlement by de facto landlord—Right of true owner to eject tenant—Actual possession, necessity of.

In a suit for recovery of possession of waste lands if title is found with the plaintiff he must be presumed to have been in possession until he was dispossessed and in the absence of evidence as to entry by some other person on the land beyond twelve years of suit the question of limitation does not arise. [p. 96, col. 1.]

The principle that a tenant who has taken a settlement bona fide from a de facto landlord cannot be ejected by the true owner is applicable only to cases where the person claiming to be the de facto landlord is in actual possession. [p. 96, col. 2.]

Bino Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik (1), distinguished.

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Third Court, Mymensingh, dated the 28th June, 1924, reversing that of the Munsif, Third Court, Tangail, dated the 12th February, 1923.

Mr. Sarat Chunder Bose (with him Babu Ramgati Sarkar), for the Appellants.

Babu Surendra Nath Guha and Mr. Nuruddin Ahmed, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Mitter, J.—This is an appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge of Mymensingh, dated the 28th June, 1924, which reversed a judgment and decree of the Munsif of Tangail, dated the 12th February, 1923. The appeal arises out of a suit commenced by the plaintiffs, now respondents, for declaration of the plaintiffs' zemindari right to the disputed lands and for recovery of khas possession. The case as stated in the plaint is that the suit lands were formerly waste lands and appertained to plaintiffs' zemindari Mouza Garaki and they were subsequently settled with the pro forma defendants who possessed them and that sometime after the settlement the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, now appellants, brought a suit against the pro forma defendants for establishment of title to and for khas possession of the lands now in dispute.

The pro forma defendants contested the suit but ultimately they could not continue their defence with the result that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, now appellants, obtained an ex parte decree and in execution of that decree took khas possession of the lands now in suit. This gave rise to the cause of action in the present suit.

The defence of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was that the suit lands appertained not to plaintiffs' Mouza Garaki but to Mouza Baradam of the pro forma defendants. There was a local investigation and after trial the Munsif dismissed the plaintiffs' suit holding that the lands appertained not to plaintiffs' Mouza Garaki but to Mouza Baradam. The Munsif also held that the defendants being settled raiyyats of Baradam, acquired occupancy right to the disputed lands and could not, in any event, be evicted.

An appeal was carried by the plaintiffs to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Mymensingh. The learned Subordinate Judge held on a consideration of the evidence that the lands in dispute fell within the plaintiffs' Mouza Garaki. He also held that the plaintiffs had been in possession of the disputed lands within twelve years of suit and that the defendants' possession for a period short of twelve years did not give them any right to resist the suit for possession commenced by the plaintiffs. The Subordinate Judge accordingly allowed the appeal and decreed the plaintiffs' suit in part for 3 bighas 19 cottas and 2 chattaks of the disputed lands which according to the Commissioner's report and map fell within the plaintiffs' mouza.

The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 have, as I already said, preferred a second appeal and three points have been taken before us by the learned Advocate for the appellants. It is said in the first place, that the lower Appellate Court was not right in not entering into the question of limitation and in not deciding on the same. It is said in the second place, that in any event the defendants having taken possession of the lands from a trespasser under the bona fide belief that the said trespasser had right to these lands, were protected from eviction by reason of the principle of the decision in the Full Bench case of Binod Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik (1). The third ground which related to the question of plaintiffs' title to the suit lands was not ultimately pressed. It is now conceded on behalf of the appellants that the finding that a portion of the lands in suit (3 bighas 19 cottas 2 chattaks) belongs to plaintiffs' Mouza Garaki cannot be challenged in second appeal.

We have now to consider the two grounds which were urged by the learned Advocate for the appellants. With regard to the question of limitation the finding is that according to the defendants' own case they took settlement in the year 1316 corresponding to the English year 1909 and the suit was commenced in 1921 within twelve years of that date. Reliance has been placed with regard to this point on an entry in the Settlement record, which shows that in any event the defendants' lessor was in possession in 1314 corresponding to the English year 1911. That possession was also within twelve years of the suit. The lands are waste lands and if title has been found with the plaintiffs, possession in respect of these lands must be presumed to follow title and in the absence of any finding as to entry by some other persons on these lands beyond 12 years of suit no question of limitation can arise. There is no dispossession or discontinuance of possession, unless one person's possession terminates and is followed up by some body else's possession. It is not defendants' case that any body else was in possession beyond twelve years of suit and defendants' possession on their own case began in 1909/1316 within 12 years of suit. There is, therefore, no substance in the first ground urged.

With regard to the second ground taken,

(1) 20 C. 708; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 477 (F. B.).

the finding of the lower Appellate Court is, that the entry of the defendants was not in good faith as the lessor was not in actual possession of the lands. This circumstance distinguishes the present case from the Full Bench case of Binod Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik (1). As will appear from the judgment of Sir Comer Pethe-ram, C. J., in that case the persons from whom the tenants took the settlement were in actual possession of the zemindari within which the lands in dispute in that suit were situated and who were then the only persons who could give possession of the lands of the zemindari to the cultivators. One of the reasons of the decision in that case was that the tenants took settlement bona fide from the persons who were in actual possession of the lands, which were ultimately ascertained by judgment of a Court of Law not to belong to them. In this connection the decision in the case of Tepu Mahammad v. Tefajit Mahammad (2) might be referred to where Richardson, J., in delivering judgment of the Court said as follows:—"Where a person has been in possession of particular estate or a particular portion of an estate as de facto landlord, it may be that raiyyats settled by him on the land would have a good answer to a suit for ejectment brought by the true owner, but to carry the principle laid down by the Full Bench to the extent to which it has been carried in this case is to go much too far" and again the learned Judge said:—"No case is made, therefore, for the application of the principle of the Full Bench decision. That principle only applies where raiyyats are settled upon land by a person in de facto possession as landlord, who is afterwards found to have no title. It is not applicable to every boundary dispute or in every case where a question of parcel or no parcel arises." The question as to whether a settlement is bona fide or not depends on the circumstance as to whether the settlement was taken from a person who although was ultimately found to have no title, was at any rate in actual possession of the lands in suit. This distinguishes the present case from the Full Bench case. There is, therefore, no substance in the second ground urged. The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Rankin, C. J.—I agree.

A. N. A. Appeal dismissed.

(2) 29 Ind. Cas. 216; 19 C. W. N. N. 772.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 954 OF 1927.

December 7, 1927.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt.,

Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Bhide.

NARAINA SON OF BIR SINGH—ACCUSED—

APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 114, illus. (b), 133—
 Approver—Conviction based on uncorroborated testimony of approver, legality of—Corroboration required, nature of.

It is not an inflexible proposition of law that a conviction cannot be based upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, but it is the usual practice of the Courts to require corroboration of the story of the approver before declaring an accused person to be guilty of a crime. The amount or kind of corroboration required in a particular case must, however, depend upon the peculiar circumstances of that case. [p. 98, col. 1.]

Criminal appeal from an order of the Sessions Judge, Ludhiana, dated the 29th August, 1927.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. R. C. Soni, for the Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—On the 31st of March, 1927, the corpse of a human being was found in the Sirhind Canal, near the Dalla Bridge in the District of Ludhiana; and was subsequently identified to be the body of one Rakha, a Jat of the village of Sherpur Kalan situate in the Jagraon Tehsil of that District. The medical witness, who conducted the post mortem examination, found eleven incised wounds on various parts of the body, including an injury on the throat cutting the neck and the spinal cord. Two persons, namely, the victim's widow Musammatt Kishno and her alleged paramour Naraina were prosecuted for the murder, the former for having abetted the crime and the latter for having participated in the murder; but the learned Sessions Judge, while holding Naraina guilty of the murder, has acquitted Musammatt Kishno on the ground that the evidence on the record was not sufficient to bring the guilt home to her.

The facts of the case as disclosed by the approver Anokha may be shortly stated:—

The prisoner Naraina lived in a house adjacent to that occupied by the deceased Rakha and his wife Musammatt Kishno, and it appears that five or six months before the murder, which took place probably on the night of the 29th of March, 1927, Naraina had contracted an illicit intimacy with Musammatt Kishno. The paramour was anxious to abduct the woman and four or five days before the incident in question he disclosed the plan to the approver Anokha, with whom he was on terms of friendship, and sought his help for removing her garments from the house of her mother-in-law Musammatt Bhago. The approver acceded to the proposal, with the result that one night they entered the house of Musammatt Bhago stealthily and removed the garments from a box lying in that house. They then packed up the clothes in two bundles and hurled them in a field outside the village. Musammatt Kishno at that time told her paramour that her husband Rakha would kill her if he came to know that her clothes had been removed; and she suggested that Rakha should be got rid of. In pursuance of this suggestion Naraina arranged to decoy Rakha on the pretext that they should abduct a woman from the village of Malla in order to sell her and share the proceeds of the bargain. He also induced the approver to accompany them, and, when they had gone about eight or nine miles from the village on the night in question, both Naraina and Anokha attacked Rakha with a sword and takwa and killed him on the spot. The prisoner Naraina then absconded from the village, and it was not until the 15th of April, 1927, that he was arrested in another village called Lakha.

This, in brief, is the story related by the approver and there is ample evidence to prove the fact that the approver, at any rate, participated in the affair. The question, however, is whether his testimony is corroborated by independent evidence in so far as the complicity of the prisoner is concerned. Now, we have examined the evidence on the record and reached the conclusion that the following facts have been fully established:—

(1). Several witnesses state that Musammatt Kishno used to quarrel with her husband Rakha and the latter's mother Musammatt Bhago, and that the husband sometimes chastised the wife. The husband's uncle Mota Singh also deposes to the fact that Musammatt Kishno had contracted a liaison with Naraina. Moreover, we have the evidence of the investigating officer and other witnesses to the effect that it was Naraina

who on the 15th of April, 1927, produced the garments of the woman from a place near the Tarkhanwala well.

(2) The accused absconded from his village immediately after the commission of the crime and was not arrested until the 15th of April, 1927.

(3). The loin cloth, which he was wearing at the time of the arrest, bore a large number of blood stains, and the report of the Imperial Serologist shows that the garment was stained with human blood.

We have subjected the evidence of the approver to a careful scrutiny, and we are unable to discover any reason for holding that he has invented an entirely false story. The testimony of the approver, corroborated as it is by the existence of the motive for the crime and by other circumstances mentioned above, leaves no reasonable doubt, in our mind, that the appellant participated in the murder. It is nowhere laid down as an inflexible proposition of law that a conviction cannot be based upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice; but it is the usual practice of the Courts to require corroboration of the story of the approver before declaring an accused person to be guilty of a crime. The amount or kind of corroboration required in a particular case must, however, depend upon the peculiar circumstances of that case. Bearing these principles in mind we have examined the whole material before us and we are convinced that the prisoner's guilt has been satisfactorily established.

We accordingly uphold the conviction and in the absence of any extenuating circumstances we confirm the sentence of death imposed by the Sessions Judge and dismiss the appeal.

R. L.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 1348
OF 1927.

November 25, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Harrison.

SAUDAGAR—ACCUSED—PETITIONER
versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 498—Legal marriage, necessity of—Hindu Law—Marriage with maternal aunt, legality of—Chadar andazi, whether recognised by Hindu Law.

To sustain a conviction under s. 498 of the Penal Code it is necessary to establish that the marriage between the complainant and the enticed is a legally valid marriage.

An Arora Hindu cannot under Hindu Law contract a valid marriage with his maternal aunt.

Marriage by chadar andazi is not recognised by Hindu Law as a valid marriage.

Petition for revision of an order of the District Magistrate, Montgomery, dated the 11th August, 1927, affirming that of the Magistrate, Second Class, Tahsil Okara, District Montgomery, dated the 27th of July, 1927.

Mr. J. L. Kapur for Mr. R. C. Soni, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Jamna Das, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Saudagar has been convicted under s. 498 of enticing and retaining Musammat Jawali, who is said to be the wife of one Sawan Ram. The question raised on revision is that the parties being Aroras no valid marriage could have taken place by chadar andazi or any other form of ceremony between this man Sawan Ram and Jawali. The relationship is that Sawan Ram is the sister's son of the deceased husband of Musammat Jawali. There is evidence of two witnesses to the effect that such a marriage is valid, one a Muhammadan and the other a Brahmin, who stated in the widest possible terms that Hindus can marry their maternal aunts a proposition which is not supported by Counsel for the complainant. The position, therefore, is that if the parties are governed by Hindu Law, and the presumption is that Aroras are so governed, the marriage was no marriage. Further if it was performed at all it was performed by the chadar andazi ceremony, which I understand from both sides is not recognised by the strict Hindu Law. The only possibility, therefore, is that, although Aroras as a whole are governed by Hindu Law, the members of the particular family are governed by the agricultural custom of the people amongst whom they live, a fact which would only be established by clear and convincing evidence. There is none. The case must, therefore, fail as the first essential has not been proved. I accept the application for revision and acquit the accused.

R. L.

Application accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 1013 OF 1927.

December 15, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway and Mr. Justice Tek Chand.

MUHAMMAD SULTAN—ACCUSED—

APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 302—Brutal murder—Youth of accused, whether ground for lesser penalty.

When the murder committed is of a very brutal nature, the mere youth of the accused is no ground for imposing the lesser penalty of transportation. [p. 100, col. 1.]

Criminal appeal from an order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Lahore, dated the 5th September, 1927.

Messrs. Byrne and Noor Din, for the Appellant.

The Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Muhammad Sultan, a Kashmiri youth aged 18, has been sentenced to death for the murder of Musammât Sakina and her husband Munshi. He has appealed and the case is also before us under s. 374 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

The facts are detailed in the judgment of the learned Additional Sessions Judge and need not be recapitulated here. Briefly, the case for the prosecution is that Muhammad Sultan was carrying on an intrigue with Musammât Sakina. Munshi, the husband of Musammât Sakina, had rented a Katri in the city and had sub-rented various rooms in it to tenants; Muhammad Sultan was one of those sub-tenants. On the 14th of May, 1927, an altercation took place between Musammât Sakina and the appellant. Munshi at this time was not at home. According to the evidence for the prosecution the altercation arose out of the fact that some of the tenants had quarrelled amongst themselves and Musammât Sakina had told them all to vacate their various quarters. Muhammad Sultan asked if he was included in that order to vacate and was told that he was. The woman and the appellant abused each other, whereupon the appellant took Musammât Sakina into her house and chained the door from inside. He then proceeded to kill her. The medical evidence shows that she was very badly cut about, having no fewer than twenty-one separate cuts on her. Having killed Musammât Sakina Muhammad Sultan came out of the house and proceeded into the bazar. He there, apparently by chance, met Munshi who was returning with his bullocks and at once attacked him stabbing him with a clasp knife which he had in his hands and which he had already used on Musammât Sakina. Munshi went into the house of Khuda Yar, Jat, which was close by but was followed by his assailant and again stabbed. This attack on Munshi was witnessed by Lal Khan (P. W. No. 8) and S. Walayat Hussain (P. W. No. 9). Both these witnesses agree in saying that the assault on Munshi was wholly unprovoked and that Munshi on receiving the first injuries endeavoured to escape. Munshi's statement was recorded that evening at 6-15 P. M. by Muhammad Afzal, a Magistrate of the First Class. In this statement he related how he was attacked by Muhammad Sultan without any provocation and that he endeavoured to escape but was again attacked. The medical evidence shows that he had no fewer than seven incised wounds on him, three of these apparently were inflicted from behind.

The evidence leaves no room for doubt that Muhammad Sultan is responsible for the death of both Musammât Sakina and Munshi, and the learned Counsel who appears on his behalf frankly admitted that he cannot contest the fact that his client, the appellant, is responsible for the death of both Munshi and Musammât Sakina. He urges, however, that the assault on both these persons was made under such severe and grave provocation as entitles his client to being treated with a certain amount of leniency. The evidence as to the actual origin of the attack on Musammât Sakina is a little conflicting and it is not clear whether it was Muhammad Sultan who first abused Musammât Sakina, or whether it was Musammât Sakina who began abusing the appellant. We are not, however, told what the abuse actually was. On the other hand, the appellant made a statement before Mehdi Hussain, Magistrate First Class, at 6 P. M. on the 14th of May, 1927, the day of the occurrence. In that statement he alleged that he had been carrying on a liaison with Musammât Sakina for about a year and that that evening she had abused him and told him that she would expose him to her husband and get him murdered. This, he stated, enraged him and caused him to think that she would continue to live while he and her husband would have a fight which probably would result in his being hanged. Enraged at this thought he attacked her with a pen-knife. He goes on to say that later on her husband arrived at the house and attacked him with a pen-knife, whereupon he himself retaliated and thus Munshi came to be killed.

There is no doubt that the story told by the appellant before Mehdi Hussain is not true in its entirety for there can be no doubt whatever that Munshi met with his death in the bazar and not at his house. I am unable to see any provocation or excuse for the attack on Musammât Sakina as far as the record is concerned and certainly there was no justification or excuse for the assault on Munshi which took place in the bazar.

It was next contended that the death penalty should not be imposed on the appellant because he is eighteen years of age. Having regard to the brutal nature of the attack on these two unfortunate victims I am unable to see that the youth of the appellant by itself is any ground for imposing the lesser penalty. In this connection I would refer to Criminal Appeal No. 954 of 1926, a case decided by Fforde and Addison, JJ., on the 15th of December, 1926. In that case the only reason why the sentence of death had not been passed by the Sessions Judge was that the culprit was 19 or 20 years of age. The Crown prayed for enhancement of sentence and the sentence was enhanced. Fforde, J., said as follows:—

"As I have already stated the learned Sessions Judge has given as his reason for not imposing the death penalty the fact that the appellant is 19 or 20 years of age. In my opinion that reason is wholly inadequate. The murder in the present case was a particularly ruthless and brutal crime. There are no extenuating circumstances whatsoever, and the mere fact that the murderer is 19 or 20 years of age, in my opinion is a wholly insufficient reason for not imposing the appropriate sentence provided by law."

Similarly I am unable to see any extenuating circumstances in this case, and I would, therefore, dismiss this appeal and confirm the sentence of death.

Tek Chand, J.—I agree.

R. L.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 631 OF 1927.

November 18, 1927.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice.
Mian TAJ MAHMUD—ACCUSED—

APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 191—Perjury—Statement not shown to be intentionally false—Deposition not read over to witness—Conviction for perjury, legality of—Deposition of witness, whether should be signed by all the Presiding Officers—Contradictory statements—Prosecution in respect of later statement alone, maintainability of—Defence of India Act (IV of 1915), s. 5—Duty of Commissioner to read over deposition of witness—Criminal trial—Duty of Magistrates—Private conference with Prosecuting Officer—Invoking intervention of superior Executive Officers—Putting accused to inconvenience—Improper conduct—Prosecution—Omission to examine material witness—Inference.

In order to sustain an indictment for perjury the prosecution must establish, inter alia, two things: (1) that the statement was false, and (2) that it was known or believed to be false or not believed to be true; in other words, the statement must be intentionally false. [p. 102, col. 1.]

A person who has made two contradictory statements cannot be convicted for perjury on that ground unless it is clearly proved that the two statements are wholly irreconcilable. [p. 101, col. 1.]

The mere fact that a person had on a previous occasion made an inconsistent statement does not necessarily prove that the previous statement was true and that the latter statement is false, and does not, therefore, afford a basis, in itself for a conviction of perjury in respect of the latter statement. [p. 103, col. 2.]

A deposition which is not read over to the witness in accordance with the requirements of the law under which it was taken cannot be used against him on a charge of perjury. [p. 103, col. 1.]

Where a Court is composed of more than one Judge the deposition of a witness need not necessarily be signed by all the Judges of the Court before whom the witness is examined and the fact that it is signed by only one of them alone does not vitiate the deposition. The object of requiring the Presiding Officer of the Court to sign the deposition of the witness examined by him is to ensure the accuracy of the record and it cannot reasonably be urged that that object can be achieved only if all the Judges composing the Court sign the record. [p. 102, col. 2.]

The fact that Commissioners trying a case under the Defence of India Act are authorised to make a memorandum only of the evidence of witnesses examined by them, does not relieve them from their duty to have the depositions read over to the witnesses as required by s. 360, Criminal Procedure Code. [p. 103, col. 1.]

It is an elementary principle of justice that a person cannot simultaneously perform the functions of a prosecutor and those of a Judge in a criminal case. A Magistrate ceases to be an Executive Officer when he is sitting in a Court to try a criminal case. [p. 104, col. 2.]

A District Magistrate as such is directly subordinate to the High Court and he cannot be allowed to invoke the intervention of his superior Executive Officers in a matter concerning the discharge of his judicial duties for which he owes responsibility only to the High Court. [ibid]

It is improper on the part of a Judicial Officer to hold private conferences with the Prosecuting Officers in respect of a criminal case upon which he has to adjudicate. [p. 106, col. 1.]

One of the most important duties of a Court of Law is to create and maintain confidence in the administration of justice and to conduct itself in such a manner as to produce in the minds of the parties an impression that nothing but absolute justice would be done to them. [p. 107, col. 1.]

Failure of the prosecution to examine a material witness justifies an inference that the witness if examined would have deposed against the prosecution. [p. 102, col. 2.]

Criminal appeal from an order of the District Magistrate, Shahpur District at Sargodha, dated the 6th June, 1927.

Dr. Sir Mian Mohammed Shafi, Kt., Messrs. Brij Lal Puri, Mukand Lal Puri and Abdul Ghani, for the Appellants.

Mr. J. K. Mackey, for the Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant, Mian Taj Mahmud, has been found guilty of having committed perjury in a judicial proceeding and has been sentenced under s. 193, Indian Penal Code, to suffer rigorous imprisonment for seven years and to pay a fine of Rs. 5,000.

The prosecution arose out of a transaction which took place more than nine years ago, and in order to appreciate the questions of law and facts upon which I have to pronounce my opinion it is necessary to give a short sketch of the various events which have a bearing upon the case for the prosecution. On the 28th July, 1918, Sayed Nadir Hussain Shah, the Tehsildar of Bhalwal in the Shahpur District, visited the village of Bekh Lurke in the south of the Tehsil to enlist recruits for the army. He was accompanied by the appellant Taj Mahmud, a zaildar of another village called Mela and several other persons and was received at the village boundary by the lambardar and the zaildar and other inhabitants of the village. The Tehsildar went to the village daira and partook of some refreshment. Shortly afterwards, a large number of villagers who were evidently dissatisfied with the method adopted by the Tehsildar in his campaign of recruiting, came armed with bludgeons and hatchets and attacked him and his companions with the weapons. The Tehsildar sustained severe wounds to which he succumbed on the spot. Of his companions Taj Mahmud received a large number of injuries including compound fractures of the bones of an arm and escaped death by concealing himself in a mosque. From this place of safety he did not emerge until after the arrival of the Police.

It appears that as a result of the panic which ensued practically the whole of the village was deserted but the few persons who could be found were asked to appear before a Magistrate, Khan Ahmed Hassan Khan, who recorded their statements. The appellant Taj Mahmud also was examined by the Magistrate first on the 28th July, 1918, and again on the 5th August, 1918, and the latter statement has been relied upon by the prosecution in support of the charge of perjury.

A few months after the tragedy, 30 persons who were arrested for complicity in the murder were tried by a Tribunal of three Commissioners constituted under the Defence of India Act, IV. of 1915, and Taj Mahmud was one of the witnesses examined by the Tribunal on behalf of the prosecution. Deposition of Taj Mahmud was recorded on the 7th and 9th of December, 1918, and this deposition has been produced as an exhibit in the present case.

The Tribunal decided the case in January, 1919, but there are still some persons who are alleged to have participated in the assault on the Tehsildar and could not be tried at that time as they were fugitives from justice. These men were arrested several years afterwards and the question of their guilt depended upon their identification by certain persons who claimed to be the eye-witnesses of the assault on the Tehsildar. In the course of the enquiry held by a Magistrate into the case against certain accused persons, Taj Mahmud was produced as a witness for the Crown on the 16th May, 1925, and it is the statement made by him on that day that is alleged to be false.

The portion of the statement which forms the subject of the indictment, is to the effect that he could not identify three accused, namely, Jallu, Amir and Salehon and that he could not say that he had known them before. Now a perusal of s. 191, Indian Penal Code, which defines the offence of 'giving false evidence' shows that in order to sustain an indictment for perjury the prosecution must establish, inter alia, two things: (1) that the statement was false, (2) that it was known or believed to be false or not believed to be true. In other words, the statement must be intentionally false.

Let us now examine the evidence in order to see whether these requirements of the law have been fulfilled in the present case. It must be remembered that we are not dealing here with a case where a person makes contradictory statements and is charged, in the alternative, with giving false evidence on one or other of the two occasions. The appellant was charged with having given false evidence on the 16th May, 1925, and it was only this specific charge that he was required to meet.

It may be stated at the outset that there is no oral evidence to prove the falsity of the statement and the case for the prosecution depends entirely on the depositions made by the prisoner before the Commissioners in December, 1918, and before the Magistrate in August, 1918. It is, however, contended on his behalf that the deposition before the Commissioners is inadmissible in evidence, as it was signed by only one Commissioner and not by all the Commissioners. The learned Counsel for the appellant is unable to cite any authority in support of his contention and I am not prepared to subscribe to the doctrine that where a Court is composed of more than one Judge the deposition of a witness must necessarily be signed by all the Judges of the Court before whom the witness is examined and that if it is signed by only one of them that irregularity alone vitiates the deposition. The object of requiring the Presiding Officer of the Court to sign the deposition of the witness examined by him is to ensure the accuracy of the record and it cannot reasonably be urged that that object can be achieved only if all the Judges composing the Court sign the record.

While I cannot accede to the contention that the mere circumstance that the deposition was signed by only one of the three Commissioners renders it inadmissible in evidence, I observe that the deposition was not even read over to the witness, and that defect cannot, in my opinion, be overruled. It is clear that the statement alleged to have been made by the prisoner before the Commissioners does not bear a certificate that it was read over to him and there is no oral evidence to show that it was in fact read over to the deponent. Mr. Justice Jai Lal, who was a member of the Tribunal, does not remember whether the evidence was read over to Taj Mahmud; and Nafis-ud-Din who acted as the Reader to the Tribunal is clear that he was never asked to read the statements over to the witnesses examined by the Tribunal and he adds that they were not read over to the witnesses, otherwise there would have been the usual certificates to that effect. It is significant that though the Ahlmed of the Tribunal was examined as a witness for the prosecution he was not examined at the trial and this failure to examine a material witness justifies the inference that the evidence if examined would have deposed against the prosecution.

I need not, however, dilate upon this subject because it is neither found by the trial Magistrate nor suggested by the learned Counsel for the Crown that the record of the deposition was read over to the appellant. What is urged before me is that the Commissioners were required only to make a memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness examined by them and that they were under no obligation to read the depositions over to the witnesses. Now the fifth section of the Defence of India Act enacts that subject to any rules made by the Local Government, the Commissioners in trying the accused persons shall follow the procedure prescribed by the Code of Criminal Procedure for the trial of warrant cases by Magistrates and s. 360 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which governs the trial of warrant cases, prescribes in clear terms that as the evidence of each witness is completed it shall be read over to him. This section was prima facie applicable to the proceedings before the Commissioners and my attention has not been invited to any rule which dispensed with the requirement of the law enacted by the section. Nor do I think that the provision authorising the Commissioners to make only a memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness, can be viewed as containing, by implication a repeal of the important and salutary rule prescribed by s. 360. The rule was enacted in order to ensure accuracy in recording the evidence given by a witness and to give him an opportunity to correct any mistake made by the writer thereof.

There is ample authority in support of the proposition that when a deposition is not read over to the witness in accordance with the requirements of the law under which it was taken, it cannot be used against him on a charge of perjury, vide. inter alia, Empress v. Mayadeb Gossami (1), Emperor v. Jogendra Nath Ghose (2), Mohendra Nath Misser v. Emperor (3), Kamatchinathan Chetty v. Emperor (4) and Kartar Singh v. Emperor (5).

If the statement made by the prisoner before the Commissioners is excluded and I think that it must be excluded, from consideration, the question for determination is whether there is any other material on the record to show that the evidence given by him on the 16th May, 1925, was intentionally false. In this connection reliance is placed by the prosecution upon the deposition made by the prisoner on the 5th August, 1918, implicating Jallu, Amir and Salehon among others in the murder of the Tehsildar and alleging that he was previously acquainted with them. I have already pointed out that this is not a case of alternative charges in respect of two contradictory statements so that it may be argued that one of the two statements must be false and that it is not necessary to prove which of them is false. The assignation of perjury in this case is founded on the falsity of the evidence given by the appellant on the 16th May, 1925, and it is the duty of the prosecution to establish that charge. The mere fact that he had on a previous occasion made an inconsistent statement does not necessarily prove that the previous statement was true and that the latter statement is false. It is to be observed that the earliest statement made by Taj Mahmud was on the 28th July, 1918, shortly after the assault on the Tehsildar and that on that occasion he did not mention the names of Jallu, Amir and Salehon but merely stated that he would be able to identify the assailants. With respect to the statement made on the 5th August, 1918, the Magistrate who recorded it deposes that Taj Mahmud when making that statement referred two or three times to a paper which he was holding in his hand and it is contended that it was that paper which contained the names of Amir, Jallu and Salehon. There can be little doubt that Taj Mahmud had sustained very severe wounds on the 28th July and considering that he was practically a stranger to the inhabitants of the village there is nothing improbable in the suggestion that he was not previously acquainted with the offenders and that on the 5th August he read out their names from a piece of paper which had been given to him by the Police or by some other person interested in the prosecution.

Be that as it may, there is nothing to choose between the deposition of the 5th August, 1918, and that recorded on the 15th May, 1925, and there is not a scintilla of evidence to warrant the conclusion that the former was true and the latter false.

The discussion so far has proceeded upon the assumption that the two depositions contradicted each other. It has, however, been repeatedly pointed out that in order

(1) 6 C. 762; 8 C. L. R. 292; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 494.

(2) 24 Ind. Cas. 571, 42 C. 210; 18 C. W. N. 1242; 15 Cr. L. J. 483.

(3) 12 C. W. N. 845; 8 Cr. L. J. 116.

(4) 28 M. 308; 2 Cr. L. J. 756.

(5) 39 Ind. Cas. 847; 12 P. R. 1917 Cr.; 15 P. W. R. 1917 Cr.; 18 Cr. L. J. 607.

to establish the charge of perjury it is necessary to prove that the two statements are wholly irreconcilable. Is this fact satisfied in the present case? It is to be remembered that when Taj Mahmud gave evidence in 1925 he was deposing to a transaction nearly seven years old and that the absconder had in the meanwhile taken steps to disguise themselves by growing beards. In these circumstances he cannot be blamed if he failed to pick them out of a group of persons. Nor can it be held that he intentionally gave false evidence when he stated that he could not say that he had known them before. As observed already Taj Mahmud neither belonged to village Bekh Lurka nor had any official connection with it and it appears that he had visited it only once or twice before the murder of the Tehsildar. His acquaintance, if any, with the offenders must, therefore, be of a very casual character and if after the expiry of nearly seven years he expressed his inability to say definitely whether he was previously acquainted with them, he could not be deemed to have made a statement which he knew or believed to be false. There are cases in which a person might honestly or conscientiously swear to a particular fact from the best of his recollection and belief, and from other circumstances at a subsequent time he might be convinced that he was wrong and swear to the reverse, without meaning to swear falsely on either of the two occasions.

The learned District Magistrate appeared to be under the impression that proof of the falsity of the evidence is all that is required to bring the case within the purview of s. 193, Indian Penal Code; but the rule of law is perfectly clear that in order to establish a charge of perjury it is necessary to prove, not only that the prisoner made a statement which was false, but also that he knew or believed it to be false or did not believe it to be true.

The result of the above conclusion is that the evidence upon the record does not warrant the conclusion that the deposition made by Taj Mahmud on the 16th of May, 1925, was false, much less intentionally false.

Before concluding I cannot help remarking that the District Magistrate has not in the conduct of the trial maintained that freedom from bias which was incumbent upon him and has committed some characteristically unjudicial acts. The proceedings taken by him betray his ignorance of the elementary principles of justice that a person cannot simultaneously perform the functions of a prosecutor and those of a Judge in a criminal case. The Magistrate does not realise that he ceases to be an executive officer when he is sitting in Court to try a criminal case. Nor does he fully understand that as District Magistrate he is directly subordinate to this Court and that he cannot be allowed to invoke the intervention of his superior executive officers in a matter concerning the discharge of his judicial duties for which he owes responsibility only to the High Court.

The learned Counsel for the appellant has strongly animadverted upon the conduct of the trial by the Magistrate and has referred to various incidents in support of his contention that the Magistrate started with a bias against the accused and did not try the case in a fair and impartial manner. He has laid stress upon the fact that his client has repeatedly complained that the prosecution against him was instituted in pursuance of the instructions given by Mr. Macnabb, in his capacity as the Deputy Commissioner of the District. This complaint finds expression inter alia in an affidavit made by the accused in this Court on the 11th January, 1927, which in cl. (a) of para. (2) distinctly states that he along with certain other persons was being prosecuted under the instructions of the District Magistrate, and that the application under s. 476, Criminal Procedure Code, for filing a complaint of perjury was made in pursuance of the directions given by the latter to the Public Prosecutor. In accordance with the practice of this Court a copy of the affidavit was forwarded to the District Magistrate in order to give him an opportunity to submit his explanation with respect to this allegation and other allegations contained therein. The learned Magistrate instead of submitting directly to the High Court his explanation, stating in clear and unequivocal terms whether he admitted or denied the correctness of the allegations sought the intervention of the Commissioner by writing a letter to him from which the following extract may be transcribed here:—

"I have the honour to forward to you copies of letter No. 288-J, dated the 14th of January, 1927, from the Deputy Registrar of the High Court, Punjab, to my address together with copies of the enclosures.

"The observations which I have to make are legally of an official and confidential nature, and in view of ss. 123, 124 and 125 of the Evidence Act, I do not consider that it would be proper for me to make a reply direct to the High Court without previous reference to you. I am, therefore, sending my observations on these paragraphs and would suggest that they may be forwarded to Government for such actions as may be deemed advisable.

"I understand that consultations between a Magistrate and the Police, with regard to the conduct of a case are confidential and no Magistrate should be forced to disclose before any Court the details or results of his consultations."

Now I fail to understand how the District Magistrate expected the Commissioner or the Government to interfere in a matter which dealt purely with the question whether the Magistrate had taken such interest in initiating the criminal proceedings as to disqualify him to adjudicate upon the guilt or otherwise of the accused. It is obvious that the Magistrate was labouring under a misconception of the duty which he, as a Subordinate Judicial Officer, owed to the High Court and it appears that the Commissioner did not take the action suggested by the Magistrate and the latter then submitted a copy of his explanation to this Court. I cannot too strongly deprecate the attempt of the Magistrate to invoke the aid of the executive officers in trying to evade the duty of submitting to this Court his explanation in respect of the allegations made by an accused person against him. Nor do I see how ss. 123, 124 and 125 of the Indian Evidence Act have any bearing upon the question. Section 123 prohibits a witness from giving evidence, derived from unpublished official records relating to any affairs of state, without the permission of the head of the department concerned and s. 124 forbids the Court to compel a Public officer to disclose communications made to him in official confidence when he considers that public interests would suffer by the disclosure. Similarly s. 125 does not allow the Court to compel a Magistrate or a Police Officer to say whence he got any information as to commission of an offence. It appears that the sections were quoted by the District Magistrate in a haphazard manner without taking the trouble of understanding their meaning, and it is clear that none of them could be invoked for the purpose of avoiding to answer the simple question as to whether he had given instruction to the Public Prosecutor to take steps to prosecute the appellant for perjury. It is futile to suggest that there was in this case any privileged communication received by the Magistrate which he could not disclose. I need not pursue the subject any further for the learned Counsel for the Crown frankly admits that he cannot defend the conduct of the Magistrate in trying to shirk his duty to the High Court by writing to the Commissioner upon a matter with which the latter had no concern whatsoever.

Nor can the answers given by the Magistrate to the allegations contained in the affidavit be regarded as satisfactory or dispel the apprehension of prejudice in the conduct of the trial. One of these allegations was in the following terms:—

"That generally almost on each hearing consultations are held by the District Magistrate with the Public Prosecutor and Court Inspector before the hearing commences".

Now in his replies the District Magistrate does not deny this allegation but seeks to justify his conduct by saying that he sees "nothing objectionable in a Magistrate consulting the prosecution with regard to a case. Obviously he cannot do so in public since many of the matters, which the Police would have to communicate, are of the confidential nature".

In support of his action he also refers to the fact that he is a busy officer and "It is, therefore, necessary for him to see that his time is not wasted by the tendering of unnecessary evidence or the failure to produce a witness which is really required in a case on the first possible occasion. It was, therefore, in order to save time in the long run that I had to consult the Public Prosecutor and the Prosecuting Inspector with regard to the conduct of the case in order to expedite it as much as possible".

The practice of holding private consultations with the prosecuting agency before commencing the hearing, of the case was repeated on the 16th December 1926, and it is described in the affidavit in these terms: "That the climax was reached on the last hearing (16th December, 1926) when the District Magistrate came to the Court room, called the case and then went inside his retiring room, where he remained closeted with the Court Inspector and Sub-Inspector Sultan Ahmed, who had been investigating the Bekh Lurka case, for about an hour and a half. Khan Ahmed Hassan Khan, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Gujrat, who was the witness to be examined on that date was also summoned to the retiring room and some sort of consultation had with him."

Here again the private conference with the prosecuting officers is not denied by the Magistrate who seems to justify it by relying upon his "previous remarks about the general conduct of the case by the prosecution" and by pointing out that "I was not anxious to waste any unnecessary time on the case since I have many other duties to perform, but since the case was an important one and it had not been properly worked out by the prosecution it was my duty to see that it was properly worked out".

The learned Magistrate also admits that he asked the witness Khan Ahmed Hassan Khan to come into his retiring room but expresses his inability to remember "exactly what sort of consultation I had with the witness". He again cites ss. 123 to 125 of the Indian Evidence Act to claim privilege for the conversation he had with the witness, and explains that the principal subject of the conversation, so far as he could remember was water-logging in the Gujrat District.

It is a matter for surprise that a Judicial Officer occupying the position of a District Magistrate does not see impropriety of holding private conferences with the prosecuting officers in respect of a criminal case upon which he had to adjudicate. The practice followed by him offends against the elementary principles governing the administration of criminal justice, and the learned Counsel for the Crown had no alternative but to admit that it was indefensible. I trust that no Magistrate will ever be guilty of such improper conduct in the discharge of his judicial functions or forget the fundamental rule with its necessary implications that he is an impartial adjudicator between the prosecuting agency and the people.

I do not propose to deal with other instances of the unjudicial manner in which the Magistrate has acted in this case, beyond mentioning certain incidents which took place at the concluding stage of the trial and to which my attention has been specially invited. It appears that after framing the charge against the accused the District Magistrate declined to summon all the witnesses cited on his behalf and took upon himself the duty of arbitrarily selecting only a few witnesses who were to be summoned to give evidence for the defence. He then adjourned the case for hearing at a place called Kathwai. Now according to the affidavit filed by the accused in the High Court on the 19th May, 1927, this place "is unconnected by rail or by any vehicular traffic with the rest of the District. It is only possible to reach Kathwai on foot or on ponies."

The accused urged before the trial Court that apart from the convenience to him and his witnesses "it will be impossible for the petitioner to take any good Counsel to such a far away place which could only be reached by ponies, and that he (Magistrate) should be pleased to fix any place in the District which is a Railway Station".

It cannot be said that the request was an unreasonable one but the learned Magistrate took no notice of it. The accused thereupon moved this Court which passed on the 23rd May, 1927, an order directing the Magistrate to give every reasonable facility to the accused to produce his defence evidence and to hold the trial of the case either at the Head-Quarters of the District or at a place which is either a Railway Station or easily accessible from a Railway Station.

It appears that before the hearing of the case on the 6th June, 1927, the Magistrate had moved on to another place called Sodhi, and while Kathwai is 17 miles from the nearest Railway Station Sodhi is nine miles further on in the Salt Range. Before he commenced the hearing of the evidence on the 5th June a certified copy of the order of the High Court quoted above was placed before him, but he persisted in holding the trial at Sodhi and paid no heed to the request of the accused that the case should be heard at a place, where his Counsel from Lahore could appear without inconvenience. He then recorded the evidence of the witnesses present at that place and closed the case for the defence. In his judgment the District Magistrate explains that Sodhi is not an inaccessible part of the Salt Range, but this explanation is contradicted by the affidavit of the prisoner who describes in detail the difficulties of the journey from the Railway Station at Khushab to Kathwai and Sodhi.

In the absence of further information, it is difficult to decide which of these divergent versions is correct, but one thing is clear that Sodhi cannot be regarded as a place "easily accessible from a Railway Station" as contemplated by the order of this Court, and that the Magistrate should not have held the trial at such an out of the way place.

The learned Magistrate, not only closed the case for the defence on the 6th June, 1927, but even went so far as to call the accused and his Counsel in the middle of the night and pronounced judgment at 1 A. M., inflicting upon the convict the maximum term of imprisonment permissible under the law. He was then taken into custody and had to remain in Jail before he was admitted by the Appellate Court to bail. It is incontrovertible that one of the most important duties of a Court of Law is to create and maintain confidence in the administration of justice and to conduct itself in such a manner as to produce in the minds of the parties an impression that nothing but absolute justice would be done to them. The proceedings taken by the Magistrate show that he did not hear the case with that judicial detachment which should characterize the trial of a criminal case and that he allowed his executive zeal to outrun his judicial discretion.

For the reasons stated above I hold that the guilt of Taj Mahmud has not been established. I accordingly allow his appeal and setting aside the conviction and the sentence, I direct that he be released from his obligation under the bail-bond.

R. L.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 1186 OF 1927.

December 16, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway.

EMPEROR—PETITIONER.

versus

AKBAR—ACCUSED—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 562—Release of accused on probation in perjury case, propriety of.

It is not desirable to apply the provisions of s. 562 of the Criminal Procedure Code to a person found guilty of deliberately committing perjury to screen an offender.

Case reported by the District Magistrate, Attock at Campbellpur with his No. 3778-G., dated the 26th August, 1927.

Facts appear from the following report of the District Magistrate:—

REPORT.—The matter arose out of a case under s. 307, Indian Penal Code. One Hans Raj fired a pistol shot at the said Akbar at Ghurghushti in Police Station Hazro. The bullet hit him in the shoulder and remained in the body. Hans Raj was challaned under s. 307, Indian Penal Code. Akbar was produced as a witness by the prosecution and while on oath he told material lies in the Court to save Hans Raj. Some other witnesses did the same. Hans Raj was, however, convicted by Khan Abdul Majid Khan, M. B. E., Magistrate of the First Class exercising enhanced powers under s. 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the conviction was upheld in appeal. Complaints under s. 193, Indian Penal Code, were lodged against Akbar and one Jullundhur. Akbar was convicted and released on probation under s. 562, Criminal Procedure Code.

The infection of the prosecution witnesses going hostile particularly amongst the residents of Ohhachh (Police Station Hazro), is daily increasing. It is a well-known fact that in cases of perjury it is extremely difficult to obtain evidence sufficient to bring the guilt home to the perjurer. If the very few cases, in which prosecution succeeds in convincing a Judge, are also lightly dealt with merely because, as the Court has remarked, the convict had received a bullet wound and was probably seduced by interested people, there will be no end to the matters. The people should not be suffered to understand that a perjurer if convicted, which is very seldom, has still a chance of escape on probation. If the complainants themselves succumb to accused's allurements what is to be expected of the corroborating witnesses? This sentence has had a very bad effect on the witnesses in other cases. I, therefore, forward the record to their Lordships and recommend that the order of release on probation be set aside and a deterrent sentence inflicted on the convict.

ORDER.—Akbar has been found guilty of an offence under s. 193, Indian Penal Code and has been dealt with under s. 562, Criminal Procedure Code. The reason for this is that he was the complainant in the case against Hans Raj and had received a bullet wound. There is no doubt that he was won over by the defence in the case against Hans Raj and that he deliberately committed perjury intending to screen Hans Raj. In these circumstances I do not think the Magistrate was right in dealing with Akbar under s. 562, Criminal Procedure Code. Perjury is far too rife for any such leniency which I consider misplaced. Bearing in mind that he was shot I set aside the order under s. 562, Criminal Procedure Code, and sentence Akbar to rigorous imprisonment for one year.

R. L.

Revision allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.
CRIMINAL MISCELLANEOUS PETITION
No. 211 of 1927.
November 30, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Agha Haidar.

MASHAR KHAN AND ANOTHER

—ACCUSED—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Counsel—Affidavit by Counsel, propriety of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 526—Grounds for transfer.

According to the well-recognised practice which prevails wherever members of the English Bar practise, a Counsel should never file an affidavit in a case in which he is appearing professionally. It not only hampers his freedom of action as an Advocate but he thereby gives up his dignified position of detachment as an Advocate and lowers himself to the level of either a pairōkar or a witness who has to support the case of a particular party by giving evidence on his behalf. [p. 108, col. 2.]

Applications for transfer cannot be lightly granted where they are based on fanciful and sentimental grounds or are supported by false affidavits. [p. 109, col. 1.]

Petition under s. 526, Criminal Procedure Code, for transfer of a case from the Court of the District Magistrate, Kangra at Dharamsala, to some other Court in another District.

Mr. Shah Nawaz, for the Petitioners.

Diwan Ram Lal, Assistant Legal Remembrancer, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—This is an application for transfer. It came before me on the 14th of October, 1927, and I issued notice on it. I further directed that copies of the application and the affidavit should be sent to the District Magistrate, Kangra at Dharamsala, Mr. Labhu Ram and also to Mr. Kanwar Bhan and Mr. Disney, Magistrates in the same District. These officers were directed to submit such explanation as they might think necessary. These explanations came up before me on the 11th of November, 1927. On this date a very unusual document was filed before me by Chaudhri Shuja-ud-Din, Bar-at-Law Dharamsala, Counsel for the applicants. This is an affidavit in connection with the application for transfer and the declarant Chaudhri Shuja-ud-Din has been appearing apparently as Counsel for the applicants. According to the well-recognised practice which prevails wherever members of the English Bar practise, the Counsel should never file an affidavit in a case in which he is appearing professionally. The reason is obvious. To begin with, it hampers his freedom of action as an Advocate. Besides, he gives up his dignified position of detachment as an Advocate and lowers himself to the level of either a pairōkar or a witness who has to support the case of a particular party by giving evidence on his behalf. Chaudhri Shuja-ud-Din has not exercised proper judgment as a Counsel and he has been, in any case, ill-advised in adopting the course that he did. As to the affidavit itself, it has got no evidentiary value as such because it is not such an affidavit at all which a Court of Justice can take into consideration. However, the so-called affidavit of Chaudhri Shuja-ud-Din was placed on the file by me on the 11th of November, 1927. Mr. B. H. Bevan Petman asked for further adjournment with the view of filing an additional affidavit or statement.

The case came up before me on the 25th November, 1927, and it was argued by Mr. Shah Nawaz for the best part of the day. In fact his arguments alone took about three hours. The Crown was represented by the Assistant Legal Remembrancer, Mr. Ram Lal, and naturally he took some time in replying to Mr. Shah Nawaz's arguments. Mr. Ram Lal placed on the record a document which purports to be a letter addressed by Mr. Labhu Ram, District Magistrate, Kangra, to the Government Advocate. I understand that a copy of that letter had also been given to Mr. Shah Nawaz, Counsel for the applicants. In any case no objection was taken to this document being placed on the record of the present case, and Mr. Shah Nawaz directed part of his arguments to this document. I regret to say that this document plainly and categorically contradicts the main allegations of Chaudhri Shuja-ud-Din's so-called affidavit. It is a very serious matter if either Chaudhri Shuja-ud-Din's statement is incorrect or the District Magistrate's explanation is erroneous. However, I am satisfied on the explanation submitted by the District Magistrate and Mr. Kanwar Bhan and Mr. Disney that the present application is without force. I do not think that the District Magistrate has conducted himself at any stage in such a way as to create an impression upon the mind of an accused person that the Magistrate was prejudiced against him and that he would not have a fair and impartial trial in his Court. It is true that there has been some bungling during the course of the trial of this case and proceedings have been inordinately protracted, but for this result I find from an order of Mr. Labhu Ram dated the 15th of September, 1927, that the applicants are mainly responsible.

At the request of Mr. Shah Nawaz at the last hearing I ordered Mr. Abdul Rab, Additional District Magistrate, Kangra, to give his explanation also in case he thought fit to do so. He has done so. It appears from that explanation that there is some feeling among a certain section of the people in the district which on one occasion, at any rate, took the form of a demonstration which ended in a riot. But for this side issue the District Magistrate, who is trying the case, cannot be held responsible. Furthermore, I do not think that the feeling is of such volume and intensity as to create an atmosphere in the whole District so inimical to the applicants that the trial of the case against them would in any way be affected.

Applications for transfer cannot be granted lightly on fanciful and sentimental grounds, and I may also mention that it is not my practice, as a rule, to grant such applications when they are supported by false affidavits. I find, I am sorry to say, that the affidavits filed on behalf of the applicants are such that I cannot take any action upon them. I am sure the District Magistrate would try this case with all expedition and would show all fairness and impartiality to the accused persons which is expected of him.

With these observations I reject this application for transfer.

R. L.

Application rejected.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 320
OF 1927.

November 17, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.
YUSUF AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—PETITIONERS.
versus

MUSA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, Sch. I, para. 15—Order setting aside award, appealability of—Interference with such order in appeal—Revision.

An order setting aside an award, is not open to appeal and where a Court interferes with such an order in appeal it acts without jurisdiction and its decision is liable to be set aside in revision.

Ram Jawaya Mal v. Devi Ditta Mal (1), followed.

Petition, under s. 44 of the Punjab Courts Act of 1918 as amended, for revision of the order of the Additional District Judge, Lahore, dated the 16th February, 1927, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Chunian, District Lahore, dated the 11th December, 1926.

Mr. Hukam Chand Bhasin, for the Petitioners.

JUDGMENT.—The trial Court having set aside the award, the plaintiff appealed against the order and the Additional District Judge of Lahore accepted the appeal and made the award the rule of the Court. The defendants have made an application to this Court in revision urging, inter alia, that the order rejecting the award was not appealable. No body appears to oppose this application and the objection raised appears to be well founded [see Ram Jawaya Mal v. Devi Ditta Mal (1)]. The order of the Additional District Judge was, therefore, ultra vires and without jurisdiction. I, therefore, set it aside and restore that of the trial Court. No order as to costs.

R. L.

Revision allowed.

(1) 34 Ind. Cas. 192; 117 P. R. 1916; 107 P. W. R. 1916; 70 P. L. R. 1917.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2801 OF 1926.

June 6, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Addison.

WAZIR CHAND—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

KARAM CHAND AND ANOTHER

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Fraud—Party to fraud, competency of, to plead fraud—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11, Expl. (iv)—Res judicata—Matter which ought to have been set up as ground of attack, meaning of.

A defendant is not precluded from pleading the joint fraud of himself and the plaintiff and showing the real nature of a transaction though the object of fraud has been accomplished. [p. 112, col. 1.]

[Case-law discussed.]

It cannot be said of any matter that it ought to have been set up as a ground of attack in a former suit, if its introduction would have been incongruous. [p. 112, col. 2.]

A executed a mortgage to B to defraud his creditor C. B instituted a suit against A and C under O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code, in which it was held that B's mortgage was for consideration and valid. B then sued to enforce the mortgage against A. The latter pleaded that the mortgage was fraudulent and not supported by consideration:

Held, (1) that A could set up the plea that the mortgage was fraudulent even though the fraud had been accomplished; [p. 112, col. 1.]

(2) that the decision in the prior suit that the mortgage was valid and supported by consideration did not operate as res judicata. [p. 112, col. 2.]

Vilayat Hussain v. Misran (7), Raghupati Chatterjee v. Nrishingha Hori Das (8) and Jiwan Singh v. Jora (9), followed.

Sidlingappa v. Harisa (1), Nahanna Pachhasaheb v. Sabinibibi (2), Voddina Kamayya v. Gudisa Mamayya (3), Parthasarathy Reddiar v. Kandaswami Mudaliar (4), Pachayammal v. Devanaimmal (5) and Sarup Narain v. Madho Singh (6), not followed.

Second appeal from the decree of the Court of the Additional District Judge, Gujranwala at Sialkot, dated the 10th August, 1926, reversing that of the Sub-Judge, Second Class, Gujrat, dated the 22nd January, 1926.

Mr. Shambu Lal Puri for Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the Appellant.

Mr. Mehr Chand Mahajan, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The Firm Baldev Das-Sunder Lal had a money decree against Karam Chand, defendant No. 1 and applied on the 17th February, 1906, for attachment of his one-third share of a house. The attachment was effected either on the 18th or 19th February, 1906. One Beli Ram preferred objections on the 20th February, 1906, on the ground that the property had been mortgaged with possession to him by Karam Chand for Rs. 1,000 on the 19th February, 1906, and that his rights as mortgagee should be recognised. These objections were dismissed on the 5th May, 1906. Beli Ram waited nearly a full year and then instituted a suit under O. XXI, r. 63, Code of Civil Procedure, on the 3rd May, 1907, for a declaration that the property was mortgaged to him with possession for Rs. 1,000 and that its attachment and sale in execution of the decree in question was of no effect against his mortgage rights. He impleaded Karam Chand as well as the decree-holder. The judgment-debtor Karam Chand, however, did not take part either in the objection proceedings or in the suit. It was held in the suit that the attachment took place on the 19th February, i. e., on the date of the mortgage, and that it was valid as it was for consideration and was executed in good faith. The mortgagee's suit was accordingly decreed on the 3rd February, 1911.

The present suit has been brought by Wazir Chand, brother of Beli Ram, the mortgagee, for sale of the mortgaged property on the allegation that the mortgage-deed in question fell to his share on partition with his brother. Beli Ram has added as a defendant, but did not appear. Karam Chand, defendant No. 1, pleaded that the property was still in his possession, that there was no consideration for the mortgage, which was fraudulently entered into to defeat the rights of the decree-holders already referred to, and that his personal liability could not be enforced owing to the suit having been instituted after six years from the date of the mortgage. The lower Appellate Court has held (1) that the mortgage-deed was without consideration and was fraudulently entered into to defraud the decree-holders, Baldev Das-Sunder Lal, an object which was accomplished, (2) that Karam Chand, defendant No. 1, could be allowed to plead his own fraud so as to defeat the fraudulent claim of the plaintiff, and (3) that the question of validity of the mortgage was not res judicata by reason of the decision in the suit, instituted by Beli Ram on the 3rd May, 1907. The suit was, therefore, dismissed and the plaintiff had preferred this second appeal.

It was argued that the decision of the learned Additional District Judge, on the first of the three points stated above could not stand as he ignored the fact that Karam Chand admitted in an abortive insolvency application the factum of the mortgage in question. But the Additional District Judge had this circumstance clearly before him and mentioned it in his judgment. His finding was based on ample and appropriate evidence and is one of fact, which cannot be attacked in second appeal. That means that the finding must stand, that the mortgage-deed was without consideration and fraudulently entered into, in order to defend the decree-holders, Baldev Das-Sunder Lal, by Beli Ram and Karam Chand. The mortgagor has remained in possession throughout.

It was also contended that Karam Chand could not be allowed to plead his own fraud, even though Beli Ram was equally in fault with him, that the mortgage must be taken at its face value, i. e., that the estate must be allowed to lie where it falls: and that that party must fail who has first to raise and plead the fraud in which he participated, that is, allegans suam turpitudinem non est audiendus. As against this it was urged that, where both parties are equally in fault, the fraud, even though accomplished, could be pleaded by the defendant on the principle in pari delicto, potior est conditio possidentis. The view taken by the Bombay High Court in Sidlingappa v. Harisa (1) and Nahanna Pachhasaheb v. Sabinibibi (2) is in favour of the appellant. The former of these rulings is indistinguishable from this case, except that there was a benami or fraudulent sale in it, instead of a fraudulent mortgage as here, the object in both cases being accomplished. It was admitted in the Bombay case that there was authority both ways but the better way was held to be (1) that allegans suam turpitudinem non est audiendus and (2) that true effect was given to the maxim "let the estate lie where it falls" by not allowing the plaintiff's apparent title to be displaced. The Madras High Court has taken the same view in Voddina Kamayya v. Gudisa Mamagya (3), Parthasarathy

Reddiar v. Kandaswami Mudaliar (4) and Pachayammal v. Davanaimmal (5). It was held in these rulings that that party must fail who first has to allege the fraud in which he participated and that where it is necessary for a party who wishes to establish a certain state of things to set up his own wrong he will not be allowed to do so. A similar view was taken in Sarup Narain v. Madho Singh (6) by a Single Judge of the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court. In that case Sidlingappa v. Harisa (1) was followed.

The Allahabad High Court has taken a contrary view in Vilayat Hussain v. Misran (7) which dissented from Sidlingappa v. Harisa (1) and laid down that in circumstances like those in the present case the particular of the fraud may be pleaded by the defendant, that it was the duty of the Courts not to assist either party where there was no difference in the degree of the suit of the plaintiff and that of the defendant. The principle relied upon was in pari delicto, potior est conditio possidentis. A Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court, one of the members of which was Mr. Justice Mukerjee, independently came to the same conclusion in Raghupati Chatterjee v. Nrishingha Hori Das (8). It was, therefore, laid down that the balance of authority in cases like the present is in favour of permitting the defendant to set up the true transaction and that the maxim allegans suam turpitudinem non est audiendus gives way to the maxim in pari delicto, potior est conditio possidentis.

In Jiwan Singh v. Jora (9) a Judge sitting alone held that a defendant was not precluded from pleading the joint fraud of himself and the plaintiff, and showing the real nature of the transaction though the object of the fraud had been accomplished.

(4) 73 Ind. Cas. 954; 32 M. L. T. 349; (1923) M. W. N. 423; 18 L. W. 156; 45 M. L. J. 161; A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 711.

(5) 91 Ind. Cas. 776; 22 L. W. 313; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1016.

(6) 30 Ind. Cas. 253; 2 O. L. J. 399; 18 O. C. 131.

(7) 72 Ind. Cas. 92; 45 A. 396; 21 A. L. J. 303; A. I. R. 1923 All. 504.

(8) 71 Ind. Cas. 1; 36 O. L. J. 491; A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 90.

(9) 25 P. R. 1905; 65 P. L. R. 1905.

(1) 31 B. 405; 9 Bom. L. R. 542.

(2) 12 Ind. Cas. 583; 37 B. 217; 13 Bom. L. R. 1011.

(3) 43 Ind. Cas. 352; 32 M. L. J. 484.

In Nand Lal v. Jethu Mal (10) a Division Bench held in a case similar to Sidlingappa v. Harisa (1) which was not approved, that the maxim allegans suam turpitudinem non est audiendus must give way to the maxim in pari delicto etc. In Kerr on Fraud & Mistakes, 5th Edition, page 462, it is said: "It is a general rule that a Court of Justice will not interfere actively in favour of a man who is particeps criminis in fraudulent transactions. The Court will take objection as to the illegality of the transaction even though the defendant does it. Where both parties are equally offenders against the law the maxim potior est conditio possidentis prevails." Again in Broom's Legal Maxims, 9th Edition, page 465, the matter is concisely summarised as follows:—

"Not only in æquali jure, but likewise in pari delicto, is it true that potior est conditio possidentis; where each party is equally in fault, the law favours him who is actually in possession... 'If', said Buller, J., 'a party come into a Court of Justice to enforce an illegal contract, two answers may be given to his demand; the one, that he must draw Justice from a pure fountain, and the other, that potior est conditio possidentis'".

In this state of the authorities I prefer to follow the view taken by this Court, and the Calcutta and Allahabad High Courts and to hold that the defendant can plead his own fraud in a case like the present.

There remains the questions of res judicata that is, whether the defendant can plead want of consideration and fraud. Seeing that he was a party to the suit instituted by the mortgagee against the decree-holder on the 3rd May, 1917, and was thus in a position to raise these questions then. This seems to me to beg the whole question. At that time the fraud was being carried out and the mortgagee was acting on behalf of the mortgagor and was trying to defeat the rights of the decree-holders so as to help the judgment-debtor. There was no contest then between the mortgagee and the judgment-debtor. Nor could there be any contest as the benamidar mortgagee was merely acting on behalf of the judgment-debtor. There, therefore, can be no question of these matters being res judicata. Even if it could be held that the judgment-debtor was a necessary party in the declaratory suit brought by the benamidar, for which there appears to be no authority, except an obiter dictum in Ghasi Ram v. Mangal Chand (11) that would make no difference as the benamidar was at that time engaged in helping the judgment-debtor against the decree-holder and there was no contest between the first two of these persons. The want of consideration could not be pleaded by the judgment-debtor in the first suit and Expl. (iv) to s. 11 of Civil Procedure Code cannot, therefore, apply. It is clear that it cannot be said of any matter that it ought to have been set up as a ground of attack in a former suit, if its introduction would have been incongruous to the matter of that suit. In fact, the judgment-debtor was only a nominal defendant in the first suit and the plaintiff represented his interests in it. The suit must be held to have been one against the decree-holder by the benamidar on behalf of the judgment-debtor and no question of res judicata arises.

For the reasons given I dismiss the appeal with costs.

R. L.

Appeal dismissed.

(11) 28 A. 41; A. W. N. (1905) 172; 2 A. L. J. 491;

(10) 33 Ind. Cas. 255; 21 P. R. 1916; 197 P. W. R. 1915.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE NAGPUR JUDICIAL
COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

December 6, 1927.

Present:—Viscount Sumner,
Lord Atkinson, Lord Sinha and
Sir John Wallis.

Seth MAGANMAL SINCE DECEASED AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

DARBARILAL CHOWDHRY—DEFENDANT.
—RESPONDENT.

Practice—Appellate Court—Weight attaching to findings of fact of trial Court which had not seen the witnesses—Burden of proof—Suit to enforce mortgage—Onus of proof of non-receipt of consideration—Party failing to produce his principal witness—Presumption—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Creditor obtaining guarantee from third party by stifling prosecution—Validity of guarantee.

Where in a case which entirely depends upon questions of fact, the Judge of the trial Court pronounces judgment merely upon the record of evidence made by his predecessor-in-office and has not had the benefit of seeing the witnesses give their evidence, and the Appellate Court, on the same evidence, comes to the opposite conclusion as to the facts, their Lordships of the Judicial Committee will not attach the same importance as they otherwise would to the findings of fact of the trial Court, and will be slow to disturb the judgment of the Appellate Court unless convinced that it is wrong. [p. 114, col. 2; p. 115, col. 1.]

In a suit to enforce a registered mortgage-bond, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant executed the mortgage in question after having received the consideration money in cash. The defendant admitted the execution of the mortgage but denied that he had received the consideration alleged and also that he owed any money to or had received any money from the plaintiff:

Held, that the onus lay heavily on the defendant to prove this defence which was admittedly inconsistent with his own admissions in writing. [p. 115, col. 1.]

Held, also, on the evidence, that the defendant had in this case discharged the onus which rested upon him. [p. 118, col. 2.]

Where a party failed to call as his witness the principal person involved in the transaction, who was in a position to give a first hand account of the matters in controversy and to throw light on them, and who could have refuted on oath the allegations of the other side, and the Appellate Court drew an inference adverse to the party who thus intentionally kept back his principal witness, their Lordships of the Privy Council considered that it was, under the circumstances, a legitimate inference to draw. [p. 117, col. 2; p. 118, col. 1.]

[The question whether a creditor can by stifling a prosecution for a non-compoundable offence obtain a valid guarantee for his debt from a third party, was left open by the Judicial Committee.] [p. 118, col. 2.]

Appeal from a judgment of the Court of the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court (Dhobley, A. J. O.), dated the 21st

December, 1921, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Damoh, dated the 17th November, 1919.

FACTS.—The suit was brought by the plaintiffs-appellants to enforce a mortgage, dated the 5th March, 1913, and executed by the defendant-respondent in their father's favour, and the main question for determination in the appeal to their Lordships was, whether the said mortgage was given for valuable consideration or whether it was given, as alleged by the defendant, without any valuable consideration but "for the purpose of compounding a non-compoundable offence committed by Gajadhar, brother of the defendant".

The material facts of the case are given in their Lordships' judgment.

The trial Court disbelieved the defence and found for the plaintiffs and made a decree in their favour, and from that decree the defendant appealed to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, Central Provinces.

The appeal was heard by Rao Bahadur Dhobley, Additional Judicial Commissioner. He came to the opposite conclusions, and held that the defendant was threatened with a prosecution of his brother for the offence of embezzlement which was not compoundable, and that the mortgage was, therefore, invalid and unenforceable. He accordingly allowed the defendant's appeal, and made a decree dismissing the plaintiffs' claim.

The learned Judicial Commissioner's judgment on the question of law involved was as follows:

"The next question is whether on these facts the defendant is liable on the mortgage in suit. On his behalf it is contended that the consideration for the mortgage was illegal, while it is urged for the plaintiffs that the defendant having accepted his brother's liability must satisfy it. The argument is that there was a civil liability on Gajadhar to make up the deficiency and that the defendant merely undertook that responsibility in consequence of which the plaintiffs released Gajadhar. That was said to be a good, valid and enforceable consideration. Whether Gajadhar was or was not guilty of the offence of criminal breach of trust, or whether he would have on being prosecuted, been convicted of the offence or not, is not very material. The fact is that he was threatened with a prosecution for that offence, which was not compoundable. The law on the subject is laid down in the case of Kishanlal v. Aman Singh (1) and it is to the effect that a mere adjustment by compromise of the private damage caused to a person by an offence, which leaves inviolate the public right to prosecute, is valid and enforceable in the Civil Court, but that every agreement to stifle a prosecution for a non-compoundable offence is based upon illegal consideration and is, therefore, void. In the present case though there was no express agreement made by Rai Saheb Sukhdeo not to prosecute Gajadhar, such agreement can be inferred from the threat that unless the defendant gave the mortgage bond, Gajadhar would be prosecuted. The defendant was not in any way liable to the plaintiffs and the consideration which prompted him to give the mortgage was to avoid Gajadhar's prosecution. As observed in Flower v. Sadler (2) there is a distinction between getting a security for a debt from the debtor himself and getting it from a third person who is under no obligation to the creditor. In the present case an agreement that there should be no prosecution must be implied. The defendant in giving the mortgage to the plaintiffs was actuated by the desire to prevent his brother's prosecution. The creditor cannot by stifling a prosecution obtain a guarantee for his debt from third parties: Kessowji Tulsidas v. Hurjivan Mulji (3). My opinion is that the mortgage bond in suit is unenforceable and that the plaintiffs cannot obtain any decree on it."

Mr. De Gruyther, K. C. (with him Mr. Pariksh) for the Appellants.—The mortgage suit is not illegal. Refer to s. 23, Indian Contract Act, 1872. Illustration (h) to the section deals with this class of cases.

The following cases on stifling a prosecution were cited :

Kessowji Tulsidas v. Hurjivan Mulji (3), Flower v. Sadler (2), Ward v. Lloyd (4) Kishanlal v. Aman Singh, (1) decided in the year 1911, Kishanlal v. Aman Singh (1).

Mr. Dube, for the Respondent.—The offence of criminal breach of trust is not compoundable.

[LORD SINHA.—If the books show falsification, that is proof of defalcation.]

(1) 16 Ind. Cas. 555; 8 N. L. R. 97.

(2) (1883) 10 Q. B. D. 572 at p. 576.

(3) 11 B. 556; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 373.

(4) (1843) 7 Scott. N. R. 499; 6 Man. & G. 785; 1 Dowl. & L. 763; 13 L. J. C. P. 5; 64 R. R. 847; 134 E. R. 1109.

[SIR JOHN WALLIS.—Is not compounding a felony an offence under the Penal Code?]

Yes, it is.

[LORD SUMNER.—In a case like this, where neither Court below has heard the witnesses, our duty is to try and unravel the truth.]

Mr. Dube cites Lal Kunwar v. Charanji Lal (5) and relies on the observations of Lord Atkinson there as regards the presumption to be made against a party who does not give evidence though he is the principal witness in the case. It is apparent that Rai Sahib Sukhdeo was a very important witness for the plaintiff. He was summoned to give evidence, but he evaded it.

[SIR JOHN WALLIS.—These people in India sometimes do not like going in the witness-box. I know a man, there proving his good character by saying that he has never been a witness in his life.]

JUDGMENT.

Lord Sinha.—This is an appeal from a judgment and decree of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces, which reversed a judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge of Damoh in a suit which was filed on the 11th December, 1916, in order to enforce a mortgage executed by the defendant on the 5th March, 1913.

The case has been tried under peculiarly unsatisfactory circumstances. The plaint was registered on the 2nd January, 1917. No written statement was filed, but only oral statements of the Pleders on both sides recorded, and issues were framed on these. The evidence was heard from time to time and at long intervals, and appears to have taken altogether a period of nearly three years. Judgment was pronounced by a Subordinate Judge who had not heard any of the witnesses except two, and even of these one had been partly examined by his predecessor-in-office. The result is that in a case which entirely depends upon questions of fact, neither of the Courts dealing with the case had the benefit of seeing the witnesses and had to appreciate the evidence recorded by another Judge. Under these circumstances their Lordships are unable to attach the same importance as they otherwise would to the findings of fact of the trial Court and it is necessary that they should feel convinced that the judgment of the Judicial Commissioner under appeal is wrong before they can advise that it should be set aside.

(5) 5 Ind. Cas. 549; 32 A. 104; 14 C. W. N. 285; 11 C. L. J. 172; 7 M. L. T. 57; (1910) M. W. N. 8; 12 Bom. L. R. 244; 20 M. L. J. 182; 37 I. A. 1 (P. O.).

The plaintiffs alleged that the defendant executed the mortgage in question after having received the sum of Rs. 7,000 in cash, and they prayed for the usual mortgage decree.

The defendant admitted the execution of the mortgage but denied that he had received the consideration alleged and also that he owed any money to or had received any money from the plaintiffs.

It is obvious that the onus of proving this defence lay on him, and lay heavily, seeing that it is inconsistent with his own admissions in writing hereafter referred to. It is necessary to scrutinise the defence story in detail and to see whether it is corroborated in every material part in such a way as to neutralise the effect of these admissions. For that purpose, such of the main facts as are not in dispute may be stated as follows:—

The plaintiffs have their principal shop at Damoh, which is called "Badi Dukan". Rai Seth Sukhdeo was its Munim. The plaintiffs had also a branch shop in the Mawganj quarter of that town, doing only grain business. It was usually called the "Adat shop." In that shop the defendant's brother, Gajadhar, was the managing partner without any share in the capital. In the paki rokad (fair cash book) of the Adat shop there are three debit entries in the handwriting of Gajadhar showing that the following sums had been advanced to the defendant on the dates mentioned against them:—

- | | |
|-----|-----------------------------------|
| Rs. | |
| (1) | 2,600, dated 13th February, 1913. |
| (2) | 3,400, dated 12th February, 1913. |
| (3) | 1,000, dated 17th February, 1913. |

Total 7,000

The sarkat or acknowledgment book of that shop contains acknowledgments of the defendant in his own handwriting purporting to have been written on these dates and admitting these loans.

The plaintiffs alleged that the defendant had borrowed from their Badi Dukan Rs. 7,000, and given the mortgage in suit in order to satisfy the debts due by him to the Adat shop as evidence by the above documents. What the defendant had to say with reference to these facts will be apparent from the following statement made for him by his Pleader on the 5th December, 1917:—

"A few days before the execution of the bond in suit, Gajadhar had gone to Jubbulpore in connection with the defendant's marriage. During his absence Rai Sahib Seth Sukhdeo found some money short in the Adat shop and wired to Gajadhar to come back. When Gajadhar came he was threatened by Rai Sahib Sukhdeo with prosecution and arrest for the alleged defalcation. As Rai Sahib Sukhdeo holds the position of an Honorary Magistrate and is an influential man, and as Gajadhar was the only person of the defendant's family to arrange for the marriage of the defendant, the defendant in order to avoid the threatened prosecution of his brother executed a sarkat for Rs. 7,000 in favour of Badi Dukan as required by Rai Sahib Sukhdeo. (The Judicial Commissioner states in his judgment that the words Badi Dukan appear to be a clerical mistake. It should have been Adat shop.) In order to give a colouring of truth Rai Sahib Sukhdeo coerced the defendant into showing in the sarkat that the amount of Rs. 7,000 was taken on three different dates. None of these items was taken as a loan. The amount of defalcation was said to be Rs. 7,000. By executing the sarkat the defendant avoided complications during his marriage. On return of the marriage party the said Munim again threatened the defendant that he would prosecute unless a mortgage deed for Rs. 7,000 was given, as there was no security for the sarkat debt. The defendant subsequently learnt that there was no shortage of money in the Adat shop. The bond is, therefore, void for want of consideration and also because it was executed under undue influence, coercion and for stifling prosecution for a non-compoundable offence."

This story is entirely denied by the plaintiffs, and it is their case that the three loans in February were actually advanced from the till of the Adat shop by Gajadhar to the defendant on the three different dates as shown in its books.

The real question, therefore, is whether the defendant had in fact borrowed from the Adat shop those three sums of money amounting to Rs. 7,000, for the satisfaction of which the mortgage is said to have been executed. The Judicial Commissioner considered that the mere fact of the actual payment before the Registering Officer or the ultimate removal of the money to the Badi Dukan did not affect the question as the consideration of the mortgage bond was intended to satisfy the defendant's liability to the Adat shop. The crucial question is the defendant's antecedent liability to the Adat shop.

The defendant and his brother, Gajadhar, denied that any such advance was made and, though the trial Court did not believe their story, the Judicial Commissioner came to the conclusion that no cash loans were taken by the defendant from the Adat shop, and that the acknowledgments in the sarkat book and the entries in the pakki rokad were made under the circumstances spoken to by them. He considered that their evidence received material corroboration from the following circumstances:—

(a) A telegram dated the 14th February, 1913 (Ex. D. 1), from Damoh, addressed to Gajadhar at Jubbulpore, to prove that Gajadhar was not at Damoh on the 14th February;

(b) the non-production by the plaintiffs of the katchi rokad (or rough cash book) of the Adat shop for 1913, which would be the best evidence of the transaction in that month as it would contain entries made from day to day;

(c) the fact that though all the account books were written by subordinate clerks, the only entries in the pakki rokad (or fair cash book), which was written up at varying intervals from the katchi rokad, which were in the handwriting of Gajadhar, were under the dates 13th to the 17th February;

(d) the failure of the plaintiffs to call the Munim, Sukhdeo, who died before the hearing was actually concluded, but who could have been called on several previous dates when the case was heard, and

(e) the evidence of several witnesses which proved that some credit entries in their names were falsely made after the 17th February in the pakki rokad of the Adat shop to square up corresponding debit entries, which were equally fictitious and which had been made before the 17th February in order to cover up defalcations or deficits, whether Gajadhar was himself guilty of the same or not.

It was argued before their Lordships that none of the circumstances above related either singly or taken together justified the Judicial Commissioner in accepting the defendant's story.

Taking the telegram first, it purports to be sent by Nathoolal, is addressed to Gajadhar c/o Kodoolal Dasratlal Jubbulpore, and is despatched from Damoh at 8-25 P. M. The contents are as follows:—

"Come by first train soon."

Nathoolal, examined as a witness on behalf of the defendant, stated that the Munim Sukhdeo sent for him in Magh, 1968 (February, 1913), and asked for Gajadhar's address at Jubbulpore. He having left Damoh a day or two before, that he gave the address and thereupon the Munim sent a telegram (to Gajadhar) through his man, but he did not know its contents. Gajadhar deposed that Ex. D. 1 was the telegram he received. He had gone into the interior of the district when the telegram was received by his relative to whose care it was addressed. He got it on his return from the interior to Jubbulpore, and he immediately returned to Damoh, which he reached on the 17th or 18th February. The Judicial Commissioner came to the conclusion that Gajadhar was not at Damoh on the 14th February, 1913, and that the evidence of the plaintiffs witnesses that the three different sums of money were actually advanced by Gajadhar to the defendant on the dates shown in the account-books could not be accepted.

It is urged on behalf of the plaintiffs (appellants) that even though the telegram was sent on the 14th February, Gajadhar might have been at Damoh during business hours on that date, as the telegram was not despatched till 8-25 P. M. This depends on the distance between the two places, Damoh and Jubbulpore, and the times of the train service between them. That argument was apparently not urged, either before the Subordinate Judge or the Judicial Commissioner, both of whom were in a better position to deal with it than their Lordships, who are, therefore, unable to hold that the Judicial Commissioner was wrong in holding that the telegram was conclusive to show that Gajadhar was not at Damoh on the 14th February.

It would further appear that the entry of the 17th February is equally fictitious, even if it is assumed that Gajadhar returned to Jubbulpore on the 17th and not on the 18th. The telegram purporting to come as it did from Nathoolal, an employee of the Adat shop, was as an urgent summons to return and could not but convey that something serious had occurred in connection with the Adat shop, and it is difficult to believe that on the very day Gajadhar returned to Damoh he should lend a further sum of Rs. 1,000 to his brother, and thereby commit another grave irregularity in connection with the cash of the shop—for such it was alleged to be by evidence on the plaintiffs' side.

The next question to consider are the facts mentioned as (b) and (c) above.

As regards the katchi rokad, this is what the Judicial Commissioner says:—

"Pakki rokad is not written from day to day, but is written at the convenience of the clerks when they get time. It is the katchi rokad in which transactions are entered at the very time. These are copied in the pakki rokad afterwards at the convenience of the clerks. It is, therefore, the katchi rokad which is the really important document. If these amounts were really advanced in cash to the defendant, as was the plaintiffs' case, they must have found place in the katchi rokad. Though the defendant had made determined efforts to get the plaintiffs to produce the katchi rokads of the Adat shop, they failed to produce them. No satisfactory explanation was given for their non-production, and the plaintiffs merely made a bald statement they had not got any katchi rokad of that shop. It was never alleged by the plaintiffs that Gajadhar had removed them. Rampal's evidence given as D. W. No. 9, to the effect that the katchi rokads of the Adat shop were with Gajadhar cannot, therefore, be believed. Gajadhar had already been divested of all his powers over the Adat shop, and it seems very unlikely that he would have been permitted to retain these books or to remove them. From hearing to hearing the defendant was pressing for the production of the katchi rokads and still no suggestion was made on behalf of the plaintiffs till Rampal was examined that these had been taken away by Gajadhar."

Similarly as regards the entries in the pakki rokad the Judicial Commissioner observes:—

"There is one very important circumstance for which no explanation has been offered for the plaintiffs. All the account books were written by subordinate clerks. On no other days were any account books of the Adat shop written by Gajadhar. It was only the pakki rokad of 13th February, 1913, to 17th February, that was written by Gajadhar. Gajadhar swears that he had gone through the whole of the pakki rokad for that year and that on no other date were any entries made by him. This has not been denied by the plaintiffs. This extraordinary circumstance of Gajadhar writing pakki rokad only on these particular dates could not have been a mere accident. It was apparently done with the sole object of preventing the defendant from subsequently denying his liability for these items. The plaintiffs' Munim was, it appears, taking all possible precautions to cover the real nature of the debits and to give them an appearance of ordinary loan transactions which the defendant may not subsequently deny, otherwise there was no meaning in Gajadhar writing the pakki rokad only on these four days."

Their Lordships are unable to hold that the Judicial Commissioner was wrong when he says with reference to the above as follows:—

"The fair conclusion to be drawn from these circumstances is that the katchi rokads of the Adat shop were intentionally suppressed by the plaintiffs, and that their production in Court would have gone against them. The entries in the pakki rokad of these particular dates were made by Gajadhar after his return from Jubbulpore. These circumstances support the defendant's allegation that they were all made on one day. Gajadhar's statement that different dates against the different items debited to the defendant were put in order to ward off suspicion cannot be said to be without any foundation."

As regards (d) the Judicial Commissioner says:—

"The absence of the evidence of Rai Sahib Sukhdeo in the case is also remarkable. He was the principal person involved in all these transactions, and could have given us the first-hand account thereof. He could have denied on oath the allegations made by the defendant and his witnesses and his cross-examination by the defendant would have elicited several points. He attended the Court on many hearings and should have been the first witness to be put in the witness-box on the plaintiffs' behalf. The principal evidence of the plaintiffs began on 10th December, 1918, and Sukhdeo was alive till the end of May following. It was said that from before 10th December, 1918, till his death, Sukhdeo was ill and unable to give his evidence. This illness did not, however, prevent his going about on tour in the interior of the district and travelling by train, as is apparent from the ordersheets of the 4th March and the 15th April, 1919. He was intentionally kept back, the idea perhaps being to put him as the last witness on the plaintiffs' side."

Their Lordships are again unable to hold that this inference is unwarranted, or that on the facts established, the learned Judicial Commissioner was in error in finding material corroboration of the defendant's story.

As regards the last mentioned circumstances of corroboration noted as (e) above, Gajadhar's evidence was that in the books of the Adat shop certain items had been debited on dates prior to the 17th February, 1913, in the names of certain persons, though the transactions never took place. The effect was to withdraw so much money from the till. These bogus debit entries were squared up by corresponding credit entries made after the 17th February, i. e., after the defendant had undertaken the liability of Rs. 7,000 as being defalcations for which his brother was responsible. If the question of these defalcations rested on the evidence of Gajadhar alone it would have been difficult to accept the story of the alleged deficiency. But the Judicial Commissioner found that some, though not all, of the alleged bogus entries were proved to be such by independent and disinterested witnesses who proved that the credit and debit entries in question appearing in the plaintiffs' books, and purporting to be records of transactions with those witnesses or their firms, did not appear in their own books of account, and that no such transactions took place in fact. It was hardly to be expected that such independent evidence would be available in respect of all the various items relied upon by the defendant as bogus items. But the books are sufficiently discredited if a certain number are proved which precludes the possibility of error or accident, and their Lordships are unable to hold that the Judicial Commissioner was wrong in holding that the evidence of the witnesses examined by the defendant left no reasonable doubt about there having been defalcations and deficits.

In the result the Judicial Commissioner accepted the story of the defendant, and held that the acknowledgments in the sar-kat book were given and the mortgage in suit executed by the defendant under the circumstances alleged by him.

Their Lordships consider that no sufficient reason has been shown to disturb these findings of fact, which are sufficient to dispose of the case.

The plaintiffs having made a substantive case as to the consideration for their mortgage, cannot now be allowed to shift their ground and urge that the defendant accepted the civil liability of his brother Gajadhar for the defalcations which he alleged and which they denied. Their Lordships therefore, consider it unnecessary to go into the question whether a creditor can or cannot by stifling a prosecution obtain a valid guarantee for his debt from third parties.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that the judgment and decree of the Judicial Commissioner should be affirmed, and this appeal dismissed with costs.

K. J. R.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. Downer and Johnson.

Solicitors for the Respondent:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

November 29, 1927.

Present:—Lord Buckmaster, Lord Carson,
Lord Darling, Lord Warrington of Clyffe
and Sir Lancelot Sanderson.

MADHAVRAO GANPATRAO DESAI

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

APPELLANTS

versus

BALABHAI RAGHUNATH AGASKAR

SINCE DECEASED AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Construction of deed of trust—Gift to settlor's daughter for life, and after her death to her "male heirs"—Gift of income, carries the whole estate—Rule in Shelley's case, inapplicable.

The settlor, a Hindu dwelling in Bombay, on the 1st May, 1889, in consideration of the natural love and affection which he bore to his children and grand children, conveyed by deed of that date certain immoveable properties to trustees upon trust to pay the income to the settlor for life; and after his death upon certain trusts expressed in the following words:—"As to one-quarter of the said rents, dividends and profits upon trust to pay the same to my daughter Krishnabai during her life for her sole and separate use and after her death in trust for the male heirs of the said Krishnabai share and share alike". On July 14th, 1894, the settlor died. Krishnabai survived the settlor and died in 1897, leaving six sons, all of whom were living at the date of the settlement. The question arose as to the true meaning of the gift in favour of Krishnabai and her male heirs. The heirs of the settlor contended that the limitations in favour of her (Krishnabai's) male heirs after her death were contrary to Hindu Law and void, and that in consequence there was a resulting trust in favour of the settlor:

Held, (overruling this contention) that the gift in favour of Krishnabai's male heirs was a valid gift under the Hindu Law, inasmuch as they did not take by inheritance from her and it was by virtue of a wholly independent gift that they were beneficiaries under the deed. [p. 123, col. 2.]

Held, also, that the gift, though in the form of a gift of income, carried the whole estate. [p. 124, col. 1.]

[Technical meaning given to similar words in the English Law, disregarded, and the rule in Shelley's case held to be inapplicable.] [p. 123, col. 1.]

Balabhai Raghunath Agaskar v. Matabhai Babaji Rave, 89 Ind. Cas. 934, reversed.

Appeal from a decree of the Bombay High Court in its Appellate Jurisdiction (Macleod, C. J., and Coyajee, J.), dated the 15th April, 1925, reported as 89 Ind. Cas. 934, varying that of the same High Court, in its Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction (Mulla, J.) dated the 16th October, 1924.

FACTS.—The litigation is in respect of a deed of trust executed by the late Rao Bahadur Janardhan Wasodey who was the first Indian Judge of the High Court of Bombay, and the true construction of the deed was the subject-matter for consideration before the Privy Council.

The material facts of the case, as well as the relevant portion of the deed of trust, are given in their Lordships' judgment.

The trial Judge (Mulla, J.) held that the sons of Krishnabai being all in existence at the date of the settlement took a contingent interest under the gift to her male heirs which vested at her death and he also held that the gift was of an absolute interest in the quarter of the settled property. The following extracts from the learned Judge's judgment are instructive:—

"A person capable of taking under a deed of trust must be such a person as could take a gift inter vivos and, therefore, must either in fact or in contemplation of law be in existence at the date of the deed. ... As to the one-fourth share of the income allotted to Krishnabai's branch it is provided by the deed that it shall be held by the trustees after the death of Krishnabai in trust for her male heirs share and share alike. It was contended for the plaintiffs that the trusts in favour of the male heirs of Krishnabai after her death were void and that there was a resulting trust on Krishnabai's death as regards the one-fourth allotted to her branch in favour of the heirs of Raghunath. Counsel for the plaintiffs argued that a gift to the heirs of a living person was not recognized either by the English or the Hindu Law; that even if it was, it was not a gift to an ascertained class of persons as it should be under the Hindu Law, that the expression 'male heirs' meant the whole body of sons, grandsons, great grandsons and so on, that the intention of the settlor was that the income should be paid to Krishnabai's sons and then to their descendants in the direct male line and, if so, the gift was bad since to exclude females from the succession was to exclude the legal course of inheritance and that in any event the gift was invalid as the corpus of the one fourth share remained in abeyance until Krishnabai's death. In support of those contentions Counsel relied on the decisions in Tarokessor Roy v. Soshi Shik- huressur (1) and Kristoromoni Dasi v. Narendro Krishna Bahadur (2).

"On the other hand it was argued by Mr. Jinnah, Counsel for Krishnabai's heirs, that the estate created by the gift was not inconsistent with the general law of inheritance, nor did it violate any rule of Hindu Law. It was also contended that the deed afforded no indication that the enjoyment of the gift to Krishnabai's male heirs should be of a limited duration and that on the analogy of the provisions contained in s. 159 of the Indian Succession Act of 1865, the principal as well as the income belonged to the male heirs of Krishnabai.

"The first question to consider is whether a valid gift may be made to the heirs of a living person. A gift to the heirs of a living person is not unknown to the English Law. 'The rule is that nemo est heres viventis' and, therefore, a devise to the heirs of a living person is contingent, unless the term 'heirs' is so qualified by express words or by the general intention of the Will as to show that the testator meant by heir the heir apparent or presumptive or some other person, who will then take as persona designata—Theobald on Wills, 7th Edition, page 329. So far as I know there is nothing against the general principle of Hindu Law in allowing a Hindu to make a gift of his property to the heirs of a living person provided that the persons entitled to succeed as heirs of that person are in existence at the date of the gift. I think that the gift to 'the male heirs' of Krishnabai is a gift to such of her sons as were in existence at the date of the deed and such as might survive Krishnabai. It is a gift of a contingent remainder. In Sreemuthy Soorjee-money Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (3) Knight Bruce, L. J., in delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee, said, 'Whatever may have formerly been considered the state of that (the Hindu) Law as to the testamentary power of Hindus over their property, that power has now long been recognized, and must be considered as completely established. This being so, we are to say, whether there is anything against public convenience, anything generally mischievous, or anything against the general principles of Hindu Law in allowing a testator to give property, whether by way of remainder, or by way of executory bequest (to borrow terms from the Law of England), upon an event which is to happen, if at all, immediately on the close of a life in being. Their Lordships think that there is not; that there would be great general inconvenience and public mischief in denying such a power, and that it is their duty to advise Her Majesty that such a power does exist'. In the present case the gift is made to Krishnabai for life and the gift to her heirs is to take effect immediately on the close of a life in being. The two cases cited for the plaintiffs have no bearing on the present case. The terms of gift in both those cases were quite different from those in this case. I, therefore, hold that the gift in favour of Krishnabai's male heirs is a valid gift under the Hindu Law. All the six sons of Krishnabai that were in existence at the date of the deed were also in existence at her death, and they became entitled to take under the deed.

"The next question is whether the sons of Krishnabai are entitled to a one-fourth's share in the corpus of the properties or whether they are entitled only to an interest for their respective lives. It is contended on behalf of Krishnabai's heirs that the principle underlying s. 153 of the Indian Succession Act applies to the case and that they were entitled to the one-fourth share assigned to Krishnabai absolutely and not merely the income of that share. Mr. Jinnah also relied on the decision of the Madras High Court in Krishna Ayyan v. Vythianatha Ayyan (4). On the other hand it was contended for the plaintiffs that Krishnabai's heirs were entitled only to the income of the one-fourth share during their respective lives. As regards s. 159 of the Indian Succession Act it is to be observed that though it applies to Hindus, there is no corresponding section in the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The English Law draws a distinction in the case of similar dispositions between those con-

(1) 10 I. A. 51; 9 C. 952; 13 C. L. R. 62; 7 Ind. Jur. 327; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 439; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1284 (P. C.).

(2) 16 I. A. 29; 16 C. 383; 13 Ind. Jur. 90; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 285; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 252 (P. C.).

(3) 9 M. I. A. 123; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 337; 19 E. R. 88.

(4) 18 M. 252; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 525.

tained in a Will and those contained in a deed inter vivos. As to the former the rule in England is that a devise of realty without apt or any words of limitation passes of the estate* the testator had power to devise such realty, unless a contrary intention appears by the Will. The rule contained in s. 159 of the Succession Act is based on the English Law. As to deeds the rule of English Law is that a grant of an equitable estate in realty arising under an express trust without apt words of limitation passes prima facie an estate for life merely; but if it appears from the whole deed that it was the grantor's intention to pass the fee simple, that estate will pass.....It seems to me that to determine the extent of interest taken by Krishnabai's male heirs in the estate, one must look to the terms of the deed and discover the intention of the donor. Looking at the deed as a whole, I think it is impossible to escape the conclusion that the settlor did not intend to leave any interest in the properties comprised in the deed undisposed of. On the other hand, there is upon the face of the deed sufficient indication of intention on the part of the settlor that the heirs of Krishnabai should take an absolute interest in the one-fourth share assigned to Krishnabai. I, therefore, hold that the surviving sons of Krishnabai and the heirs of her deceased sons are entitled as between them to the one-fourth share assigned to Krishnabai absolutely.

"I now proceed to answer the questions:

"No. 1. The male heirs of Krishnabai are entitled absolutely to the one-fourth share assigned to Krishnabai.

"No. 2. The persons entitled to the corpus of the one-fourth share assigned to Krishnabai are the surviving sons of Krishnabai and the heirs of her deceased sons."

The Appeal Court (Macleod, C. J., and Coyajee, J.,) however, held that the gift to the male heirs of Krishnabai was void (1) as a gift to a class some of whom might not have been born at the date of the gift, (2) as excluding females and so excluding the legal course of inheritance and (3) as made with the object of creating a perpetuity. Macleod, C. J., in delivering the judgment of the Court, said:—

"The question is—What was the intention of the settlor? His intention is to be sought in his words. The deed is written in the English language; the settlor was himself a lawyer; but, it must be confessed, the instrument is not very easy to construe. In the case of Raghunath and of Krishnabai, he uses the words, 'his and her 'male heirs'. In the case of Pootlabai's daughter Sonabai the gift is to her 'children'. In Anandrao's case, it is to his 'male children.'

*There is apparently a clerical error in this part of the judgment.—[K. J. R.]

"Who, then, were intended to take the estate as Krishnabai's male heirs? The parties being Hindus, the donees must be in existence, either in fact or in contemplation of law, at the date of the settlement. In this case there is an uncertainty as to the existence of Krishnabai's male heirs at the material time. It was quite possible that none of her sons who were in existence at the date of the deed might survive Krishnabai and a wholly different person or a totally different set of persons answering to that description, 'her male heirs' might come into being after that date. If by Krishnabai's male heirs the settlor meant her sons who were then in existence, he has,—it must be allowed—used singularly in apt words to convey that meaning. The settlor, no doubt, was actuated by 'the natural love and affection' which he bore to his children and grand-children hereafter mentioned; but that circumstance does not justify the substitution of 'Krishnabai's sons' for 'Krishnabai's male heirs.' The words 'grand-children hereafter mentioned' have their application, for the gifts to Sonabai and Anandrao were gifts to the settlor's 'grand-children'. The learned Judge observes that 'there is upon the face of the deed sufficient indication of intention on the part of the settlor that the heirs of Krishnabai should take an absolute interest in the one-fourth share assigned to Krishnabai'. He, therefore, holds 'that the surviving sons of Krishnabai and the heirs of her deceased sons are entitled as between them to the one-fourth share assigned to Krishnabai absolutely'. The settlor, however, speaks not of her heirs but of her male heirs and thereby shows an intention to confine the inheritance to males, to the entire exclusion of female heirs; and the disposition is void as 'excluding the legal course of inheritance' Tarokessur Roy v. Soshi Shikhuressur (1).

"Reading the deed as a whole, it seems to me, that the disposition is also void on the other contention raised by the appellants, namely, that the object of the settlor was to create a perpetuity as regards these properties. The estate itself is not disposed of.....In my opinion, the object of the settlor was to create a perpetuity as regards the whole of the trust estate and to limit for an indefinite period the enjoyment of the rents and profits of the estate.

"The result is that the trusts after the death of...Krishnabai are invalid".

Mr. Lowndes, K. C. (with him Mr. Raikes), for the Appellants.—The rule in Shelley's case does not apply. See Mithibai v. v. Limji Nowroji Banaji (5). That decision has always been followed in Bombay. It was known to everybody in Bombay in 1889 that Shelley's case was not applicable.

[LORD CARSON:—Was the settlor aware of it?]

The settlor was a lawyer. He must have known it. The rule in Shelley's case is a law of property or tenure based on feudal considerations. In India we have no distinction between realty and personalty.

[LORD DARLING—By recent Act of Parliament the rule in Shelley's case has been rendered obsolete in England.]

That Rule often disappointed the intentions of the parties. See the judgment of Lord MacNaghten in Van Gruthen v. Foxwell (6).

Refers to the Transfer of Property Act, and to s. 159 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865.

[LORD BUCKMASTER.—What is the proper meaning of the gift? Is it not a gift to the heirs male of Krishnabai who were living at her death?]

Mr. Upjohn, K. C. (with him Mr. Hyam) for the Respondents, refers to judgment of Stirling, J., in Johnson v. Johnson (7).

Mr. Lowndes, K. C. cited Manu, Chap. 9, verse 192. It is the whole source of the Hindu Law.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Buckmaster.—On May 1st, 1889, Janardhan Wasoodev, a Hindu dwelling in Bombay, in consideration of the natural love and affection which he bore "to his children and grandchildren," made a voluntary settlement in their favour of property chiefly consisting of real estate. The children named as beneficiaries were four, Krishnabai, Pootlabai, Raghunath and Kashibai, all of whom were married and had children living at the date of the deed, while Raghunath had both children and grand-children. The settlement took the form of a conveyance of property to trustees upon trust to pay the income, after deducting, Rs. 25 per month for taxes and repairs, to the settlor for life; and, after his death, then upon certain trusts expressed in the following words:—

"Upon trust out of the said rents dividends and profits to pay one-fourth part of the net amount to Raghunath, Janardhan son of the said Janardhan Wasoodev during his life and from and after the decease of the said Raghunath Janardhan in trust to pay the same to all the male heirs of the said Raghunath Janardhan share and share alike and as to one-quarter of the said rents dividends and profits upon trust to pay the same to my daughter Krishnabai wife of Ganpatrao Moroji Zaoba during her life for her sole and separate use and after her death in trust for the male heirs of the said Krishnabai share and share alike. And as to another quarter of the said rents dividends and profits upon trust to pay the same to my daughter Pootlabai wife of Nanabhoy Ganpatrao during her life for her sole and separate use and after her death in trust for her child Sonabai wife of Ganpatrao Khunderao and after the decease of the said Sonabai in trust for all or such one or more of the children of the said Sonabai wife of Ganpatrao Khunderao in such share and at such times as the said Sonabai shall by deed or Will appoint."

Then follow provisions, in relation to Sonabai's share "if there shall be no child of the said Sonabai," in favour of his grandson Anandrao for life and after his death in trust for "the male children" of Anandrao, with trusts over in the event of there being no child of Anandrao, and an ultimate provision in favour of "the right

(5) 6 B. 151; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 559.

(6) (1897) A. C. 658 at p. 669; 66 L. J. Q. B. 745; 77 L. T. 170.

(7) (1887) 35 Ch. D. 345; 56 L. J. Ch. 326; 56 L. T. 163; 35 W. R. 329.

heirs of my son Raghunath." On July 14th, 1894, the settlor died. His daughter Krishnabai died in 1897, leaving six sons, all of whom were living at the date of the settlement. It was in relation to her share that the present dispute arose, the heirs of the settlor contending that the limitations in favour of her male heirs after her death were contrary to Hindu Law and void, and that in consequence there was a resulting trust in favour of the settlor. The learned Judge in the Court of first instance decided against this contention, but his judgment was reversed by the High Court of Bombay in its appellate jurisdiction, and hence this appeal.

The appellants are three of the children of Krishnabai and the respondents are the three other children and the heirs of the original settlor.

It is to be noted that there are different words used in settling the share of Raghunath and Krishnabai on the one hand and the daughters Pootlabai and Sonabai on the other, but this variation of language does not give much assistance in determining the true meaning of the gift in favour of Krishnabai and her male heirs, which is the sole subject of the present consideration. The difficulty is in part caused by the settlor having introduced into his settlement words which have a technical meaning in English Law but which they do not possess application in Hindu Law*. The use of the words "right heirs" in the ultimate limitation of the share given to Sonabai illustrates this difficulty. The phrase "right heirs" has a distinct meaning in English Law and there refers to the heirs at Common Law as opposed to the heirs by special local custom, but it has no such special significance in Bombay.

In settling the true construction of this deed, therefore, unless there is a special reason afforded by the deed itself to the contrary, the technical meaning given to words in English Law must be disregarded. So also must rules like the well-known rule in Shelley's case, based here upon feudal customs that have had no existence in Bombay. Further, it is to be remembered that a gift to a class of which no member existed at the date of the deed would be bad, and so also a definite attempt to create what in England would be regarded as an estate tail [see Jatindra Mohan Tagore v.

Ganendra Mohan Tagore (8)]. The main part of the respondents' argument depends upon this last consideration. They assert that this was the true meaning of the gift—to the male heirs of Krishnabai after Krishnabai's death—and that it consequently failed. They further argue that the words themselves connote a descendable quality of estate with which it was the intention of the settlor to impress the property either in the gift to Krishnabai or to the male heirs. Their Lordships are unable to accept this view, which is permeated by the suggestion that the words when used in a Bombay settlement are primarily words of inheritance denoting the character of an estate. They do not think that the male heirs of Krishnabai took by inheritance from her. They are of opinion that the estate that Krishnabai took was defined and limited by her life-interest, and that it was not by descent from her but by virtue of a wholly independent gift that her male heirs were beneficiaries under the deed. These male heirs being in fact living at the date of the deed, no difficulty arises.

The learned Judges in the High Court on appeal however took the view that the settlor in speaking of male heirs showed an intention to confine the inheritance to males to the entire exclusion of female heirs, and that consequently the limitation was bad. This conclusion, however, assumes that the words are words of inheritance and not of gift, and with this their Lordships are unable to agree.

It is also pointed out that, as none of Krishnabai's sons might have survived her, a different set of persons would have come into existence as her male heirs at her death, but this presents no difficulty if any such persons were living at the date of the deed; if they were not, the gift would fail.

Their Lordships are of opinion that the true interpretation is that the persons who answer the description of male heirs at the date of Krishnabai's death were the persons in whose favour an independent gift was made, but that by operation of the Hindu Law there would be excluded from that class people who were not living when the deed was executed. There is nothing whatever in the words of the grant to show that the estate so conferred was anything but an absolute estate upon such persons. For there is nothing to suggest, on the one hand, that such estate was limited to their life or, on the other, that any line of descent was marked out after their death. It is true that the gift is in the form of a gift of income, but it is a gift unlimited in point of time, and if there be no restriction in the gift and no limitations beyond the actual beneficiaries at Krishnabai's death such a gift carries the whole estate.

*Obviously some word in the judgment seems to be missing here.—[K. J. R.]

(8) I. A. Sup. Vol. 47; 18 W. R. 359; 9 B.L. R. 377; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 82; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 692 (P. C.).

It is, however, argued, and this view found favour with the Court of Appeal, that the subsequent gift of the dwelling house shows that there was a contrary intention and that the occupation of this house was to continue for an indefinite period. But the gift of this house and its elaborate partition is, in their Lordships' opinion, only a means of providing how the people who had already been created beneficiaries in respect of the other settled estate should be at liberty to enjoy the property, and so far as Krishnabai's male heirs are concerned they are definitely entitled to occupy the share allotted to them and this is all that was decided by the learned Judge of first instance.

For these reasons their Lordships think that the judgment of the Appeal Court was wrong and should be reversed and the judgment of the Judge of first instance restored.

They will, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal ought to be allowed with costs here and in the Court of Appeal.

K. J. R.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellants.—Messrs. T. E. Wilson & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondents.—Messrs. Barrow, Rogers & Nevill.

Note.—As regards gifts to unborn persons, see now the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, and Mulla's Hindu Law, 5th Ed., p. 358, et seq.—[K. J. R.]

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

November 28, 1927.

Present:—Lord Chancellor, Lord Buckmaster, Lord Carson, Lord Darling and Lord Warrington of Glyffe.

ARDESHIR BHICAJI TAMBOLI—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

THE AGENT, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY, BOMBAY

—DEPENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 72—Risk Note, Form H—Signature of agent in name of firm, effect of non-attestation of signature—Risk Note attaches immediately on delivery and acceptance of goods—"Wilful neglect"—Destruction of goods by fire.

Under s. 72 of the Railways Act, 1890, an agreement (popularly known as a "Risk Note") limiting the liability of a Railway Company as bailee of goods delivered to it for carriage by Railway is required to be "in writing signed by or on behalf of the person sending or delivering to the Railway Administration the goods." The appellant, who carried on business at Amalner in the name of Tamboli Brothers, delivered certain goods at the Amalner Station of the respondent company for transport to the appellant's business premises at Kurla. The Risk Note in respect of these goods bore the signature of Tamboli Brothers. It appeared, however, that the signature of Tamboli Brothers affixed to the Risk Note was in the handwriting, not of the appellant himself, but of his nephew, Jamsetji (who was admittedly the appellant's duly authorized agent in the matter), and it was contended on behalf of the appellant that a signature in the name of the firm was ineffective unless it appeared on the face of the document that the signature was affixed either by the sender of the goods himself or by the hand of an agent whose agency was disclosed.

Held, (overruling this objection), that as it was plain on the evidence that the nephew, Jamsetji, had full authority to sign the name of the firm, it was unnecessary that he should purport to sign it as agent, and that the signature in question was, therefore, a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the Statute. [p. 126, col. 2]

France v. Dutton (1), relied on.

A form of Risk Note (Form H) approved by the Governor-General in Council under s. 72, sub-s. (2), (b) of the Railways Act, 1890, contained at the end of it space for the attestation of the execution of the document by two witnesses:

Held, that although attestation by two witnesses was contemplated in the form as approved, such attestation was not an essential part of the form and was not a condition precedent to the validity of the Risk Note, inasmuch as the section does not provide that the agreement (i.e., the Risk Note) shall be attested, and while it requires that the form shall be approved by the Governor-General in Coun-oil, it does not entrust that functionary with the duty of providing for the attestation of the document. [p. 127, col. 1.]

A Risk Note, in the prescribed form (Form H) and duly signed, protects the Railway Company from liability as soon as the goods are delivered to it for carriage and accepted by the Company. In other words, the Risk Note attaches to the goods immediately on such delivery and acceptance, and not merely from the time when the goods are actually despatched by the Company to their destination. Their Lordships rejected as untenable the contention that "until the goods had been loaded on waggons for transport, or at all events until the Railway Company had given a receipt for the goods specifying that they were to be carried at the reduced rate, the Risk Note had no application to them, and the Railway Company were mere ordinary bailees of the goods." [p. 127, col. 2.]

Where under the express terms of a Risk Note (in Form H), the Railway Company was exonerated from liability for loss, etc., and to goods except where the loss was due to its wilful neglect, and there was (in the present case) ample evidence of negligence on the part of the Company, it was held that the Company could not be made liable merely on this account, in the absence of evidence or finding of 'wilful neglect.' The latter expression means that the act is done deliberately and intentionally and not by accident or inadvertence, but so that the mind of the person who does the act goes with it. [p. 128, col. 1.]

R. v. Downes (2) and R. v. Senior (3), relied on.

Goods delivered to the respondent Company at Amalner for being carried to Bombay were, while lying on the station platform at Amalner awaiting transport, destroyed by fire. It was found that the respondent Company's servants had been guilty of negligence:

Held, that the Company was protected from liability by reason of the Risk Note (Form H); and as wilful neglect was negatived, it was unnecessary or their Lordships to consider the effect of the final proviso to the Risk Note which declared (inter alia) that "the term 'wilful neglect' shall not be held to include fire." [ibid.]

G. I. P. Railway Co. v. A. B. Tamboli, 96 Ind. Cas. 93, affirmed.

Appeal from a judgment of the Bombay High Court (Fawcett and Madgavkar, JJ.) dated the 5th October 1925, reported as 5 Ind. Cas. 293 reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Dhulia, dated the 18th September, 1922.

FACTS.—The material facts are given in their Lordships' judgment and also in the judgments of the Court of Appeal, where the authorities are discussed at length; see 96 Ind. Cas. 293; 10 Bom. 284; 28 Bom. L. R. 718]

The Risk Note in question (Form H) is set out in the judgment of the Privy Council, and s. 72 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 is given below for facility of reference:—

"72. (Measure of the general responsibility of a Railway Administration as a carrier of animals and goods). (1) The responsibility of a Railway Administration for the loss, destruction or deterioration of animals or goods delivered to the Administration to be carried by Railway shall, subject to the other provisions of this Act, be that of a bailee under ss. 152 and 161 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872:

(2) An agreement purporting to limit that responsibility shall, in so far as it purports to effect such limitation, be void, unless it—

(a) is in writing signed by or on behalf of the person sending or delivering to the Railway Administration the animals or goods, and

(b) is otherwise in a form approved by the Governor General in Council.

(3) Nothing in the Common Law of England or in the Carriers Act, 1865, regarding the responsibility of common carriers with respect to the carriage of animals or goods, shall affect the responsibility as in this section defined of a Railway Administration."

Messrs. Geoffrey Lawrence, K. C., and Raikes, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Stuart Bevan, K. C. and K. Brown, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Chancellor.—The appellant, who is a commission agent carrying on business in the Bombay Presidency, delivered, on the 5th February, 1920, 128 bales, and on the 7th February, 1920, 162 bales of cotton at the Amalner Station of the respondent company for transport to the appellant's business premises at Kurla. Of the 290 bales so delivered, 216 were duly put on board the respondent company's waggons and carried to Kurla, but the remaining 74 bales, together with a large number of bales belonging to other consignors, remained on the station platform at Amalner awaiting transport. On the 25th February a fire broke out in some of these bales and, the appliances available in case of fire being inadequate, the greater part of the bales at Amalner Station, including the 74 bales belonging to the appellant were destroyed. Thereupon the appellant brought this suit against the respondent company, alleging that the destruction of the 74 bales was due to the negligence of the company's servants, and claiming damages for his loss.

The suit was tried by the Subordinate Judge of Dhulia, who found that the respondent company's servants had been guilty of negligence, and gave judgment for the appellant for Rs. 10,518 as damages; but on appeal by the respondents to the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, that Court, while agreeing with the trial Judge as to the finding of negligence, held that the respondent company was protected from liability by a document dated the 3rd November, 1919, and referred to in the proceedings as a "Risk Note." The question to be determined on this appeal is whether the respondent company is so protected.

The Risk Note was in the following terms:—

"Whereas all consignments of goods or animals for which the G. I. P. Railway Administration quotes both owner's risk or special reduced rates and Railway risk or ordinary rates are (unless I/we shall have entered into a special contract in relation to any particular consignment) despatched by me/us at my/our own risk and are charged for by the G. I. P. Railway Administration at special or reduced owner's risk rates instead of at ordinary tariff or Railway risk-rates, I/we, the undersigned, in consideration of such consignments being charged for at the special reduced or owner's risk rates, do hereby agree and undertake to hold the G. I. P. Railway Administration and all other Railway Administrations working in connection therewith, and also all other transport agents or carriers employed by them respectively over whose Railways or by or through whose transport agency or agencies the said goods or animals may be carried in transit from Amalner Station to Kurla Station harmless and free from all responsibility for any loss, destruction or deterioration of or any damage to all or any of such consignments from any cause whatever (except for the loss of a complete consignment or of one or more complete packages forming part of a consignment due either to the wilful neglect of the Railway Administration, or to theft by or to the wilful neglect of its servants transport agents or carriers employed by them) before during and after transit over the said Railway or other Railway lines working in connection therewith or by any other transport agency or agencies employed by them respectively for carriage of the whole or any part of the said consignments: provided the term 'wilful neglect' be not held to include fire, robbery from a running train or any unforeseen event or accident."

The note bore the signature of Tamboli Brothers which is the name under which the appellant carries on business, and was witnessed by Jamsetji Tamboli and another person.

On the hearing of the appeal before this Board, the finding of negligence, which had been concurred in by both the Courts in India, was not disputed, but it was argued that on several grounds the Risk Note did not protect the respondent company from liability.

First, it was said that the note did not comply with the requirements of s. 72 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, which requires that an agreement purporting to limit the responsibility of a Railway Administration for the loss, destruction or deterioration of animals or goods shall in so far as it purports to effect such limitation be void unless it (a) is in writing signed by or on behalf of the person sending or delivering to the Railway Administration the animals or goods, and (b) is otherwise in a form approved by the Governor-General in Council. It appeared that the signature of Tamboli Brothers affixed to the Risk Note was in the handwriting, not of the appellant himself, but of his nephew, Jamsetji Tamboli, and it was argued that a signature in the name of the firm was ineffective unless it appeared on the face of the document that the signature was affixed either by the sender himself or by the hand of an agent whose agency was disclosed. In their Lordships' opinion this objection has no weight. It was plain on the evidence that Jamsetji had full authority to sign the name of the firm, and if so, it was unnecessary that he should purport to sign it as agent. If authority for this proposition is required, it will be found in the case of France v. Dutton (1).

It was further argued that the Risk Note was void as not being in a form approved by the Governor-General in Council. It was admitted that the body of the note was in the Form H approved by order in Council; but the form so approved contains at the end of its space for the attestation of the execution of the document by two witnesses, and it was said that as Jamsetji Tamboli, the first witness attesting the Risk Note, was the person who executed the Risk Note in the name of the firm, he was not a suitable witness to its execution. If it were an essential part of the form approved by the Governor-General in Council that the note should be attested by two witnesses, it would, no doubt, be necessary to consider whether Jamsetji Tamboli could both execute and witness the document; but in their Lordships' opinion the attestation by two witnesses is not part of the document prescribed. Para. (a) of s. 72 (2) of the Act of 1890, which alone deals with the execution of an agreement of this nature, does not provide that the agreement shall be attested; and para. (b) of the same sub-section, while it requires that the form shall be approved by the Governor-General in Council, does not entrust that authority with the duty of providing for the attestation of the document. This being so it cannot be held that attestation by two witnesses, although contemplated in the form as approved, was an essential part of the form. This argument, therefore, falls to the ground.

But the principal argument put forward on behalf of the appellant was, that the Risk Note did not attach to the 74 bales in question at all. It was pointed out that the note, by the terms of the recital contained in it, applies to goods despatched by the sender and charged for by the Railway Administration at reduced rates, and it was said that until goods had been loaded on wagons for transport, or at all events until the Railway Company had given a receipt for the goods specifying that they were to be carried at the reduced rate, the Risk Note had no application to them, and the Railway Company were mere ordinary bailees of the goods. In their Lordships' opinion this contention cannot be supported. The appellant, in his plaint, pleaded that the 280 bales were "given in the possession of the defendant at the Amalner Station on the 5th February, 1890 and 9th February, 1920 respectively, for being carried to Bombay," and that "the defendant took them in his charge on or about the aforesaid dates as for being carried to Bombay." This pleading is fully supported by the consignment-notes signed by the appellant on the dates of the delivery of the goods, namely, on the 5th and the 7th February; for by each of these consignment-notes he requested the Railway Company to receive the goods therein described and forward them by goods train to Kurla. Further, the conditions endorsed on each of the consignment-notes provided that, when articles were delivered for conveyance, the responsibility of the Railway for the loss, destruction or deterioration of the articles should be subject to the provisions of s. 72 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890. In these circumstances it appears to their Lordships that the goods were delivered to the Railway Company for carriage and were so accepted and that consequently the responsibility of the Railway Company for each parcel of goods accrued forthwith on the delivery of the goods and the acceptance of such delivery—that is to say, on the 5th and 7th February—and accordingly that the Risk Note attached to them immediately on such delivery and acceptance. Reliance was placed on the provision contained in the Risk Note which prevented the note from attaching if the sender "shall have entered into a special contract in relation to any particular consignment," and it was suggested that in view of this provision, which was referred to as an option to the sender to enter into a special contract, the note did not attach until the goods were actually despatched. The answer is that no such special contract had been entered into, or indeed proposed, as to these particular goods, and accordingly that they fell under the general provisions of the Risk Note. This contention, therefore, also fails.

Lastly, it was argued on behalf of the appellant that the loss of the 74 bales was due to the wilful neglect of the Railway Administration or its servants, and accordingly that the case fell within the express exception contained in the Risk Note. Upon this point their Lordships find themselves in agreement with the opinion of Mr. Justice Madgavkar, which was expressed as follows:—

(1) (1891) 2 Q. B. 203; 60 L. J. Q. B. 488; 64 L. T. 93; 29 W. R. 716.

"The remaining question is whether any wilful neglect on the appellant's part was proved. It appears upon the evidence that the means of extinguishing fire were not as they ought to be in the case of a large cotton exporting station such as Amalner. One hydrant was certainly not working and the water was not at sufficient pressure. Probably, on the whole, this was neglect, but not, I think, wilful neglect within the meaning of Risk Note Form H, so that the Company should be made liable merely on this account."

In support of this view reference may be made to the cases of R. v. Downes (2) and R. v. Senior (3), in the latter of which cases Lord Russell interpreted the expression "wilful neglect" as meaning that the act is done deliberately and intentionally and not by accident or inadvertence, but so that the mind of the person who does the act goes with it. In the present case there was ample evidence of neglect, but no evidence or finding of wilful neglect; and accordingly it is unnecessary to consider the effect of the final proviso to the Risk Note which declares that "wilful neglect" shall not include fire.

For these reasons their Lordships agree with the decision of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, and they will humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal fails and should be dismissed with costs.

K. J. R.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Lattey & Dawe.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Solicitor, India Office.

(2) (1876) 1 Q. B. D. 25; 45 L. J. M. O. 8; 33 L. T. 675; 25 W. R. 278; 13 Cox. C. O. 111.

(3) (1899) 1 Q. B. 283; 68 L. J. Q. B. 175; 63 J. P. 8; 47 W. R. 367; 79 L. T. 562; 15 T. L. R. 102; 19 Cox. C. O. 219.

Note.—1. The decision of the Calcutta High Court in 20 C. W. N. 685 (32 Ind. Cas. 393) that, "when the law says 'signed' it means the writing of the name of the person who signs it either by his own hand or by the hand of an agent who must be disclosed and have authority", must now be taken to be overruled by the above pronouncement of the Judicial Committee.

2. Their Lordships left open the question whether the Risk Note (Form H) would protect the Railway Company from liability for loss of goods, where such loss was due to 'fire' caused through the 'wilful neglect' of the company's servants. A Division Bench of the Lahore High Court has recently answered the question in the affirmative; see 98 Ind. Cas. 329; 7 Lah. 319; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 341; 27 P. L. R. 507.

3. In construing the expression 'wilful neglect' occurring in the Risk Note, their Lordships quote with approval from the judgment of Lord Russell in R. v. Senior, (1899) 1 Q. B. 283; 68 L. J. Q. B. 175; 63 J. P. 8; 47 W. R. 367; 79 L. T. 562; 15 T. L. R. 102; 19 Cox. C. O. 219 a decision on the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, which is obviously not a Statute in pari materia with the Railways Act. It has, however, been held in India by almost all the High Courts that "when Acts are in pari materia they may be treated as forming a Code and may be read together; but when this is not so the construction which has been put upon one cannot be relied upon as a guide to the construction of another"; (see inter alia, 4 B. 515 (F. B.) and 22 M. 494 at pp. 502, 503). See also Lord Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 27, pp. 138, 139.—[K. J. R.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1274 OF 1924.

April 26, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Devadoss and
Mr. Justice Jackson.

KANDASAMI GOUNDAN, MINOR,

BY NEXT FRIEND AND MATERNAL

UNCLE LAKSHMANA GOUNDAN—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MARUDACHALA GOUNDAN AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Suit for partition—Father's debt—Son's liability—Debts not immoral or illegal—Institution of suit, effect of, on son's liability to pay.

Where, in a partition suit, a Hindu-son asks for a declaration that certain debts incurred by his father are not binding upon him, it is for him to show that those debts were incurred for illegal or immoral purposes and he can get relief only if he is able to show that. Otherwise the debts would be binding upon him.

In such a suit, the son cannot escape liability for a debt which is not illegal or immoral by the mere fact that he has filed a suit for partition, and a mortgagee-creditor who is able to obtain a personal decree against the father, after exhausting his remedy against the father's share, would be entitled to proceed against the son's share of the family property to the extent of the balance remaining due after executing the decree against the father's share.

Krishnasami Konan v. Ramasami Ayyar (1) and Devaguptapu Kameswaramman v. Vadaddi Venkata-subba Rao (2), distinguished.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Coimbatore, in A. S. No. 56 of 1924 (A. S. No. 225 on the file of the District Court, Coimbatore, preferred against that of the Court of the District Munsif, Coimbatore, in O. S. No. 1418 of 1921.

Mr. S. Muthiah Mudaliar, for the Appellant.

Messrs. K. S. Desikan and S. Srinivasa Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only point for consideration in second appeal is whether the direction as regards the mortgage evidenced by Ex. A is a proper direction. The contention of Mr. Muthiah Mudaliar is that after partition, a decree against the father cannot be executed against the son's share, and he relies on Krishnasami Konan v. Ramasami Ayyar (1) and Devaguptapu Rameswaramma v. Vadaddi Venkata- subba Rao (2). Those cases have no application to the present. The present is one for partition. In the partition suit the plaintiff asks for a declaration that certain debts incurred by the father are not binding upon him. It is for him to show that those debts were incurred for illegal or immoral purposes and if he is able to show that, then he could get relief. Otherwise the debts would be binding upon him. There is a distinct finding by the learned Subordinate Judge that the debts were not incurred for illegal or immoral purposes and are binding on the son. The debt secured by the mortgage is also one incurred not for illegal or immoral purposes and is binding upon the son. That being so, we fail to see how the plaintiff could escape liability for the debt by the mere fact that he has filed the plaint asking for a declaration that the debts incurred by the father are not binding upon him. If the mortgagee is able to obtain a personal decree against the father after exhausting his remedy against the father's share, then he would be entitled to go against the plaintiff's share of the family property to the extent of the balance remaining due after executing the decree against the father's share. The direction of the lower Court is correct.

We, therefore, dismiss the second appeal with costs.

V. N. V.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 24 Ind. Cas. 474; 38 M. 1120; 27 M. L. J. 112; (1914) M. W. N. 742.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 373 OF 1924.

March 21, 1927.

Present :—Justice Sir Kumaraswami Sastri, Kt., and Mr. Justice Ramesam.PARUCHURU SUDARSANA-CHARYULU LEGAL REPRESENTATIVE OF THE DECEASED PARUCHURU
VENKATACHARYULU—DEFENDANT
APPELLANT*versus*KOLLIMARLA SURYANARAYANA
AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 93—Sanction order signed by sheristadar for Collector, whether valid—Omission to pray for relief sanctioned, effect of.

Where an order granting sanction to institute a suit under s. 93, Civil Procedure Code, purporting to be passed by a Collector was signed by the sheristadar for the Collector and above the signature of the sheristadar the words "by order" appeared :

Held, that there was nothing illegal in the Collector delegating his power to sign to his sheristadar, that the official act of the sheristadar must be presumed to have been done properly until the contrary was proved, and that the order granting sanction was not invalid. [p. 131, col. 1.]

Somchand Bhikhabhai v. Chhagan Lal Khubchand (1), distinguished.

In dealing with cases where there is an omission as regards certain reliefs which are sanctioned by the Collector or Advocate-General the test is whether such omission is a material omission, one from which it can be said that it so alters the scope or character of the suit that if this matter was before the Collector or Advocate-General when the sanction was given, he would in all probability not have sanctioned the suit in the form in which it is ultimately brought. An omission which is immaterial and which would not affect the interests of the trust is not sufficient to vitiate the proceedings and the plaint filed in pursuance of the sanction. [p. 131, col. 2.]

The addition of a claim must be treated as a claim made without sanction and as such it is liable to be dismissed. [ibid.]

But the mere addition of a claim will not render the whole suit liable to be dismissed. [p. 131, col. 2; p. 132, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Bapatla, in O. S. No. 64 of 1922.

Mr. K. Kameswara Rao, for the Appellant.

Sir K. V. Reddi and Mr. P. V. Rangaram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a scheme which has been settled by the Subordinate Judge of Bapatla, with reference to the temple of Sree Venugopala-swami. There are several items of property mentioned in the plaint. The finding of the Subordinate Judge is that the temple owns only item No. 1 and that the income is about Rs. 360 per annum and that items Nos. 2 to 10 are the separate properties of the archakas. The archakas' contention was that even item No. 1 was a gift to them burdened with the expenses of the temple. The Subordinate Judge found that it was a gift to the god and not to the archakas burdened with any trust. He framed a scheme appointing trustees. Against this decree the appellant, one of the archakas, raises certain contentions. His main grounds are that the suit is bad as the plaint, as at present filed, does not conform to the sanction given by the Collector; secondly, that there is no necessity for a scheme being framed; and thirdly, that the amount given for expenses is too small. A memorandum of objections has been filed by the respondents objecting to the judgment in so far as it declared that items Nos. 2 to 10 do not belong to the temple and also objecting to Rs. 25 a month for the archakas' service. So far as item No. 1 is concerned, it is clear from the inam statement and the register that the property was treated as the property of the god. There is no suggestion that it was a property given to the archakas burdened with any trust. We think that the Judge was right in holding that it was the property of the temple and not of the archakas.

The next contention is that the suit ought to have been dismissed as it did not conform to the sanction given. The sanction given is filed as Exs. B and B-1 and the petition for sanction is filed as Ex. IV. The petition states that the property item No. 1 which is 30 acres and 50 cents is in the possession of the archaka Paruchuru Sudarsanacharyulu, that the yearly income is Rs. 488, that Rs. 84-0 is paid to the Sircar every year towards cess; that the total balance of this amount is being saved by the archaka and he is using the same for purchasing seri lands, etc., on his private account and that he is not using the same for the temple purposes. The petition also refers to some nominal dharmakarthis of the temple, and states that they do not take any interest in the temple affairs. It also refers to the ruined nature of the temple premises and the prayer is that permission should be granted to them to file a scheme suit against the dharmakarthis nominally appointed for the temple and the archaka. The order, Ex. B, is that permission under s. 93, Civil Procedure Code, is granted to two individuals mentioned therein to file a scheme suit in respect of the inam lands attached to the temple of Sri Vengopalaswami Varu. Ex. B-1, is the supplemental order which says, "the petitioners are informed that all suit reliefs may be prayed for in their plaints and there is no necessity to include them in orders issued from this office."

This was in answer to the petition asking the Collector to specify the reliefs which should be asked for in the plaint. It is argued that Ex. B-1 is not a proper order, because it purports to be signed only by the sheristadar and not by the Collector. It is suggested that it was the sheristadar who made the order and not the Collector. If the order was really passed by the sheristadar there can be little doubt that such an order is invalid. Somchand Bhikhabhai v. Chhagan Lal Khubchand (1) will be a case in point. But Ex. B-1 purports to be an order passed by Mr. Rutherford. All that Ex. B-1 shows is that it was signed by the sheristadar for Collector and above the signature of the sheristadar appear the words "by order." There is no evidence to show, that the sheristadar passed the order without reference to the Collector. Having regard to the fact that Ex. B-1 mentions the name of the Collector, Mr. Rutherford, as the person who passed the order it is impossible to hold that the sheristadar passed the order suo moto without reference to the Collector. Exhibit B-1 shows that it is signed by the sheristadar under the orders of the Collector. The Collector is not bound to sign every order that is issued to third persons and there is nothing wrong in the Collector delegating his power of signing the order to the sheristadar, and such an official act of the sheristadar is presumed to have been done properly until the contrary is proved. The order, as it stands, is perfectly valid.

The more substantial objection is that the plaint does not strictly conform to the order granting sanction, that the lands comprised in the plaint do not cover those in the petition, and that the nominal trustees mentioned in the petition have been omitted in the plaint. So far as the properties added are concerned they are distinct properties and as regards those properties the Subordinate Judge has dismissed the suit holding that they are not properties which belong to the temple.

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 803; 35 B. 243; 13 Bom. L. R. 207.

As regards the nominal trustees mentioned in the petition it does not appear who they are and the question is whether the omission of those trustees in the plaint, is fatal to the plaintiff's case. The contention of the appellant's Vakil is that any omission is sufficient to invalidate the suit filed in pursuance of the order and reliance is placed on Srinivasa v. Venkata (2) and Allabaksh Mira Mohadeen v. Sethi Chinna Fakruddin Sahib (3). It seems to us that in dealing with cases where there is an omission as regards certain reliefs which are sanctioned the test is to be whether such omission is a material omission, one from which it can be said that it so alters the scope or character of the suit that if this matter was before the Collector when the sanction was given he would in all probability not have sanctioned the suit in the form in which it is ultimately brought. For example there may be cases where some of the main reliefs for which sanction has been given were omitted, owing to collusion or fraud or other reasons and such an omission is not in the interest of the temple. In such cases, of course, there is ground for holding that a suit so framed which contains an omission so material that in all probability sanction would not have been given if a prayer had been made to the Collector or to the Advocate-General to frame a scheme with only the prayers ultimately stated in the plaint, would vitiate the proceedings as not being in substantial compliance with the sanction given. But it seems to us that there is no principle or reason in holding that any omission which is immaterial and which would not affect the interests of the temple would be sufficient to vitiate the proceedings and the plaint filed in pursuance of the sanction. If Srinivasa v. Venkata (2) or Allabaksh Mira Mohadeen v. Sethi Chinna Fakruddin Sahib (3) decided anything more than what we stated above, we would respectfully express our dissent.

As regards the addition of claims the position is different. The addition of claim may be treated as a claim made without sanction and as such it is liable to be dismissed. There is no reason why the mere addition of a claim should render

(2) 11 M. 148; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 103.

(3) 85 Ind. Cas. 1045; 21 L. W. 71; A. I. R. 1926 Mad 636.

the whole suit liable to be dismissed. It cannot be worse than a case of misjoinder where the parties will be confined to such portion of the claim as is not open to objection. In the present case there is no such omission as would render the whole proceedings invalid.

The third point is that the scheme is quite unnecessary. We think that such a scheme is necessary, especially when we look into the contentions of the archakas that the property is their own property burdened with a trust. In all these cases it is better to have a separate trustee who can supervise the work of the archakas and see that the temple affairs are properly conducted. There may be cases where the archakas have by a long custom acquired the position of trustees. But in the present case there is not such proof. Under these circumstances the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

As regards the memorandum of objections we do not think there is sufficient evidence to support the view that items Nos. 2 to 10 have been acquired out of the surplus income of the temple land of item No. 1. We have to note, that the archakas have to be remunerated for their services and the income of the temple is not shown to be such as to leave a surplus out of which lands could be purchased. We think that the Subordinate Judge was right in holding that items Nos. 2 to 10 are not the properties which belong to the temple especially when we find in the petition for sanction that item No. 1 alone is set out as the temple property.

It is next argued that Rs. 25 per month for the archaka is too high having regard to the income of the temple and also in view of the fact that the temple is to be repaired. The Subordinate Judge grants Rs. 25 a month on the footing that the income is Rs. 360 a year. If the income should be less in a particular year, the decree provides that there should be a proportionate reduction in the salary of the archaka. So this sum of Rs. 25 does not represent the permanent salary of the archaka burdened on the temple income which would prejudice the interest of the temple. If any repairs are to be done to the temple, we think there is nothing to prevent the trustees from applying to the public for donations and repair the same. We do not see any reason to interfere with the discretion of the Subordinate Judge as regards Rs. 25 granted to the archaka as salary. The memorandum of objections fails and is dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

A. N. A.

Appeal and memorandum of objections dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORDINARY ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 632
OF 1926.

October 11, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao.
BALASUNDARACHARI BY NEXT FRIEND.
VEDAVALLI AMMAL—PLAINTIFF

versus

A. V. KANNIAPPACHARI AND OTHERS,
—DEFENDANTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Mortgage—Inquiries by alienee, sufficiency of—Release, if amounts to partition—Evidence—Non-production of accounts—Adverse inference—Hindu Law—Widow—Right of residence in family house sold in execution of decree for binding debts.

Where a member of a joint family executes a deed of release, the burden of proving that it was intended to be inoperative is upon the person who sets up such a case. [p. 135, col. 1.]

Where a transaction of release by a member of a joint family amounts to a partition, the minor sons of the person executing the release will be held to have been represented by the father although they were not parties to the deed. [ibid.]

The widow of a co-parcener has no right to reside in the family house, which has been sold in execution of a decree for family debts. [p. 135, col. 2.]

Ramanadan v. Ranganmal (6), followed.

Where a person lends money on mortgage to the manager of a joint Hindu family for discharging debts contracted for purposes of a family business, after making all reasonable inquiries and being honestly satisfied that the money was required, the mortgage is binding on all the members of the family. [p. 134, col. 2.]

It is open to the Court to make an adverse inference against a party who wilfully suppresses accounts of a vital character and in his possession. [ibid.]

Suit by the plaintiff to set aside a sale held in pursuance of a decree of Court.

Messrs. S. Srinivasa Raghavan and T. Krishnasami Aiyar, for the Plaintiff.

Messrs. N. Panchanada Aiyar and M. Sundara Aiyar, for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—The following pedigree elucidates the facts of the case.

In this suit the plaintiff asks that a sale held in pursuance of a decree passed by this Court should be set aside so far as his interest in the property sold is concerned. The decree was obtained by the 8th defendant on the footing of a mortgage executed in his favour by Munusami Achari, Arunagiri Achari (4th defendant) and Vedagiri Achari (5th defendant). At the sale held the 9th defendant purchased the property in question. I must preface my judgment by saying that the only question which I am asked to try is, whether this sale is binding upon the plaintiff. The 9th defendant supported by the 8th defendant is contesting the suit. The other defendants either do not appear to defend the action or side with the plaintiff.

The principal point raised in the case is, that Kanniappa, the father of the plaintiff separated from the family after executing a release deed dated 12th February, 1912, and that the result of that transaction was that the entire branch of Kanniappa including his sons became severed from the rest of the family which continued to be joint. It follows from this contention that the plaintiff had no interest in the property mortgaged or subsequently sold. If I accept this argument the plaintiff is bound to fail.

It is urged for the plaintiff that the release deed was a sham and that his father nevertheless continued to be a member of the joint family. In the alternative, it is contended for him that in any event the release did not and could not affect the sons of Kanniappa and that the latter continued to be members of the joint family although their father severed his connection with it.

One of the questions raised, as I have said, is, was the release deed intended to be an effective document or was it a mere sham? I shall assume in favour of the plaintiff that it was a sham and shall first proceed to deal with the case on that footing. The case of the plaintiff is put in this way. Kanniappa was incurring debts and it was considered necessary to take a release from him only with the object of preventing third parties from lending him monies. The purpose of the deed was to deceive the public and not to separate Kanniappa. Whether this be a fact or not, let us look at the state of things as they existed in 1921. Kanniappa would in the usual course have been the manager, but he must be deemed to have renounced that right in favour of the next eldest member. Let me state the rule which I wish to apply, in the form of an illustration. If A has two younger brothers B and C, A certainly can renounce his right to manage in favour of B and A's minor sons will be bound by that act and they cannot be heard to say that B is not thereafter the manager. The purpose of the deed on the plaintiff's showing was to deceive the public into thinking that Kanniappa did not continue a member of the co-parcenary. He could not, consistent with the deed, profess to act as manager, for that would be to defeat the very object of the transaction. It, therefore, seems to me that the management in 1921 devolved upon the junior member Arunagiri and, as I have shown, he was one of the executants of the mortgage, which cannot, therefore, be impeached on the ground that the executants had no authority. Then remains the question, was the mortgage executed for a purpose binding on the family? There can be no doubt on the evidence that the monies were borrowed for family necessity and benefit. The facts are these. The family was conducting a carriage factory and in 1919 some money was required for the business. Arunagiri and Munusami borrowed Rs. 1,000 from Raju Chetty and executed in his favour a promissory note and deposited with him title deeds of the suit property by way of an equitable mortgage. The family required further sums of money, Raju Chetty was unable to advance the same and a request was then made to the 8th defendant, a medical practitioner, to lend the sum. He thereupon lent Rs. 3,000 out of which Rs. 1,210 was paid off to Raju Chetty. The balance of Rs. 1,790 was required for the business. The 8th defendant has deposed that all the three executants represented to him that the concern was in urgent need of funds. They told him that there were old carriages and that if they were repaired they could be sold and money realised. It is significant that at that time these three executants were alone attending to the business. Kanniappa, the evidence has clearly shown, was then conducting a different business. His sons were taking no interest in the concern. The only members, therefore, who were in a position to make any representation were the three executants and it was they that stated to the 8th defendant that the money was urgently needed for the business. The account books of the business if produced would reveal whether the money was utilized for it or not. Some members of this family must be in possession of these account books. Why have they been withheld from the Court? Defendants Nos. 4 and 5 have not chosen to defend the action though in all probability they are behind the scenes helping the plaintiff. Why have they not gone into the witness-box? I am prepared to act on the evidence of the 8th defendant and have not the slightest doubt that the representation was made as stated by him. What further enquiry was then called for? Ordinarily it will be futile in the case of a trade to make enquiries regarding it of strangers. In the very nature of things such enquiries would yield no useful result. In my opinion, the 8th defendant made all reasonable enquiries and was honestly satisfied that the money was required. Though this would be sufficient to support the mortgage, I am prepared to go further and hold that the money was actually required for a family purpose. The persons within whose knowledge these facts are, are defendants Nos. 4 and 5 and they have not been examined on the plaintiff's side. The books of the concern have been withheld. From these facts I must infer that the business really required the money and that it was even utilized for it. The 8th and the 9th defendants are strangers to the family and they have placed before the Court such evidence as is available. The best evidence has been withheld by the plaintiff and the other members of his family. In Murugesam Pillai v. Manickavasaka Desika Gnana Sambanda Pandara Sannadhi (1) the Judicial Committee made an inference in similar circumstances against the party who wilfully suppressed the accounts. Then there are two other sums that were borrowed; first, Rs. 1,000 on a promissory note dated 26th September, 1921. It is not denied that two marriages were at that time performed in the family and there is nothing to suggest that the amount borrowed was excessive. Secondly, on the 5th of July, 1922, another sum of Rs. 200 was borrowed on a promissory note and on the evidence that borrowing also was for a family necessity as some dowry had to be given to a girl of the family. These are the three debts (Rs. 3,000, Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 200), on which the previous suit was based which led to the passing of the mortgage decree and the sale. I am of the opinion that all the debts are wholly binding on the family. I have so far dealt with the case on the footing (most favourable to the plaintiff) that notwithstanding the release, Kanniappa and his sons continued to be members of the joint family. On this finding alone the plaintiff's suit may be dismissed.

But was the release deed a sham? The evidence of the 8th defendant and of Loganatha Mudaliar is clearly to the effect that subsequent to this deed, the 1st defendant was not living in the family house but at No. 5 Bungalow Street. The evidence also points to the fact that the 1st defendant was conducting an independent carriage factory while the old concern was being conducted by the other members of the family. It must then be remembered that Kanniappa was not in 1912 a young man who had just come of age but was an experienced and elderly man of the age of 43. The onus is upon the plaintiff to show that the release was intended to be inoperative and he has signally failed to do so. There is no doubt, therefore, that Kanniappa ceased after this transaction to be a member of the family.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 659; 40 M. 402; 21 M. L. T. 288; 32 M. L. J. 369; 15 A. L. J. 281; 1 P. L. W. 457; 5 L. W. 759; 21 C. W. N. 761; 19 Bom. L. R. 456; 25 C. L. J. 589; (1917) M. W. N. 487; 44 I. A. 98 (P. C.).

It is a more difficult question to decide—Did Kanniappa alone separate from the family or did he in executing the deed represent also his sons who were then minors? In the view I am taking of the case, it is unnecessary to decide this question. It is true that what is termed a release deed may in effect be a partition deed. Umed Babar v. Khushalbhai (2) and Ramdas v. Chabildas (3). If the transaction amounts to a partition, it is equally true that although the minor sons may not be parties to the deed, they will be nevertheless represented by the father, whose act is ordinarily binding upon them. Turning to facts, there are indications to show that the parties at any rate believed that the entire branch became severed. It is said for the plaintiff that neither Kanniappa nor his adult sons took any part in the transaction. I have set forth above of 1919 and of 1921. The title deeds were allowed to be in the possession of the other members and on the plaintiff's own showing, no member of his branch took the slightest interest in the concerns of the family. Further more, the sons of Kanniappa were trained as silversmiths whereas every other member was attending to carriage factory. But, as I have said, I do not propose to decide the question whether Kanniappa's sons became separated or not. Granting then that they continued to be joint, they were fully represented in the transactions by their uncles Arunagiri and Munusami. The former, as I have said, was constituted the manager and every member would be bound by his acts done in that capacity. What, then, is there to show that the interest of Kanniappa's sons (granting they had an interest) was not intended to be bound by the acts of the manager. He was competent to mortgage their interest, he purported to mortgage the whole property and there is nothing in the deed to repel the natural inference that what was intended to be conveyed was the entire property. Sankaranarayanam Pillai v. Rajamani (4) and Unnamali Ammal v. Abhoy Chetty (5) are directly in point. The recital in the mortgage-deed "there are no heirs to the aforesaid house other than ourselves" does not show that the right of the sons of Kanniappa was denied; even if it was, the statement may be treated, in the circumstances, as surplusage. In this connection, the question may be asked, if the 5th defendant executed the mortgage, why did not the 2nd defendant who was also an adult join in this execution. The answer is twofold. In the first place the 5th defendant might be older than the 2nd and no evidence on this point has been adduced by the plaintiff. Secondly the 5th defendant was actually conducting the carriage factory, whereas the 2nd did not interest himself in it at all. I have, therefore, come to the conclusion that even on the assumption that the plaintiff and his brothers continue to remain members of the family, the transactions are binding upon them.

On behalf of the 10th defendant, it is urged that she as a widow of a co-parcener has a right to reside in the house in question (the same being the family house) and that I must make a declaration to that effect. The debts which led to the Court sale are family debts and they are, therefore, binding upon her and I am unable to conceive how such a right can be claimed. If authority is needed, Ramanadan v. Rangammal (6) covers the point.

In the result, the plaintiff's suit is dismissed and I direct him to pay under O. XXXIII, r. 11, the costs of the Government. He shall also pay the costs of the 8th and the 9th defendants (one set.)

V. N. V.

Suit dismissed.

A. N. A.

(4) 83 Ind. Cas. 196; 47 M. 462; 46 M. L. J. 314; 34 M. L. T. 152; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 550; 20 L. W. 357.

(5) 92 Ind. Cas. 524; 50 M. L. J. 172; 23 L. W. 168.

(6) 12 M. 260 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 531 (F. B.).

(2) 2 Ind. Cas. 426; 11 Bom. L. R. 396.

(3) 7 Ind. Cas. 134; 12 Bom. L. R. 621.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 183
OF 1925.CONVERTED AS APPEAL No. 225 OF 1927.
July 29, 1927.Present: — Mr. Justice Ramesam and
Mr. Justice Cornish.THE BOARD OF CONTROL
Sri THYAGARAJA SWAMI
DEVASTHANAM, TIRUVALUR REPRESENTED BY ITS PRESIDENT

S. A. S. R. M. RAMANATHAM

CHETTIAR—PETITIONER—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BALAJEE AMMAL AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS Nos. 6, 12, 15 AND 17

—RESPONDENTS.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 47, 92—
Public trust—Scheme decree—Directions to defendant to perform particular acts, whether executable—Appellability of decree—Conversion of execution application into suit.*

It cannot be laid down as a general rule that all scheme decrees under s. 92 of the Civil Procedure Code are always declaratory and can never be executable. The question whether a decree framing a scheme is executable or not depends on the language and on the scope of the decree or of that particular part of the decree in respect of which the question arises. Such a decree may in part be declaratory and in part directory. [p. 140, col. 2.]

Directions in such a decree to the defendant to perform some duty, such as the payment of money, either at a point of time or periodically, or to present a proper budget at specified times and make particular payments of money to the treasurer are matters intended to be enforced in execution. [p. 139, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where an application for enforcing the duties imposed by a scheme decree was disposed of by the trial Court in execution proceedings and one of the parties preferred an appeal from the order of the trial Court:

Held, that even assuming that the matter could not be disposed of on an application for execution, it was open to the High Court to treat the application as a suit under s. 47 (2), Civil Procedure Code, subject to any question of jurisdiction or limitation and to entertain the appeal as an appeal from a decree in such a suit. [p. 139, col. 2.]

Damodarbhat v. Bhogilal (7) and Prayag Doss Ji Varu v. Tirumala Srirangacharlavaru (10), relied on.

Sevak Jeranchood Bhogilal v. Dakore Temple Committee (1), explained.

Appeal against on order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Tiruvalur, dated the 10th October, 1924, and passed in E. P. R. No. 43 of 1924, in O. S. No. 125 of 1921, on the file of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Negapatam.

Messrs. S. Varadachari and A. Swaminadha Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Messrs. P. N. Marthandam Pillai, K. S.

Champagesa Aiyangar and A. Ganesa Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Ramesam, J.—This is an appeal against the order of the Sub-Court of Tiruvalur passed on a petition by the President of the Board of Control of Sri Thyagaraja Swami Devasthanam of Tiruvalur. The Board of Control was appointed in pursuance of the scheme framed by this Court in A. S. No. 136 of 1920, on appeal from O. S. No. 52 of 1913, Temporary Sub-Court, Tanjore.

A preliminary objection has been taken by the respondents that no appeal lies. The scheme framed by the High Court contains a clause (cl. 27) that any of the parties or the Board of Control as a body or the Advocate-General are at liberty to apply to the Court for any modification of the scheme. But the present application is not an application for any modification of the scheme and does not come under this clause. In the present application the President of the Board of Control complains that some of the Kattalaiddars would not send complete budgets of their receipts and expenditure nor would deliver the cash in their hands to the treasurer as provided by cls. 8 and 13 of the scheme and the President applies to the Court for getting the clause enforced, by attachment of the properties or by detention of the recalcitrant defendants. The Subordinate Judge has not given the relief sought by the petitioner. Hence this appeal.

The respondents in support of their preliminary objection rely on the following cases; Sevak Jeranchood Bhogilal v. Dakore Temple Committee (1), Runganatha Thathachariar v. Krishnaswami Thathachariar (2), Bava C. Vythalanga Mudaliar v. Mahadeva Iyer (3), Sivan Pillai v. Venkateswara Iyer (4), Abdul Hakim Baig v. Mahomed Burrammuddin (5) and Ryali Brahmayya v. Venkatasurya Narayanamurthy (6).

(1) 87 Ind. Cas. 313; 49 M. L. J. 25; 23 A. L. J. 555; A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 155; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 117; (1925) M. W. N. 474; 2 O. W. N. 535; 41 C. L. J. 628; 22 L. W. 246; 27 Bom. L. R. 872; 30 C. W. N. 459 (P. C.).

(2) 75 Ind. Cas. 189; 47 M. L. J. 237; (1923) M. W. N. 664; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 369.

(3) 91 Ind. Cas. 794; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 659.

(4) 92 Ind. Cas. 556; 22 L. W. 796; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 130.

(5) 95 Ind. Cas. 720; 49 M. L. J. 580; (1926) M. W. N. 226; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 559.

(6) 94 Ind. Cas. 554; 50 M. L. J. 409; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 557.

Most of the decisions of the High Court rely on the first of the above decisions which is a decision of the Privy Council. Mr. Varadachariar who appears for the appellant while conceding that most of these other decisions are correctly decided attacked the correctness of the reasoning in the judgment, especially the inference sought to be drawn from the Privy Council decision. It becomes, therefore, necessary, to examine what was exactly decided by the Privy Council and how far the decision supports the inference sought to be drawn from it by Judges of this Court. In that case there was a scheme framed by the Privy Council. The scheme provided for the appointment of a temple committee and empowered the committee to make rules. There is also a provision for the rules being sanctioned or modified by the District Court. There is another clause for the alteration of the scheme by the High Court of Bombay. The committee made the rules and the rules were submitted to the District Court for sanction and the District Judge modified the rules. There was an appeal to the High Court under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, against the order of the District Judge. There was also an independent application to the High Court for the alteration of the scheme. But no orders were passed on this application. The High Court, on appeal from the District Court, modified the order of the District Judge. But the Privy Council held that no appeal lay to the High Court under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, and it should have been rejected. They pointed out that the High Court might have exercised the power conferred on it by the clause which enabled it to modify the scheme. The Privy Council did not say that if the High Court exercised such power that would not have been in execution and no appeal lay against it. They expressed no opinion on the matter. All that they decided was that the order of the District Judge modifying the rules made by the Committee was not an order in execution. So far as the alteration of the rules is concerned it cannot be said that anything was sought to be enforced by one party as judgment creditor against another part as judgment debtor who is under some obligation and it cannot be said that there was any question in execution between the two parties. Under the scheme of the Privy Council the rules must be placed before the District Court for its sanction and the District Court has power suo moto to sanction or alter the rules. It is, therefore, doubtful whether the decision of the Privy Council applies to a case where one party who is conferred a certain right by the scheme seeks to enforce the right against some other who is under a corresponding obligation and for this purpose goes to Court. It cannot be said that the Privy Council decided that such a matter is not a matter in execution between the parties.

The next case in the order of the date is Runganatha Thathachariar v. Krishnasami Thathachariar (2). The learned Judges who decided that case seem to think that when a scheme was asked and the scheme was framed there was nothing more to be done in the suit and nothing to be executed; but it seems to me that, whatever might have been asked, where the decree gives something more and provides for the carrying out of the earlier part of the decree, it may be said to be executable. It is more a question of the interpretation of the terms of the decree and there cannot be any general rule. It is true that a scheme decree, in general, by its very nature is a declaratory decree. But it is possible that some particular provisions provide for enforcement of parts of the scheme. I do not see any reason why such portions of a scheme decree may not be regarded as executable. The decision in Damodarbhat v. Bhogilal (7) is such a case. The grounds on which that decision was to be distinguished by Oldfield, J., seem to me untenable. In that case there was a prayer to take past accounts, but in the final decree there was a direction to keep accounts for the future, that is from the date of the decree and to submit them annually to the District Court and it was this provision that was sought to be enforced in Court. The High Court held that an appeal lay and that it was a question in execution. Oldfield, J., observed that as the taking of accounts was a relief asked for specially in the suit and granted independently of the framing of the scheme, that decision may be distinguished on this ground; but the taking of accounts prayed for in the plaint related to past accounts whereas the decree related to the keeping of future accounts—accounts after the date of the decree. Again Oldfield, J., seems to think that if there was a provision in the scheme for the enforcement of its other provisions, then it may be enforced in execution. It is not always that decrees of Courts, even where executable actually provide for their being enforced in execution. Where a decree directs the defendant to pay some money to the plaintiff, it is executable from its very nature and one does not expect a provision in the decree that it shall be enforced in execution. That may be so in a plain case, and it may be that in ambiguous cases a provision of the kind removes the ambiguity and solves the difficulty. When there is no such provision it is a difficult matter to decide whether a particular clause in a scheme is executable or not. Anyhow it is not clear to me that the decision in Damodarbhat v. Bhogilal (7), is wrongly decided, nor does it seem to me that the consideration that the decree will have to be kept up in perpetuity for the purpose of execution has much bearing on the matter. A decree awarding maintenance to widow annually may be executable for nearly 100 years. A decree giving an injunction in respect of a lease for 999 years may be executable for a very long period. The other alternative remedy which is suggested in most of the decisions is that a party seeking relief must seek his relief by way of a suit. Some cases say that it is a suit under s. 92, Civil Procedure Code. But where a suit under s. 92 has already been filed and a scheme framed and the only object is to carry out the provisions of the scheme, it does not seem to me that this new suit should be a suit under s. 92 unless it is said that the new suit must always be for the removal of a trustee for disobedience and cannot seek for the enforcement of the provisions of the scheme in any way. I do not understand the defendants to contend for this. The inconvenience of driving a party like the Board of Control in this case to a suit for every breach on the part of the trustees is obvious. But the whole matter is not free from difficulty. Probably, if the question of principle is once decided further trouble on the part of the Kattalaidars need not be apprehended.

(7) 24 B. 45; 1 Bom. L. R. 509; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 567.

The next case is Bava C. Vythelinga Mudaliar v. Mahadeva Iyer (3). This was in connection with the same temple. The petition there was to cancel the appointment of a superintendent by the trustees and for the appointment of a new person by the Court. In that case there was nothing to execute. In fact it was found by the High Court that the scheme did not authorise the action of the Subordinate Judge and no appeal lay to this Court. The High Court set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge exercising their power of revision. There was a contention in that case that an appeal lay. The learned Judges relied on Runganatha Thathachariar v. Krishnaswami Thathachariar (2). It seems to me that that was a case in which there was nothing in execution and I agree with the decision that no appeal lay. It was unnecessary to rely on Runganatha Thathachariar v. Krishnaswami Thathachariar (2).

The next case is Sivan Pillai v. Venkateswara Iyer (4). In that case the remedy sought was the removal of a trustee. It may be that so far as the removal of a trustee is concerned, the only remedy is a regular suit and cannot be done under the scheme. Anyhow, certainly it is not a matter for execution because it cannot be said that any provision of the scheme was being executed. I entirely agree with the decision that no appeal lay, but I am not able to agree with the remark at page 798* of Spencer, J:

"In the light of the recent Privy Council decision in Sevak Jeranchod Bhogilal v. Dakore Temple Committee (1) and the decisions of this High Court in Loka Sikhamani Mudaliar v. Thiagaraya Chettiar (8) and Runganatha Thathachariar v. Krishnaswami Thathachariar (2), I am of opinion that an appeal will not lie against the order made by a Court exercising a power given to it by a provision in the scheme and that such an order is not an order made in execution."

As I have already observed there is no general decision by the Privy Council that an order made under the scheme is not an order in execution. It is unnecessary in that case to rely on the decision of the Privy Council or Runganatha Thathachariar v. Krishnaswami Thathachariar (2).

The next decision is Majeti Antayya v. Lingambhotla Venkataramayya (9). In that case there was an application by the Archakas to get their salaries and also a sum of money. Neither the judgment nor the printed papers show what the exact terms of the scheme were. We agree with the observation in the case that a scheme suit generally may be regarded as declaratory. But it does not follow that there may not be some particular provisions in the decree framing the scheme which are capable of execution. That case certainly is rightly decided, but I do not see how it helps us. An Archaka is entitled to his salary by reason of his position as Archaka and a suit for his salary is like any other suit where some money is due from one person to another and it cannot be said that such a suit is for carrying out of provisions of the scheme. That suit was not obviously for the carrying out of any provision in the scheme and, therefore, there was no appeal and the order of the lower Court was set aside in revision. In Ryali Brahmayya v. Venkatasurya Narayanamurthy (6) also the suit was for the salaries of the Archakas. I entirely agree with the decision. But I cannot agree with the remark in the judgment that a general clause in the scheme providing for application to the Court with regard to the scheme is ultra vires. A different view was taken by Oldfield, and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ., in Runganatha Thathachariar v. Krishnaswami Thathachariar (2) already mentioned. If the relief sought for is the removal of a trustee it may be ultra vires but if it is for the carrying out of the details of the scheme, it cannot be opposed to s. 92 and I do not see any reason why such a thing should not be enforced in execution. The case itself is, of course correctly decided, but I doubt if the remark that there can be no provision in the scheme providing for execution of some clause is correct.

(8) 95 Ind. Cas. 5; (1926) M. W. N. 233; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 655.

(9) 38 Ind. Cas. 415; 5 L. W. 596 (1917) M. W. N. 420.

*Page of 22 L. W.—[Ed.]

The next decision is Abdul Hakin Baig v. Mahomed Burrammuddin (5). This also relates to the removal of a trustee and it may be, that the clause in the scheme providing for the removal of a trustee by way of execution is ultra vires. It is unnecessary to discuss this case any further.

The result of the above discussion is that, while I think that all the cases have been correctly decided on the actual facts, I am unable to agree with some of the observations made in them. I do not see any reason why there may not be some clause in the scheme which amounts to a direction to the defendants to perform some duty, such as the payment of money either at a point of time or periodically, and why such a direction should not be executable. Whether it is executable or not depends on the intention of the decree. While generally a scheme decree may be declaratory specific parts thereof may contemplate execution. It is unnecessary to expressly provide for the enforcement of such a clause by execution. Though where there is an express provision to that effect it makes matters clear, and such a provision except as to the removal of a trustee is not ultra vires. In the case of the removal of a trustee it may be that the only remedy is by a suit under s. 92. In the present case it may be said that the presentation of a proper budget and payment of the monies to the treasurer are matters intended to be enforced in execution. I do not see how the payment of monies to the treasurer is different from a maintenance decree.

But assuming that there is some doubt as to the intention of the scheme and that a suit is the proper remedy, it is clear that the suit is not a suit under s. 92 and does not require any sanction. The second clause of s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, provides that the Court can convert a petition into a suit and a suit into a petition subject to any question of jurisdiction or limitation. In this case there is no question of jurisdiction or limitation. The policy of the Legislature in enacting that clause was to avoid all technicalities and to enable Courts to get at the root of the matter in dispute between the parties. In none of the cases cited was reliance placed on this s. 47. Nor could it be on the facts of these cases. In the present case I think that the petition of the President of the Board of Control may be converted into a suit under the said clause and as the matter is incapable of valuation the petitioner will pay a Court-fee of Rs. 100 in the Court below and in the appeal before us. If the petition is regarded as a suit there is no objection to the appeal before us. I, therefore, proceed to consider the merits of the case.

On the merits the respondents contend that all that was intended by the scheme as to the Kattalaidars was that their budget should deal only with such portions of their duties as related to the temple proper or what is called pagoda service, and that, as to the other duties they need not submit the budget to the Board of Control, nor need they pay the monies relating to such other duties to the treasurer. I have not the smallest hesitation in rejecting this contention. The judgment in the main appeal is now reported as Manicka Vachaka Desika Gyana Sambanda Pandara Sannadhi v. Vaithilinga Mudaliar (10). While in the judgment, Spencer, J., and myself were anxious to support the independence of the Kattalaidars and not destroy their individuality as the Subordinate Judge did, we were also anxious to point out that all the duties of the Kattalaidars were duties either directly or indirectly connected with the temple for instance in the case of Annadanam Kattalai though the 5th duty namely pagoda service relates to the temple and others such as sheltering the travellers, distribution of food and keeping of water pandals, lights, etc., do not directly relate to the temple, in theory all these duties are also indirectly connected with the temple. The person who endowed the property to the Kattalai was thinking of providing for the charities to be carried on in the name of Thiagarajaswami so that the particular idol may be glorified. The recipients of the shelter for travellers and the supply of food and water extol the charity as one of Thiagarajaswami and in that way they are all charities of Thiagarajaswami. It is true that we said that the income of the Kattalais did not belong to the idol. But in their expenditure the idol was interested and in that way they are all endowments connected with the temple and in that sense all the incomes of all of the Kattalais are funds of the Devasthanam, and this was all that was meant by the use of the words 'funds of the Devasthanam' in the other clauses of the scheme, such as for example cl. 16. That this is our intention is clear from para. 13 which provides that the trustees of the respective Kattalais shall hand over all the cash proceeds to the Treasurer. Similarly, budgets that relate to the expenditure and income of Kattalais must show details of all the expenditure whether directly connected with the temple or not but in theory redounding to the glory of the Swami. I am, therefore, of opinion that the order of the Subordinate Judge is incorrect and that the respondents should submit complete budgets relating to all the expenses and pay all the monies to the Treasurer and get back the amounts form the Treasurer as expenses are being incurred.

(10) 74 Ind. Cas. 115; 18 L.W. 247; A. I. R. 1924 Mad 168.

It is said that in the case of the Palayee Kattalai which related to the feeding of Brahmins every day it is inconvenient to get money every day. We never said that the money should be taken every day. Money may be drawn from the Treasurer once a fortnight or a month or in some other way as the Board of Control and the Kattalaidar may agree. There is nothing in the scheme precluding such an arrangement between the parties, but it is clear that all the income must be handed over to the Treasurer and afterwards taken back as occasions arise. The contention raised on behalf of the Ardhajama Kattalai that subject to certain duties in connection with the temple the endowments are to be treated as the property of the Kattalaidar comes too late. The whole suit proceeded on the footing that all the Kattalais are appendages to the temple. They are independent only in the sense that the individuality of the trustees should be kept up and each Kattalaidar is a separate trustee, but there is no question of private ownership. It was never argued in the main case and the Subordinate Judge who tried the suit decided against the Ardhajama Kattalaidar. It is too late to repeat it now.

We allow the appeal and reversing the order of the Subordinate Judge direct that the respondents should submit complete budgets of their receipts and expenditure and also deliver all the income to the Treasurer. The respondents will pay the costs of the appellant both here and in the Court below including the Court-fees now directed to be paid by the appellant.

The appellant will pay the Court-fees within a fortnight.

Cornish, J.—I agree, and will add a few words only on the point whether the decree is executable.

It appears to me that the question whether a decree framing a scheme for a charitable trust is executable or not must depend on the language and on the scope of the decree or of that particular part of the decree in respect of which the question arises. From the nature of the case such a decree may in part be declaratory and in part directory. It may provide a specific procedure for carrying out particular provisions of the scheme, and yet leave other provisions of the scheme enforceable by execution. See Damodarbhut v. Bhogilal (7). The view expressed in Ranganatha

Thathachariar v. Krishnaswami Thathachariar (2) that when once the Court has passed a decree framing a scheme the decree becomes non-executable must, I think, be taken as intended to refer to the particular question which arose out of the scheme which the Court had to consider in that case. There certainly appears to be no justification for accepting that view as a rule of general application. In the case which is now before us the question is whether cls. 8 and 13 of the scheme decree are executable. I think it clear as a matter of construction that these clauses are not merely declaratory. They are directory. They direct particular acts to be done by the Kattailaidar and these directions obviously involve the consequential right on the part of the Board of Control to have the performance of the particular acts enforced. Then, does the scheme, either in terms or by implication exclude the right of the Board of Control to enforce these directions by execution of the decree. The only provision in the scheme which bears on this question is cl. 27 which enables any of the parties or the Board of Control to apply to the Court for modification of the scheme. But cl. 27 has no application to the particular question before us. A modification of the scheme which means an alteration of the rules or directions would certainly not be an appropriate or an effective remedy for the non-compliance with the directions in cls. 8 and 13. It appears to me that execution of the scheme decree is the proper remedy. Authority for this conclusion is to be found in Damodarbhat v. Bhogilal (7) and Prayag Dass Ji Varu v. Tirumala Sriranga Charlavaru (11).

But then it has been said that since the Privy Council decision in the Dakore Temple case Sevak Jeranchood Bhogilal v. Dakore Temple Committee (1) the rulings in Damodarbhat v. Bhogilal (7) and Prayag Das Ji Varu v. Tirumala Srirangacharlavaru (11) can no longer be considered as good law [See Sivan Pillai v. Venkateswara Iyer (4), Ryali Brahmayya v. Venkataswarya Narayanamurthy (6) and Majeti Antayya v. Lingambhotla Venkataramayya (9)]. I am unable to find in the Privy Council judgment any ground for that conclusion. The Privy Council as I read the judgment decided no more than the question which was before it, namely, that, cl. 20 of the particular scheme having defined the procedure for modifying or altering the scheme the Court had no jurisdiction to modify or alter the scheme except by the prescribed procedure. Their Lordships confined themselves to that question and nowhere in the judgment is there any discussion of the proposition that directions in a scheme decree are in no circumstances executable.

It is not however, necessary to dispose of the case on this ground. I think that having regard to the contention that has been raised by the Kattalaidars on the constructions of the scheme, a more satisfactory way is to proceed under s. 47 (1) of the Civil Procedure Code. I agree with the order proposed by my brother.

V. N. V.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL SUIT No. 257 OF 1921.

October 12, 1926.

Present:—Sir Victor Murray Coutts Trotter, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Ramiesam.

KRUTTIVENTI SURAPPA (DEAD) AND

OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

KRUTTIVENTI SUNDARAMMA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Deed of affiliation—Construction—Practice—Suit to declare adoption void and alienations not binding—Consideration partly used for discharge of binding debts—Equitable relief for refund of binding portion of consideration, whether can be granted.

A person purporting to affiliate a son executed in his favour a document which provided: "further you, becoming a son to me, will be such an owner of all my properties as a son is," and there were no other words of disposition to make a deed of gift or Will. A reversioner sued after the death of the executant for a declaration that the said affiliated son was not entitled to the rights of an adopted son and that alienations made by him were not binding beyond the lifetime of the widow:

Held, (1) that the document, not being a Will or gift did not operate to transfer any interest in favour of the affiliated son; [p. 142, col. 2.]

(2) that having regard to the frame of the suit and the relief prayed for, no directions could be given to the plaintiff to pay the binding portion of the considerations for the alienations since it was impossible to determine in the suit what the equities were between the parties. [p. 144, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Masulipatam, dated the 15th November, 1920, in O. S. No. 28 of 1919 (O. S. No. 8 of 1919 on the file of the District Court, Kistna).

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyer, for the Appellants.
Mr. P. Somasundarama, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit by a reversioner for declaring that the alleged adoption of the 2nd defendant is not true and valid and that his alienations are not binding on him beyond the lifetime of the 1st defendant. The last male owner Krishna Rao, died on 20th April, 1913. The 1st defendant is his widow. Before Krishna Rao's death, he executed Ex. I (dated 16th December, 1912) described in the Court below as an affiliation deed. The Subordinate Judge held that Ex. I operates as an affiliation deed and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appeals.

If the 2nd defendant had not been validly adopted, he can succeed only on the footing that Ex. I was a gift or settlement or a Will. The Subordinate Judge says "a Hindu can affiliate a son instead of actually adopting him, and give him his properties. It is, no doubt, true that unlike an adoption, mere affiliation will not create a right in the person affiliated to the properties of the person who affiliates. But in Ex. I we see words distinctly indicating the transfer of Krishnan's properties to the 2nd defendant."

We have, therefore, to see if it purports to be a transfer of the property inter vivos (by way of gift or settlement). The last sentence of the document (which is in Telugu), if properly translated, runs thus:—"further, you, becoming a son to me, will be such an owner of all my properties as a son is." This certainly cannot amount to a gift or transfer of all Krishna Rao's properties. At best, it contemplates that the 2nd defendant should be associated with him as a joint owner on the footing that both are members of a joint family. In the absence of an adoption, they cannot be members of a joint family but may become tenants in common, i. e., the document might be a gift of an undivided half of the properties of Krishna Rao if there are appropriate words indicating gift. It is clearly not a Will of the whole or half of his properties. There is no reference of any kind to Krishna Rao's death. In this respect, this case is a stronger case than that in Tirugnanapal v. Ponnammal Nadathi (1), where the document was styled a Will, and referred to the executant's death. These circumstances are absent in this document which was also stamped with a ten-rupee stamp. It was not stamped as a gift-deed. It was registered in Book IV and not in Book I. There are no words of gift or transfer in it. The executant was merely stating the legal consequences of adoption and what the rights of the 2nd defendant as adopted son, as he believed him to be, were. The document is merely an adoption deed. This is the view of the Subordinate Judge. In this view, viz., that it is neither a Will nor a document, transferring the property it seems to me to be unnecessary to discuss the cases relied on by the respondent. They are cases of Wills which operate to transfer the properties of the testator after his death—the only point discussed being whether the legatee takes as persona designata or whether he should fill the character of an adopted or aurasa son, as a condition precedent to his taking as a legatee [see Nidhoomoni Debya v. Saroda Pershad Mookerjee (2), Subbarayar v. Subbammal (3), Rama Krishna Rao v. Court of Wards (4), Khub Singh v. Ramji Lal (5) case of gift and Will, and Bai Dhondubai v. Laxmanrao Trimbakrao Javodekar (6)]. We have, in this case, neither a Will nor a transfer inter vivos. In this view, it is unnecessary to discuss the cases relating to the validity or effect of a document where it is wrongly registered in one book instead of another. In this case, there is no such question. It was an adoption deed and it was correctly registered in Book IV. I do not mean to say that registration throws light either on the intention of Krishna Rao or on the construction of the document.

It follows that Ex. I cannot help the 2nd defendant. The only other ground on which the 2nd defendant can succeed is that he was adopted. This was the subject of issue No. 4. The Subordinate Judge states that no evidence was adduced by the defendants on this issue. Paragraph 5 of the 2nd defendant's written statement seems to disclose a suspicious consciousness that the adoption is not valid for some reason not disclosed. Lest the Subordinate Judge by

(2) 3 I. A. 253; 26 W. R. 91; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 653; 3 Suth. P. O. J. 338; Bald. 78.

(3) 24 M. 214; 27 I. A. 162; 4 O. W. N. 805; 2 Bom. L. R. 982; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 782 (P. C.).

(4) 22 M. 383; 1 Bom. L. R. 277; 3 O. W. N. 415; 26 I. A. 83; 7 Sar. P. O. J. 481; 9 M. L. J. Sup. 1; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 276 (P. O.).

(5) 52 Ind. Cas. 311; 41 A. 666; 17 A. L. J. 853.

(6) 68 Ind. Cas. 504; 47 B. 65; 24 Bom. L. R. 794; 4, I. R. 1922 Bom. 352.

(1) 58 Ind. Cas. 228; 12 L. W. 660; (1920) M. W. N. 359; 28 M. L. T. 190; 25 O. W. N. 511 (P. O.).

a too favourable view on issue No. 6 induce the defendants not to call their witnesses on issue No. 4, we have given an opportunity to the 2nd defendant to state on affidavits what happened at the trial but, after taking time, he found himself unable to use the opportunity so given. The result is we are unable to help the 2nd defendant by allowing a further inquiry on issue No. 4.

The result is that the plaintiff must have the declaration he seeks as to the 2nd defendant's adoption or right to properties. Before the case can be finally disposed of, we have to call for findings, on 7th and 8th issues, which have not been disposed of. Time two months and one week for objections. Fresh evidence may be taken.

In compliance with the order contained in the above judgment the Subordinate Judge of Masulipatam submitted the following FINDINGS.

Issue No. 7.—(1). Whether the plaintiff mentioned alienations are valid and binding on plaintiffs. No counter-evidence has been adduced on behalf of plaintiff to show that the debts were not real or were not binding on the estate of Krishna Rao. However, as the 2nd defendant had no manner of right of the properties, his alienations cannot be upheld.

Issue No. 8.—Whether the alienees or any of them are entitled to get any compensation for the improvements alleged to have been effected by them. The decisions quoted above also lay down that the alienees cannot claim the money paid by them for the alienations. Much less can they claim the value of the improvements effected by them. I find accordingly.

After receipt of the findings their Lordships delivered the following

JUDGMENT.—The Subordinate Judge has now returned findings on issues Nos. 7 and 8. On the 7th issue he finds that the alienations now in question, namely, the sale under Ex. 13, dated 26th April, 1924, the sale under Ex. 4, dated 8th September, 1914, and the mortgage under Ex. 12, dated the 26th April, 1916, are not valid and cannot bind the reversionary interest of the plaintiff. He found that they were all effected to discharge the debts contracted by the late Krishna Rao, but as they were effected by the 2nd defendant who has been found by us not to be the adopted son of Krishna Rao and, therefore, not entitled to the properties of the late Krishna Rao, he held that the alienations are not binding on the plaintiff or other reversioners. On the 8th issue he found that they are not entitled to any improvements effected by them. The only point raised in appeal by the learned Vakil for the alienees is that though the alienations as alienations may not be binding on the plaintiff, still as the consideration was utilised for the purpose of discharging the debts of the late Krishna Rao the alienees are entitled to the return of the purchase-money on equitable grounds. Assuming that the defendants are entitled in equity to a return of the money paid by the alienees and utilised for the discharge of Krishna Rao's debts there are in this case great difficulties in the way of the application of any equitable doctrine in favour of the defendants' alienees. In the first place, the question arises, when are they entitled to the return of the purchase-money. If this suit is a suit for the recovery of the lands themselves one can understand that the refund of the amounts paid by the defendants' alienees and utilised for the discharge of Krishna Rao's debts should be made a condition precedent before the plaintiff can get a decree for the suit lands. But the suit is not for the recovery of possession. It is a suit merely for declaration that the alienations are not binding on the plaintiff after the death of Krishna Rao's widow, the first defendant. Neither the plaintiff nor the first defendant nor the 2nd defendant seeks to question the operation of the alienations during the lifetime of the 1st defendant. There is nothing to prevent the two sales under Exs. 13 and 4 from being given effect to during the lifetime of the 1st defendant and there is nothing to prevent the vendees under these sale-deeds from enjoying the properties sold until the 1st defendant's death; and if the vendees choose to continue in possession until the 1st defendant's death it cannot be said that there is a total failure of consideration for these sale-deeds. Any question of partial failure of consideration will arise only after the death of the 1st defendant. It may be that so far as any debts of Krishna Rao that were paid off by means of the amounts obtained by the sales under Exs. 13 and 4 are mortgage-debts, one might take the view that the alienees under Exs. 13 and 4 are subrogated to the rights of the mortgagees so paid off. For instance, in the case of Ex. 13 out of the several debts of Krishna Rao for the payment for which the sale was effected the following, namely, (1) the debt payable to Gajjala Sree Rama Murthi Garu of Masulipatam and (2) the debt payable to Bhagavathula Achamma Garu, another resident of Masulipatam seem to be mortgage-debts, and it is possible to hold that the vendee, under Ex. 13 is subrogated to the rights of the mortgagees and assuming that the produce of the land he enjoys upto the death of the 1st defendant may be set off towards the interest due on the bonds he may be entitled to a refund of the principal amount and interest from the death of the 1st defendant before the reversioners can obtain possession. But where the debts are not charged debts the alienees have no right by way of subrogation to the amount of such debts. Vide Ammani Ammal v. Ramaswami Naidu (7), Nathu v. Balwantrao (8), Tangya Fala v. Trimbak Daga (9) and Limaji Ravji Hajare v. Rahi Ravji Hajare (10). It may be, he is entitled to recover the amounts from the 1st defendant, but it is difficult to see how he is entitled to any charge. Similarly in the case of Ex. 4 one of the items of consideration is the payment of a mortgage-debt dated 16th December, 1912, in favour of Chinna Achutharama Raju and others and similar remarks may apply to the vendee under Ex. 4 in respect of that mortgage. But as to the mortgagee under Ex. 12 no prior mortgage-debt was mentioned in Ex. 12. I do not see how the mortgagee is entitled to any rights by way of subrogation. It may be that there is another course open to the alienee under these three documents. Seeing that two of the documents are partially inoperative and the third perhaps wholly inoperative the alienees may sue the 2nd defendant for return of the amounts paid by them as on a failure of consideration, and it may be they will get effective decrees against the 2nd defendant or the 1st defendant or both of them in which case there can be no rights of subrogation to be worked out after the death of the 1st defendant. Seeing that the 1st defendant's sympathies are with the 2nd defendant and that she herself recognises that the debts were such as she would have been bound to pay off, it may be that the alienees may be able to obtain fresh sale-deeds or mortgage deeds from the 1st defendant herself. We do not know what course the alienees may be advised to take and we do not know what they may succeed in obtaining from the 1st defendant during her lifetime, and from the 2nd defendant. Under these circumstances, it is impossible for us to attach any equitable conditions to the declaration granted to the plaintiff so as to provide for the situation that may arise hereafter on the 1st defendant's death. Any equities that may arise on the 1st defendant's death and that may remain undecided prior to that point of time will have to be dealt with when the plaintiff attempts to obtain possession of the properties from the vendees after the 1st defendant's death. So far as the mortgagee is concerned, we are not able to see that any such equities will exist. Under these circumstances, the finding of the Subordinate Judge must be accepted. The appeal will be allowed and there will be a decree in favour of the plaintiff declaring that the adoption of the 2nd defendant is not true, and valid, that the alienations under Exs. 12, 13 and 4 are not binding on the plaintiff and the question of any equities that may arise when the plaintiff seeks to obtain possession of the lands sold under Exs. 13 and 4 is left open. The plaintiff will have costs throughout.

V. N. V.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

(7) 51 Ind. Cas. 57; 37 M. L. J. 113; 10 L. W. 75; (1919) M. W. N. 866.

(8) 27 B. 390; 5 Bom. L. R. 301.

(9) 35 Ind. Cas. 794; 40 B. 646; 18 Bom. L. R. 700.

(10) 88 Ind. Cas. 643; 49 B. 576; 27 Bom. L. R. 621; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 499.

PATNA HIGH COURT.APPEAL FROM APPELLATE ORDER NO. 126
OF 1927.

November 22, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay and
Mr. Justice Macpherson.RUP NATH MANDAL—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR
—APPELLANT

versus

JAGANNATH MANDAL—DECREE-HOLDER
—RESPONDENT.Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908 B. C.), s. 47
—Raiyati holding—Exemption from sale—Mortgage-decree directing sale, effect of—Executing Court, whether can go behind decree—Public policy.The right of a *raiya*t in his holding cannot be sold in execution even though the decree under execution is a mortgage-decree directing the sale of the land in question. [p. 145, col. 2.]Although the general rule is that a Court executing a decree cannot go behind the decree and examine the correctness or legality thereof, yet it is bound to give effect to a provision of law, such as s. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, which goes clearly to show that even if there is a decree such a decree cannot be executed. [ibid.]Jadhu Mahto v. Kali Prasonno Bhattacharjee (2), distinguished and doubted.Once it is found that the lands sought to be sold form a *raiya*t holding, whether the judgment-debtor took the objection or not, the sale of such a holding cannot take place in the face of the clear provisions of s. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. [p. 146, col. 2; p. 147, col. 1.]Per Macpherson, J.—The provision prohibiting the sale of the right of a *raiya*t in his holding in execution of a decree or order is eminently one of public policy, and it has consistently been held not only that the objection that land sought to be sold was a *raiya*t holding, or part thereof, could be taken in execution proceedings, but that the provision imposed upon the Executing Court itself the duty of seeing that no sale contravening it takes place. [p. 147, col. 2.]

Appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Manbhum, dated the 14th of March, 1927, reversing that of the Munsif, Dhanbad, dated the 14th July, 1926.

Mr. Narendra Nath Roy, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. C. Mazumdar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the judgment-debtor whose objection to the execution of a mortgage decree by sale of the mortgaged property was allowed by the Munsif but has been disallowed on appeal by the Subordinate Judge. The respondent obtained the decree under execution which directed the sale of the lands as being in possession of the appellant within the mauza in which he was a co-sharer in 4-annas mokarrari interest. The objection of the appellant was that thelands sought to be sold were his *raiya*t lands and the sale of the right of a *raiya*t in his holding was expressly prohibited by s. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act.The learned Munsif found that the status of the appellant was that of a *raiya*t. The survey khatian supported the appellant's contention, and no evidence was adduced by the decree-holder-respondent to show that the Record of Rights was incorrect. Upon the finding that the land sought to be sold was the *raiya*t holding of the appellant the learned Munsif held that the appellant's right as a *raiya*t could not be sold in execution of the decree. The learned Subordinate Judge on appeal has not displaced the finding of the Munsif that the land was really the *raiya*t holding of the appellant, but he has held that the decree under execution being a mortgage decree directing the sale of the land in question the Executing Court could not go behind the said decree and refuse to execute the same.In this, I am of opinion, that the learned Subordinate Judge was clearly wrong. Section 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act provides that no decree or order shall be passed by any Court for the sale of the right of a *raiya*t in his holding, nor shall any such right be sold in execution of any decree or order. Then follow certain exceptions which do not apply to the present case. The second part of s. 47 expressly forbids the sale of the right of a *raiya*t in his holding in execution of any decree, and the fact that the decree under execution is a mortgage decree directing the sale of the land in question does not in any way affect the provisions of s. 47 of the Act. The learned Subordinate Judge relied upon the observations of Mullick, J., in Amrit Lal Seal v. Jagat Chandra Thakur (1) but that was a case under the Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation (III of 1872), and the provisions of s. 27 of that Regulation are quite different from the provisions of s. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. It is true that there are certain observations in the judgment in that case which would go to support the contention of the respondent that once a decree has been passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction, although the decree itself might be erroneous in law, the Court executing the decree has no power to go behind the decree and refuse to execute it. There are, however, observations in the same judgment to the effect that if there is a statutory bar to the execution of the decree the decree cannot be executed. It is no doubt the general rule that a Court executing a decree cannot go behind the decree and examine the correctness or the legality thereof but the provisions of s. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act go clearly to show that even if there is a decree for sale of the right of a raiya in his holding such a decree cannot be executed. There is nothing in s. 47 which would make an exception in the case of a mortgage decree directing the sale of the property. The section clearly provides that the right of a raiya cannot be sold in execution of any decree. The point was directly raised in this Court in Jadhu Mahto v. Kali Prasonno Bhattacharjee (2). There also a mortgage decree had been passed directing the sale of a raiya holding and the objection was taken by the judgment-debtor to the execution of the decree on the ground that the sale was prohibited by s. 47 of the Act, and this Court held that the second portion of the provisions of s. 47 applied to the case and that it was the duty of the Court executing the decree to consider whether the sale of the property was forbidden by that section. Reference was made in that case to the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Lakshmi Bibi Kujrani v. Atal Behari Haldar (3), where it was held that the sale of a raiya holding was indirect contravention of the provisions of s. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. In that case the preliminary decree in the mortgage suit was passed before the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act was extended to Manbhumi where the mortgage property was situate and it is contended that the learned Judges were wrong in holding that although the mortgage was created and the decree was passed before the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act was extended to Manbhumi still s. 47 of the Act operated as a bar. That is a point which does not arise here, but the decision that s. 47 applies and prohibits the sale of a raiya holding in execution of a mortgage decree was, in my opinion, correct and was accepted as such by this Court in the case of Jadhu Mahto v. Kali Prasonno Bhattacharjee (2). I am, therefore, of opinion that the lands in dispute being a raiya holding cannot be sold in execution of the decree in question.

• (1) 93 Ind. Cas. 935; 7 P. L. T. 462; 4 Pat. 696; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 202.

It is next contended on behalf of the respondent that the decree directed the lands to be sold as the 4 annas mokarrari interest of the judgment-debtor and that it was not open to the judgment-debtor to raise the question in the execution proceedings that the lands in question formed his raiya holding and were not his mokarrari lands. The decree, however, does not describe the lands as mokarrari lands of the judgment-debtor but as being in possession of the judgment-debtor who was a co-sharer in 4 annas mokarrari interest in that village, and it was, therefore, open to the judgment-debtor to show in the present proceedings that the lands were his raiya holding. It is further contended on behalf of the respondent that the objection as regards the nature of the lands, viz., whether they formed the raiya holding or the mokarrari interest of the defendant might and ought to have been raised in the mortgage suit, and the decree in the mortgage suit must be taken to have decided that the lands did not form the raiya holding and were, therefore, saleable. In the first place, a copy of the judgment passed in the mortgage suit has not been produced and we are not in a position to say whether the question was raised and decided or not. In the next place, there is nothing in the decree which is on the record to show that the Court held the lands in dispute to be the mokarrari interest of the judgment-debtor. As I have said above, the description of the mortgaged property does not go to show that it was the mokarrari land, it simply says that the land was comprised within the 4-annas mokarrari interest in which the judgment-debtor was a co-sharer. The fact that the judgment-debtor did not raise the question in the mortgage suit which he might and ought to have raised does not, in my opinion, operate as an estoppel in the present case inasmuch as there can be no estoppel against the Statute. The law prohibits the sale of a raiya holding, and once it is found that the lands in dispute do form the raiya holding, whether the judgment-debtor took the objection or not, the sale of such a holding cannot take place in the face of the clear provisions of s. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act.

(2) 34 Ind. Cas. 733; 1 P. L. J. 33; 3 P. L. W. 390.

(3) 21 Ind. Cas. 117; 40 C. 534.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the objection of the judgment-debtor-appellant must prevail. The order of the learned Subordinate Judge must be set aside and that of the Munsif restored. The appeal is, therefore, decreed with costs throughout.

Macpherson, J.—I agree. The question is whether when a mortgage decree directs certain lands to be sold, the objection can be taken in the execution proceedings that the lands are *raiya*ti and, therefore, by reason of the provisions of s. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, 1903, must not be sold in execution of the decree.

The Munsif answered the question in the affirmative but in appeal the Subordinate Judge relying on certain observations in Amrit Lal Seal v. Jagat Chandra Thakur (1) disallowed the objection of the *raiya*ti on the ground that the Executing Court cannot go behind the decree, especially as that decree does not describe the four plots in controversy as *raiya*ti and, therefore, does not appear to be illegal on the face of it.

Both on precedent and on principle the question must be answered in the affirmative. There is ample direct authority on the point, while the ruling cited by the lower Appellate Court which relates to s. 27 of the Santhal Parganas Settlement Regulation, 1872, is at best remotely relevant. No doubt s. 46 (1) of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act is based on cl. (1) of that provision, s. 46 (3) is s. 27 (2) and s. 46 (4) is a modified form of s. 27 (4). But in the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act the Legislature went further and enacted in s. 47 (with provisos not here relevant) that "no decree or order shall be passed by any Court for the sale of the right of a *raiya*ti in his holding, nor shall any such right be sold in execution of any decree or order."

Section 47 has no counterpart in the Regulation of 1872, and accordingly the decision cited does not bear on the provision now under consideration or on anything similar. Apart from that, the decision itself, in my opinion, may, when an appropriate case arises, require further examination. Inter alia, the observations in respect of the words "any Court" in cl. (2) seem to be of doubtful correctness having regard to the wide terms of that provision and the manifest public policy underlying the whole provision.

The provision prohibiting the sale of the right of a *raiya*ti in his holding in execution of a decree or order is eminently one of public policy, and from the time when in 1903 it was first introduced into Bengal Act I of 1879 as s. 10-A, it has consistently been held not only that the objection that land sought to be sold was a *raiya*ti holding or part thereof, could be taken in execution proceedings, but that the provision imposed upon the Executing Court itself the duty of seeing that no sale contravening it takes place. Section 47 was in several aspects the subject of controversy in Manbhum (in which this litigation arose) after the extension of Act VI of 1908, to that District in 1909. In Babulal Chaudhury v. Ganesh Mandal it was held by the District Judge in appeal that a mortgage decree could not be passed on a mortgage of *raiya*ti land in 1904, as s. 47 was a prohibition on the Court imposed by the Legislature on the ground of public policy. The Second Appeal No. 1859 of 1912 against that decision was summarily dismissed by Chitty and Teunon, JJ., on the 29th November, 1912. In January, 1913, the same learned Judges decided in Lakshmi Bibi Kujrani v. Atal Behari Haldar (3) which had been admitted prior to the presentation of Second Appeal No. 1859 of 1912, that a sale in execution of a mortgage decree directing the mortgaged *raiya*ti holding to be sold was in direct contravention of s. 47. In that case the preliminary decree for the sale of the *raiya*ti holding was passed before and the final decree after the extension of the Act. In execution proceedings the judgment-debtor relied upon s. 47 but his objection was rejected, the local Courts being of opinion that s. 47 did not govern sales on mortgages of date prior to the extension of the Act to Manbhum, and the judgment-debtor preferred a second appeal. The sale in execution was held during the pendency of the first appeal and confirmed while the second appeal was pending. The High Court held:—

"The provisions of s. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act put the matter beyond doubt. That section provides, subject to the three provisos which do not affect the present case, that no decree or order shall be passed by any Court for the sale of the right of a raiyat in his holding, nor shall any such right be sold in execution of any decree or order. The final decree which was passed on the extension of the Act ought not to have been passed; but, putting that aside, it is clear that the second portion of the section applies to this case, and prevents any such right being sold in execution of any decree or order."

In that case the learned Judges manifestly went beyond what is necessary for the purposes of this litigation, in which the question of retrospective operation does not arise.

They held further that the sale being in direct contravention of the provisions of s. 47 all the proceedings including the sale which had taken place in consequence of the orders of the Subordinate Courts, should be set aside.

The matter was considered in the Patna High Court in the case of Jadhu Mahto v. Kali Prasonno Bhattacharjee (2). In that case the defendant objected in execution that the mortgaged properties were raiyati holdings and could not be sold. The learned Judges observed as follows:

"It was contended before us that the objection to the sale had been taken too late and that if the appellant desired to raise this objection he should have done so before the decree was passed. In the case of Lakshmi Bibi Kujrani v. Atal Behari Halder (3), it was decided that an objection of this kind might be taken after the passing of the decree for sale on a mortgage. We are of the same opinion. Section 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act provides that no decree or order shall be passed by any Court for the sale of the right of a raiyat in his holding, nor shall any such right be sold in execution of any decree or order. It appears to us that the second portion of this provision applies to the present case and that it was the duty of the Court executing the decree to consider whether the sale of the property was forbidden by the section".

Certainly s. 47 of Act VI of 1908 is itself clear and emphatic in its terms. The Legislature is insistent that no raiyati holding shall be sold. It may well be that the statutory prohibition on every Court contained in the first sentence of s. 47 against decreeing or ordering the sale of a raiyat's right in his holding, may alone be sufficient prohibition on a Court to sell such a right in execution of such a decree or order but the Legislature was taking no risks. It, therefore, imposed a double guard: not only may any Court not pass a decree or order for the sale of a raiyati right, but no such right shall be sold in execution of any decree or order. In short the Legislature modified the ordinary principle that an Executing Court should not go behind the decree. To avoid what it judged to be the greater evil of selling a raiyati holding in Chota Nagpur in execution of a decree or order passed, perhaps per incuriam or, perhaps as so often happens, through collusion of parties (the Munsif in this case states "It is common knowledge that in these parts transfers are frequently effected by false recitals in deeds of conveyance to the knowledge of both parties") or as in mortgage decrees, under the principle of estoppel; the Legislature was prepared to face the not inconsiderable but still far less evil of interference with the ordinary legal principle that an Executing Court should not go behind the decree.

Accordingly it is altogether illegal to sell a raiyati right in land even in execution of a decree or order directing such sale. Not only may an objection be taken in execution that the land sought to be sold is not saleable, but it is incumbent on the Court itself to use every endeavour to prevent abuse of its process in covert attempts to defeat or contravene the law prohibiting the sale of holdings in Chota Nagpur.

B. K. P.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE

No. 335 of 1925.

November 2, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Das and

Mr. Justice Wort.

SHOUKHI SAO—PLAINTIFF

—APPELLANT

versus

GAIBI SAO AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Res judicata—Code not exhaustive—Court trying former suit incompetent to try later suit—Doctrine, whether applicable—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 45—Joint purchase—Presumption of equality of shares.

Although the principle of res judicata is of general application and is not limited by the specific words of the Civil Procedure Code, the doctrine cannot be applied where the Court which decided the earlier proceeding was not competent to try the later proceeding. [p. 149, col. 2.]

George Henry Hook v. Administrator-General of Bengal (1) and Ramachandra Rao v. Ramachandra Rao (2), referred to and discussed.

In the case of a joint purchase by two or more persons there is a presumption, in the absence of specification of the shares, that the purchasers had equal shares. [ibid.]

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Monghyr, dated the 22nd December, 1924, confirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Monghyr, dated the 19th June, 1924.

Messrs. A. B. Mukharji and Upendra Nath Banarji, for the Appellant.

Mr. Sambhu Saran, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Das, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for partition and the only question is what is the share of the plaintiff in the disputed properties. It is the common case that the properties in question were purchased by the plaintiff and the defendant jointly and that the kabala by which they made the purchase does not contain any specification of shares. It appears that the plaintiff subsequently demised his share of the properties to the defendant. A suit for rent was brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, and in that suit an issue was raised as to what were the shares of the parties in the disputed properties. The plaintiff claimed that he had a 12 anna interest in the properties and the Court in seisin of the rent suit decided the issue in favour of the plaintiff. The plaintiff in this litigation relies upon that decision and contends that he is entitled to a 12-anna share in the disputed properties. The learned

District Judge has held that the decision in the rent suit does not operate as res judicata between the parties. Examining the evidence he finds that there is no sufficient evidence either on the side of the plaintiff or on that of the defendant to establish what were the shares of the parties. He has come to the conclusion that in the absence of a specification of shares in the kabala, it must be assumed that each of the parties had a half share in the properties. In that view he has given the plaintiff a decree for 8 annas share of the properties.

The learned Government Pleader appearing on behalf of the appellant contends that the decision of the learned Munsif in the rent suit operates as res judicata. He concedes, however, that the learned Munsif had no pecuniary jurisdiction to decide the present suit. It is not disputed that if we were to decide this case on the terms of s. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code we must overrule the contention of the learned Government Pleader. But it is contended that the principle of res judicata is of general application and is not limited by the specific words of the Code in this respect. I entirely agree with this contention, but, in my opinion, in order to succeed it must be established by the appellant that the learned Munsif in seisin of the rent suit had jurisdiction to try the present suit between the parties.

Mr. Abani Bhusan Mukharji has referred us to three cases. The first is the case of George Henry Hook v. Administrator General of Bengal (1). The question in that case arose out of an administration suit which had been instituted in the Calcutta High Court. A certain issue was raised in that suit and it was decided by Chowdhury, J., in a particular way. The proceedings in which the decision now relied upon by Mr. Abani Bhusan Mukharji was pronounced were commenced later on by a petition in that very suit, and it was contended that that issue was wrongly decided and should have been decided in another way. Chowdhury, J., dealt with the matter and came to the conclusion that his former decision was perfectly correct. The case was carried to the Court of Appeal, and it was contended on behalf of the respondents that the decision of Chowdhury, J., in the suit operated as res judicata and that it was not competent to the appellant to reagitate the matter by another proceeding before him. The contention was disallowed and the matter was carried to the Privy Council.

(1) 60 Ind. Cas. 631; 48 C. 499; 19 A. L. J. 366; 40 M. L. J. 423; 29 M. L. T. 336; (1921) M. W. N. 313; 33 C. L. J. 405; 3 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 17; 23 Bom. L. R. 648; 25 C. W. N. 915; 14 L. W. 221; 48 I. A. 187 (P. C.).

Now the objection as to res judicata was based on the view that there were not two suits before the Court, and reliance was placed upon the terms of s. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code. It was pointed out by the Judicial Committee that the plea of res judicata remained apart from the limited provisions of the Code and that the binding force of such judgment in such a case depends not upon s. 11 of the Code but upon general principles of law. But it is to be pointed out that the learned Judge who decided the matter in the first instance was perfectly competent to deal with the question in the form in which it was raised subsequently before him. The other decision of the Judicial Committee to which we have been referred is that of Ramachandra Rao v. Ramachandra Rao (2). In that case there were certain Land Acquisition proceedings and a question arose as to who was entitled to withdraw the money. The Land Acquisition Deputy Collector being unable to decide the question of title referred it to the principal Civil Court, that is to say to the Court of the District Judge. The District Judge decided the question of title. The matter went to the Madras High Court and the question was again decided by the Madras High Court. Thereupon a civil suit was instituted which raised the very question which had once been decided by the Madras High Court and it was contended that the decision in the first mentioned suit did not operate as res judicata inasmuch as that decision was pronounced not in a suit but in a proceeding under the Land Acquisition Act. It is important to remember that the contention was again founded upon the terms of s. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the Judicial Committee had no difficulty in pointing out that that contention could not prevail. But in giving effect to the plea, of res judicata Lord Buckmaster was careful to point out that the Court in seisin of the earlier proceeding had complete jurisdiction to try the second case. That appears to me to be the foundation of the principle upon which the doctrine of res judicata rests. In order to succeed it has to be established that the decision claimed to operate as res judicata was pronounced by a Court competent to try the later proceeding. Now in this case it is admitted that the learned Munsif was not competent to try the present suit. That being the position the learned District Judge was right in overruling the plea of res judicata.

It was next contended that although the decision in the earlier suit does not operate as res judicata, still it is a strong piece of evidence and the learned District Judge should have called upon the plaintiff to give evidence in support of his case. But the learned District Judge has actually dealt with the decision in the rent suit. He points out that that decision was based entirely on a particular vakalatnamah which was produced and on the evidence of a Pleader. He dealt with the vakalatnamah and the evidence of the Pleader exhaustively in his judgment and came to the conclusion that those two items of evidence are not sufficient to turn the scale in favour of the plaintiff.

The only other point that was urged before us is that there is no specification of shares in the kabala and that there is no presumption that the parties had equal shares. I am unable to agree with this contention. The authorities are unanimous on this point and I entirely agree with the view of the learned District Judge.

This appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Wort, J.—I agree.

P. K. P.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 67 Ind. Cas. 408; 45 M. 320; 30 M. L. T. 154; 26 O. W. N. 713; 35 O. L. J. 545; 16 L. W. 1; (1922) M. W. N. 359; 20 A. L. J. 684; 43 M. L. J. 78; 24 Bom. L. R. 963; A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 80; 49 I. A. 129 (P. C.).

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 952
OF 1924.

November 17, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay and
Mr. Justice Macpherson.

SURAJ BALLI SINGH AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS.

versus

TILAKDHARI SINGH AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow—Adverse possession—Property acquired, whether stridhan.

The interest acquired by a Hindu widow by adverse possession would be her stridhan and would not be an accretion to her husband's estate, unless it is shown that she took adverse possession as representing her husband's estate. [p. 152, col. 1.]

Jagmohan Singh v. Prayag Narayan Singh (2), followed.

Lajwanti v. Safa Chand (1), explained and distinguished.

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, Muzafferpur, dated the 15th April, 1924, confirming that of the Munsif, Second Court, Muzafferpur, dated the 31st July, 1923.

Mr. S. K. Mitra, for the Appellant.

Messrs. N. N. Singh and B. P. Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs who claim possession of certain properties as the reversionary heirs of one Ishar Dayal. The defendants first party took a conveyance of the property in dispute from Musammam Hulasbati Kuer, the widow of Ishar Dayal. It is contended on behalf of the plaintiffs that the property in dispute formed a part of the estate of Ishar Dayal, and as the conveyance was without any legal necessity, it was not binding on them and they are entitled to possession.

The defence was that the plaintiffs were not the reversionary heirs of Ishar Dayal, that the property in dispute did not belong to the estate of Ishar Dayal, that Ishar Dayal left a brother Gobind Singh who was joint with him, and that on the death of Ishar Dayal, Gobind took the entire share by survivorship, that on the death of Gobind, the widow of Ishar Dayal, took possession of the property although she had no right to do so, that the right of the reversioners arose immediately on the death of Gobind to take possession of the property, and as Gobind died more than 12 years before the date of the suit, the possession of the widow became adverse to the reversioners and they could not claim possession of the property.

The trial Court found that the deed of sale by the widow of the defendants first party was for legal necessity and that the plaintiffs were estopped from disputing the validity of the sale. It accordingly dismissed the suit.

On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge was of opinion that it was not necessary to inquire as to whether the sale was for any legal and valid necessity. He referred to the fact that admittedly Gobind, who was according to the case of the plaintiffs, separate from Ishar Dayal, had an eight annas share in the property. He found that Gobind died sometime before 1894 and immediately on his death, Musammam Hulasbati Kuer took possession of Gobind's eight annas share and she got herself registered in the Land Registration Department. Her possession of Gobind's share became adverse to the rightful heirs of Gobind and such possession lasted for more than 12 years before the suit, and, therefore, Hulasbati had acquired a valid title by adverse possession so far as the eight annas share of Gobind was concerned. Therefore, as Hulasbati Kuer had an absolute interest and not merely a widow's estate in the eight annas which belonged to Gobind, the sale to the defendants first party of 1-anna 15-gundas was a valid sale because she had more than 1-anna 15-gundas in her absolute right in the village and it did not necessarily follow that this 1-anna 15-gundas came out of the estate of Ishar Dayal. The learned Subordinate Judge accordingly dismissed the appeal.

In this second appeal it is contended that, assuming that Hulasbati Kuer took the eight annas of Gobind by adverse possession and acquired an absolute estate, such acquisition of an absolute estate must be treated to be an accretion to her husband's estate, because it is contended that as a widow she could not, by adverse possession acquire any property for herself and whatever property she did acquire by adverse possession would be an acquisition to her husband's estate. Reference has, in this connection, been made to the decision of the Privy Council in Lajwanti v. Safa Chand (1). What was decided in that case was that "the Hindu widow is not a life-renter but has a widow's estate—that is to say a widow's estate in her deceased husband's estate. If possessing as a widow she possesses adversely to any one as to certain parcels, she does not acquire the parcels as stridhan but she makes them good to her husband's estate."

(1) 80 Ind. Cas. 788; 6 P. L. T. 1; 22 A. L. J. 304; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 121; 5 Lah. 192; (1924) M. W. N. 442; 20 L. W. 10; 2 Pat. L. R. 245; 28 C. W. N. 960; 26 Bom. L. R. 1117; 47 M. L. J. 935; 51 I. A. 171; L. R. 5 A. (P. C.) 91 (P. C.).

Now what their Lordships meant by this passage was that if the widow as representing her husband's estate, and she for certain purposes fully represents her husband's estates encroaches on certain property in her capacity of a widow and as representing her husband's estate, then the interest that she would acquire by adverse possession of such parcel of land would be an accretion to her husband's estate. Their Lordships did not say that the widow could not under any circumstance acquire any property for herself while holding her husband's estate. The decision of the Privy Council in Lajwanti v. Safa Chand (1) above cited was considered by a Division Bench of this Court in Jagmohan Singh v. Prayag Narayan Singh (2) and their Lordships there held that when a Hindu widow is in possession of any property by adverse possession, then the property would become her stridhan, and it was only if the property is held in possession by a Hindu widow claiming as the widow of her deceased husband, then the property becomes an accretion to her husband's estate. It is clear, therefore, that, unless it is shown that she took adverse possession of Gobind's share as representing her husband's estate, the interest she acquired by adverse possession would be her stridhan and would not be an accretion to her husband's estate. Here there is absolutely nothing to show that she took adverse possession of Gobind's share as representing her husband's estate. The learned Subordinate Judge was clearly right in holding that at the date of the conveyance to the defendants first party the widow had an absolute interest in an eight annas share and the sale of 1 anna 15 gundas to the defendants first party was a valid sale.

This appeal is dismissed with costs.

Macpherson, J.—I agree.

B. K. P.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 87 Ind. Cas. 473; 6 P. L. T. 206; (1925) Pat. 140;
3 Pat. L. R. 251; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 523.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM ORIGINAL ORDERS NOS. 207
AND 237 OF 1926.

November 2, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay and
Mr. Justice Macpherson.

Saiyid MUHAMMAD FARIDUDDIN

AHMAD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Saiyid AHMAD ABDUL WAHAB—

DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890); ss. 34, 45 (1)
—Jurisdiction of Court, whether limited to accounts exhibited—Power of Court to call upon guardian to pay balance due on true account.

The power of a Court in dealing with accounts exhibited by a guardian, under s. 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act, is not limited to such balance as the guardian chooses to show therein. The Court has jurisdiction to call upon a guardian to pay into Court such sum as the Court may find to be due after a scrutiny of the accounts exhibited by him; and, if he fails to pay the balance due upon a true account, to deal with him under s. 45 of the Act. [p. 155, col. 1.]

Sita Ram v. Gobindi (2), followed.

Jagannath, Panja v. Mahesh Chandra Pal (1), dissented from.

Appeals from the orders of the District Judge, Patna, dated the 5th July and 26th August, 1926.

Messrs. L. N. Singh and Sarjoo Prasad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Hasan Jan and Saiyid Izhar
Hussain, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—This is an appeal on behalf of Saiyid Muhammad Fariduddin who was appointed by the District Judge of Patna to act as guardian of his minor children Azizuddin and Musammam Umatul Rasul under the Guardians and Wards Act. Musammam Umatul Rasul was married to the respondent Saiyid Ahmad Abdul Wahab in February, 1925, and in July, 1925, he made an application before the District Judge for removal of Fariduddin and for his own appointment as guardian of his wife and for examination of the accounts of Fariduddin. The learned District Judge appointed a Pleader Commissioner to examine and audit the accounts of the guardian for the period from 1918 up to 1925. The learned Commissioner examined the accounts in great detail and he reported that a sum of Rs. 2,326-11-2 ought to be the balance in the hand of the guardian on account of the minor Umatul Rasul. According to the account submitted by the guardian nothing was due to the estate of the minor.

Objections were taken to the report by the guardian as well as by Abdul Wahab and the learned District Judge, after consideration of the objections on both sides and after scrutiny of the accounts, has held that a sum of Rs. 4,434-4-7 is due to the estate of the minor Umatul Rasul from the guardian and he ordered that the guardian Fariduddin do deposit in Court the sum of Rs. 4,434-4-7 within one month to be placed in deposit in a Bank to the credit of the minor. Appeal No. 207 of 1926 is directed against this order of the District Judge which is dated the 5th July, 1926.

The guardian failed to deposit the amount in Court as directed and the learned District Judge by his order dated the 26th August, 1926, imposed a fine of Rs. 100 upon the guardian and observed that if the fine and the balance found due be not deposited within ten days the question of a daily fine will be considered. Appeal No. 237 of 1926 is directed against this order of the District Judge imposing the fine.

Mr. Lakshmi Narayan Singh on behalf of the appellant has taken us through the whole of the accounts and we have been referred to the report of the Commissioner on most of the items attacked by him.

The first item consists of the marriage expenses of the minor. The learned District Judge has wholly disallowed the marriage expenses. The Commissioner was also of opinion that nothing should be allowed to the guardian on account of the marriage expenses. The case of the appellant is that he spent a sum of Rs. 5,766 and odd over the marriage of his minor girl. The learned District Judge points out that the proper course which ought to have been taken by the guardian was to have applied to the Court for sanction before incurring the expenses relating to the marriage. That would no doubt have been the proper course. The Commissioner although he disallowed the item relating to the marriage expenses, found that the account as given by the guardian relating to the marriage expenses was correct so far as the amount of expenditure incurred was concerned. The amount, however, is certainly very excessive. In my opinion a reasonable amount ought to be allowed as the marriage expenses of the minor. Mr. Haasan Jan with his usual fairness has conceded that Rs. 750 would be a reasonable sum to allow for marriage expenses. It appears, however, from the accounts that a sum of Rs. 245-12-0 had been received by the guardian as salami or presents at the time of the marriage and the Commissioner observes that this was by way of an aid as was the custom among Muhammadans towards the expenses of the marriage. The Commissioner did not allow the sum of Rs. 245-12-0 to be credited to the account of the minor as he had disallowed the entire marriage expenses. When it is found that Rs. 245-12-0 had been received by the guardian towards the expenses of the marriage this sum ought to be deducted from the sum of Rs. 750 which we consider to be a reasonable sum to allow for marriage expenses. The result is that a sum of Rs. 504 4 0 will be allowed for marriage expenses after deducting the money received as salami.

The next item relates to the items covered by certain mortgages. It appears that the guardian raised a certain sum of money by mortgaging the property of the minor. The mortgages were effected without the sanction of the Court, and in one case in spite of the express order of the Court refusing sanction. The Commissioner refused to credit the estate of the minor with the sum raised by the guardian on mortgage of the minor's property. The learned District Judge, however, although he found that the mortgages were invalid inasmuch as they had been effected without the sanction of the Court yet directed that the money that was received by the mortgage ought to be credited to the minor. He, therefore, directed that a sum of Rs. 1,100 which was the share of the minor be credited to the minor. Both parties here agree that this sum ought not to be credited to the minor. The mortgages are invalid so far as the minor was concerned. I do not see how the money raised under the mortgages could be credited to the minor without the minor being made liable for it. The proposal of both parties is that this sum should be excluded. I would, therefore, direct that the sum of Rs. 1,100 be excluded altogether.

The next item is the salary of a cook employed in the family. Expenditure on account of the cook for the years under account comes up to Rs. 604-11-9. The Commissioner allowed a sum representing the salary of the cook at the rate of Rs. 24 a year and a certain sum on account of the food expenses. The learned District Judge has disallowed the whole amount. It is conceded on behalf of the respondent that a quarter of the amount ought to be allowed to the guardian. Credit will, therefore, be given to the guardian for one-fourth of Rs. 604-11-9 on account of the cook.

The next item relates to the expenses for clothes and shoes supplied to the minor during the years under account. The Commissioner allowed Rs. 375 on this account. In his petition of objection before the District Judge the respondent objected to an item of Rs. 151-9-6 and the learned District Judge has disallowed this amount. The Commissioner went into the matter very carefully and if an extra piece of cloth or a fancy sari was supplied to the minor during the period under account there is no reason why this amount should not be allowed to the guardian. In my opinion the entire amount of Rs. 151-9-6 deducted on account of the expenses for clothes and shoes should be allowed to the guardian.

The next item relates to the expenses of the nikah ceremony. The Commissioner allowed a sum of Rs. 373 on this account. The learned District Judge has disallowed this amount wholly. Mr. Hasan Jan concedes that a reasonable amount ought to be allowed for the nikah ceremony and we fix a sum of Rs. 50 as the proper amount which ought to be allowed for the nikah.

It appears that a Moghani was engaged as a tutoress to the girl and the Commissioner allowed Rs. 120 as her salary. The learned District Judge had disallowed this amount but has given no reasons for disallowing it. It is not stated that the Moghani was not engaged at all. It is found that the girl was an accomplished girl and a tutoress must have been engaged for her. I am of opinion that the amount should be allowed.

The other items relate to the repair of houses, village expenses, cost of foodstuffs, tailoring charges and medicine. No objection appears to have been taken on this account before the District Judge. The learned Commissioner very carefully considered these items and we are not inclined to interfere with the report of the Commissioner on these items.

Mr. Hasan Jan objects to an item of Rs. 80 which has been allowed by the District Judge on account of Municipal taxes. He contends that the total amount of taxes paid during the years in suit amounts to Rs. 191-12-6 and the whole of this was disallowed by the Commissioner on the ground that it was not shown that house for which the tax was paid did belong to the minor. The learned District Judge was of opinion that the house, though entered in the Municipal registers in the name of the guardian, was really in part the property of the minor and he allowed a sum of Rs. 80 to be credited to the guardian for Municipal taxes. Mr. Hasan Jan argues that the learned Judge was wrong in any event in allowing a sum of Rs. 80 and he ought not to have allowed anything in excess of one-fourth of Rs. 191-12-6 which represented the minor's share in the property. We are not in a position to say upon what material the District Judge found the sum of Rs. 80 to be the amount payable on account the minor's share. No cross-objection was taken on behalf of the respondent, and we are not inclined to interfere with the learned District Judge's order.

The result is that Appeal No. 207 is allowed in part and the sums specified above will be credited to the guardian and the balance of the amount will be deposited in Court. Each party will bear his own costs.

The question raised in Appeal No. 237 is that under s. 45, sub-s (1) cl. (b) the learned District Judge had no jurisdiction to impose the fine. The contention is that under s. 34, cl. (d) the Court can call upon the guardian to pay into Court the balance due from the guardian on the accounts exhibited by him under cl. (c) of s. 34 and that no sum other than the amount shown as due in the account exhibited by the guardian can be demanded from the guardian by the District Judge under the Guardians and Wards Act and no fine can be imposed upon him for his failure to deposit any sum in excess of the amount shown by him in his account exhibited under s. 34 (c).

Reference has been made to the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Jagannath Punja v. Mahesh Chandra Pal (1). This case no doubt supports the contention of the learned Advocate for the appellant but with very great respect to the learned Judges I am unable to agree with the opinion expressed by them in that case.

Section 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act provides that where a guardian of the property of a ward has been appointed or declared by the Court, and such guardian is not the Collector, he shall (c) "if so required by the Court, exhibit his accounts in the Court at such times and in such form as the Court from time to time directs." Clause (d) of the section then says "if so required by the Court, pay into the Court, at such time as the Court directs the balance due from him on those accounts, or so much thereof as the Court directs."

Mr. Justice Mookerjee in the case of Jagannath Panja v. Mahesh Chandra Pal (1) was of opinion that the words "those accounts" in cl. (d) of s. 34 refer to the account exhibited by the guardian under cl. (c) of the section and the Court can require the guardian to pay into Court only such amount as is shown by the guardian to be the balance in his hand in the account exhibited by him under cl. (c) and that the Court has no jurisdiction to call upon the guardian to pay any extra sum which it may find to be due from the guardian on a scrutiny of the account exhibited by him. In my opinion this is not the correct interpretation of s. 34 of the Act.

In Sita Ram v. Gobindi (2) Walsh, A. C. J., considered the decision of Mookerjee, J., in Jagannath Panja v. Mahesh Chandra Pal (1) and refused to follow it and held that the power of a Court in dealing with accounts exhibited by a guardian is not limited by such balance as the guardian chooses to show therein, and that the Court has jurisdiction to investigate the accounts exhibited, to amend them by striking out objectionable items, and to direct the guardian to pay the balance due on a true and just account, and if he fails to pay the balance as found by the Court, he can be dealt with under s. 45 of the Act. I am inclined to agree with the view taken by Walsh, A. C. J., and I am of opinion that the Court has jurisdiction to call upon a guardian to pay into Court such sum as he may find to be due after a scrutiny of the account exhibited by him. If no such power had been given to the District Judge the result would be that a scrutiny of the account submitted by the guardian would be of no use whatsoever. If the Court was bound to accept the sum as shown in the account to be actually due from the guardian and if the Court was not entitled to call upon the guardian to pay any sum in excess of what is shown in the account, it would be a mere waste of time to check and audit the account as submitted by the guardian. It is conceded that the Court had jurisdiction to check the account and if that is so, I think that it follows that the Court has also the jurisdiction to direct the guardian to pay the sums found due on such checking of the account and to act under s. 45 on his failure to do so.

The rules framed by the Calcutta High Court under the Guardians and Wards Act provided that unless otherwise directed a guardian shall not be discharged from his liabilities until he has filed and passed his accounts, and has paid into Court or as otherwise ordered, any balance which may be found to be due from him. The interpretation placed by Mookerjee, J., on s. 34 was not in accord with the previous interpretation placed upon that section by the Calcutta High Court and by the rules framed by that Court under the Guardians and Wards Act.

A similar question was raised in this Court in Abbasi Begam v. Yaquiti Begum (3). No doubt the question raised there was one under s. 41, sub-s. (3) of the Act; but the principle involved in that decision applies to the facts of the present case. There it was held that in order to enable the Court to impose a fine under s. 45 of the Guardians and Wards Act for non-compliance with an order under s. 41 (3), it must be shown that the sum for the non-payment of which the fine had been imposed was actually due from the guardian, and if the guardian represents that the sum is not due, no fine can be imposed unless it is first ascertained whether the sum which he has been ordered to pay was really due from him. It was there held that it was open to the District Judge to examine the account and to ascertain the sum actually due.

In Harikrishna Chettiar v. Govindarajulu Naicker (4), the question was considered and the learned Judges appear to be inclined not to agree with the view taken by Walsh, A. C. J. in Sita Ram v. Gobindi (2), and to agree with the view taken by Mookerji, J., in Jagannath Panja's case (1), but the question was not decided and the observations were obiter dicta.

(3) 93 Ind. Cas. 628; 4 Pat. 264; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 477; 7 P. L. T. 475.

(4) 98 Ind. Cas. 332; 50 M. L. J. 273; 23 L. W. 420; (1926) M. W. N. 359; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 478.

(2) 60 Ind. Cas. 592; 46 A. 458; 22 A. L. J. 585; A. I. R. 1924 All. 593.

Mr. Hasan Jan on behalf of the respondent has contended that the word "exhibit" in cl. (c) of s. 34 indicates that the guardian is bound to prove the items contained in the account. He refers to the wording in s. 41, sub-ss. (3) and (4) where the word used is "deliver" and to the wording of s. 34, cl. (b) where also the word "deliver" is used. There may be some force in the contention of Mr. Hasan Jan and the word "exhibit" in cl. (c) of s. 34 may mean something more than mere filing or delivering the accounts; but it is not necessary to lay any very great stress upon the word "exhibit" in cl. (c). The whole tenor of the Act shows that the District Judge has jurisdiction to examine the accounts; and if that is so, it is clearly within the jurisdiction of the District Judge to call upon the guardian to pay into Court any sum that he may find due upon a true account of the affairs of the minor. I am, therefore, of opinion that the learned District Judge was within his jurisdiction in imposing the fine. On the merits, however, having regard to the fact that a substantial portion of the amount disallowed by the District Judge has been allowed by this Court, it is not proper to impose a fine upon the guardian in the present case.

The order imposing the fine is, therefore, set aside. It will no doubt be open to the District Judge to act under this section if the guardian again fails to deposit the amount found due within the time to be fixed by him.

Macpherson, J.—I agree.

B. K. P.

Order set aside.

A. N. A.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 122
of 1925.

November 3, 1927.

Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief
Justice, and Mr. Justice Adami.

NATHO SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS

versus

LACHU SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Permanent lease by mortgagor in possession, validity of.—Tests—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 66.

It cannot be laid down as a proposition of law that the very act of granting a permanent lease of bakasht lands to a tenant is itself an act which is outside the scope of the authority of a mortgagor in possession. The test for determining whether such a lease is valid or void is that laid down in s. 66 of the Transfer of Property Act, namely, whether it is destructive or permanently injurious to the property and likely to render the mortgagee's security insufficient. [p. 158, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Monghyr, dated the 3rd November, 1924, confirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Monghyr, dated the 16th March, 1922.

Messrs. Murari Prasad and S. S. Bose, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—The suit out of which this appeal arises was instituted by the plaintiffs for a declaration of their title to, and recovery of possession of, 34 bighas odd of what is described as bakasht land in village Bariarpur which lies within Taluka Zafarpur. It appears that Taluka Zafarpur was mortgaged in the year 1895 to a Mr. Thomas, who in 1907 obtained a decree upon his mortgage against the mortgaged property and in 1908 sold the decree by a kabala to the plaintiffs. In 1919 the plaintiffs appear to have obtained execution of the decree and purchased the property themselves at the auction sale. When they came to take possession of village Bariarpur, they found various persons in possession over certain portions of the land and they brought this suit against seven different sets of defendants for the purpose of ousting them and getting possession over the lands in suit. We are concerned in this appeal only with the interest of the defendants Nos. 7 to 10 who are some of those who have been described as the second party defendants in the suit and their interest is confined to 12 bighas of land of which they obtained a tenancy from the mortgagor in possession in the year 1912. They claimed that having obtained a permanent lease of their 12 bighas from the mortgagor, who was then in possession, they were entitled to remain in possession and the purchasers at the sale in execution of the mortgage decree could not turn them out.

The learned Subordinate Judge of the trial Court found against the present appellants on the ground that the permanent lease granted to them by the mortgagor did not appear to be bona fide and valid.

as against the plaintiffs. On appeal to the District Judge, he puts the matter somewhat differently. He apparently considers that there was some fraud or collusion between the mortgagor and the appellants and says: "In my opinion there can be no doubt that this lease was a collusive and fraudulent one and was executed to cheat Harkhit's creditors and was not executed bona fide in the ordinary course of the management of the property".

From that decision of the defendants Nos. 7 to 10 have appealed, and two points have been relied upon in argument in support of their appeal. In the first place, it is pointed out that in the plaint from first to last there is not a word suggesting that there was any fraud in the transaction which resulted in the permanent lease granted to the appellants, nor is any mention made of any collusion. The only case made with regard to these defendants is that which appears in para. 8 of the plaint, and the allegation there is that it was admitted by all parties that the said lands formed the khudkasht of the former proprietors. It then refers to certain proceedings which were pending between various parties interested in Taluka Zafarpur and continues:—"During the pendency of the aforesaid criminal case, the defendants' 1st party had ceased to possess any interest in Taluka Zafarpur aforesaid and, without any title to keep possession of the said lands by making settlement with the defendants 2nd and 7th parties, was urged on their behalf although they had no right to keep possession or to make settlement with the tenants, nor was any such right urged on their behalf, and their entire interest in Mauza Bariarpur aforesaid had been transferred". This passage is somewhat obscure but it is the only allegation put forward in the plaint so far as the case against the present appellants goes and the allegation there apparently is that the mortgagors being no longer proprietors had no power to grant a permanent lease to the appellants. There is not a word of any fraud or any collusion on the part of the defendants. Again, when we turn to the issues in the case, there is no suggestion of any fraud or collusion between the mortgagors and the appellants. The seventh issue is "Have defendants 2nd and 7th parties acquired valid tenancy right as alleged? "It is not disputed that a permanent lease of 12 bighas of bakasht land was granted to the defendants Nos. 7 to 10 at a rental of Rs. 5 per bigha and it is not disputed that they have been in possession thereof since that date up to the present time and the mortgagors were certainly in possession in 1912. Therefore, having produced their deeds, it seems to me that the appellants had done all that was necessary to show prima facie that they had a right to remain in possession. If, in fact, the mortgagors had no interest in the property at the time they granted the lease, then undoubtedly the lease would not be valid and that being the only issue raised in the pleadings and it being no longer disputed that the mortgagors were proprietors at least to the extent of a 10-annas share in the property at the time when the permanent lease was granted in 1912, it seems that there was an end of the case made by the plaintiffs in their plaint, and all these questions of fraud and collusion which were considered by the lower Appellate Court ought never to have been taken into consideration at all. There can be no collusion between parties in doing an act they have a perfect right to do.

The only other point was whether assuming the mortgagors were in possession notwithstanding the allegation made in the plaint, they were entitled to grant a permanent lease of 12 bighas of the bakasht land to these defendants, or whether such a proceeding was in contravention of s. 66 of the Transfer of Property Act. On this question also I think that our decision must be in favour of the appellants. The section provides as follows:—

"A mortgagor in possession of the mortgaged property is not liable to the mortgagee for allowing the property to deteriorate; but he must not commit any act which is destructive or permanently injurious thereto, if the security is insufficient or will be rendered insufficient by such act. Explanation.—A security is insufficient within the meaning of this section unless the value of the mortgaged property exceeds by one-third, or, if consisting of buildings, exceeds by one-half, the amount for the time being due on the mortgage".

On that part of the case all we know is that the property was sold and fetched a sufficient sum to satisfy the whole of these mortgage debts. There is not a scrap of evidence before the Court to show that the security was in any way rendered insufficient by any act on the part of the mortgagors in granting the permanent lease to these appellants. It was contended, however, on behalf of the respondents that the very act of granting a permanent lease of bakasht lands to a tenant is itself an act which is outside the scope of the authority of the mortgagor in possession. I cannot accede to such a proposition. It seems to me that the effect of the section is correctly and concisely stated at page 1176 of Sir Hari Singh Gour's book on the Law of Transfer, (5th Edition) where he states the law as laid down in the case of Wazir Ali v. Moti Chand (1) and says "But so stated, the statement is too wide. In the case of an English or possessory mortgage it is perfectly correct to say that the mortgagor can make no lease without the consent of the mortgagee, but in any other case there appears to be no authority for similarly limiting the powers of the mortgagor. On the other hand, being the owner of his own property, he is not only entitled to create leases but may do so irrespective of their effect upon the mortgagee's security, provided only they are not wasteful within the meaning of this section, which permanent or long leases would presumably be if they materially prejudice the saleable value of the property and are injurious to the interest of the mortgagee". Then in a later passage he says—"The test by which the mortgagor's leases would be judged is stated in the section, viz., were they destructive or permanently injurious to the property likely to render the mortgagee's security insufficient. It has been held in some cases that where the mortgagor's leases are questioned by the mortgagee the burden is on the lessee to prove that they were usual and given in the ordinary course of management. This view follows the English Law but ignores the different stand point from which law views the mortgagee's rights in the country which an apprehensive mortgagee may enlarge by contract, but not otherwise than as provided in this section, even if he is an English mortgagee".

In the present case there is not from start to finish a single scrap of evidence to show that this permanent lease granted by the mortgagors in possession has in any way been destructive or permanently injurious to the mortgage-debt. The debt has in fact been satisfied. If a case of that sort was to be made out, then it was clearly, in my opinion, for the plaintiffs to make it. But as I have already said, the evidence is absolutely silent on the point and when we consider that the property sold was sufficient to satisfy the whole of the mortgagees' claim, then I cannot see how it can, in any view of the case be said that the permanent lease granted in 1912 was in contravention of s. 66 of the Transfer of Property Act. In my opinion the learned District Judge ought never to have entered into his question of fraud and collusion which was nowhere pleaded in the plaint and does not even find a place in the issues framed before trial.

(1) 2 A. L. J. 291.

I think that this appeal must be allowed with costs here and in the Courts below. The judgment of the District Magistrate will be set aside as against these appellants and in lieu thereof the suit will be dismissed as against the present appellants with costs throughout.

Adami, J.—I agree.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 224 OF 1925.

August 10, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and

Mr. Justice James.

TARACHAND MARWARI—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY CO.

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 72—Risk Note Form B—Suit for non-delivery—Burden of proof of loss—Duty of Railway Company—Mere plea of loss, whether sufficient.

In a suit for damages for non-delivery of goods consigned to a Railway Administration for carriage the Railway Administration must prove that the goods consigned have been lost, before they take advantage of the agreement contained in the Risk Note to throw upon the plaintiff the onus of showing that the goods were lost by dishonesty or wilful negligence. It is not sufficient for the Railway Company to plead execution of the Risk Note and to plead loss; they must definitely prove that there has been loss of the goods. [p. 159, col. 2.]

Nagendra Nath Sen v. B. & N. W. Ry. (1) and Puran Das v. E. I. Ry. Co. (2), followed.

Appeal from a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Purulia, dated the 20th December, 1924, reversing that of the Munsif, Raghunathpur, dated the 26th April, 1924.

Mr. S. N. Bose, for the Appellant.

Messrs N. C. Sinha and N. C. Ghosh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

James, J.—The suit out of which this appeal arises was instituted against the E. B. Ry. Co., and two other Railway Companies for compensation for non-delivery of four bags of dhania and 23 bags of tamarind. The defendant Railways admitted that the goods had not been delivered to the consignee; and the E. I. Ry. Co., by whose line the goods had been carried while they were in transit to their ultimate destination, admitted that they had been lost. The defendants denied liability, pleading that the plaintiff had executed a Risk Note in Form B exonerating the carriers by Railway from liability for loss of the goods, unless such loss should be due to wilful neglect on the part of Railway servants. The defendants did not succeed in proving by evidence that the goods had been lost; and on this account the Munsif of Raghunathpur held that they were not entitled to take advantage of the terms of the Risk Note executed by the plaintiff. On appeal, the learned Subordinate Judge of Purulia held that it was sufficient for the Railway Company to plead loss and that they were not obliged to prove it before they could take advantage of the Risk Note. He, therefore, allowed the appeal, and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff comes up in second appeal to this Court.

Mr. S. N. Bose argues for the plaintiff that in the absence of proof of loss, deterioration, or destruction, such as would bring the case within the terms of the Risk Note, he is entitled to a decree. It was not proved that the goods had actually been despatched from Kushthia, after they had been made over to the Eastern Bengal Railway Company; and it is not suggested on behalf of the Railway Companies that loss has been proved in this case. Mr. N. C. Sinha for the respondents argues that the defendant Company has merely to plead loss; and the onus will then be upon the plaintiff to prove that the loss was caused by some set of dishonesty or wilful negligence on the part of a servant of the Railway Administration. But in the recent case of Nagendra Nath

Sen v. B. & N. W. Ry. (1) it was held, following the decision of the Full Bench in the case of Puran Das v. E. I. Ry. Co. (2) that the Railway Administration must prove that the goods consigned have been lost before they take advantage of the agreement contained in the Risk Note to throw upon the plaintiff the onus of showing that the goods were lost by dishonesty or wilful negligence; and that it is not sufficient for the Railway Company to plead execution of the Risk Note and to plead loss; they must definitely prove that there has been loss of goods. It is not suggested that in the case with which we are here concerned, the defendant Railways did prove that the goods had been lost. Therefore, they cannot take advantage of the agreement contained in the Risk Note. The goods were accepted for carriage by Railway; they have not been delivered to the consignee; and the carriers must be held responsible for their value.

The plaintiff's suit must accordingly be decreed against the Railway Company to whom the goods were delivered for carriage. The appeal is allowed; the decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside; and the plaintiff's suit is decreed against the E. B. Ry. Co. The plaintiff will be entitled to his costs throughout.

Das, J.—I agree. These cases are free from all complications. The plaintiff in this case sues upon the contract and for damages for non-delivery. I do not think that the proposition is disputed in any of the judgments to which my attention has been drawn that in a case where the plaintiff is suing upon the contract for non-delivery of the goods, the onus is upon the Railway Company to prove the loss of goods.

B. K. P.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 105 Ind. Cas. 546.

(2) 102 Ind. Cas. 673; 8 P. L. T. 415; A. I. R. 1927 Pat. 234; 6 Pat. 718.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL MISCELLANEOUS CASE

No. 125 of 1927.

November 14, 1927.

Present.—Justice Sir. Jwala Prasad, Kr., and Mr. Justice Ross.Babu, CHHANU PRASAD SINGH—ACCUSED—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 350, 526—Transfer—Reasonable apprehension, whether sufficient—Accused's right to fresh examination of witnesses.

It is enough for the transfer of a case that the applicant for transfer has reasonable grounds for apprehension that he will not receive proper justice at the hands of the trying Magistrate. It is not for the Court to decide whether the apprehensions of the accused are true or not.

An accused has, under s. 350 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, a right to demand that the witnesses or any of them be summoned and re-examined when the case is tried by the Magistrate to whom it is transferred for trial. He can, however, waive his right.

Application for transfer of a case from the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Supaul, to the Court of some other competent Magistrate elsewhere.

Messrs. S. Sinha and Murari Prasad, for the Petitioner.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

Jwala Prasad, J.—This is an application for the transfer of the case from the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Supaul, a similar application made to the District Magistrate having been refused. The application to this Court reproduces substantially the allegations made in the application to the District Magistrate for the transfer of the case. We have heard Counsel on both sides and have carefully considered the allegations made by the petitioner and the explanation which was offered by the Magistrate in connection with the application made to the District Magistrate. No further explanation has been given to this Court and the Magistrate relies upon the explanation given by him to the District Magistrate.

It seems to us that from the circumstances disclosed in the applications and what transpired in Court during the trial of the case, the accused may reasonably apprehend that he will not receive proper justice at the hands of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Supaul. Whether his apprehensions are true or not it is not for us to decide; it is enough for the transfer of the case that he has reasonable ground for such an apprehension. Whereas the several petitions filed by the petitioner before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate during the trial show want of propriety, the Magistrate's remarks on various occasions on the other hand exhibit lack of judicial temper. We need not enter into a detailed discussion as regards the various allegations made in the petitions. We think that the case is one which should be tried by another Magistrate.

The case is accordingly transferred to the head-quarters of Bhagalpur to the file of the District Magistrate who will himself try the case or have it tried by any competent Magistrate subordinate to him.

The accused under s. 350 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Code has a right to demand that the witnesses or any of them be summoned and re-examined when the case will be tried by the Magistrate to whom it will be transferred for trial. The accused can, however, waive his right and Mr. Sinha, who appears for the petitioner, assures us that the accused will not insist upon the examination again of the witnesses already examined in the case and that the trial now in the Court to which the case will be consigned will continue from the stage at which it had reached in the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Supaul. It may be observed that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate has refused to summon the witnesses for the defence. It will be open to the accused to make a further application before the Magistrate to whom the case will now be transferred and it will be for that Magistrate to decide the question upon merits. The order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Supaul upon this particular point will not, therefore, stand in the way of a further application being made by the accused to examine defence witnesses.

Ross, J.—I agree.

A. N. A.

Application granted.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 32 OF 1927.

July 28, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Pratt.

MAUNG PO PE—APPLICANT

versus

MAUNG KWA AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 58—Execution of decree—Attachment—Application after sale to remove attachment, maintainability of—Execution sale, effect of.

A Court has no jurisdiction to entertain an application under O. XXI, r. 58 of the Civil Procedure Code, after the properties attached are sold in execution. A sale in execution ipso facto determines the attachment.

Gopal Chandra Mukerji v. Notobar Kundu (1) and Puhup Deo Kuer v. Ram Charitar Barhi (2), relied on.

Mr. Chatterjee, for the Applicant.

Mr. Mitter, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application under s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, to revise the order of the Township Judge, Myaing, in Civil Miscellaneous Case No. 1 of 1927, ordering the removal of attachment of land attached in Execution Case No. 31 of 1926.

It is contended that the order for removal of attachment was ultra vires as the land had already been sold before the application was made.

A reference to the execution proceedings shows that the land in question was sold on the 17th December, 1926, and the application for removal of attachment was not made till the 4th of January following.

It is true the sale had not been confirmed, but I am of opinion that the contention that the attachment was no longer subsisting is correct.

I have been unable to find any officially reported cases on the subject, possibly the rulings on the point have not been recorded as it was considered too obvious.

Mr. Chatterjee for applicant relies on the Calcutte Bench case of Gopal Chandra Mukerji v. Notobar Kundu (1).

It was there held that an order under r. 60 of O. XXI must be made before the sale has taken place. It was also pointed out that sub-r. (2) of r. 58, which provides for the adjournment of a sale pending the investigation of a claim preferred under sub-r. (1) makes it clear that the application for removal of attachment and order under r. 60 must be prior to the sale in execution.

The Bench held that the subordinate Court had acted clearly in excess of jurisdiction and violation of an express provision of the Code, and that it was a case in which it ought to interfere on revision.

(1) 15 Ind. Cas. 53; 16 C. W. N. 1029.

This case was followed by a Bench of the Patna High Court recently in Puhup Deo Kuer v. Ram Charitar Barhi (2).

In the Patna case the sale of land in execution took place after the application under O. XXI, r. 58 had been filed.

Mullick, J., in giving judgment remarked:—"It is obvious that, after the sale was held, the attachment was ipso facto determined and the Court had no longer any jurisdiction to try the claim case".

I have no doubt that this is sound law.

It is obvious that respondent has a remedy under r. 100, if dispossessed or that he may resist the auction-purchasers taking possession under r. 97, if he has no cause of action under r. 90.

I hold that the order of the Township Court was without jurisdiction and set it aside accordingly. Applicant will be allowed costs. Advocate's fees two gold mohurs.

A. N. A.

Application allowed.

(2) 74 Ind. Cas. 87; 4 P. L. T. 544; A. I. R. 1924 Pat. 76.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATION No. 58 OF 1927.

July 19, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Maung Ba.

K. K. S. A. R. FIRM—APPELLANTS

versus

MAUNG KYA NYUN AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLVII, r. 1—'Any other sufficient reason', interpretation of—Reason, whether should be ejusdem generis—'Ejusdem generis', meaning of.

Although the words 'any other sufficient reason' in O. XLVII, r. 1 of the Civil Procedure Code mean a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously, it is not necessary that the reason should be ejusdem generis with those previously specified. The phrase ejusdem generis is more restricted in its meaning than the word 'analogous'. [p. 163, col. 1.]

The summons to a witness in a case was returned.

unserved as the witness could not be found. The Court with a view to avoid the case pending idly declined to adjourn the case for giving a further opportunity to the party concerned to secure his attendance and decided the suit. The witness was subsequently found out and the party applied for review of the case, and the application was granted by the trial Court.

Held, that there was a sufficient ground for review, and the order of the trial Court granting the application was not illegal. [p. 162, col. 1.]

Mr. Ganguli, for the Appellants.

Mr. Basu, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for a certificate under cl. 13 of the Letters Patent that it is a fit case for appeal.

As the point involved is one of construction to be put upon the phrase "any other sufficient reason" used in r. 1 of O. XLVII, Civil Procedure Code, I have allowed both sides to argue that point. The applicant Chettyar firm brought a suit against the respondents on a promissory note, and the respondents denied execution of that note. In the evidence tendered by the applicants it was alleged that the writer of the note was one Ma Tin U, but the applicants made no attempt to produce her. Consequently the respondents applied to the trial Judge for an adjournment to enable them to produce her in order to rebut the evidence tendered against them. The learned Judge accordingly adjourned the case. The respondents took out a summons, but as the witness was not to be found at her old address the summons was returned unserved. The respondents then applied to the Judge to give them another adjournment to enable them to make further efforts to secure that witness. But the Judge, who was presumably actuated by a desire to show short duration, refused to grant any more adjournment and proceeded with the trial which resulted in a decree being passed against the respondents. The respondents subsequently succeeded in finding the witness and applied to the trial Court for a review. The Judge granted the review and gave the following reason: "I see every effort was made by the applicants to bring Ma Tin U into the witness-box but as she could not be found applicants were obliged to close their case as no further adjournment was allowed. The reason why this Court declined to allow any further adjournment by that time was to save the case pending idly for many months and not with reason to object to the examination of Ma Tin U. Since the Court has no objection to examination of Ma Tin U, I consider this application on this ground is a fit one to be admitted." Against that order the applicants went upon appeal to the District Court. The learned District Judge dismissed the appeal recording the following reason: "The lower Court was satisfied that respondents had made every effort to bring Ma Tin U to Court. There was documentary evidence on the record showing how respondents had taken out a summons and how that summons was returned with a report that Ma Tin U's whereabouts were unknown. In my opinion the provisions of O. XLVII, r. 4, sub-cl. (2) (b) have been complied with and so there is no cause for interference." The Chettyar firm were still not satisfied and came up to this Court on revision. I dismissed that application for revision saying, "On taking account of the circumstances under which the respondents were not given an opportunity of producing the rebutting evidence, I consider that those circumstances constituted a 'sufficient reason' within the meaning of r. 1 of O. XLVII, Civil Procedure Code. That reason need not be ejusdem generis with the other two specific grounds mentioned in that rule. It must be one sufficient to the Court or Judge dealing with the application for review. The question of the sufficiency of any reason must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case."

It is now contended that my view, namely, "that reason need not be ejusdem generis with the other two specific grounds," is incorrect. In support of this contention the case of Chajju Ram v. Neki (1), decided by a Full Bench of the Privy Council has been quoted. Viscount Haldane, who delivered the judgment of the Board, construed the phrase "any other sufficient reason" in the following words: "Their Lordships think that r. 1 of O. XLVII must be read as in itself definitive of the limits within which review is to-day permitted, and the reference to practice under former and different Statutes is misleading. So construing it they interpret the words 'any other sufficient reason' as meaning a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously."

(1) 72 Ind. Cas. 566; 3 Lah. 127; 30 M. L. T. 295; 26 C. W. N. 697; 41 P. L. R. 1922; 3 P. L. T. 435; A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 112; 16 L. W. 37; 17 P. W. R. 1922; 43 M. L. J. 332; 24 Bom. L. R. 1238; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. O.) 99; 36 C. L. J. 459; 49 I. A. 144 (P. O.).

In my opinion there is a distinct difference between the words "ejusdem generis" and at least analogous." The Latin phrase "ejusdem generis" according to Chambers' Twentieth Century Dictionary means "of the same kind." The same Dictionary defines "analogous" as "bearing same; correspondence with; or resemblance to; similar in certain circumstances or relations." So in my opinion the phrase "ejusdem generis" is more restricted than the word "analogous." In Byrne's Law Dictionary "ejusdem generis" is defined as follows: "It is a rule of legal construction that general words following enumeration of particulars are to have their generality limited by reference to the preceding particular enumeration and to be construed as including only all other articles of the like nature and quality." So I am of opinion that my statement that "the reason need not be ejusdem generis with the other two specific grounds" is not inconsistent with the construction put by their Lordships of the Privy Council, viz: "that the reason must be sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously." I, therefore, still hold that the particular circumstances of the present case constituted a reason analogous to the other two reasons previously mentioned in r. 1, namely, discovery of new and important matter and error apparent on the face of the record.

For the above reasons I do not consider that a case is made out for granting the certificate applied for under the Letters Patent. The application is accordingly dismissed with costs—Advocate's fee three gold mohurs.

A. N. A.

Application dismissed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 137 OF 1927.

July 11, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Maung Ba.

U PO NYUN AND ANOTHER—APPLICANTS

versus

MA PAN ME—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, r. 3—Compromise pending suit including extraneous matters—Procedure—Form of decree.

Where an agreement or compromise entered into pending a suit comprises matters relating to the suit as well as other matters, the proper method of carrying out of the terms of O. XXIII, r. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code would be for the decree to recite the whole of the agreement and then to conclude with an order relating to that part that was the subject of the suit. The decree taken as a whole should include the agreement but the operative part of the decree should be confined to the subject-matter of the pending litigation. [p. 164, col. 2.]

Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Midnapore Zemindari Co. (1), relied on.

Mr. Kyaw Din, for the Applicants.

Mr. Guha, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This revision arises out of Civil Regular Suit No. 51-A of 1926 of the District Court of Tharrawaddy. In that suit applicants, U Po Nyun and his second wife Ma Ohn, brought an action against his adopted daughter Ma Pan Me to have a deed of gift executed in her favour set aside on the ground of fraud and misrepresentation. It appears that U Po Nyun had adopted Ma Pan Me, her sister Ma Pan Thwe and her brother Maung Po Hman, before he married the second wife; that there were other suits between U Po Nyun, his two adopted children and grand-children, Saw Thein and Than Mya; that all these suits were compromised and that the terms were embodied in one agreement. So far as this suit is concerned, the agreement between the parties was that the suit should be dismissed without costs except that U Po Nyun was to have a decree for the pucca building and the granary, which were covered by the said deed of gift and also that the defendant, Ma Pan Me, as well as Maung Thu Daw, Maung Po U, Maung Saw Thein and Ma Than Mya were to be allowed to live in the pucca building and store paddy in the granary. The agreement was signed by U Po Nyun and Ma Ohn on the one part and Maung Thu Daw, Ma Pan Me, Maung Po U and Maung Po Hman on the other.

The learned Judge did not write any judgment embodying the terms of that agreement but in his diary order dated the 9th December, 1926, ordered that there would be a decree in terms of the agreement so far as it related to the suit. That order was followed by a decree, which ordered that the plaintiffs U Po Nyun and Ma Ohn were to be the owners of pucca building and granary; that the registered deed of gift made in favour of Ma Pan Me was to stand except that the plaintiffs were to have the pucca building and the granary and further that the suit be dismissed without costs as regards the rest of their claim.

Ma Pan Me thought that this decree was not in accordance with the terms of the compromise and applied to the District Judge for an amendment of the decree. The learned Judge then ordered that Ma Ohn's name should be omitted and that the right of Ma Pan Me to live in the pucca house and store paddy in the granary should be mentioned.

As regards the first point about the inclusion of Ma Ohn's name, it may be pointed out that she was a party to the agreement of compromise and that she was a co-plaintiff in the suit. It may also be pointed out that, as second wife, she has an interest in the subject-matter according to Burmese Buddhist Law. Therefore, the first part of the order is quite wrong. Her name should be included.

As regards the second point, the learned Judge was of opinion that this leave to live in the house and store paddy in the granary formed part of the consideration. He has overlooked the fact that U Po Nyun and Ma Ohn agreed to allow not only Ma Pan Me but also four others to have such a right. No doubt it is a matter of some difficulty in finding which matters relate to the suit and which matters do not relate to the suit within the meaning of r. 3.

In Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Midnapore Zemindari Co. (1), their Lordships of the Privy Council indicated how that phrase "matters relating to the suit" should be interpreted. At page 45* their Lordships observe:—"The terms of this section need careful scrutiny. In the first place, it is plain that the agreement or compromise, in whole and not in part, is to be recorded, and the decree is then to confine its operation to so much of the subject-matter of the suit as is dealt with by the agreement. Their Lordships are not aware of the exact system by which documents are recorded in the Courts in India, but a perfectly proper and effectual method of carrying out the terms of this section would be for the decree to recite the whole of the agreement and then to conclude with an order relative to that part that was the subject of the suit, or it could introduce the agreement in a schedule to the decree; but in either case, although the operative part of the decree would be properly confined to the actual subject-matter of the then existing litigation the decree taken as a whole would include the agreement."

In the present suit U Po Nyun and Ma Ohn sought to have the deed of gift, whereby U Po Nyun had given away all his immoveable property to Ma Pan Me, cancelled, alleging that his intention was to give her only 100 acres of land whereas the deed covered nearly 800 acres as well the house and granary. The effect of the agreement was that Ma Pan Me consented to have the deed cancelled so far as the house and granary were concerned. It is not quite correct to give a decree declaring that U Po Nyun is the owner of that property. The decree should be in favour of U Po Nyun and his wife to the effect that the suit be decreed so far as the house and granary are concerned. Therefore, it is questionable whether the permission to live in the house and store paddy in the granary is a matter relating to the suit. It appears that Ma Pan Me and the other children have been living with U Po Nyun all the time. No doubt, after this litigation the relationship between them must have become strained. However, this permission to Ma Pan Me and others to live in the house and store paddy in the granary is part of the agreement which can be enforced if necessary. There is a conflict of judicial opinion whether such enforcement can be done in execution or by a separate suit. The Court is informed that U Po Nyun has even filed a suit to get the dispute regarding the nature and extent of this permission settled. So far as this suit is concerned, this permission, which is in favour of several persons including Ma Pan Me, should be left out and not embodied in the decree.

I, therefore, set aside the amended decree

(1) 53 Ind. Cas. 534; 47 O. 485; 37 M. L. J. 525; 17 A. L. J. 1117; 24 C. W. N. 177; (1920) M. W. N. 66; 27 M. L. T. 42; 11 L. W. 301; 46 I. A. 240; 22 Bom. L. R. 488 (P. C.).

*Page of 47 C.—[Ed.]

of the District Court and direct that the first decree do stand.

The applicants are entitled to costs in this Court, three gold mohurs.

A. N. A.

Application allowed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 285 of 1926.

July 18, 1927.

Present :—Sir Guy Rutledge, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Brown.

MAUNG PWA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—APPELLANTS

versus

MAUNG PO SA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Simple mortgage—Subsequent delivery of possession to mortgagee—Extinguishment of simple mortgage—Suit for redemption—Plea of outright sale—Burden of proof—Adverse possession.

A executed a simple mortgage to B in 1905. In 1906 A gave possession of the mortgaged properties to B. In 1926, the heirs of A sued B for redemption of the properties alleging that possession was given only for securing payment of interest on the mortgage-debt. B pleaded that the properties were made over to him by way of outright sale in satisfaction of the mortgage-debt and interest:

Held, (1) that whatever be the nature of the transaction of 1906, it had the effect of extinguishing the previous simple mortgage and that the suit for redemption could not be maintained; [p. 166, col. 2.]

Maung San Min v. Maung Po Hlaing (4), relied on. (2) that inasmuch as the burden of proving title, regarding the suit as one based on title, was on the plaintiffs, it was for them to show that the defendant came into possession of the lands as alleged by them and that his possession was not adverse to the plaintiffs. [ibid]

Maung Ok Kyi v. Ma Pu (1), A. T. A. R. M. M. Chetty Firm v. Mahomed Kasim (2), and Ma Dun v. Lu O (3), doubted.

Per Rutledge, C. J.—It cannot be laid down as a proposition of law that when land is mortgaged without possession and possession is subsequently given to the mortgagee the burden of proving that the transaction in which possession was given was an outright sale lies on the mortgagee. In cases of long possession the onus is on the party out of possession. In cases, however, where the possession has been for less than 12 years and where title of the previous owner is admitted, the onus may properly be put on the person who alleges an outright sale. [p. 167, cols. 1 & 2.]

Mr. Thein Maung, for the Appellants.

Mr. Hay, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Brown, J.—The land in suit originally belonged to one Ma Sa Pa. In the year 1905 Ma Sa Pa effected a simple mortgage of the land in favour of the appellant

Maung Pwa and his deceased wife, Ma Shwe Hnit, by a registered deed. The principal amount secured by this registered instrument was Rs. 1,500 and the rate of interest Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. per mensem. About a year later Ma Sa Pa was unable to pay the interest on the mortgage and possession of the land was given to Maung Pwa.

The respondents, who are the children of Ma Sa Pa and her legal representatives, have sued for redemption of the mortgage of the land, and have been given a decree. Against this decree the appellants have now appealed.

The original simple mortgage is admitted and it is also common ground that possession of the land was given to Maung Pwa a year after the mortgage. The plaintiff-respondents say that, when possession of the land was made over, it was made over simply as security for payment of the interest under the mortgage, the annual rent for the land being accepted in lieu of interest. The defendant-appellants say that the land was made over to them outright by way of sale for the sum of Rs. 1,900 made up of the principal and interest due on the mortgage.

The trial Judge held that the burden of proving the outright transfer or rather the contract to transfer outright rested on the appellants and that the appellants had not discharged that burden.

It is contended on behalf of the appellants that the simple mortgage of 1905 is no longer in existence and that the suit is, therefore, not maintainable. If the simple mortgage was extinguished in 1906, then quite clearly there is no mortgage now in force, as at the time of the making over of the possession of the land s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act was in force and there is no suggestion that any registered deed was executed at the time of this transaction.

We have been referred to the decision of a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Maung Ok Kyi v. Ma Pu (1). The facts of that case were very similar to those of the present case. In that case also there had been a simple mortgage of land by a registered deed and possession had been made over to the mortgagee about a year after the mortgage. The original owner of the land sued for redemption of the mortgage and the defendants pleaded that the land had been made over to them outright; but there was admittedly no registered instrument for the subsequent transaction. It was held that in such circumstances it was open to the defendants to plead the invalid sale to them as a defence to the mortgage claim. That point is not now in dispute. Nor did the trial Judge take a contrary view. His view was that the burden of proof in such circumstances lay on the defendants. But in the course of the judgment in the case of Maung Ok Kyi v. Ma Pu (1), the learned Chief Justice expressed the view that the onus of proving what the subsequent transaction was lay on the person who was not in possession. A somewhat similar point was considered by us in the case of A. T. A. R. M. M. Chetty Firm v. Mahomed Kasim (2). In that case we accepted the law as laid down in Ma Dun v. Lu O (3) that when land was mortgaged without possession and possession subsequently passed to the mortgagee, the burden of proving that the transfer in which possession was given was an outright sale lay on the person alleging it. We held, however, that, in considering whether the burden of proof had been discharged, all the circumstances of the case including the conduct of the parties must be borne in mind. The result of that case was that we held the outright sale to have been proved. Our decision accepting the view as to the burden of proof taken in Ma Dun's case (3) was, therefore, merely obiter and I feel doubtful whether that decision was correct. But it is unnecessary now to pronounce definitely on the general proposition. In the present case the plaintiff Maung Po Sa says as to the subsequent transaction: "U Pwa and Ma Hnit agreed to reduce Rs. 50 out of interest Rs. 450 and agreed to keep the suit land with them for Rs. 1,900 by way of usufructuary mortgage." This alone suggests the entering into a new contract. As pointed out by the learned Chief Justice in Maung Ok Kyi's case (1), the outstanding characteristic of a simple mortgage is that possession remains with the mortgagor. And if possession subsequently passes to the mortgagee that possession is not explained or accounted for by the simple mortgage instrument.

(1) 99 Ind. Cas. 519; 4 R. 368; 5 Bur. L. J. 145; A. I. R. 1927 Rang. 33 (F. B.).

(2) 90 Ind. Cas. 1011; 3 R. 367; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 377.

(3) 2 Ind. Cas. 535; 5 L. B. R. 40.

The land in dispute in the present case has been in the possession of the defendant for 20 years and the principal point in dispute in the present case is as to the possession of this land. An action for recovery of possession could not possibly arise on the contract of a simple mortgage. We think it is clear that what the plaintiffs are really suing on is not a simple mortgage at all but the alleged usufructuary mortgage and that, whatever the nature of the transaction in 1906, it had the effect of extinguishing the previous simple mortgage. That being so, it follows that there is now no legal mortgage in effect and in accordance with the ruling of a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Maung San Min v. Maung Po Hlaing (4), the suit, as framed, for redemption of the land will not lie. The plaintiffs might have been able to sue for possession based on title. But even if they were allowed now to change the suit and sue on the title, I do not think that they can be held to have succeeded. There is no mortgage of the land and the defendants have been in possession for 20 years. The suit, if based on title, must be a suit under the provisions of Art. 142 of the Limitation Act and in suits under that Article the burden of proving that the possession of the defendant is not adverse lies on the plaintiff. In this case the defendants clearly plead that their possession was adverse from the first. In order to succeed in the case, it was, therefore, clearly necessary that the plaintiffs should show how the defendants came into possession of the land and that that possession was not adverse. It follows from this that the burden of proof as to the nature of the original transaction rests on the plaintiffs. If they cannot prove how possession passed, no presumption that the possession was not adverse can be drawn.

For these reasons I am of opinion that the trial Judge was wrong in placing the burden of proof in the case on the defendants; and it is clear from his judgment that his decision in favour of the plaintiffs was not based on any special belief in the plaintiffs' evidence but on the view that the defendants had not satisfactorily proved their case. As is only to be expected after so many years, the oral evidence as to what took place when handing over the land is not satisfactory on either side.

The defendants have produced an

(4) 94 Ind. Cas. 567; 4 R. 1; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 291; 4 Bur. L. J. 118 (F. B.).

unstamped and unregistered deed, which is certainly not on the face of it convincing. What is, however, quite clear and is not denied by the plaintiffs is that in the year 1907 the Deputy Commissioner gave a certificate that they had acquired the status of landholders in respect of the land to Maung Pwa and his deceased wife. The defendants have tried to prove that Ma Sa Pa had notice of the proceedings and agreed to the grant of this certificate. The oral evidence on this point may not be very satisfactory but the undoubted fact remains that this certificate was issued and that no objection was taken to its issue at the time. In the ordinary way notice should have issued and the plaintiffs should have heard of the proceedings before the certificate was granted. The fact that this certificate was issued to Maung Pwa without objection does lend strong support to his story that he was in possession as owner of the land.

I do not think it necessary to discuss in detail the oral evidence adduced by the plaintiffs on which the trial Judge obviously did not place any great reliance. Some of the witnesses are related to the plaintiffs and they are all Burmans as are the plaintiffs themselves; whereas the defendant is a Karen.

I do not consider that the evidence is convincing or in any way sufficient to establish the claim for possession of the suit land worth about Rs. 10,000 on payment of Rs. 1,900 from persons who have been in peaceful possession for 20 years.

I am of opinion that the suit must fail. I would set aside the decree of the trial Court and pass a decree dismissing the suit of the plaintiff-respondents with costs in both Courts.

Rutledge, C. J.—I have had the advantage of reading the judgment of my learned brother and I entirely agree with his conclusion. I only add these observations in respect of certain obiter dicta in a joint judgment of his and mine in A. T. A. R. M. M. Chetty Firm v. Mahomed Kasim (2), and in my judgment in Maung Ok Kyi v. Ma Pu, (1). In Ma Dun's case (3), Mr. Justice Irwin stated that he was bound by the decision of a Bench in Ko Po Win v U Pe (5), the effect of which was that, when land is mortgaged without possession and possession is subsequently given to the mortgagee, the burden of proving that the transaction in which possession was given was an outright sale lies, in the first instance, on the mortgagee. I am not prepared to accept this statement as correct, as, in cases of long possession, I am clearly of opinion that the onus should be on the party out of possession. In cases, however, where the possession has been less than twelve years and where the title of the previous owner is admitted, the onus may properly be put on the person in possession who alleges an outright sale. I add this by way of qualification of the remark made in my judgment in Maung Ok Kyi v. Ma Pu (1).

The appeal is allowed and the suit dismissed with costs in both Courts.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 262 OF 1926.

July 27, 1927.

Present :—Sir Guy Rutledge, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Carr.

MAUNG BA GON—APPELLANT

versus

MA PWA THIT—RESPONDENT.

Burmese Buddhist Law—Inheritance—Heirs related in same degree—Division per capita.

Under the Burmese Buddhist Law where the heirs are all related in the same degree to the propositus they inherit each in his own right and not by representation and, therefore, take per capita.

Maung Po Thu Daw v. Maung Po Than (1), followed.

Mr Ze Ya, for the Appellant.

Mr. Tun Byu, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The question arising in this appeal is—how is the estate of the deceased Maung Aung Myin to be partitioned among his heirs, who are:—

(1) the plaintiff, the son of Aung Myin's deceased paternal aunt;

(2) and (3) two children of a deceased maternal uncle;

(4) to (9) six children of another deceased maternal uncle?

The learned Judge on the Original Side has found that the estate must be divided among these nine persons per capita and that each of them is entitled to a one-ninth share.

The appellant's contention is that the estate should be divided per stirpes and that, therefore, he is entitled to one-third. Logically he should claim one-half because his connection with the deceased must be traced through the latter's paternal grandparents, while all the other eight heirs trace their connection through the maternal grandparents.

We think that the question is concluded by the Full Bench decision in Maung Po Thu Daw v. Maung Po Than (1) in which it was decided that where the only heirs were grandchildren of the propositus the division must be per capita. The cases are, of course not identical, but the principle involved is the same—that when the heirs are all related in the same degree to the propositus they inherit each in his own right and not by representation and that, therefore, each shares equally with all the others.

In our opinion, therefore, the decision appealed from is correct.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 83 Ind. Cas. 10; 1 R. 316; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 73 (F. B.).

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 213 OF 1926.

July 15, 1927.

Present:—Justice Sir Benjamin Herbert Heald, Kt., and Mr. Justice Mya Bu.
S. R. M. M. A. CHETTYAR FIRM

—APPELLANT

versus

MA PWA MAY AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 87—Document written on stamp of wrong description—Validity of registration.

The registration of a mortgage-bond is not invalidated by the mere fact that the document was written on a stamp paper of a wrong description. Section 87 of the Registration Act sufficiently covers such a case.

Biswanath Bhattacharjee v. Govinda Chandra Das (1), followed.

Mr. Anklesaria, for the Appellant.

Mr. Clark, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Heald, J.—Respondents sued Po Saung and Ma Twe Mi, who had purported to mortgage certain oil wells to them, to recover the amount alleged to be due on the mortgage. The date of the mortgage-bond was the 13th of March, 1924, and the suit was instituted on the 10th of June, 1924.

The mortgagors confessed judgment, but the present appellant, who in a suit instituted on the 20th of March, 1924, had on the 15th of May, 1924, obtained an attachment of the mortgaged property, claimed to be joined as a defendant and on being so joined pleaded that the mortgage was made fraudulently without consideration and by collusion between the parties to it, those parties being closely related to each other, in order to defeat the claim which he made in the suit. He brought to notice the fact that the mortgage bond was written on a Court-fee stamp and not on a non-judicial stamp and suggested that the use of a wrong stamp was an indication of the haste which was necessary if the mortgage was to be executed before his suit was filed and his attachment effected.

The Court framed issues as to whether the mortgage bond represented a genuine transaction and was executed for valuable consideration, or was executed by the parties to it in collusion for the purpose of defrauding appellant. There was also an issue as to whether the mortgage bond could be admitted in evidence on payment of duty and penalty. The Court came to the conclusion that consideration was paid, and although it found that the transaction was "highly suspicious," it held that it was not proved to be collusive or fraudulent. As for the mortgage bond, the stamp duty and penalty were paid and it was certified by the Collector to be duly stamped, and it was admitted in evidence. In the result a mortgage decree was given in favour of respondents.

Appellant appeals and his learned Advocates says that he wishes to raise two questions only:—

(i) whether the fact that the mortgage bond was written on a wrong stamp and was, therefore, not properly stamped at the time when it was registered, invalidated the registration, and

(ii) whether or not the mortgage was fraudulent and collusive.

On the first of these questions no authority has been cited in this Court which casts any doubt on the correctness of the ruling of the High Court of Calcutta in the case of Biswanath Bhattacharjee v. Govinda Chandra Das (1) and we are of opinion that the provisions of s. 87 of the Registration Act cover the case. We hold, therefore, that the registration of the bond was not invalidated by the fact that it was written on a stamp of the wrong kind.

(1) 51 Ind. Cas. 88; 23 C. W. N. 534; 29 C. L. J. 305.

[His Lordship then discussed the second question and held that the mortgage was a fraudulent and collusive transaction and set aside the mortgage-decree.]

Mya Bu, J.—I concur.

A. N. A. Order accordingly.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 345 OF 1927.

July 28, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Maung Ba.

C. R. M. A. CHETTYAR FIRM—

APPLICANTS

versus

K. R. S. V. CHETTYAR FIRM AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 73—‘Same judgment-debtor’, meaning of—Decrees against several persons—Decree-holders with common judgment-debtors, whether entitled to share—Application for execution to Court holding assets; necessity of—Mere forwarding of application for execution by Court passing decree, effect of.

Where property belonging to several persons has been sold in execution of a decree against all of them, persons holding decrees against some of them alone are entitled to participate rateably in the distribution of the assets according to the interest of their respective judgment-debtors in the property sold provided they have otherwise complied with the provisions of s. 73 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 170, col. 1.]

The words ‘same judgment-debtor’ in s. 73 of the Code do not mean, in the case of decrees against several persons, that all the judgment-debtors of all the decrees should be the same. [p. 169, col. 2.]

Ramanathan Chettiar v. Subramania Sastrial (1), Gonesh Das Bagria v. Shiva Lakshman Bhakat (2) and Chhotlal Harkisandas v. Nabibhai Mianji (3), relied on.

A decree-holder who has not obtained a transfer of his decree to the Court holding the assets and applied to that Court for execution of his decree, but whose application for execution to the Court which passed his decree has merely been forwarded for rateable distribution to the Court holding the assets is not entitled to rateable distribution under s. 73 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 170, col. 1.]

Krishnashankar v. Chandrasankar (4) and Sit Saing v. Maung Po Kaing (5), relied on.

Mr. Thein Maung, for the Applicants.

Mr. Chäri, for the Respondents:

JUDGMENT.—This application for revision arises out of Civil Execution No. 19 of 1925 of the District Court of Prome.

The decree-holder, C. R. M. A. Chettyar

Firm, obtained a decree against Ma Shwe Yin, Ma Bibi and the legal representatives of their husbands, Meera Moideen and Muzaffar Rowther. In execution of that decree a rice-mill was attached and sold. The decree-holder objects to any rateable share being given to the four respondents, who are also Chettyar Firms, on two grounds (1) that their decrees are not against the same judgment-debtor and (2) that those decrees have not been transferred to the District Court, which holds the assets.

The mill is supposed to belong to the twodeceased Muhammadans and their wives. In the case of the applicant his decree is against both the deceased persons and their wives. In the case of the 1st respondent, K. R. S. V. Chettyar Firm, he obtained a decree in the District Court only against Ma Bibi and the legal representatives of her husband Muzaffar Rowther. In the case of the 2nd respondent, A. P. S. V. R. Chettyar Firm, he obtained a decree only against the legal representatives of Meera Moideen. In the case of the 3rd respondent, N. M. R. M. Chettyar Firm, he obtained three decrees, (1) against both the widows and the legal representatives of Meera Moideen, (2) against Ma Bibi and her children as the legal representatives of Muzaffar Rowther; and (3) against Ma Shwe Yin, Ma Bibi and the latter's children as the legal representatives of Muzaffar Rowther. In the case of the 4th respondent, R. M. M. R. M. Chettyar Firm, he obtained a decree against Ma Shwe Yin, Ma Bibi and the former's children as the legal representatives of Meera Moideen. All those decrees obtained by 2nd, 3rd and 4th respondents were obtained in the Sub-Divisional Court of Paungde. It is true that the decrees of those three respondents were not against all the judgment debtors included in the decree obtained by the applicant.

The first question is whether the phrase “same judgment-debtor” can be applied to all the decrees obtained by the applicant and the four respondents. In my opinion it can be so applied. In this view I am fortified by the following authorities.

In the case of Ramanathan Chettyar v. Subramania Sastrial (1) one decree was against the father alone and the other was against the father and son. The property sold was the ancestral property of the family of which the father and son were undivided members. The learned Chief Justice, Sir Arnold White, held that the decrees were against the "same judgment-debtor" for the purposes of s. 295 (now s. 73). That case was decided in 1902. In the following year the Calcutta High Court adopted the same view in the Full Bench case of Gonesh Das Bagria v. Shiva Lakshman Bhakat (2). In that case B obtained a decree against three judgment-debtors, X, Y and Z, while A obtained a decree against X and Y only. The property sold was the joint property of all the three judgment-debtors. The Calcutta High Court even went further and held that in such a case a proportionate distribution of the assets according to the shares of the judgment-debtors in the property was permissible. Three years later the Bombay High Court adopted the same view in the case of Chhotalal Harkishandas v. Nabibhai Mianji (3). It was a Bench ruling. The learned Judges followed the rulings of the Madras and Calcutta High Courts mentioned above.

In the present case there are common judgment-debtors in all the execution cases. So it would follow that all the decree-holders are entitled to participate rateably in the distribution of the assets according to the interest of the respective judgment-debtors in the property. This disposes of the first objection.

We now come to the next objection, namely, that the respondent-decree holders are not entitled to any share on account of their failure to apply for execution of their decrees to the District Court of Prome, which held the assets. Section 73 is quite clear on the point. It lays down: "Where assets are held by a Court and more persons than one have, before the receipt of such assets, made application to the Court for the execution of decrees..." The language is quite plain and the words "the Court" no doubt refer to the same Court described as "a Court" at the beginning of the sentence. In other words, for the decree-holders to become entitled to any share in the assets, they must have applied to the Court which holds the assets for execution of their decrees. This view has been adopted as early as 1881 in the case of Krishnashankar v. Chandrashankar (4). That ruling was with reference to the old s. 295. In that section the words used were "have, prior to the realization, applied to the Court, by which such assets are held, for execution of decrees." So far as the question under discussion is concerned there has been no change in the law. The construction put by the learned Judges, who decided that case, was that only those decree-holders, who had actually applied for execution of their decrees to the Court holding the assets could share in the rateable distribution. This view was adopted by the late Sir Charles Fox in the case of Sit Saing v. Maung Po Kaing (5). In that case the plaintiff obtained a decree in the Sub-Divisional Court, while the defendants had obtained two decrees in the Township Court against the same persons. The Sub-Divisional Court realised some assets by sale of certain properties. Prior to the realisation the defendants applied to the Township Court for execution of the decrees, by attachment and sale of the same properties and in their application they stated that the property had already been attached by the Sub-Divisional Court. They asked that their applications might be forwarded to the Sub-Divisional Court so that they might obtain a rateable share. The Township Court accordingly submitted the applications to the Sub-Divisional Court. The learned Judge held "that s. 295, Civil Procedure Code requires that the persons seeking a rateable share shall, prior to the realization of the assets, have applied to the Court which holds the assets, for execution of their decrees and under s. 230 an application for execution of a decree can only be made to the Court which has passed the decree or to a Court to which the decree has been sent for execution under ss. 223 and 224. The decrees of the Township Court had not been sent to the Sub-Divisional Court; consequently the latter Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the defendant's application and the order for rateable distribution was illegal." According to this construction it is essential that an application for execution has been made to the Court which holds the assets. To determine the rights of the respondents it is now necessary to decide whether the requirements of s. 73 have been complied with by them.

(2) 30 C. 583; 7 G. W. N. 414 (F. B.).

(3) 29 B. 528; 7 Bom. L. R. 567.

(4) 5 B. 198; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 132.

(5) 1 L. B. R. 121.

In Civil Execution Case No. 8 of 1926 the application for execution was made to the Sub-Divisional Court. On the 18th June, 1926, the Sub-Divisional Judge recorded this order:—"It is forwarded to the Additional District Judge for rateable distribution as the rice-mill attached will be sold by auction on the 1st July, 1926." The decree has not been transferred to the District Court and no application for execution has been made to that Court. I must, therefore, hold that the requirements of s. 73 have not been complied with by the 4th respondent.

In Civil Execution No. 70 of 1925, the application for execution was made to the Sub-Divisional Court. On the 9th of March, 1926, the Sub-Divisional Judge recorded this order:—"The decree-holder filed application to the effect that the attached property is under proclamation for sale in the District Court and asked me to send this case to the District Court for rateable distribution." In this case also the requirements have not been complied with.

In Civil Execution Case No. 6 of 1926, the application was made to the Sub-Divisional Court. On the 2nd June, 1926, the Sub-Divisional Judge recorded this order:—"Put up with Civil Execution No. 8 of 1916 of the Sub-Divisional Judge, Paungde" and in that execution case the Sub-Divisional Judge on 10th July, 1926, recorded this order:—"U Than Maung for Mr. Ahmed present, and says that the attached property will be sold on the 17th June 1926, in execution of a decree in the Additional District Judge's Court and asks me to send the case to the Additional District Judge's Court for rateable distribution. I accordingly forward these cases to the Additional District Judge for rateable distribution." By 'these cases' the learned Judge meant Civil Execution Nos. 6, 7 and 8 instituted by the same decree-holders, N. M. R. M. Firm. In all these three cases also the requirements of s. 73 have not been complied with.

It is urged on behalf of these respondents that the submission of the records by the Sub-Divisional Court should be considered to be equivalent to a transfer of the decree to the District Court; s. 63 says that "where property not in the custody of any Court is under attachment in execution of decrees of more Courts than one, the Court which shall receive or realise such property and shall determine any claim thereto and any objection to the attachment thereof shall be the Court of highest grade, or, where there is no difference in grade between such Courts, the Court under whose decree the property was first attached". It is urged that under this section the District Court is the Court which shall receive or realise the assets and which shall determine any claim thereto and that this section will be in conflict with s. 73. It is doubtful whether this argument is correct. If the language is strictly interpreted the phrase, 'any claim thereto' seems to refer to the claim to the property under attachment and not to the claim to the assets after realisation. In my opinion this section contemplates such a claim as is contemplated by O. XXI, r. 50.

For the above reason I hold that in the case of respondents Nos. 2 to 4 they are not entitled to any rateable distribution and they should be excluded, and that in the case of the 1st respondent, as his decree was obtained in the same District Court and as he has made the application for execution to that Court, he is entitled to a share in the assets, although his decree is not against all the judgment-debtors against whom the applicant has obtained a decree. But as already pointed out in the earlier part of the judgment, his share must be determined according to the interests of his judgment-debtors in the rice-mill.

The order of the District Court is modified accordingly and the applicant is entitled to his costs in this Court against respondents Nos. 2, 3 and 4. This 1st respondent is entitled to his costs in this Court against the applicant.

A. N. A.

Order modified.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 26 OF 1927.

August 1, 1927.

Present:—Justice Sir Benjamin Herbert Heald, Kt., and Mr. Justice Darwood.MAUNG THA DUN AND ANOTHER.

—APPELLANT

versus

PO KA AND ANOTHER—

RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss. 5 (1), 59 (a), 68—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI—Sale by Receiver in insolvency—Deposit of amount due to creditors and 5 per cent. on purchase-money by insolvent—Sale, whether can be set aside—O. XXI, whether applies to sales by Receivers—Setting aside sales by Receivers—Principles.

An insolvent is not entitled to have a sale by the Receiver set aside on making a deposit of the amount due to his creditors and 5 per cent. of the purchase-money within 30 days of the sale. The provisions of O. XXI of the Civil Procedure Code do not apply to sales by Receivers in insolvency. [p. 172, col. 2.]

A sale by a Receiver is not a "proceeding under the Act" within the meaning of s. 5 (1) of the Provincial Insolvency Act. [ibid.]

Cheda Lal v. Lachman Parshad (1), followed.

It is settled law that a Court has no jurisdiction to set aside a sale held or made by a Receiver which is not in excess of his authority in the absence of proof of fraud or collusion or material illegality or irregularity in conducting the sale or misconduct on his part causing injury to the estate. [p. 173, col. 1.]

Mr. Aiyangar, for the Appellants.

Mr. Sen Tun Aung, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In Civil Miscellaneous No. 139 of 1925 of the District Court, Pegu, the appellants were adjudicated insolvents on the 23rd September, 1925, on the petition of a creditor. On 4th September, 1926, the Bailiff of the District Court, Pegu, who had been appointed Receiver, proceeded to sell the property now in question after the issue of a proclamation of sale in accordance with the provisions of O. XXI, r. 66, Civil Procedure Code. The property was purchased by the respondents for Rs. 2,650 of which one-quarter was paid at once and the balance on 17th September 1926. On 25th September 1926 appellants filed a petition in which they stated that they were willing to pay their debts in full and that the property was sold for a price much below its real value. They asked to be permitted to deposit in Court whatever amount the Court fixed and, on such deposit being made, for the annulment of the order of adjudication and of the sale. On 30th September they tendered Rs. 1,525-12-9 to pay their creditors in full and Rs. 132-8 being 5 per cent. on the purchase-money, to be paid to the purchaser as compensation for the cancellation of the sale. The Court ordered the money to be deposited in Court.

The Receiver and the purchasers—the respondents—opposed the application to set aside the sale.

On the 13th December, 1926, the order of adjudication was annulled but the application to set aside the sale was dismissed as the Court held that the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply to a sale made by a Receiver in insolvency.

Appellants have received leave to appeal. Their grounds of appeal are numerous but may be reduced to two.

The first is that the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code apply to the sale and under those provisions the appellants are entitled to have the sale set aside.

The second is that in the circumstances of the case the District Judge should not have confirmed the sale but should have set it aside under the provisions of s. 68 of the Provincial Insolvency Act.

It has been argued on behalf of the appellants that as the Receiver chose to adopt the method laid down in the Civil Procedure Code in proclaiming the sale the rest of the provisions of O. XXI of the Code apply to the sale, and one of those provisions entitles the appellants to have the sale set aside on certain conditions. The argument is not sound.

Reliance has also been placed on s. 5 (1) of the Provincial Insolvency Act. That section runs thus:—"Subject to the provisions of this Act, the Court, in regard to proceedings under this Act, shall have the same powers and shall follow the same procedure as it has and follows in the exercise of original civil jurisdiction."

A Receiver's sale is not a "proceeding under the Act"—"proceeding" in this section means a proceeding in Court: vide Cheda Lal v. Lachman Parshad (1). This ruling also decided that sales by Receivers in bankruptcy are not governed by O. XXI of the Civil Procedure Code. Clause (a) of s. 59 of the Provincial Insolvency Act gives general power to a Receiver to sell the property of the insolvent without the sanction of the Court and no restriction whatsoever is placed as to the manner in which the sale is to be conducted. He is to exercise his own discretion and may sell by public auction or private contract. Nowhere is it laid down that a Receiver's sale is governed by the provisions of O. XXI, Civil Procedure Code, and learned Counsel for the appellants is unable to quote any authority for the argument he puts forward. It is an untenable one.

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 830; 39 A. 267 at p. 272; 15 A. L. J. 253.

The next point for consideration is whether the circumstances in which the sale took place were such as to justify an order to set it aside. For the purposes of this appeal it may be assumed that the petition asking for cancellation of the sale was in effect an appeal under s. 68 of the Provincial Insolvency Act to the District Judge against the sale made by the Receiver. But in view of the fact that the Receiver was entitled to sell the property without the consent of the Court the power of the Court to set aside the sale comes into question.

It may, we think, be taken as settled law that the Court has no jurisdiction to set aside a sale held or made by the Receiver in the absence of proof of fraud or collusion or material illegality or irregularity in conducting the sale or misconduct on his part causing injury to the estate. The sale may of course be set aside if the Receiver acts beyond his authority or in excess of the powers conferred on him.

In the present case it is noticeable that the appellants when seeking to set aside the sale made no allegations of material irregularities in connection with the sale. This, however, may have been due to the fact that if they wished to succeed under the provisions of O. XXI, r. 89, Civil Procedure Code, they were debarred from applying to have the sale set aside on the ground of material irregularity in making or conducting the sale.

The only alleged irregularity which appellants now bring to our notice is that in the proclamation of sale the appellants have been described as the "applicants for insolvency," instead of as "insolvents." The term "Dewali shoukthu" may mean petitioning-creditor as well as insolvent but unless the text is separated from the context insolvent is the only meaning applicable to it in the proclamation. There is no suggestion that any one was deceived by the alleged misdescription or that it led to any loss of price at the auction. The appellants must have been aware of the error but took no steps to have it rectified. The fact that the property fetched only Rs. 2,650 merely indicates that that was its true value. The appellants' value it at over Rs. 4,000. Neither this, nor the misdescription of the appellants in the proclamation, nor both combined, are a good ground for setting aside the sale which was completed as soon as the purchase-money was paid in full. The purchasers were then entitled to a conveyance even without any confirmation of the sale by the Court. There are no grounds setting aside this sale and the appeal must, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 627 OF 1926.

July 29, 1927.

Present:—Justice Sir Benjamin Herbert Heald, Kt., and Mr. Justice Darwood.

MAUNG PO SI AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS
versus

K. P. A. P. FIRM—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Suit for sale against mortgagor and purchaser of house standing on mortgaged property—Preliminary decree—Question of apportionment, when arises—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 82.

A mortgagor instituted a suit for sale against the mortgagee and a person who had purchased and dismantled a house which stood on the mortgaged property. A preliminary decree for sale was passed against both and the purchaser appealed contending that the trial Court should have apportioned the mortgage-debt between himself and the mortgagee.

Held, that the question of the personal liability of the appellant could not arise until it became necessary to make a personal money-decree and that the appeal from the preliminary decree was, therefore, misconceived. [p. 174, col. 2.]

Mr. Halker, for the Appellants.

Mr. P. B. Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Heald, J.—The respondents K. P. A. P. Chetty Firm, sued one Po Hmyin to recover Rs. 3,216-6-0 which they alleged to be due on a registered mortgage of a holding of over 25 acres of paddy land and of a garden with the house standing on it. They joined the present appellants as defendants on the ground that appellants had brought the house which was subject to their mortgage and had dismantled it and removed the materials. They claimed that they were entitled to a mortgage decree against the appellants as well as against Po Hmyin.

Po Hmyin did not contest the suit.

Appellants said that they bought the house from Po Hmyin on the 7th of January, 1924, that is three months before the date of respondents' mortgage, the date of which was the 9th of April, 1924, and that the mortgage did not affect their title to the house. They produced a document recording the sale of the house to them. They admitted that they had dismantled the house and removed the materials.

The trial Court found that the house was still standing on the land at the time of the mortgage and was not dismantled and removed until shortly before the respondents' suit was filed. The learned Judge said that the document recording the sale of the house to appellants could not be received as evidence of the sale because it was not registered and needed registration since the house was immoveable property. He said further that the document itself was open to suspicion. He gave respondents a preliminary mortgage decree for the full amount of the mortgage money against appellants as well as Po Hmyin. That decree which is in the usual form merely declares the amount due on the mortgage, and the costs of the suit, directs that on the defendants paying that amount into Court before a certain date, the plaintiff shall return the documents, relating to the mortgaged property, and that in default of payment the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof shall be sold.

There is as yet no final decree for sale and no personal money decree against either appellants or Po Hmyin.

Appellants appealed against the preliminary decree on grounds that no decree should have been passed against them, that they were no longer in possession of the materials of the house, having sold them, and that in any case they could not be liable for more than the value of the house.

At the hearing in the lower Appellate Court the only matter argued was that the Court ought to have ascertained the value of the house and apportioned the liabilities between them and Po Hmyin in accordance with the principles laid down in s. 82 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The lower Appellate Court following the ruling in Roghu Nath Pershad v. Harlal Sadhu (1) said that s. 82 had no application in order to compel the mortgagee to apportion his claim amongst the various properties mortgaged, and dismissed the appellants' appeal.

Appellants now come to this Court in second appeal on grounds that the trial Court ought to have apportioned the mortgage debt between them and Po Hmyin, that the value of the house which they purchased was only Rs. 300 and that the principle which was applied by the lower Appellate Court did not apply in the present case because in this case the properties which the mortgagor sold were moveable properties.

It seems to me that the question which appellants wish to raise does not arise at the present stage of the case and that their appeal was misconceived. The preliminary decree gives them the right to redeem the mortgage if they desire to do so, but does not compel them to redeem it. If they fail to redeem it, and if Po Hmyin does not redeem, a decree for sale of the mortgaged property will follow but it is clear that the house which has been dismantled and of which the materials have been sold cannot be sold under that decree.

The question of appellants' personal liability will not arise unless and until it becomes necessary to make a personal money decree against Po Hmyin and against appellants. Then it may be necessary for the Court to apportion the liability, but at present there is no such necessity and it is clear that the necessity may never arise, since the part of the mortgaged property which is left, namely, the paddy land and the garden, may be more than sufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt.

Although, therefore, I am of opinion that the judgment of the lower Court was wrong in so far as it may be regarded as deciding that appellants are liable for the whole amount of the mortgage debt, because I think that the question of the amount, for which they may ultimately be liable has not yet arisen and may never arise and, therefore, ought not to have been decided, I would hold that the preliminary decree against which appellants are appealing was properly made, and I would dismiss their appeal with costs.

(1) 18 C. 320; 9 Ind. Dec. (N.s.) 213.

Darwood, J.—I concur.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

SPECIAL SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 296
OF 1927.

August 30, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Baguley.

BURMA RAILWAYS COMPANY,

LIMITED—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT.

versus

MAUNG HLA TIN—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Lease for cultivating purposes—Trespass by third person—Removal of earth—Suit by lessee for damages—Measure of damages—Practice—Precedents.

In a suit for damages by a lessee of a piece of land for cultivating and grazing purposes against a trespasser who has encroached upon a portion of the land and removed a quantity of earth therefrom, the lessee is entitled to claim as damages only the loss which he has incurred by reason of the deprivation of the use of the portion of the land encroached upon. He is not entitled to recover damages on the basis of the value of the earth removed. [p. 176, col. 2.]

Damages vary considerably according to a party's interest in the land. [p. 176, col. 1.]

Whittham v. Westminster Brymbo Coal & Coke Company (1), distinguished.

It is dangerous to apply the principles given in peculiar cases to cases in which the facts are totally different. [p. 176, col. 2.]

JUDGMENT.—Respondent, Maung Hla Tin, is lessee of some land adjoining the Burma Railways Company's line. The land is apparently a good deal higher than the line itself. In the course of work in connection with the Pegu-Kayan line construction the Railways Company's servants, while excavating for earth, went over the boundary line between the plaintiff's land and the Railway line and dug a considerable amount of earth from the plaintiff's land. This was about the beginning of 1926. The plaintiff discovered this fact and sent a letter, Ex. B, dated the 2nd February, claiming Rs. 3,930 as damages. The Railways Company replied asking for time to go into the matter, and, finally they sent him a letter, Ex. K, dated the 20th April, admitting that they had encroached upon an area of 15 acre and offering, without prejudice, the sum of Rs. 100 as compensation. The plaintiff was not prepared to accept this, and, on the 16th June, 1926, filed the present suit. An amended plaint was filed on the 9th October. It is headed "suit for the recovery of Rs. 1,000 as damages for earth removed from the plaintiff's land." It sets out that in January the defendant Company trespassed on the land and removed 810 sadrams of earth. It goes on to value the earth removed at Rs. 2,430; but the prayer is for Rs. 1,000 only as damages for earth removed.

The defendant Company in their written statement admit encroachment of 08 acre only and say that they only removed 43 sadrams of earth. The written statement further submits that compensation cannot be assessed on the quantity of earth removed.

Evidence was gone into, and the trial Court dismissed the claim on the ground that, as the plaintiff was only a lessee of Government, holding the land under a lease for cultivation or grazing purposes only, he could not claim any compensation. The Township Judge seems also to have been influenced by the fact that before he wrote his judgment the land had been acquired by Government. The real reason for his finding is not particularly clear.

The plaintiff went in appeal before the Additional District Judge and, though he comes to a very definite conclusion, I am afraid that his judgment is also not quite as clear as it might have been. He states definitely that in argument before him the plaintiff was suing for trover and not trespass. I agree that the claim made is one for damages for removal and conversion of earth. Nevertheless, having taken up this standpoint the learned Judge assessed damages as the value of 49 acre of land at Rs. 1,171 per acre. It seems to me that, if the claim is one for trover, damages must be assessed by the ton or cubic feet. An assessment per acre as this is shows that the case was regarded as being one of trespass.

However, before me the case was treated as one for damages in general.

The plaintiff was a lease-holder of the land and the damages to be awarded to him must be for the damage done to his interests. This is pointed out in Mayne on Damages at page 424 and the following pages. "Damages will vary considerably according to the plaintiff's interests in the land."

On the other side, it was contended before me that the Courts could not look into the plaintiff's title, and I was referred to Salmond's Law of Torts, pages 228 and 229. "In other words, no defendant in an action of trespass can plead jus tertii—the right of possession outstanding in some third person—as against the fact of possession in the plaintiff."

This argument, I think, shows a misapprehension of the facts of the case. The plaintiff is suing for the injury done to him. What he had was the right to go on occupying the surface of this land for about fifteen years after the date of the trespass. If the argument is that, I am unable to look at the plaintiff's interests at all but to hold that because he was in possession of the land he must be regarded as the full and outright owner. I can not see my way to accept it. The plaintiff filed his lease as an exhibit, and it is impossible for the Court to refuse to read the plaintiff's documents which he has filed. He being only a lessee, his interest is that of a lease-holder. He has no right to minerals or to take out and cart away the earth. He has been deprived of the use of part of the surface of the earth because the defendant Company had removed it and that, so far as I can see, is the full extent of his damage.

I have been referred to Whitwham v. Westminster Brymbo Coal & Coke Company (1), in which it is laid down in one particular case that the damages to which the plaintiff was entitled must be assessed partly with a view to the benefit derived from the trespass of the trespasser. The facts of that case are totally different to the facts in the present one. In that case the trespass had gone on for years and the defendants had been tipping spoil from a mine on to the land of the plaintiff. Lopes, L. J., in his judgment at page 543* says: "It is a peculiar case" and it is dangerous indeed to apply principles given in peculiar cases to cases in which the facts are totally different! In the case of a wilful wrongdoer, no doubt, the gain obtained by him from his trespass would be taken into consideration in assessing the damages to be awarded to the plaintiff, but there is no suggestion here, I think, that the defendant Company was a wilful wrongdoer. It was a case of unintentionally overstepping the boundary, and, as soon as the fact had been brought to their notice, they took steps to remedy the matter by acquiring the land under the Land Acquisition Act.

Holding, as I do, that the plaintiff had no right to the earth, any damage payable for removing the earth, would have to be paid to his landlord. The damage awardable to the plaintiff must be assessed on the diminution in the value of his land. For this we have to determine the area of land of which he has been deprived, for, once the Railways Company had used the land as an earth quarry, there can be no doubt that its value for cultivation and grazing purposes would be nil.

[His Lordship found on the evidence that the plaintiff was deprived of the use of 26 of an acre only and allowed the sum of Rs. 100 which had been offered to him by the Railway Company. His Lordship further ordered that the appellant should pay the costs throughout.]

A. N. A.

Appeal partly allowed.

*Page of (1896) 2 Ch. D. 538—[Ed.]

ODH CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 606 OF 1927.

December 16, 1927.

*Present:—*Sir Louis Stuart, Kt., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Raza.MADARU—ACCUSED No. 2—APPELLANT
versusEMPEROR—RESPONDENT.Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 302—Murder—Assailants engaged in brawl—Member of one party striking member of the other side who is empty-handed and not an active participant with hatchet—Offence—Sentence.

Where during a brawl in which the assailants on both sides are using sticks, a member of one side intervenes with a hatchet and strikes over the head of a member of the other side, who is empty-handed and taking no active part in the fight and kills him in consequence, he commits murder and not culpable homicide not amounting to murder. [p. 178, cols. 1 & 2.]

Criminal appeal against an order of the Second Additional Sessions Judge, Lucknow at Unao, dated November 19, 1927.

Messrs. J. Jackson and H. Husain, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. K. Ghose, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—Madaru, a Behna aged 25 of Sahrawan a village in the Unao District, has been convicted by the learned Additional Sessions Judge of Unao of the offence of murder under s. 302, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to death subject to confirmation by this Court. He appeals and the reference in confirmation is also before us.

These are the facts. In this village the family of which Madaru is a member occupies a house which adjoins the house occupied by certain Pasis. Adjacent to the two houses is a rain-water drain. The occurrence took place on the 16th July, 1927. The rains having set in, the drain in question was overflowing. Unless it was cleared the water flowed into the appellant's house. When cleared it spilled over into the Pasis' house. It was over a dispute in relation to this trifling matter that Sadhu Pasi lost his life. What happened was this. Early in the day the Behnas had been diverting the water in such a manner that it spilled into the Pasis' house. There had been a quarrel. Later, Abdul, the appellant's father, was again, in order to save his own premises, taking such action that the water according to the Pasis would flow into their house. This took place in the evening, and another quarrel then began. It is not very clear what was the exact sequence of incidents in this quarrel, but it is quite clear that five male members of the Pasis' family and four male members of the Behnas, family appeared on the scene. On the Pasis' side were Bhawani the uncle, Puran and Sadhu deceased who were own brothers and two men called Hembraaj and Mihi, who were cousins. On the Behnas' side were Nabi and Abdul who were brothers and Sardar and Madaru who were the sons of Abdul. Both sides indulged in the abuse and remonstrance usual to the members of their castes on such occasions and from words they rapidly came to blows. Bhawani and Puran on the one side received injuries and Nabi, Abdul and Sardar upon the other side received injuries, the weapons used being lathis. They did not receive serious injuries, but Sadhu received injuries which caused his death.

The evidence is that Madaru who at the time when the fight arose had been shaping a piece of wood into an agricultural implement came on the scene with a hatchet and struck Sadhu over the head with this hatchet a blow, which penetrated into the bone of the skull and fractured left parietal and the right frontal bones, injured the brain, and caused death within a very short period. Apart from the evidence of Puran and Bhawani there is the evidence of certain neighbours who witnessed the incident. Those neighbours are Bhawani Din, a Thakur, Ishur Din, a Brahman and Ajudhia Prasad, a Brahman. These three persons who were cross-examined at length and whose evidence has in no way been shaken, in our opinion, in cross-examination have deposed with certainty that the deceased man Sadhu was taking no active part in the fight and that at no time had he used violence to anyone. There is evidence which we accept that he had joined in abusing the Behnas, but the attack upon him was not justified in any way as he was stated by these witnesses to have been empty-handed. Great stress was laid down by the learned Counsel for the appellant upon a statement made by Sub-Inspector Suraj Narain that Puran had stated to him on the following morning that Sadhu had brought a shovel in order to clean out the drain. We do not consider that the statement was admissible in evidence as the provisions of s. 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure had not been complied with. But putting this statement at its highest, it would mean very little. Sadhu might have brought a spade with which to clear out the drain and yet at the same time been empty handed when he was attacked. He could have brought the spade and put it down. We have the evidence of three witnesses who are not shown to be biassed in any manner that Sadhu was empty-handed at the time that Madaru the appellant came and struck him a violent blow on the head with the hatchet. We have the hatchet before us. The blade is a heavy blade ending in a sharp edge. The blade is 5" long and $1\frac{1}{2}$ " wide. The handle is 2 feet long.

Madaru refused to make any reply in the Committing Magistrate's Court, and in the Sessions Court he made a simple denial. In his appeal from the Jail for the first time he has suggested that he was not present on the spot. He has not been able to meet in any way the evidence of the witnesses against him. It was open to him to have called as witnesses in his defence his father, Abdul and his uncle Nabi. He could not call his brother Sardar for Sardar was charged with the murder. Sardar has been acquitted of murder and sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment for simple hurt. He has not so far appealed. But apart from his father Abdul and his uncle Nabi, he has not attempted to call any of the neighbours who might have been in a position to see the occurrence. All the neighbours who have been called as witnesses have deposed against him. It has been suggested in defence that the feelings of the Hindus and Muhammadans in this village are so strained that no Hindu would give truthful evidence on behalf of a Muhammadan. We are unable to attach any value to that suggestion as we find that there is nothing to support it. We find the case to be clearly a case of murder.

The learned Counsel for the appellant put forward as his main defence that the culpable homicide had been committed in a sudden fight in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel. He did not contest the finding that his client had struck the fatal blow, but he suggested that the offence committed was at the worst culpable homicide not amounting to murder, and in any circumstances he pleaded for a remission of the capital sentence. We do not consider that Exception 4 of s. 300, Indian Penal Code, has any application, because Madaru distinctly took undue advantage over the deceased man. When a brawl is taking place in which the assailants on both sides are using sticks, a member of one side, who intervenes with a hatchet and strikes over the head of a member of the other side, who is empty-handed and taking no active part in the fight and kills him in consequence, in our opinion, commits murder and nothing less. We find that the appellant has been rightly convicted of murder. We believe the evidence of Puran and Bhawani in the main and we find that Bhagwan Din, Ishar Din and Ajodhia Prasad have told the truth.

The question of sentence presents some difficulty. The murder was undoubtedly not premeditated. The victim had been using bad language, and the hatchet was being employed shortly before the quarrel by the appellant for a perfectly innocent purpose. We have given full weight to all the above facts, but at the same time we are obliged to take the view that these savage homicides are too prevalent in Oudh to justify the exercise of clemency. When, as here a man rushes into a brawl with a heavy hatchet and strikes with all his force, as Madaru clearly did, one of his neighbours who is unable to defend himself upon the head with the hatchet and kills him we are unable to reduce the capital sentence. We therefore dismiss the appeal, uphold the conviction and confirm the sentence and direct that Madaru be hanged by the neck till he be dead.

G. H.

Appeal dismissed.

OUDH CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 275 OF 1927.

November 16, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Raza.

DUKHI SINGH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS

versus

SARJU DEI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS.

Birt, meaning of—Execution of birt-deed by joint owner—Validity of deed.

'Birt' generally means an under-proprietary right and a birt-deed executed by one of several joint owners is consequently null and void against those who were not parties to it. [p. 179 col. 2; p. 180, col. 1.]

Ram Autar v. Drigpal (1), Lal Mohammad Khan v. Amatul Fatima (2) and Jalaluddin Khan v. Rampal (3), referred to.

Appeal against the order of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 18th May, 1927, modifying that of the Munsif, Havali at Fyzabad, dated the 12th March, 1927.

Mr. Naziruddin, for the Appellants.

Mr. Ali Zaheer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from a decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 18th May, 1927, modifying a decree of the Munsif, Havali at Fyzabad, dated the 12th March, 1927.

The facts of the case so far as it is necessary to state them for the purpose of disposing of this appeal, are as follows:—

The plaintiffs, Dukhi Singh and Pudan Singh, are the cousins of the defendant No. 2, Inderjit Singh. Sheoambar Singh, had two sons, namely, Pirthi Singh and Chatter Singh. The plaintiffs are the sons of Pirthi Singh deceased. The defendant No. 2 is the son of Chatter Singh deceased.

The dispute in this case relates to plot No. 184 in village Bargoara, District Fyzabad. It is not disputed that the plot in suit was owned by Sheoambar Singh and on his death it was owned by his two sons in equal shares. It is not also disputed that the descendants of Sheoambar Singh were not living jointly as members of a joint Hindu family. The plaintiffs brought the present suit, alleging that the defendant No. 1, Musammam Sarju Dei, had taken possession of the plot in suit wrongfully, in collusion with the defendant No. 2, Inderjit Singh.

The defendant No. 1 alone resisted the plaintiffs' claim. She alleged that there was a private partition between Pirthi Singh and Chatter Singh about 20 or 22 years ago, that the plot in suit fell to the share of Chatter Singh in that partition, that the plot in suit was thus owned and possessed by Inderjit Singh exclusively, that Inderjit Singh transferred the plot to her by a birt-deed dated the 12th June, 1917, and that she was thus in rightful possession of the plot in suit. She pleaded limitation also.

The learned Munsif held that the plot in suit was the joint property of the plaintiffs and the defendant No. 2, that there was no private partition under which the plot in suit fell to the share of the defendant No. 2 or his father, that the defendant No. 2 was never in exclusive possession of the plot in suit, that the plaintiffs were in possession of the plot within limitation and that the birt-deed executed by the defendant No. 2 in favour of defendant No. 1 was void. The plaintiffs' claim was, therefore, decreed with costs.

The defendant No. 1 appealed and the result was that the decree of the learned Munsif was modified by the learned Additional Subordinate Judge on the 18th May, 1927. The learned Additional Subordinate Judge agreed with the learned Munsif's findings of fact generally, but he accepted the defendant No. 1's contention that the defendant No. 2 is still bound by the deed and it is possible that on partition the plot may fall to his (defendant No. 2's) share. He was of opinion, therefore, that the plaintiffs should not be given a decree for possession of the plot in suit. He gave them a decree for a declaration to the effect that the birt-deed executed by the defendant No. 2 in favour of defendant No. 1 is not binding on them (plaintiffs). As the appeal failed substantially the parties were ordered to bear their own costs.

The plaintiffs have now come to this Court in second appeal. They contend that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in not passing a decree for possession of the plot in suit in their favour.

The defendant No. 1 has filed cross-objections. She contends that the whole of the plaintiffs' suit should have been dismissed and that she is entitled to costs of the suit in the Court of first instance and also in the lower Appellate Court.

I have examined the record.

It has been found that the plot in suit is the joint property of the plaintiffs and defendant No. 2 and that the defendant No. 2 was never in exclusive possession of the plot. We have the concurrent findings of the lower Courts on these points. These findings are supported by admissible evidence and cannot be impugned in second appeal. As the defendant No. 2 was never in exclusive possession of the plot in suit, he was wrong in transferring the plot to the defendant No. 1 by the birt-deed dated the 12th June, 1917. The word 'birt' generally implies an under-proprietary right [See Ram Autar v. Drigpal (1).]

The deed in question shows clearly that the defendant No. 2 attempted to make the defendant No. 1 an under-proprietor of the plot in suit and gave her a heritable and transferable right of property in the plot by the deed. He had no power to do so when the plot in suit was the joint property of the plaintiffs and the defendant No. 2. It was held in the case of Lal Mohammad Khan v. Amatul Fatima (2) that a joint co-sharer has no right to execute a perpetual lease of the joint property and a lease violating the above rule is null and void against persons who are not a party to the lease. In that case also there was a lease by means of which the lessor had carved out a tenure of the nature of an under-proprietary interest. It appears that the defendant No. 2 had executed the deed in question in favour of the defendant No. 1 during the minority of the plaintiffs. The deed in question is null and void as against the plaintiffs and cannot affect their interests in the property in suit. As pointed out in the case of Jalaluddin Khan v. Rampal (3) one co-sharer has no right to appropriate to himself a specific portion of the common land and to exclude his co-sharers from all use and enjoyment of the same without a lawful partition. But where a person has been in possession of a piece of joint land for a long time without any let or hindrance by the other co-sharers, the latter have no right to eject him or his transferee or to disturb his possession or enjoyment otherwise than by seeking partition. Such a co-sharer or his transferee is entitled to continue in such possession so long as such user does not interfere with the use by other co-sharers of what is in their possession.

I hold that the deed in question is null and void as against the plaintiffs and they are entitled to possession of the plot in suit to the extent of their share. The plaintiffs have a half share in the plot in suit. It was admitted on behalf of the plaintiffs in the first Court that the share of the defendant No. 2 in the plot in suit is half. (See proceedings of the 5th March, 1927, page 14). The plaintiffs are, therefore, entitled to a decree for joint possession of the plot in suit to the extent of a half share. They have nothing to do with the defendant No. 2's half share in the property.

There is no substance in the cross-objection.

The result is that the appeal is partly allowed and the decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside. The decree of the first Court is modified. The plaintiffs will get a decree for joint possession of the plot in suit to the extent of a half share. They will get half of their costs from the defendant No. 1 in all the three Courts. The cross-objections are dismissed with costs.

G. H.

Appeal partly allowed.

ODDH CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 227 OF 1927.

November 7, 1927.

Present:—Sir Louis Stuart, Kt., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Raza.

GAYA DEEN SINGH AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MADHO SINGH—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.Hindu Law—Widow—Gift by widow—Nearest reversioner joining in execution—Validity of gift.

A deed of gift executed by a Hindu widow with the consent of her husband's nearest reversioner who actually joins in the execution thereof is valid and cannot be challenged by him or his transferees. [p. 181, col. 1.]

Jamuna Kunwar v. Madari Singh (1) and Ramgouda Annagouda Patil v. Bhansaheb (2), referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 15th March, 1927, confirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Sultanpore, dated the 20th December, 1926.

Messrs. Ram Prasad and Moti Lal Sak-sena, for the Appellants.

Mr. Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, for the Respondent.

(2) 76 Ind. Cas. 534; 26 O.C. 239; A. I. R. 1924 Oudh 60.

(3) 106 Ind. Cas. 359; 4 O. W. N. 871; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 467.

JUDGMENT.—In this appeal we are concerned with the validity of a deed of gift executed jointly by a Hindu widow with the estate of a Hindu widow under the Mitakshara Law and Jaskaran Singh, who was at the time the nearest reversioner to the estate. Not only did Jaskaran Singh join in the execution of that deed of gift but he subsequently confirmed his action. On the death of the lady, Jaskaran Singh was the person who under the Mitakshara Law was entitled to inherit the estate. The validity of the deed of gift is now disputed by Jaskaran Singh himself and by three persons to whom he has transferred his rights in the estate. The three persons in question are reversioners standing more remote than Jaskaran Singh. They had no claim to succession under the Mitakshara Law on the death of the widow. The point of law might have necessitated a more or less lengthy discussion, had it not been decided by this Bench on the 13th September, 1927, after the present appeal was admitted. It was decided by this Bench in Jamuna Kunwar v. Madari Singh (1). Before this Bench arrived at that decision their Lordships of the Judicial Committee had considered the point once more. They considered the point in Ramgowda Annagowda Patil v. Bhansaheb (2), on the 11th July, 1927, but at the time of the previous decision of the Bench, that decision had not reached India. The decision of this Bench is in accord with the authority of their Lordships. In the decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, to which we have just referred a deed of gift executed by a Hindu widow with the consent of her husband's nearest heir was held to be an alienation justified by the law. Our decision stated the same principle in the following words of the head-note: "A gift by a Hindu widow, which she is not ordinarily competent to make, can become a valid alienation if made with the consent of her husband's kindred, subject to the qualification that if her husband has no kindred or the kindred have failed before they have had an effective opportunity of objecting, the abstention to object cannot be regarded as a consent." In the present appeal, as has already been noted, not only did the nearest reversioner consent to the alienation, but he actually joined in the execution of the deed. For these reasons we dismiss this appeal with costs.

G. H.

A. N. A.

*Appeal dismissed.ODH CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 218 OF 1927.

November 1, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Misra.Nawab MOHAMMAD ALI KHAN—
PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT*versus*Musammat BADRUNNISA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Landlord and tenant—Mortgage of house by tenant in town—Zemindar's right of re-entry—Presumption—Right of tenant to sell house site.

Unless a custom to the contrary is established, the occupiers of houses in town should be considered to have a power to transfer the right to occupy the sites on which their houses stand along with a sale of the materials thereof. The presumption applicable to an agricultural village does not obtain in towns. [p. 182, col. 2; p. 183, col. 1.]

Banwari Lal v. Raina (1) and Jamna Kuer v. Abdul Nabi (2), referred to.

Where a house has been transferred by the tenant by way of mortgage and not by way of sale, the proprietor is not entitled to re-enter unless there is express provision in the wajib-ul-arz, or any satisfactory evidence as to the existence of a custom, giving the proprietor a right of forfeiture or re-entry in case of a breach of the rule against alienation by way of mortgage. [p. 184, col. 1.]

Ali Muhammad Khan v. Chhedan (3), Lal Bahadur v. Mohammad Karim Khan (4), Nurendro Narain Roy v. Ishan Chunder Sen (5) and Ram Raj Singh v. Tej Singh (6), referred to.

Uzmat-un-nissa v. Ganesh Prasad (7), distinguished. Second appeal against the decree of the Second Additional Subordinate Judge, Lucknow, dated the 25th February, 1927, confirming that of the Munsif, Haveli, dated the 6th April, 1926.

Mr. Niamatullah, for the Appellant.

Messrs. M. Wasim and Naziruddin Siddiqi, for the Respondents.

(1) 106 Ind. Cas. 328; 4 O. W. N. 903; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 469.

(2) 105 Ind. Cas. 708; 4 O. W. N. 876; A. I. R. 1927 O. 227; 53 M. L. J. 350; 46 C. L. J. 267; 39 M. L. J. 250; (1927) M. W. N. 736; 29 Bom. L. R. 1380; 32 T. W. N. 88 (P. C.).

JUDGMENT.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit for possession. The facts of the case are: The plaintiff-appellant is the zemindar (proprietor) of a Mohalla called by the name of Mirzaganj, situate in the town of Malihabad, District Lucknow. Within the said zemindari lies a plot of land described as Ahata No. 484 on which stands a pucca house bearing No. 250. The house was purchased by defendant No. 2, Mushir Ahmad Khan, from the heirs of Umed Ali Khan, son of Major Bax Khan who had originally built it. On the 29th September, 1924, defendant No. 2 transferred the said house to defendant No. 1 Musammât Badrunnisa, by way of usufructuary mortgage. The term fixed in the mortgage was a period of 45 years but the deed clearly provided for redemption at the expiry of the said period. The plaintiff brought the present suit against Musammât Badrunnisa, the mortgagee, and Mushir Ahmad Khan, the mortgagor, impleading both of them as defendants Nos. 1 and 2 respectively. The plaintiff's allegation was that the status of defendant No. 2 was that of an ordinary riyaya who had no right to transfer the said house by way of mortgage, and the house having been so transferred the plaintiff as proprietor of the village was entitled to re-enter on the site of the house in dispute by asking defendant No. 2 to remove the materials of that house. The plaintiff, therefore, claimed possession of the plot in suit by demolition of the said house.

The defendants denied the plaintiff's title to the plot in suit on which the house stood and contended that the riyayas living in the town of Malihabad had a right to transfer their houses as they stood, and that in any case, the plaintiff had no cause of action for taking possession of the site of the house in suit because defendant No. 2 had only executed a mortgage in respect of that house which could not be considered as equivalent to sale.

The plaintiff contended in reply that the mortgage in suit was really a sale clothed in the form of a mortgage in order to defeat the plaintiff's right of re-entry as proprietor.

The learned Munsif of Haveli, Lucknow, who tried the suit, found that the plaintiff was the owner of the land on which the house stood, but held that the land was situate in the town of Malihabad of which Mirzaganj was only a part where no such custom as pleaded by the plaintiff by which a riyaya could not transfer the right of residence in his house, had been established to exist. He further found that the mortgage in question was not a sale but a genuine mortgage and the transfer being by way of mortgage and not by sale the plaintiff was not entitled to re-enter upon the plot on which the house in suit stood. On these findings he dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

The plaintiff then appealed against the decree of the learned Munsif and the Second Additional Subordinate Judge of Lucknow, agreeing with the findings of the Munsif on all the points, dismissed the appeal.

In second appeal it is now contended before me that under the wajib-ul-arz of the town of Malihabad a riyaya has got no right of transfer; and that the plaintiff is entitled to eject the defendants even though the transfer was by way of mortgage. As to the first point it appears to me that the wajib-ul-arz is not very clear; although it gives clearly a right to the residents of that town who belong to high castes (qaum asharaf) to sell the materials of their houses, yet it does not contain a provision restraining them from selling the houses as they stand. The learned Advocate for the plaintiff-appellant contended that there being no express provision permitting the residents to sell their houses no such right should be presumed to exist. The Courts below have, however, decided the point against the plaintiff-appellant treating the case in dispute as one relating not to an agricultural village but to a town. They have relied on cases decided both by the late Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh and the Allahabad High Court; for the proposition that in case of towns no such presumption ought to be made and that in such cases unless a custom to the contrary is established the occupiers of houses should be considered to have a power of transfer of the right to occupy the sites on which their houses stand: Vide Banwari Lal v. Raina (1) decided by Lindsay, J. C. and Jamna Ku v. Abdul Nabi (2) decided by Chamier and Rafique, JJ. After due consideration

(1) 9 Ind. Cas. 427.

(2) 16 Ind. Cas. 353.

I am in entire agreement with the proposition laid down in these cases. The Courts below have concurrently found in the present case that Malihabad is a town and that the land in suit is situate in Mirzaganj, a part of that town. Under these circumstances I am not inclined to hold unless a definite custom to the contrary is established, about which I do not find any satisfactory evidence on the record, that the residents of the town of Malihabad have no right to sell the right to occupy the sites of houses along with the sale of the materials thereof. In these circumstances the plaintiff is not entitled to exercise his right of re-entry on the land in suit by seeking possession thereof by demolition of the house standing thereon.

As to the second point, I am clearly of opinion that the plaintiff cannot exercise the right of re-entry even if he be considered entitled to the exercise of such right because the house in suit has only been transferred by way of mortgage and not by sale. In Ali Muhammad Khan v. Chhedan (3) it was held by a Bench of the late Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh that there was an essential distinction between a transfer by way of lease or mortgage and a transfer by way of sale in which different considerations would apply. In that case the plaintiff who was the proprietor of village Maharaj Nagar had sued for ejectment of the defendants from certain groves because some of them who were proprietors of those groves and who possessed no right to transfer any of them, had mortgaged the said groves to other defendants. The suit of the plaintiff was based on an alleged right of re-entry. It was argued in that case that the grove-holders had no transferable rights and that by transferring the possession to a stranger they had forfeited whatever rights they possessed so as to give to the plaintiff a right of re-entry. The learned Judges remarked as follows:—

"We have already said that the plaintiff has, in our opinion, failed to establish any Customary Law binding on the parties which makes the forfeiture of the grove-holder's rights the necessary penalty of a breach on his part of the conditions against transfer of those rights by way of mortgage. The plaintiff, therefore, can only appeal to the general principles of law, and these are, in our opinion, against him. Whether we refer by way of analogy to the provisions of s. 111 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), or to those of s. 52, cl. (2) of the Oudh Rent Act, the principle involved seems to be that forfeiture of a lease is not involved in the case of the breach of any conditions for which forfeiture is not prescribed as the proper penalty under the terms of the lease or agreement under which the lessee holds. We see no good reason why a similar principle should not apply to the case of a licensor and licensee generally; and we note that a similar principle was affirmed by this Court in the case of Lal Bahadur v. Muhammad Karim Khan (4). We note in this connection that it may well be that a distinction ought to be drawn in a case like the present between transfers by way of lease and transfers by way of sale. In the latter case, the principles, which governed the decision in Nurendro Narain Roy v. Ishan Chunder Sen (5), would have to be considered. These principles seem to us to have also determined the decision of this Court in an unreported case, viz., Sheo Dayal v. Deputy Commissioner of Barabanki as Manager of the Court of Wards in charge of Bilahra Estate, (S. C. A. Nos. 53 to 57 of 1909) decided on April 8th, 1909. The transfers with which the Court had to deal in these cases were transfers by way of sale, and I may add that the rights of the grove-holders in the village which was there in question, as recorded in the wajib-ul-arz, would seem to have been even more strictly limited than those proved by the wajib-ul-arz in the present case. At any rate, in the case of a transfer by way of sale, it may be said that there has been on the part of the transferor an entire abandonment of his rights in favour of another person, so that if a grove holder in a case like the present purports to sell outright whatever rights he may possess in respect of his grove, he clearly has no rights left which he can set up against another person, and the transferee who is left in actual possession cannot plead that there exists as between himself and the landlord any contract of license in respect of the trees in the grove, or the land on which they stand, which can secure him against ejectment or prevent the landlord from treating him as a mere trespasser.

(4) S. C. 240.

(5) 22 W. R. 22; 13 B. L. R. 274 (F. R.)

(3) 15 Ind. Cas. 385; 15 O. C. 91.

The case of a mortgage is different, in that the grove-holder cannot be said to have entirely parted with or abandoned his own rights, and he has still something left which he can plead against the landlord so as to protect the mortgagee, who after all is only in temporary possession by permission of the mortgagor and subject to the latter's right of redemption. It seems to us very difficult in a case like the present to draw any valid distinction between a mortgage such as we have before us and a zar-i-peshgi lease, or a lease for a term of years, or even a sale of the produce of the trees for a particular year, or specified number of years. In the absence, therefore, of any express provision in the wajib-ul-arz, or any satisfactory evidence as to the existence of a custom giving the proprietor a right of forfeiture or re-entry in case of a breach of the rule against alienation by way of mortgage, we are unable to see that such right arises in favour of the plaintiff in the present case by reason of any general principle of law."

I am in entire agreement with the view taken by the learned Judges in the above case. So far as I am aware the case has been uniformly followed in Oudh. It was also followed by a learned Judge of this Court in Ram Raj Singh v. Tej Singh (6). It was also contended by the learned Advocate for the appellant that the mortgagee must be treated in such cases as a trespasser and in that view of the case the appellant would be entitled to possession by ejecting him as such. Reliance was placed upon a decision of the late Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh in Azmat-un-Nissa v. Ganesh Parsad (7). It is clear from the facts of that case that it was a case of complete abandonment by sale and the defendants were, therefore, treated as trespassers. In the case of a mortgage no such view is possible to be taken. A mortgagee is only in possession for a specified period on behalf of the mortgagor and after the expiry of that period the latter would be entitled to re-enter into the possession of the property by redeeming it. If the mortgagee were to be treated as a trespasser liable to ejectment and the plaintiff given possession on foot of such a transfer, the obvious result of it would be to oust the mortgagor who had never abandoned the property. I, therefore, hold that the plaintiff cannot exercise his right of re-entry even if he were possessed of such right in the present case since it is only a case of mortgage and not of sale.

The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

G. H.

Appeal dismissed.

OUDH CHIEF COURT.

DIVORCE CASES NOS. 5 AND 6 OF 1927.

November 8, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Pullan.

GRACE CAROLINE FOSTER—

APPLICANT

versus

ALFRED BERTRAM FOSTER—

RESPONDENT.

ALFRED BERTRAM FOSTER—

APPLICANT

versus

GRACE CAROLINE FOSTER AND ANOTHER

—RESPONDENTS.

Divorce—Grounds for divorce—'Cruelty'—Isolated acts of violence, whether sufficient—Adultery of wife—Condonation—Revival—Mere familiarity with co-respondent, effect of—Dissolution of marriage—Policy of law.

In order to establish a case of cruelty against her husband, a wife must prove more than mere isolated acts of violence. The degree of violence necessary varies in accordance with the status of the parties. [p. 186, col. 1.]

The law as regards revival of a condoned offence is that if such a subsequent offence should arise, the forgiveness is cancelled and the old cause of complaint is revived even if the offence is not ejusdem generis with the original offence. [p. 190, col. 2.]

But there is no authority for the view that an offence by a wife less than adultery with another person revives an adultery committed by her previously and which has been condoned by her husband. At least the second offence, if it is not adultery, must be one of which a Court can take cognisance. [ibid.]

Mere familiarity with another person, does not revive a condoned offence of adultery so as to justify a decree for divorce. [p. 191, col. 1.]

Pereira v. Pereira (1) and Collins v. Collins (2), referred to.

A decree for dissolution of marriage should not be granted merely because the husband has shown himself to be suspicious, jealous or even occasionally violent. It is not the object of the law to make such separations easy. [ibid.]

Mr. Ghulam Hasan, for the Applicant.

Mr. Walford, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Grace Caroline Foster has sued for the dissolution of her marriage with Alfred Bertram Foster on the allegation that he has habitually treated her cruelly and beaten her and also that he has committed adultery with Miss

(6) 99 Ind. Cas. 203; 3 O. W. N. 964; L. R. 8 A. (O.) 26; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 46.

(7) 83 Ind. Cas. 51; 1 O. W. N. 515; 10 O. & A. L. R. 1305; 11 O. L. J. 750; L. R. 6 A. (O.) 6; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 262; 28 O. C. 119.

Cynthia Bartlett, a young lady of 17 years of age, who lived in the house adjoining that of the parties. This suit was filed on the 5th of May 1927, the day on which the Courts closed for the Vacation. A cross-suit was filed by Mr. Foster on the 13th of July when the Courts re-opened in which he sought to divorce his wife on account of her misconduct with one Charles Holloway who has been impleaded as a co-respondent. The two suits have been tried together and issues were framed which covered the facts alleged in both cases. The issues are as follows:

1. Has the respondent Alfred Bertram Foster beaten his wife, petitioner, on sundry occasions without proper cause and especially on the 25th March, 1925, 19th April, 1927 the 25th April, 1927 and the 29th April, 1927?

2. If so do these assaults amount to legal cruelty?

3. Has the respondent committed adultery with one Cynthia Bartlett between the 25th April and the 1st May, 1927, and in particular on the 29th and 30th April, 1927?

4. Has the petitioner committed adultery with one Arthur George Stubbs in Calcutta in the month of April, 1920, and if so has this offence been condoned by the respondent?

5. Has the petitioner subsequent to the condonation committed adultery with Dudley Melville Gordon in 1921, first in Naini Tal and then in Calcutta and if so has this adultery also been condoned by the respondent?

6. Has the petitioner been guilty of adultery with Charles Holloway who has been cited as co-respondent in this case at 60, Abbot Road, Lucknow, between the 13th and 17th April, 1927, and again in the Railway train between Lucknow and Allahabad on or about the 18th April and in the Grand Hotel, Allahabad, on the 18th and 19th April?

7. If so, has the last adultery been condoned by the respondent?

8. Is the petitioner entitled to a decree for dissolution of marriage by way of divorce against the respondent or to any other relief?

9. Is the respondent entitled to a decree for dissolution of marriage by way of divorce against the petitioner or to any other relief?

10. Is the respondent entitled to a decree for damages and costs as against Charles Holloway, cited as co-respondent, and if so how much.

Before proceeding to discuss the issues in detail, I shall state briefly the events which led up to these cross cases. The parties were married at Lucknow on the 16th October, 1915, Mrs. Foster being then apparently about 15 years of age. Mr. Foster was then, and is now, employed in the Government Secretariat. His duties took him to various places and the parties lived together in Lucknow, Nagpur, Calcutta and Naini Tal. It is not necessary to consider whether the parties were or were not a happily married couple prior to the year 1921. They had several children and they lived together. They have now for the purposes of this case made attacks on each other but they have not been supported by evidence and each of them contradicts the allegations of the other. In 1921, however, there is no doubt that Mrs. Foster became implicated with a man named Gordon and, as the result of this affair which I shall discuss later, the parties went to Calcutta where Mr. Foster brought a complaint against Gordon of adultery, and ultimately withdrew from the case on receiving payment of Rs. 1,000. After that the parties continued to live together as man and wife and more children were born. In 1925 they had a quarrel and Mrs. Foster made a complaint in the Magistrate's Court at Lucknow. The complaint was of a trifling nature and was not pressed and after that it appears that the parties lived together as before, received and entertained their friends and there was no open breach until the present year. On the 12th of April, 1927, Mr. Foster's duties took him to Allahabad. On the 17th of April, which was Easter Sunday, Mrs. Foster followed him to Allahabad. She went accompanied by the co-respondent Charles Holloway, her small child of three or four years of age, and a young unmarried woman named Silvia Bartlett. It is admitted that while they were in Allahabad they attended a dance at the Railway Institute and put up at the Grand Hotel. On the 19th of April they met Mr. Foster. It is admitted that he came to the Hotel and found Mrs. Foster, Mr. Holloway, the child, and Miss Bartlett resting in one room, that he was extremely annoyed and used violent language to his wife, and committed some assault upon her of a trivial nature and took away her wedding ring. After that it appears that he himself came and stayed in the Hotel. Holloway went back to Lucknow that night, but Mrs. Foster and the child and Miss Bartlett stayed on and their Hotel bill was settled by Foster, who took them back to Lucknow himself on the night of the 21st of April. After they reached Lucknow there was a quarrel, the details of which are by no means clear, and Mrs. Foster left her husband and went to live with her father. During the succeeding days Mrs. Foster and her husband appear to have seen each other occasionally and to have had more than one quarrel over the custody of the youngest child. It may be remarked that the elder children were at school in Calcutta. I find from a letter sent to Mr. Foster by the Deputy Commissioner of Lucknow, which is dated the 30th of April, that Mrs. Foster and her father went to see the Deputy Commissioner, presumably on that date, and accused Mr. Foster of having assaulted them. This must refer to some incident in connection with the attempt to recover the child but it does not appear to be the occasion on which Mrs. Foster received an injury, namely, a black eye, which was visible when she filed her suit on the 5th of May. Mr. Foster did not go to see the Deputy Commissioner but on the following day he took the child away in a motor car and made a report at the Police Station. He returned accompanied by a constable and had a further altercation with his wife and her father when he was attempting to leave the house with the child on his way to Naini Tal to resume his duties. It is probably on that occasion that Mrs. Foster received her black eye and it is also on that occasion that she damaged her first finger and thumb in an attempt to assault her husband. That night Mr. Foster left for Naini Tal and Mrs. Foster's suit was filed four days later.

The first allegation of the wife relates to cruelty. Cruelty is defined in Halsbury's Laws of England, (para. 975 of Vol. 16) as "conduct of such a character as to have caused danger to life, limb or health (bodily or mental) or as to give rise to a reasonable apprehension of such danger." In order to establish a case of cruelty against her husband a wife must prove more than isolated acts of violence. No doubt the degree of violence varies in accordance with the status of the parties. The parties in this case are Anglo-Indians and, although Mr. Foster draws a good salary, they do not live in such circumstances that a blow between husband and wife would be considered very seriously. Mrs. Foster admits that when she went to the Magistrate in 1925 she had no visible injury and, whichever version of the affair is believed, it was the result of a momentary quarrel. She says that her husband beat her because she reproached him for coming home late at night in a state of intoxication, and he says that he beat her because he saw her being kissed by a man at a dance. Such an affair standing by itself would hardly be taken account of in divorce proceedings, especially as the parties lived together peacefully for the next two years. The more recent assaults are first of all that at Allahabad, where the husband, who did not know that his wife intended visiting Allahabad, found her at the Grand Hotel in one room with a young man and a girl, and it can hardly be said that he had no justification if he felt angry. Here too there is no allegation that the assault was a serious one or left any considerable mark of injury, and there remains only the incident in Lucknow. Now Mrs. Foster stated that there were two assaults in Lucknow, one on the 25th of April, and one on the 29th. But the injury that she showed the Court on the 5th of May was seen by a Doctor, on the 3rd May, who gave it as his opinion that the injury was two days old and as Mr. Gwynne says nothing about this injury in his letter of the 30th of April, it seems to be much more probable that Mrs. Foster received this injury in the free fight which she had with her husband over the person of the child on the 1st of May. If that were so the injury was caused in a sudden quarrel and not under circumstances which could be held to amount to cruelty. There are some vague allegations that her husband was addicted to wine and women and gambling, also that he did not give her his pay or allow her to manage the expenses herself, but none of these allegations are pressed and they are not supported by any reliable evidence, nor is there any evidence of neighbours or others that Mr. Foster was in the habit of assaulting his wife. On the contrary, as I have stated above, there is evidence that they were giving evening parties and remained on friendly terms until his departure for Allahabad. In my opinion all that she has proved on the score of cruelty are certain isolated assaults all of which arose on the spur of the moment and on some real or fancied provocation. The allegation of cruelty, therefore, fails and my finding on the first two issues is that, although Mr. Foster has from time to time assaulted his wife, it is not true to say that he did so habitually, or that these assaults amount to legal cruelty.

Mrs. Foster's second allegation is that her husband committed adultery with Miss Cynthia Bartlett between the 25th of April, the date on which Mrs. Foster says she left her husband's house, and the 1st of May. The Bartlett family at that time lived next door to the Fosters and the two houses were connected by a door leading from the bed-room of one house into the bed-room of the other. The Bartletts were apparently in a poor condition financially and there were actually six persons living in a house which only had one bed-room. Under such circumstances it is not surprising that the two families saw a good deal of each other and, considering that Miss Silvia Bartlett, the elder sister, was the person who had accompanied Mrs. Foster to Allahabad, on the occasion which gave rise to the quarrel, it is not surprising that Mr. Foster after his wife left him, saw and conversed with the Bartlett family on many occasions. That he should have under these circumstances committed adultery with the younger sister, a girl of 17, who was engaged to be married is, prima facie, improbable. The near proximity of her father, her mother, her sister and her brothers, rendered it unlikely that opportunities would arise for misconduct of the kind even if the girl herself were willing. There are three witnesses who have given evidence indicating that there was misconduct between the two. The first is Mrs. Foster herself who says that she went to the house in order to try and secure the person of her son on the 29th of April, she went into the bedroom and that there she found her husband and Miss Cynthia Bartlett, that she then turned Miss Cynthia Bartlett out, apparently through the door leading into the adjoining house, which was open, and that then her husband turned her out. Mrs. Foster is physically a very weak woman and it seems in the highest degree improbable that, in the presence of her husband, she would have been able to turn Miss Cynthia Bartlett out of the room and, even had she been able to do so, I am unable to believe that any guilty connection could have been contemplated by the pair with the door open between the two houses. Moreover, Mrs. Foster must be regarded in a matter of this kind as a highly interested witness and I cannot place implicit confidence on her statement. The next witness is one McGuire, one of the numerous persons who appears to have aroused Mr. Foster's unreasonable jealousy. All that he says is that he saw Mr. Foster and another man sitting with the two Bartlett girls. It is extremely probable that he did, but in my opinion this does not indicate any undue intimacy in the case of such close neighbours. The third witness is a darzi who used to work for Mrs. Foster, but who says that he was commissioned by Mr. Foster to make a dress or dresses for Mrs. Bartlett and her two daughters. There is nothing in this man's evidence to give the impression that he is speaking the truth. His story is in the highest degree improbable, as he would not have been admitted to the room when the parties were engaged in the manner described by him. He failed to answer the one searching question put to him in cross-examination, namely, what was the material of the dresses which he had made. This is a thing which no darzi could have forgotten. Thus in my opinion Mrs. Foster's allegation that her husband committed adultery with Miss Cynthia Bartlett is improbable in itself and unsupported by reliable evidence, and I find accordingly on the third issue.

I now turn to Mr. Foster's case against his wife. Learned Counsel relying upon his interpretation of the law of divorce has sought to re-introduce in this case two previous instances in which it is said that Mrs. Foster was guilty of adultery but her offences were condoned by her husband. As his argument is one which must be met, I think it necessary to consider the two previous cases. The first relates to a man named Arthur George Stubbs, with whom it is said that Mrs. Foster committed adultery in Calcutta in the month of April, 1920, when her husband was in Naini Tal. Mrs. Foster produced a letter written by his wife which was suggested to be some sort of a confession, but it is not so nor does it appear that it was written at that time. Apart from this there is absolutely no evidence worthy of the name that Mrs. Foster committed adultery with Stubbs. It appears that she was engaged to him before she married her husband and this fact may have aroused her husband's jealousy, but I find on this issue that no such adultery was committed.

The fifth issue relates to the case of Mr. Gordon and this cannot be disposed of in so summary a fashion. In the hot weather of 1921 Mr. and Mrs. Foster were living in Naini Tal in Brookhill Cottage. The other half of the cottage was occupied by Mr. Alexander and his family, both Mr. Alexander and Mr. Foster being employed at the time as shorthand writers to the Hon'ble Finance Member, Sir Ludovic Porter. Mr. Foster brought into his house a school friend named Gordon and very unwisely left Gordon in the house with his young wife when he went on duty to Simla. He is thus responsible for anything that may subsequently have occurred. When he came back from Simla a complaint was made by Mr. Alexander about the conduct of Mrs. Foster and Gordon. Mr. Alexander has been examined as a witness and I see no reason to disbelieve his statement in this matter. There is on the other hand nothing to support Mrs. Foster's allegation that the report was really made about Mr. Foster's misconduct with Mr. Gordon's sister. It appears that orders were given by Sir Ludovic Porter for Mr. Gordon to be turned out of the house. These orders were carried out, but not only did Mr. Gordon leave the house but Mrs. Foster also left the house and they travelled together to Calcutta. Even Mrs. Authray, who has been examined on commission in Calcutta on behalf of Mr. Foster and who is clearly in favour of Mrs. Foster and wished to help her in every way, admitted that Mrs. Foster came to her house in Calcutta accompanied by Gordon, and there is the further evidence of a Calcutta Pleader Mr. D'Silva, who shows that Mr. Foster consulted him with regard to his projected case against Gordon, and Mrs. Foster in his presence admitted that she had committed adultery with Gordon. No doubt Mrs. Foster now denies this and, for that matter, she denied it at the time because she refused to make any such statement to the Magistrate. But taken together the evidence of the intimacy of the parties in Naini Tal, the report against them, their departure for Calcutta, their arrival at Calcutta together and Mrs. Foster's confession before a Pleader, are sufficient to establish the adultery. It is not necessary to take into account the evidence of a servant that he actually saw the parties in a most compromising attitude. His statement is on the face of it improbable and not worthy of belief, but I have no doubt whatever that they were guilty. Whether Mrs. Foster and her husband had colluded in the matter in order to obtain damages out of Gordon is a point on which I can give no opinion, but undoubtedly Mr. Foster decided to forgive his wife and he came to that decision very quickly, because he began to cohabit with her as soon as he reached Calcutta and before he had received the substantial sum of Rs. 1,000 for withdrawing the case. I find, therefore, on this issue that Mrs. Foster actually committed adultery with Gordon in 1921 and that that adultery was condoned by Mr. Foster. This fact, of course, only becomes relevant to the present case if I can accept the legal argument produced on behalf of Mr. Foster, and even so it depends greatly on my finding on the next issue which deals with the alleged adultery between Mrs. Foster and Charles Holloway.

There is evidence, which there is no reason to doubt, that the Holloways are close friends of the Fosters. Charles Holloway is now a youth of about 19 years of age and in letters written four years ago by Mr. Foster to Mrs. Holloway she refers to him in affectionate terms as a boy. There is no doubt that Charles Holloway went with Mrs. Foster and Miss Bartlett to Allahabad. They travelled together in the same compartment in the train. They went to a dance together and they spent the last few hours of the night and the following morning in the same room in the Hotel at Allahabad. Living as these people live it cannot be supposed that there was anything improper in these three persons and the child travelling together or even occupying a single room, while they were waiting after the dance to return to Lucknow. No doubt each of the parties and Miss Bartlett have been anxious to say as little as possible against themselves and they have, therefore, given different versions of the affair, but to my mind it is quite immaterial whether Mr. Holloway asked Miss Bartlett to go and took Mrs. Foster as a chaperon, or whether Mrs. Foster asked Holloway to go and took Miss Bartlett as a chaperon, or whether Mrs. Foster and Miss Bartlett intended to go unaccompanied and picked up Mr. Holloway at the station. All these suggestions have been put forward but it is most probable that they all agreed together that they would go to the dance. When they got to Allahabad on the following morning they did nothing unnatural or improper. They went to the house of Mr. Lewis, who is employed in the Finance Department and knows Mr. Foster very well, and they asked if he could put them up. He refused and they had to find some place where they could stay after the dance was over. They had not much money and they decided to share a room. In doing so they did nothing wrong, but Charles Holloway was in a difficult position, because he was at that time under suspension from his duties in the Railway and he was afraid to let his name appear in the Hotel register; consequently the party was entered as "W. James and family." Mr. Foster had made capital out of this by incorrectly stating in his petition that his wife and Charles Holloway were entered as Mr. and Mrs. James. Mr. Foster has alleged that his wife and Charles Holloway committed adultery in the train and again in the Grand Hotel. His only informant could have been Miss Silvia Bartlett; the latter has appeared as a witness. She is certainly not favourably disposed towards Mrs. Foster. She is annoyed, I may say justifiably annoyed, at the fact that her young sister has been cited as a co-respondent, but she has not said one word in her evidence which would indicate that either in the train or in the Hotel any adultery took place or even any familiarity between Mrs. Foster and Charles Holloway. Mr. Foster alleges that when he came into the Hotel he found Mrs. Foster and Charles Holloway on one bed with Charles. Holloway's arms around Mrs. Foster's neck. Miss Bartlett denies that she saw anything of the kind. She says that she was asleep and when she awoke she saw Charles Holloway standing and Foster attacking his wife. Prima facie it is very improbable that any woman, let alone a married woman and a mother of several children, would have sexual intercourse with a young man in the presence of a young and unmarried woman. It is in fact almost incredible and when the unmarried woman in question who is hostile to her, gives evidence indicating that no such event occurred, it is impossible for any Court to assume that adultery took place under these unlikely conditions. But apart from this there is much evidence in this case to show that not only did no such adultery occur, but Mr. Foster himself never supposed that it did. He says that he turned Charles Holloway out of the room and he subsequently went back to his work, took no further interest apparently in the proceedings of the parties and came back between 6 and 7 in the evening to see what had happened to them. The Hotel manager, who was called as a witness by both parties, states that a lodger came to him complaining that there was a fight going on in the room next to hers and he went to see what was the matter. When he got there there was no noise and he concluded that it was all over but he saw nobody come out of the room either Foster or Holloway and had either of them done so he must have seen them. Consequently I am more inclined to believe the story that Mr. Foster stayed quietly with the party and had a meal with them as is indicated by the Hotel bill which shows that luncheon was given to four persons on that day. Then as to the events of the evening they are not the doings of an outraged husband. Even on his own showing he was so little disturbed by this evidence of his wife's misconduct that he went to see the Manila Carnival. As a matter of fact he either went with the whole party or met them there and stayed in their company until it was time for Charles Holloway to catch the night train to Lucknow which would be about half past nine. Thus he was in their company for something over two hours before Charles Holloway departed and he remained with them in the Carnival for some considerable time after that and took his wife and Miss Bartlett to the Hotel where they remained for the night. He then stayed in Allahabad, which presumably he had to do on account of his duty, but he also kept his wife and Miss Bartlett at the Hotel and spent a considerable part of his time with them. He also paid the Hotel bill and took them back to Lucknow. Mrs. Foster states that he actually cohabited with her but I am not able to say whether this is true or not. Even if he did not, his conduct would be so remarkable in the case of an outraged husband that it might very well be considered to be condonation. It is not necessary to go further into the evidence as to this incident. Mrs. Foster has on the main been corroborated by Mr. Lewis and the co-respondent, and the differences between her statement and those of Miss Bartlett have already been noted. It must be remembered that Miss Bartlett has her own character to consider and it might not be considered proper for her to admit that she had been present had these two persons actually committed adultery in her presence. But in my opinion no such incident can have occurred, and I find without hesitation that there was no adultery between Charles Holloway and Mrs. Foster either in the train or in the Hotel in Allahabad.

There remain two further incidents spoken to by Miss Bartlett before the parties went to Allahabad. Now if Miss Bartlett really saw what she says, it is hardly likely that she would have consented to go with this couple to Allahabad knowing that Mr. Foster was on duty there and that there was a grave danger of their being detected. She says that she went twice into the house after Mr. Foster's absence and found Holloway and Mrs. Foster on each occasion in what might be considered a compromising attitude, that is to say, they were alone in the room and one or other of them was lying on the floor. She also says that Holloway on the first occasion looked nervous and turned over on to his stomach. This may mean that he had something to conceal or that he merely realized that he should not have been there with Mrs. Foster when her husband was away. But I am not inclined to accept Miss Bartlett as evidence on this point. She was on her own showing employed in a boot shop in Lucknow at the time and it does not appear likely that she would have been in her house at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and her statement must be discounted by the fact that her sister was implicated in this case and that she was only too anxious to say anything that she could, that would damage Mrs. Foster without damaging herself. It is very easy to make an assertion that two persons had been found in a compromising position but such a statement uncorroborated does not go very far and the other evidence shows that Charles Holloway was a friend of the family, both of Mr. Foster and Mrs. Foster, that he was treated as a boy, that he was often in and out of the house and I am inclined to think that some perfectly innocent episode has been exaggerated by Miss Bartlett in return for the attack upon her sister. I, therefore, find on issue No. 6 that no adultery took place between Mrs. Foster and Charles Holloway, and, that being so, issue No. 7 does not arise.

I now turn to the point of law raised by Mr. Ghulam Hasan on behalf of Mr. Foster. His argument is that, even if adultery is not proved between Charles Holloway and Mrs. Foster, there has been a matrimonial misconduct which enables him to revive the previous adultery with Gordon in spite of its condonation. This is not the law and the rulings to which I have been referred establish no such proposition. The law is as stated in Halsbury's Laws of England (Vol.-16, para. 1003) "if such a subsequent offence should arise the forgiveness is cancelled and the old cause of complaint is revived even if the offence is not ejusdem generis with the original offence." The first ruling to which I have been referred is Pereira v. Pereira (1), but there it appears that the case was one in which the respondent had committed adultery with the co-respondent on a previous occasion and subsequently behaved in some manner short of adultery with the same person and it was held that the first adultery was revived. All the other rulings refer to the case of a husband and are based on the fact that it requires a combination of offences for a wife to divorce her husband. Such rulings have no application to a case like this, and I can find no direct authority for the view, that an offence by a wife less than adultery with another person revives an adultery committed by her previously and which has been condoned by her husband. At least the second offence, if it is not adultery, must be one of which a Court can take cognisance. This is the view expressed by Lord Balckburn in a decision of the House of Lords, Collins v. Collins (2). Now there is nothing that has passed between Charles Holloway and Mrs. Foster of which the Court could take cognisance. It is difficult to see what offence short of adultery could have been committed between Charles Holloway and Mrs. Foster. At most it may be said that they were guilty of familiarity but familiarity is not an offence, and it is stated in para. 1004 of Lord Halsbury's Laws of England that the doctrine, which is that on which Mr. Ghulam Hasan relies, does not go the length of making mere familiarities revive adultery. Thus, in my opinion, no facts have been brought to light in this case which can revive the adultery of 1921, between Mrs. Foster and Gordon. That has long ago been forgiven and could only become relevant in a subsequent case if Mrs. Foster renewed her relations in some manner with Mr. Gordon or actually committed adultery with another person.

(1) 5 M. 118; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 82 (F. B.).

(2) (1884) 9 A. C. 205; 32 W. R. 500.

I have now to consider what order I can pass in this case. In my opinion neither party has made out a case for divorce and it only remains to be considered whether the case is one in which I should allow Mrs. Foster a separation. Now it is easy for a wife, who has some grievance against her husband, to say that she would rather take an allowance and live apart from him but it is not the object of the law to make such separations easy. They are merely a short road to prostitution and in my opinion there are certain things which a wife must put up with. In this case her husband has shown himself to be suspicious, jealous and occasionally violent but I am not satisfied that it has been proved that he is unfaithful, that he fails to support her or her children in decency or that he is habitually cruel. I neither think that it is for her advantage nor in the interest of justice that she should be given a separation from her husband under such circumstances. Rather it is a case in which both parties have rushed into Court without sufficient cause and expended a great deal of venom against each other and implicated unnecessarily other innocent persons. I must, therefore, decline to grant the alternative relief which Mr. Walford asked for his client and I dismiss both suits. The parties to bear their own costs throughout.

G. H.

*Suits dismissed.ODDH CHIEF COURT.

SECTION 25 APPLICATION No. 52 OF 1927.

November 16, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Raza.

SHEOPAL—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

CHITORIA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—OPPOSITE PARTY.

*Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887),
s. 25—Erroneous decision of question of limitation—Revision—Interference.*

Where a Judge trying a small cause suit in a carefully reasoned judgment decides, after considering the various authorities, the suit to be time-barred, the fact that the Judge has arrived at incorrect interpretation of the authorities is no ground for interference by the High Court.

Mohammad Saadat Ali Khan v. Kuer Lal (1), followed.

Application for revision of the order of the Subordinate Judge, Rae Bareilly, dated the 21st September, 1927, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 374 of 1927, sitting as Judge of Small Cause Court.

Mr. S. N. Srivastava, for the Applicant.

Mr. Ali Mohammad, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision against an order of the learned Subordinate Judge of Rae Bareilly in a suit decided by him in the exercise of his Small Cause Court powers.

The suit was based on a bond payable by instalment. It was provided by the bond that should default be made in payment of one instalment, the whole should be due. The suit was brought by the plaintiff after the death of the defendants' father, Thakur who had executed the bond. The defendants denied the bond and the alleged payment and pleaded bar of limitation. The learned Subordinate Judge held that the bond was proved. He found that the alleged payment was also proved but he dismissed the suit on the ground of limitation, as he held that the payment in question was not a good payment under s. 20 of the Limitation Act.

I have heard the learned Pleaders on both sides, at some length. I think this application should be dismissed.

The learned Subordinate Judge in a carefully reasoned judgment decided that the suit was time barred. I am not prepared to disagree with his finding on the point under consideration. As pointed out in the case of Mohammad Saadat Ali Khan v. Kuer Lal (1) where the trial Judge in a carefully reasoned judgment decided, after considering the various authorities, the suit to be time-barred, the fact that the Judge had arrived at incorrect interpretation of the authorities is no ground for interference by the High Court. To go into the merits in such a case where the Judge has decided the case sensibly and intelligently, would in effect be granting an appeal on a point of law.

(1) 93 Ind. Cas. 912; 3 O. W. M. 228; A. I. R. 1920 Oudh 519; 13 O. L. J. 641.

Hence I dismissed this application with costs.

G. H.

Application dismissed.

OUDDH CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL N. 241 OF 1927.

December 15, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Hasan

and Mr. Justice Pullan.

MURLIDHAR—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Sheikh FAKIR BUKHSH—PLAINTIFF

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Co-sharer—Lessee purchasing share in whole property—Defendant purchasing remaining shares—Suit for profits by lessee-co-sharer—Rate of profits to be calculated at market value and not rent paid by lessee-co-sharer.

A was a lessee of 3 shops out of 25 shops at a rent of Rs. 14-8 per month. He purchased more than one-eighth share in all the shops and the remainder was purchased by B. B brought a suit against A to eject him from the shops though unsuccessfully. A then sued for his share of the profits of the whole property as a co-sharer:

Held, that the profits of the 3 shops could not be calculated at the rate of Rs. 14-8 per month which A no longer paid but at their proper market value.

Second appeal against an order of the Subordinate Judge, Mohan Lalgunj, Lucknow, dated the 29th March, 1927, upholding that of the Second Munsif in addition to strength, Lucknow, dated the 29th November, 1926.

Messrs. Ali Zaheer and Ram Bharosay Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Zahur Ahmad, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff in this suit, Sheikh Fakir Bakhsh, has been for a long time the lessee of three shops out of a block of twenty-five shops in Lucknow city. The rent which he paid for them was Rs. 14-8 a month. The property was sold and the plaintiff became by purchase the owner of a share rather more than one-eighth of the whole property and the remainder was purchased by Murli Dhar, the defendant in this suit. Murli Dhar brought a suit against Fakir Bakhsh to eject him from his three shops and he was met by the defence that Fakir Bakhsh being a co-sharer in the whole property could not be ejected. This defence appears to have been accepted by the Courts, and Fakir Bakhsh in retaliation has brought the present suit for a share in the profits of the whole property. He has calculated these profits in such a way that he himself claims an undisputed right in his own three shops and a considerable portion of the profits of the remaining shops, because he calculates that the rent of his three shops is only Rs. 14-8 per month whereas the rent of all the other shops is considerably more. The lower Courts have decreed the suit in the manner desired by the plaintiff but, in our opinion, their decision cannot be upheld. Fakir Bakhsh has brought this suit as a co-sharer. The question whether he is or is not a tenant of three shops is immaterial for the purposes of this suit. As a co-sharer he can claim his proportionate share of the profits of the property but these profits must be the real profits of the property. It does not appear to us that the real profits of the three shops which have been occupied by the plaintiff himself are Rs. 14-8 a month, merely because that was the rent which he paid formerly to the persons from whom he has now purchased a share. We need not bind him down to his own statement in the suit brought against him by Murli Dhar that he is a co-sharer and that no relationship of tenant and landlord subsists between him and Murli Dhar. That would be going beyond the matter which we have to decide. All that we have to consider is whether he is entitled, when suing as a co-sharer to have the three shops in his own occupation assessed at a rent of Rs. 14-8, a rent it may be remarked, which he no longer pays, or at their correct market rent. In our opinion there is only one answer to this question. These shops along with all the other shops which form the property, must, for the purposes of calculating the profits, be assessed at their proper market value. We, therefore, allow this appeal and remand the case to the first Court for determination of the true profits of the whole property including the three shops of which the plaintiff claims to be a tenant and for calculation on this basis of the amount due to or by the plaintiff as the case may be. Cost will follow the result.

G. H.

*Appeal allowed;
Case remanded*

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 252 OF 1927.

November 1, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

SABA—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus

DAYARAM AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—NON-APPLICANTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151, O. IX, r. 9—Suit dismissed in default—Application for restoration filed, later than thirty days—Court, whether has inherent jurisdiction to restore—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5, applicability of.

When a definite period of limitation is prescribed by law within which action must be taken, a Court is not entitled to extend it by purporting to act under s. 151 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Ajodya Mahton v. Phul Kuer (1), followed.

Section 5 of the Limitation Act is not applicable to an application under O. IX, r. 9 of the Civil Procedure Code for the restoration of a suit dismissed in default.

Application for revision of the order of the Sub-Judge, Second Class, Balaghat, dated the 30th April, 1927, in Civil Suit No. 217 of 1926.

Mr. A. V. Vazalwar, for the Applicant.

Mr. M. R. Indurkar, for the Non-Aplicants.

ORDER.—This is an application under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. The non-applicants filed Civil Suit No. 217 of 1926 in the Small Cause Court, Balaghat. On 13th December, 1926, the plaintiffs were absent and the suit was dismissed under O. IX, r. 8, Civil Procedure Code. On the 21st of January this year the plaintiffs applied that their suit be restored to file and the dismissal be set aside. The Court restored the suit to file under the powers given it by s. 151, Civil Procedure Code.

Now, it is clear that the plaintiffs were entitled under r. 9 to apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and if they could satisfy the Court that there was sufficient cause for their non-appearance when the suit was called for hearing, the Court could make an order setting aside the dismissal; but under Art. 163 of the Indian Limitation Act the period of making such an application is limited to 30 days. Here, though the case was dismissed on 13th December, 1926, the application was not made until the 21st of January, 1927,

Section 5 of the Indian Limitation Act has not been made applicable to an application under O. IX, r. 9, and, therefore, that section will not apply to the present case. I am clearly of opinion that, where a definite period of limitation has been provided by law within which action must be taken, a Court is not entitled to extend such period by purporting to act under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code. There is authority for this view: see Adjodhya Mahton v. Phul Kuer (1). Section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code cannot be invoked to help a party who has a remedy provided by law and who has failed to take advantage of that remedy within the period of limitation prescribed. In the present case the Court had no power to set aside the dismissal in the exercise of its inherent powers. I, therefore, set aside the lower Court's order restoring the case to file.

The non-applicants will pay their own and the applicant's costs here and in the lower Court. I fix Pleader's fees at Rs. 15.
G. R. D. Application allowed.

(1) 65 Ind. Cas. 341; 1 Pat. 277; (1922) Pat. 61; A. I. R. 1922 Pat. 479.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 440-B OF 1926.

November 1, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

BAPU SURYABHAN—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

KISAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 102—Suit triable as Small Cause—Trial as ordinary suit—Second appeal, whether lies.

A decree in a suit triable by a Small Cause Court but actually tried by an ordinary Civil Court is not open to second appeal under s. 102 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 194, col. 1.]

Vinayak v. Krishnarao (1) and Kesrisang v. Naran- sang (2), followed.

Appeal against the decree of the First Additional District Judge, Akola, dated the 13th September, 1926, in Civil Appeal No. 112 of 1926.

Mr. G. G. Hatwalne, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. R. Deo, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit for compensation for damage done to plaintiffs' property by the wrongful act of the defendant of digging a pit close by and letting water accumulate there. It is said that the plaintiffs' walls got damp with moisture and fell down. Hence the plaintiffs claimed compensation by way of reimbursement of the expenses they are likely to suffer in erecting them. The plaint in this suit was originally presented to the Court of Small Causes but that Court returned it for presentation to the ordinary Civil Court on the ground that it involved a question of title. The Small Cause Court thus exercised the discretion what the law gave it under s. 23 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act. That order has become final as between the parties.

The plaint was thus entertained by the ordinary Civil Court to which it was presented in due course. The first Court decreed the claim to the extent of Rs. 10. The decision was appealed against by the defendant but his appeal was unsuccessful. He has, therefore, come up on second appeal.

The first question is whether a second appeal lies. On the strength of the rulings in Vinayak v. Krishnarao (1) and Kesrisang v. Naransang (2), I hold that the suit is not open to second appeal in view of s. 102, Civil Procedure Code.

I am asked to treat the second appeal in revision. The memorandum was filed on the 73rd day and ordinarily this Court does not entertain civil revisions presented after the 45th day. I do not see any valid reason to admit this as a civil revision especially as the result thereof would be an affirmance of the decree of the lower Appellate Court. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

G. R. D.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 25 B. 625; 3 Bom. L. R. 239.

(2) 32 B. 566; 10 Bom. L. R. 733.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 234-B OF 1925.

June 29, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Kotval, A. J. C.

MOHANLAL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

SATYABHAMA AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS
—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 10—Land which is not capable of physical possession, meaning of—Land in possession of trespasser—Sale—Suit for pre-emption—Limitation.

The words 'does not admit of physical possession' in Art. 10 of Sch. I of the Limitation Act do not merely refer to the inability of the vendor in fact to give possession to the purchaser but refer to his inability both in fact and in law. [p. 195, col. 1.]

Where a vendor is in personal and immediate possession of the property sold or where the right to such possession thereof is in the vendor at the date of the registration of the sale-deed, the property is one admitting of physical possession. [ibid.]

Land in possession of a trespasser at the date of the registration of a sale-deed is not land which is not capable of physical possession within the meaning of Art. 10 of Sch. I of the Limitation Act. [ibid.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Amraoti, dated the 5th February, 1925, in Civil Appeal No. 247 of 1924.

Mr. W. R. Puranik, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. V. Wazalwar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for pre-emption in which the plaintiffs have succeeded in the lower Court. The only question for decision here is one of limitation. The sale-deed in respect of the land sought to be pre-empted was registered on the 15th of June, 1922, and the suit was instituted on the 29th of March, 1924. The purchaser-defendant pleaded that at the date of the registration, the land did not admit of physical possession as it was in the possession of a trespasser, that the second part of col. 3 of Art. 10, First Schedule to the Limitation Act, therefore, applied and that the suit was time-barred. The plaintiffs pleaded and the lower Courts have found that the purchaser took possession at the end of the year 1923.

The question for decision is whether land in possession of a trespasser at the date of the registration of the sale-deed is land which does not admit of physical possession. The following authorities support an answer to this question in the negative. [Chandan Singh v. Chandi Prasad (1), Velayudham Pillai v. Thina Velagudham Pillai (2), Jagamaya Dasi v. Tulsia (3) and the observations at page 58 in Jairam v. Sitaram (4).]

The words "does not admit of physical possession" do not refer to the inability of the vendor in fact to give possession to the purchaser. They refer to inability both in fact as well as in law. The principle applicable is that where the vendor is in personal and immediate possession of the property sold or where the right to such possession thereof is in the vendor at the date of the registration of the sale-deed, the property is one admitting of physical possession. In the case where a trespasser is in possession such right is with the vendor and the property therefore, admits of physical possession. In the case of a tenant in possession or usufructuary mortgagee in possession such right is not in the vendor and the property is, therefore, one which does not admit of physical possession.

It must, therefore, be held that land in the possession of a trespasser at the date of the registration of the sale-deed is not land which does not admit of physical possession. Limitation, therefore, began to run from the end of the year 1923 when the purchaser took possession and the suit was within time.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

IN A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) A. W. N. (1888) 227.

(2) 62 Ind. Cas. 27; 40 M. L. J. 443; 13 L. W. 268; 29 M. L. T. 251; (1921) M. W. N. 207.

(3) 89 Ind. Cas. 444; 23 A. L. J. 885; L. R. 6 A. 521 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 70; 48 A. 12.

(4) 52 Ind. Cas. 940; 16 N. L. R. 37.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 513 OF 1926.

November 3, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Pridaux, A. J. C.

Seth POKHARDAS AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

GANPAT RAO AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 38—Mortgage suit—Final decree for sale—Transfer of village in which mortgaged property is situate to another Revenue District—Court passing decree, whether has jurisdiction to execute it—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 52—Mortgage suit—Sale during prosecution of execution proceedings, validity of.

A Court which passes a final mortgage-decree for sale does not lose its jurisdiction to execute it by the mere fact of the portion of the District in which the property mortgaged is situate being transferred to another Revenue District. [p. 197, col. 1.]

The doctrine of lis pendens applies to an alienation made during the active prosecution of execution proceedings under a mortgage-decree. [p. 196, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Bhandara, in Civil Appeal No. 39 of 1926, dated the 2nd September, 1926.

Mr. N. G. Bose, R. B., for the Appellants.
Messrs. P. A. Pandit and P. S. Deo, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This judgment also disposes of Second Appeal No. 514 of 1926. The plaintiffs are the same in each case, the 1st defendant is also the same; but in the present case Toda is the 2nd defendant, and in the other case one Tejram is the 2nd defendant.

These appeals arise out of two separate suits. One Chandan Lal, the superior proprietor of Mahal No. 2 of Mauza Bhandal-bodi, Tahsil Waraseoni, District Balaghat, sued Toda (defendant No. 2 in Suit No. 166 of 1925) and Tejram (defendant No. 2 in Suit No. 167 of 1925) and other inferior proprietors for recovery of some arrears of malikana, which were the first charge on the mahal. This was in the year 1917, and Chandan Lal obtained on 28th April, 1917, a decree for sale of Mahal No. 2 in default of payment of Rs. 1,303-0-6. The decree was made final on 6th May, 1918. Some three months after the passing of this final decree Toda and Tejram each executed on 14th August, 1918, a mortgage-deed in respect of his respective 0-1-4 share in the said mahal. This was in favour of the plaintiffs in the two suits which lead to the present two appeals.

The plaintiffs sued on those two mortgages and obtained preliminary decrees on 23rd July, 1923, and 25th June, 1923, and a final decree for foreclosure in each of the two suits on 4th October, 1924. Before the date of this final decree, however, defendant No. 1 purchased on 9th February, 1924, at an auction sale held in execution of the final decree dated 6th May, 1918, in favour of Chandanal, the whole Mahal No. 2 of Mauza Bhandalbodi which includes the 0-1-4 shares of Toda and Tejram. The purchaser obtained possession on 4th April, 1924, and got Mahal No. 2 mutated in his favour on 30th July, 1927. The plaintiffs who hold final decrees for foreclosure against Tejram and Toda have brought the present two suits against defendant No. 1 the auction-purchaser for possession of the shares of Toda and Tejram.

The 1st defendant contested the claims. He pleaded that as the plaintiffs' two mortgages were executed some time after the final decree in favour of Chandanal, they were representatives-in-interest of the judgment-debtors Toda and Tejram, and were bound under the principle of lis pendens, the suits being barred under s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The plaintiffs contended that this principle affected the auction-sales which were held after the final decree for foreclosure in their favour. It was further contended that the Court of the Sub-Judge at Bhandara had no jurisdiction to hold the sale as the village Bhandalbodi, which was situated in the Rampaili tract of the Bhandara District, was transferred to the Balaghat District in 1922. Therefore, the sale by the Bhandara Court was ultra vires.

The trial Court found that the plaintiffs were representatives-in-interest of the judgment-debtors Toda and Tejram as they took their mortgages after the final decrees for sale in favour of Chandanal Lal; that the plaintiffs' mortgages cannot supersede the decree for sale in favour of Chandanal Lal or the sale held in execution of Chandanal Lal's decree; that the plaintiffs cannot claim precedence over the defendant No. 1's interest in the shares of Toda and Tejram; that the plaintiffs' mortgages can be said to have been taken during the pendency of Chandanal's suit and they could not prevail against the defendant No. 1's title; and that the defendant No. 1's purchase of the shares in the two suits was not affected by the doctrine of lis pendens. The suit was held to be not barred under s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the sale held in execution of Chandanal's decree was not held to be ultra vires and the plaintiffs could not question the validity of that sale. The suits were dismissed.

On appeal the lower Appellate Court has, in one judgment, disposed of the two cases. The Judge has with his customary thoroughness discussed the issues upon which the decision of the cases rests. He finds, dealing with the question as to whether the sale is invalid because the jurisdiction to execute the decree had been transferred to Balaghat, that the contention was without force. And as to the doctrine of lis pendens, pleaded by the plaintiffs, the Judge writes:—

"It is based on the assumption that the principle of lis pendens can be availed of by the appellants. But in the circumstances of the case, it is the plaintiffs themselves who will be adversely affected by the said principle and that it is the defendant No. 1 who is entitled to urge its application in his favour."

He further held, following the principle enunciated in Dhiraj Singh v. Dina Nath (1), that s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act continues to apply from the filing of a mortgage suit until satisfaction of the decree by payment of the mortgage-money, foreclosure or sale. He finds that the plaintiffs' mortgages are inoperative against defendant No. 1's purchase and that the latter's purchase is binding on the plaintiffs who are representatives-in-interest of the judgment-debtors Toda and Tejram as on the judgment-debtors themselves. Dealing with the third contention of the appellants the Judge finds it unnecessary to determine whether the plaintiffs were transferred for value without notice of the claim of the superior proprietor Chandanal Lal for the reason that, even if the plaintiff-appellants be held to be such transferees, the finding cannot affect them in any way in the present suits. The Judge repelled the arguments made in support of an application for amendment of the plaint by the addition of an alternative claim resembling that of redemption in its character. Both appeals failed and were dismissed.

It is argued here that the Bhandara Court had no jurisdiction to execute the decree from which the sale resulted, as the village was situated in the newly formed Tahsil of Waraseoni in the Balaghat District. By Notification No. 174-214-H issued under s. 14 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act XVIII of 1881, the Chief Commissioner was pleased to alter, with effect from the 1st October, 1917, the limits of the Bhandara and Gondia Tahsils in the Bhandara District and those of the Balar and Balaghat Tahsils in the Balaghat District and to create a new Tahsil in this latter District to be called the Waraseoni Tahsil. Among the villages transferred to the new Tahsil as shown in Sch. B of that Notification was Bhandal-bodi. By Notification No. 366-J issued in exercise of the powers conferred by s. 15 of the Central Provinces Courts Act, 1917, and in supersession of all previous notifications on the subject, the Chief Commissioner was pleased to divide the Central Provinces into certain Civil Districts with effect from the 14th of May, 1917, and the Bhandara and Balaghat Revenue Districts were declared to be the Bhandara Civil District.

It is contended for the other side that only the revenue portion of the Gondia Tahsil went to Balaghat and the Civil jurisdiction remained as it was until 1922. It is pressed for the appellants that a decree can only be executed with regard to immoveable property in a Court in which the suit could have been instituted (s. 16 of the Civil Procedure Code); and it is stated that when the sale took place on 9th February, 1924, the suit for immoveable property lay at Balaghat and when some Judge was appointed for Balaghat and given jurisdiction, then the Bhandara Courts from that time lost jurisdiction over immoveable property in the tract transferred from the Bhandara District to the Balaghat District. I am also referred to ss. 37, 38 and 150 of the Civil Procedure Code. I do not think there is any force in this contention raised for the appellants and I agree with the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court that, even if it be assumed that the execution of the final decree for sale was transferred to Balaghat owing to the transfer of the Rampaili tract from Bhandara District to Balaghat, the jurisdiction of the Bhandara Court to deal with execution in connection with decrees passed in cases by it would not be affected. The Judge rightly writes:—

“In view of ss. 38 and 150, Civil Procedure Code, the jurisdiction to execute a decree can be exercised both by the Court which passed it, as well as by the Court to which the business of the former Court has been transferred. Again it has to be remembered that the Revenue District of Bhandara and the Revenue District of Balaghat are comprised in one Civil District of Bhandara and consequently every Court in the Bhandara Civil District has jurisdiction to entertain suits and execution cases arising from the whole Civil District, irrespective of the question whether the subject-matter of the suit is situated in Bhandara Revenue District or Balaghat Revenue District. Furthermore, the contention seems to have no foundation in the distribution memo. of 1920. It seems that according to the distribution memo. which was to take effect from 1st October, 1922, only new institutions were transferred to the Balaghat Court. The execution of decrees already passed by the Sub-Judge at Bhandara was expressly retained at Bhandara. Neither the distribution memo. nor the transfer of a part of Gondia Tahsil to Balaghat Revenue District can, therefore, lend any assistance to the appellant's contention.

I agree with the lower Appellate Court that the Court of the Sub-Judge at Bhandara was competent to hold the Court sale which was in execution of a final decree passed by it.

It is contended here that the plaintiffs' mortgages are not affected by the doctrine of lis pendens. The final decree is dated 6th May, 1918, and the sale took place on 9th February, 1924. It is said that when the plaintiffs' mortgages were executed the case of Chandan Lal was not being actively prosecuted. But this is not so. In execution case after the final decree was passed on 6th May, 1918, there was an application filed on that very day. This was disposed of on 22nd July, 1918, being struck off. Another application was filed on 22nd January, 1920, which lasted to 13th October, 1920, and then there was an application dated 24th April, 1923, to 20th March, 1924. It is very clear that the execution case was being actively prosecuted, and the purchase by the plaintiffs was made during that active prosecution.

It has been stated here that if the plaintiffs' mortgages were not invalid on account of the lease, they can redeem. But this is not a redemption case, and this contention has no force.

It is lastly urged that as the mahal was sold for Rs. 3,550 being purchased by the 1st defendant for that sum after paying the decree which led to the sale, there was a balance of Rs. 1,324-8-5 and that the plaintiffs were entitled to this as part of the mortgaged property. This belated plea has been raised for the first time in this Court, and I decline to entertain it. This claim was not urged during the trial of the suits.

The result is that both appeals fail and are dismissed with costs. Appellants will pay the respondents' costs.

G. R. D.

Appeals dismissed.

A. N. A.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 24-B OF 1926.

November 7, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

VITHU—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MAROTI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Stridhan other than Saudayik—Alienation without husband's consent, validity of.

A Hindu female cannot alienate or devise her stridhan other than Saudayik during coverture without her husband's consent. [p. 199, cols. 1 & 2.]

Salemma v. Lutchmana Reddi (1) and Bhau v. Raghunath (2), followed.

Appeal against the decree of the First Additional District Judge, Akola, dated the 20th October, 1925, in Civil Appeal No. 237 of 1924.

Mr. S. A. Ghadgay, for the Appellant,
Messrs. A. V. Khare and W. B. Pendharkar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were the daughters of one Girmaji who died in 1908. The plaintiff's story is that he purchased the property in suit from defendants Nos. 2 and 3 who inherited it from their deceased father. But defendant No. 1 obstructed the plaintiff in taking possession. Hence the present suit. Defendant No. 1 has purchased the property from defendants Nos. 2 and 3 on 7th June, 1909, but the plaintiff contended that on that date they were minors, so the sale is void. It was further pleaded that defendant No. 2 was not the guardian of defendant No. 3 in which capacity she is said to have executed the sale-deed in favour of defendant No. 1; and it was said that there was no legal necessity for the sale. The plaintiff's story was that defendant No. 2 was born on 13th June, 1892, and defendant No. 3 on 4th November, 1897.

The first two defendants contested the suit. Their story was that defendant No. 2 is the guardian of defendant No. 3 and was a major at the date of the sale to defendant No. 1, and that the sale was made to pay off the debts of the deceased Girmaji, and further that it was a prudent act and for the benefit of defendant No. 3. The sale to the plaintiff was impeached on the ground of undue influence and pressure; and defendant No. 3 was said to have ratified the sale to defendant No. 1 on 4th October, 1920.

The trial Court found that defendant No. 2 was a minor on 7th June, 1909, when she executed the sale in favour of defendant No. 1. Defendant No. 2 was found not to be the guardian of defendant No. 3 at that time, and the sale was found not binding on defendants Nos. 2 and 3. It was held that the sale to defendant No. 1 was for legal necessity and that defendant No. 3 did not ratify the sale, and further that the plaintiff's sale was not made under undue influence. The claim was decreed in full.

The first defendant appealed, and the lower Appellate Court's finding may be summarised as follows:—Defendant No. 2 was only 17 on 7th June, 1909, and was a minor, and, therefore, the sale-deed of that date conveyed no title to defendant No. 1, and the ratification of that deed by defendant No. 3 could not make the transaction valid and binding even against her. There was no evidence to show that defendant No. 2 made any representation that she was a major, and even if she did, that would not estop the plaintiff. There was no necessity for the sale to defendant No. 1, it not being proved that any debts due by Girmaji existed. Pressure or illegal influence was held not to be established in the plaintiff's sale. The Judge writes: "The other ground on which the sale to plaintiff is impeached is that defendants Nos. 2 and 3 got the property from their father and these ladies could not alienate the property without the consent of their husbands. There is now no question of the consent of the husband of defendant No. 3 for that is not questioned here. There is no proof adduced by the plaintiff that defendant No. 2's husband had given his consent to the sale in favour of plaintiff. The husband Jairam (D. W. No. 7) denies this expressly. Plaintiff asserted as P. W. No. 1 that Jairam had taken part in bringing about the sale but there is no independent proof on the point. I must, therefore, find that the defendant No. 2's husband did not consent to the sale in plaintiff's favour."

Holding that the wife was incompetent to sell the property without the consent of her husband, it was found that the plaintiff had no title to the defendant No. 2's share, and the decree of the first Court was modified by decreeing joint possession to the extent of half. Against that decision the present appeal has been filed.

The appellant's arguments can be put under three heads. The first is that as Jairam the husband of defendant No. 2 consented to the sale deed dated 7th June, 1909, it should be held that he consented to the sale of the property to the plaintiff. Secondly, that as the sale was not void but voidable, the husband alone was the person who could raise the plea: and he was not a party to the case. It is thirdly argued that a broad view of the Hindu Law on the subject should be taken; and as the two ladies were absolute heirs, no consent of Jairam was necessary as regards the 2nd defendant.

It is pointed out, and I think rightly, that the Madras case quoted, namely, Salemma v. Lutchmana Reddi (1), does not apply; but in the Bombay case, Bhau v. Raghunath (2), it is expressly laid down that "except in the kind known as Saudayik, a woman's power of disposal over her stridhan is during coverture subject to her husband's consent, and without such consent she cannot bequeath it by Will when she is survived by her husband, who is not shown ever to have consented to the Will". Sir Hari Singh Gour, in his work "The Hindu Code", page 1196, states that "a woman cannot alien or devise her stridhan other than Saudayik during coverture without her husband's consent." In the present case the stridhan was not Saudayik, and it seems to me that under the principle enunciated in the Bombay case above quoted, it was in the present case necessary for the consent of the husband of defendant No. 2 to be obtained to the plaintiff's sale to make it valid. I do not think that because the husband agreed to a sale in 1909, it can be held that he, therefore, consented to a sale in 1920. It cannot be held that he gave his wife general power to dispose of the property. The husband is not a party to the present case, but it seems to me that defendant No. 2 can take the plea, and the finding of the lower Appellate Court that Jairam did not consent to the alienation in favour of the plaintiff seems to be correct. The plaintiff cannot, therefore, under that sale recover defendant No. 2's share of the property.

(1) 21 M. 100; 8 M. L. J. 14; 7 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 427.
(2) 30 B. 229; 7 Bom. L. R. 936.

The result is that this appeal fails and is dismissed with costs. The appellant will pay the respondent's costs.

G. R. D.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 35-B OF 1927.

November 4, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Hallifax, A. J. C.

Musammam SAKHU—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

versus

KASHIBA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Interest—Damdapat, rule of, whether applicable to possessory mortgages.

The rule of damdapat is applicable to all mortgages whether the mortgagee is in possession or not, although in some cases where the mortgagee is in possession it does not apply, in the sense of being of any effect, because the payments made every year from the income of the property keep the amount of the interest below the amount of the capital. In each case it is merely a matter of calculation. [p. 200, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Amraoti, dated the 30th September, 1926, in Civil Appeal No. 120 of 1926.

Mr. M. B. Niyogi, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. W. Joshi, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The mortgage which is sought to be enforced in this case was executed on the 20th of January, 1914. The consideration was a loan of Rs. 1,400 which the mortgagor agreed to re-pay in instalments of Rs. 200 each, with interest, on Paush Wadya 13th, which is approximately the 20th of January, of each of the following seven years. Interest on the loan was to be at 9 per cent. but any sum in default was to carry interest at 24 per cent. and the whole amount still due was to be paid at once on the occurrence of two defaults. The mortgagee was in possession of the mortgaged field from May, 1917 to February, 1925, and made Rs. 150 out of it in each of those eight years. He sued for the enforcement of his mortgage on the 13th of July, 1925, claiming Rs. 3,500.

The claim for more than twice the principal is based on the quaint plea that a mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged property is not subject to the rule of damdupat. This was apparently taken in reliance on the head-note in the report of Panduji v. Panduji (1). That head-note* states a proposition that is obviously wrong and does not appear in the judgment. The matter is too simple to need discussion. The rule of damdupat is applicable to all mortgages whether the mortgagee is in possession or not, if it is otherwise applicable, but in some cases where the mortgagee is in possession it does not apply, in the sense of being of any effect, because the payments made every year from the income of the property keep the amount of the interest below the amount of the capital. In each case it is merely a matter of calculation.

In this case no calculations have been made and the rule of damdupat has been regarded in the lower Appellate Court as making Rs. 2,800 due on the date of the suit. That is impossible, as one payment of Rs. 150 had been made in June, 1925, at the end of the last year of the mortgagee's possession; the total amount due at the time of that payment was only Rs. 2,800 which was reduced by it to Rs. 2,650, and the interest had no time to amount to Rs. 150 more by the date of the suit.

It seems to have been assumed that the plaintiff is entitled to all the penalties for default set out in the bond. Continuing to assume that, the account would stand as follows. In January, 1915, the interest payable was at 9 per cent. on the whole sum, that is Rs. 126. For the second year it would be at 9 per cent. on Rs. 1,200 and at 24 per cent. on Rs. 326, and thereafter at 24 per cent. on the whole sum due. At the end of the fourth year, the total shown by the account would be Rs. 3,128, but by the rule of damdupat not more than Rs. 2,800 would be due, and that would be reduced to Rs. 2,650 by the payment of Rs. 150. Similarly in June of each of the next seven years, that is up to a month before the institution of the suit, the amount due would be brought down to Rs. 2,800 by the rule of damdupat and then to Rs. 2,650 by the payment of Rs. 150.

But the assumption that the plaintiff is entitled to the full higher rate of interest, under s. 73 or s. 74 of the Contract Act, has been made without any consideration whatever. If nothing extra is allowed, that is, if the interest is calculated all through at 9 per cent. the amount due in June, 1925, was Rs. 1,936-3-6, never having reached damdupat at all. If we call the interest between the date of the last payment and the institution of the suit Rs. 13-12-6, which is approximately correct, the amount due when the suit was filed would be Rs. 1,950.

But the plaintiff is certainly entitled to some compensation for the defendant's failure to perform the contract, and raising the interest on default from 9 per cent. to 12 per cent. is by no means excessive for that purpose. That, however, would make the amount due in June 1925 Rs. 2,818-12-0, and the result is the same as if the rate was 24 per cent. Allowing Rs. 25 as interest for the month after the last payment, we get Rs. 2,675 due at the date of the suit.

It is in many cases a hardship arising out of the rule of damdupat that the plaintiff is deprived of interest after filing his suit, perhaps for years. In this case, however, the plaintiff has only himself to thank for the greater part of the delay. On that account also he will get only five-sevenths of his costs in the first Court from the defendant, and will pay the whole of the rest of the costs of both parties in all three Courts.

The decree of the lower Appellate Court will be modified into one ordering foreclosure in default of the payment by the 31st of January, 1928, of Rs. 2,675 plus five-sevenths of the costs incurred by the plaintiff in the first Court minus the whole of the costs of the defendant in the two Appellate Courts and two-sevenths of her costs in the first Court. The Pleader's fee in this Court will be fifty rupees.

A. N. A.

Decree modified.

(1) 32 Ind. Cas. 231; 12 N. L. R. 1.

*The head-note in 12 N. L. R. 1.—[Ed.]

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 558 OF 1925.

September 30, 1927.

Present.—Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

KALURAM AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—
APPELLANTS
versus

GAJASA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92, prov. 6—Oral evidence—Construction of document—Evidence as to intention of parties—Admissibility of oral evidence to prove sale to be mortgage.

Under s. 92 of the Evidence Act extraneous evidence as to the negotiations which led up to a contract is not admissible to vary the true construction of a document. Nor is oral evidence admissible for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the parties. [p. 203, col. 2.]

Durga Prasad Singh v. Rajendra Narayan Bagchi (7) and Balkishen Das v. W. F. Legge (9), followed.

Under proviso 6 to s. 92 of the Evidence Act, evidence of circumstances surrounding a document is admissible only for the purpose of throwing light on its meaning and it is not permissible to consider such surrounding circumstances with a view of holding that a document is different in its nature from what it actually purports to be, e. g., for holding that a document, which on the face of it was a sale-deed, was intended to operate as a mortgage. [ibid.]

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Nimar, dated the 21st September, 1925, in Civil Appeal No. 60 of 1925.

Messrs. A. V. Khare and W. B. Pendharkar, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. B. Gokhale, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff sues to recover certain fields sold to him by the defendants by a sale-deed dated the 27th July, 1923. Execution was not denied, but it was pleaded that on the same day it was agreed between the parties that on defendants' re-paying the amount advanced with interest to the plaintiff, the plaintiff would execute a re-conveyance of the property mentioned in the sale-deed. A chitthi dated the 27th July, 1923, has been filed by the defendants. It was further contended that the value of the property sold by the sale-deed is more than the price paid for it, and that the sale-deed was executed under undue influence, the defendants being allowed to remain in possession of the property. The plaintiff on his side alleged that possession of the property was delivered to him and that the defendants took the land back afterwards.

The case was tried on the following issues:—

'1. Whether the plaintiff had agreed to re-convey the property in suit to the defendants as alleged in para. 4 of the latter's written statement?

(a) Whether oral evidence to prove the alleged agreement is admissible?

(b) Did plaintiff execute the chitthi dated 27th July, 1923?

(c) What was the market value of the property at the time of the sale in favour of the plaintiff?

2. Whether defendants delivered possession of the property to the plaintiff and the latter was subsequently dispossessed as alleged?

3. Whether the defendants executed the sale-deed under undue influence of the plaintiff?

4. Whether the sale in favour of the plaintiff is invalid and he is not entitled to possession of the property?"

A separate finding was come to on issue No. 1 and 1 (a). The Judge found that neither the chitthi was admissible nor could oral evidence be given in support of the allegation that there was an agreement to re-convey. The Judge held that the defendants' case does not come under any of the provisos to s. 92 of the Indian Evidence Act. Though the Judge gave the parties an opportunity to call evidence on the remaining issues no evidence was called. The suit was decreed, and on appeal that decree was confirmed.

The chitthi is rather an extraordinary document. It is not in favour of the defendants. It is said to be written by the plaintiff, but the plaintiff himself states that it is a forgery. The translation of it runs:—

'Salutations to Amirsa son of Jamnsa Fakir Mussalman of Mundi from Gajasa son of Bhikasa Mahajan Khadata of Mundi. Further: As regards the writing that I have got executed by Bhai Kaluram, Deolal (and) Dashrath sons of Onkar Mahajan Khadata of Mundi and got registered, you are the madhyasta (mediator) in the matter. And the land that was put to auction by Kunjilalsa, Motilalsa, Motisa of Mundi and Chunilal son of Kesosa was purchased by me. The amount in that connection was deposited by them; and the dealings between themselves and myself take place, adjuring by Unkarnath. The amount of the bond of Rs. 200, is however, due to me and I shall recover it duly. I shall return all the papers on the very day on which you will ask for them. You will not be affected in any way by your being a mediator. These papers are all worth having used for packets. I have no concern with them: they may leave bread for their children. Mitti Shrawan Badi 2 Sambat 1980, corresponding to 27th July, 1923. Signature, Gajasa (self), by the pen of self. The mortgage-deed is dated 27th July, 1923, by the pen of self, Gajasa, Mundi."

Reliance is placed for the appellants on proviso 2 to s. 92 of the Evidence Act, which runs:—

"The existence of any separate oral agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent, and which is not inconsistent with its terms, may be proved. In considering whether or not this proviso applies, the Court shall have regard to the degree of formality of the document."

Now, assuming that the defendants' story is a true one and that the real contract between the parties was that on re-payment of the money advanced, the land was to be re-conveyed, it cannot be denied that the deed of sale is silent on this point, and such an agreement is clearly inconsistent with its terms. That seems to me to put the defendants out of Court. There is no doubt that the chitthi and the deed of sale were both part of the same transaction. I am referred to the Privy Council case of Baijnath Singh v. Vally Mahomed Hajee Abba (1). But in that case it seems that there was no document to which the provisions of proviso 2 could be applied. The other cases quoted are Narasingerji Gujararji v. Paungauti Parthasaradhi (2), Umrao Singh v. Lachhman Singh (3), Jhanda Singh v. Wahidudin (4), Gujarmal Ramlal v. Sitaram Arjun (5) and Harkisandas Bhagwandas v. Bui Dhanu (6). It is contended that under proviso 2 to s. 92 of the Evidence Act existence of a separate document can be proved and that in the present case the chitthi does not contradict the document but shows that there was a condition of re-purchase. The appellant asks that the case be sent back to find out the surrounding circumstances and to discover whether there was a separate agreement for a re-sale.

It has to be noted that except as regards the first half of the 1st issue, for which evidence was shut up, the defendants were given an opportunity of calling evidence on the other issues framed, and it is entirely their own fault if no evidence was adduced; and the only question before me is now as regards the decision on issue No. 1 and 1 (a). It was held in Durga Prasad Singh v. Rajendra Narayan Bagchi (7), that the true construction of a document could not be varied by extraneous evidence as to the negotiations which led up to the contract, and in Martand Trimbak Gadre v. Amritrao Raghojirao Dhamale (8), it was decided that under proviso 6 to s. 92 of the Indian Evidence Act, evidence of circumstances surrounding a document was admissible only for the purpose of throwing light on its meaning and that it would not be permissible to consider the surrounding circumstances with a view of holding that a document, which on the face of it was a sale-deed, was intended to operate as a mortgage.

It seems to me that the principle enunciated in the Privy Council case of Balkishen Das v. W. F. Legge (9), governs the present case. In that case oral evidence for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the parties was held not admissible, being excluded by the enactment in s. 92 of the Evidence Act. The chitthi was produced to prove an oral agreement of the parties, and it seems to me under the authority of Gujarmal Ramlal v. Sitaram Arjun (5), that direct oral evidence of the agreement is not admissible. As to how far evidence of conduct of the parties may be permitted in contradiction or variation of its terms, issues Nos. 1 (b), (c), 2, 3, and 4 relate to these matters, the appellants

(1) 86 Ind. Cas. 332; 3 Rang. 106; A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 75; 48 M. L. J. 339; 2 O. W. N. 279; 27 Bom. L. R. 787; 3 Pat. L. R. 227; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 57; 30 C. W. N. 242 (P. C.).

(2) 82 Ind. Cas. 993; 47 M. 729; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 236; 20 L. W. 701; 10 O. & A. L. R. 1172; 47 M. L. J. 809; (1924) M. W. N. 915; 40 C. L. J. 481; 27 Bom. L. R. 4; 29 C. W. N. 246; 51 I. A. 305; 26 P. L. R. 18; 23 A. L. J. 161; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 41; 1 O. W. N. 684 (P. C.).

(3) 10 Ind. Cas. 285; 33 A. 344; 15 O. W. N. 497; 8 A. L. J. 465; 13 C. L. J. 519; 9 M. L. T. 507; 13 Bom. L. R. 404; 21 M. L. J. 637; 14 O. C. 133; 38 I. A. 104; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 242 (P. C.).

(4) 36 Ind. Cas. 38; 38 A. 570; 31 M. L. J. 750; 21 O. W. N. 66; 20 M. L. T. 529; 14 A. L. J. 1189; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 570; 19 Bom. L. R. 1; 5 L. W. 189; 25 O. L. J. 524; 10 Bur. L. T. 131; 43 I. A. 384 (P. C.).

(5) 3 N. L. R. 19.

(6) 98 Ind. Cas. 634; 50 B. 566; 23 Bom. L. R. 954; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 497 (F. B.).

(7) 21 Ind. Cas. 750; 41 C. 493; 18 O. W. N. 66; (1914) M. W. N. 1; 15 M. L. T. 68; 19 O. L. J. 95; 40 I. A. 223; 26 M. L. J. 25; 16 Bom. L. R. 42 (P. C.).

(8) 93 Ind. Cas. 924; 49 B. 662; 27 Bom. L. R. 951; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 501.

(9) 22 A. 149; 2 Bom. L. R. 523; 27 I. A. 58; 4 C. W. N. 153; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 641; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1130 (P. C.).

deliberately refrained from calling evidence thereon. I do not see why they should now be allowed to call such evidence.

The result is that this appeal fails and is dismissed with costs. The appellants will pay the respondent's costs.

G. R. D.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 590 OF 1926.

October 28, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

RAMCHANDRA NAGOBA—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

RETIRAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

RESPONDENTS.

Basements Act (V of 1882), s. 7 (i)—Natural right of drainage, scope of—Right, whether extends to artificial discharge of water.

The natural right of drainage covers only the right to allow water naturally rising in or falling on land of a naturally higher level to drain off by surface flow along whatever lines the water may find its way to the neighbouring land, but does not include a right to pass the water which has come artificially thereon. [p. 204, col. 2.]

Natural rights in water do not come into existence so long as the water does not flow in defined channels, whether on the surface or under-ground. [ibid.]

There is no obligation, therefore, upon an adjoining land-owner to submit to an artificial discharge of water from his neighbour's land, unless he is bound by an easement to do so. [ibid.]

Arkwright v. Gell (1) and Young v. Bankier Distillery Co. (2), followed.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Bhandara, dated the 12th August, 1926, in Civil Appeal No. 47 of 1925.

Mr. A. V. Khare, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. R. Indurkar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant is a malguzar owning some sir and khudkast land in the village known as Katurli and the defendants, at least some of them, are the malguzars of the same mouza. That mouza is divided into 3 mahals. The dispute relates to the plaintiff's right to drain off the bed of a tank bearing old No. 221-2 new No. 293-1kh situate in shamlat Mahal No. 3 through its sluice A so as to discharge superfluous water remaining after the irrigation of the ghan crops is over, over the defendants' lands lying at the base of the tank, in order that the bed once submerged under water may be utilized by him for sowing kathan crop thereon. The malguzars defendants, who deny the plaintiff's right, are said to have caused obstruction to him in the year 1923 in the exercise of his right to so drain off and discharge the said water, and thus prevented him from using portions of the bed, namely, 2.25 acres out of sir Plot No. 292 of Mahal No. 2 and 2.20 acres of khudkast No. 293-1kh of Mahal No. 3 for the said purpose of sowing kathan crop, and thereby caused him loss to the extent of Rs. 100. Hence this suit for injunction and damages against the malguzars defendants, and others who acted in concert with them.

The defence need not be detailed here, but it is sufficient to state that the case of the malguzars defendants Nos. 1 and 2, is that plaintiff cultivates the bed of the tank as it dries up, i. e., such portions only as get dried in the ordinary course by the water being used up in irrigating the ghan crops, and that he has no right to drain off and discharge the water on their land for drying up the bed.

The first Court held that plaintiff failed to prove any right entitling him to break open the sluice at A for draining off and discharging the superfluous contents of the tank through it, on the defendants' land, in order that the dried bed may be available to him for sowing the kathan crop. The plaintiff's suit was accordingly dismissed and his appeal to the District Judge's Court has also met with the same fate. The District Judge has in a careful judgment dealt with the nature of the right set up by the plaintiff from the point of view of its being either a natural right or a prescriptive right. As to the third position taken up before him, namely, of the right being a customary right he held that plaintiff did not base his right on custom, and that the plea could not, therefore, be entertained for the first time in appeal.

The plaintiff has come up in second appeal to this Court. At the very outset, I must remark that the District Judge was perfectly right in overruling the plaintiff's contentions based on an alleged custom, as he did not plead it specifically in the trial Court. This disposes of grounds Nos. 3 and 8 of this appeal.

As to the right being either a natural one or one acquired by prescription which forms the subject of the rest of the grounds of appeal, I think, the concurrent findings of fact of both the Courts to the effect that plaintiff failed to prove it, is fatal to the success of this appeal. The lower Appellate Court has very carefully discussed the evidence both oral and documentary, and arrived at the conclusion that the evidence on record does not go the length of proving that plaintiff was entitled to open the sluice A in order to free the surface of the bed of the tank represented by Nos. 292 and 293-1kk or even No. 293/2 from the volume or expanse or sheet of superfluous water, with a view to dry it up and utilize the same for sowing the kathan or winter crop therein. From the fact that plaintiff used to cultivate varying areas in different years, that Court was perfectly justified in drawing the inference of fact, which supported the defence, that plaintiff sowed kathan crop only on so much of the bed as got dry and was not under water, about the time of the sowing and, that he did not use to drain off the water of the tank, for that purpose. The stray instances of the exercise of that right in recent years were rightly characterized as insufficient to prove a prescriptive easement to discharge the water of the tank over the defendants' adjoining land. In my opinion the lower Appellate Court's decision on this point of the right not being a prescriptive right is unassailable in second appeal.

Now it remains to be seen whether the alleged right which plaintiff claims to exercise is a natural right. This question has been discussed in para. 6 of the lower Appellate Court's judgment. The species of natural right with which we are concerned here is not the riparian right to the flow of water but the right of drainage. The former relates to the uninterrupted supply, while the latter to the interrupted clearance, of water. The latter right is based on the principle that water if allowed to stand has its own evils. It may damage buildings, stunt the growth of plots and cause decay of things submerged; cf. Katiar's Law of Easements, page 503. Hence the utility of the right of drainage, both for the protection of one's own property from the evil effects of water accumulating there, and for freeing that property, from the expanse or sheet of water coming on it either by a natural stream, or, stored there by artificial means, in order to restore it to its former condition in which it may be again available for its usual and legitimate use. As illustration (j) appended to s. 7 of the Indian Easements Act, would show, this right is confined to water naturally rising in, or, falling on, such land, and not passing in defined channels. The natural right of drainage thus covers only the right to allow rain water falling on land of a naturally higher level to drain off by surface flow along whatever lines the water may find its way to the neighbouring land; but it does not include a right to pass the water which has come artificially thereon.

It may be useful here to point out that the natural rights in water do not come into existence so long as the water does not flow in known and defined channels, whether on the surface, or underground: Peacock's Law of Easements, 3rd Edition, page 291. There are natural rights in natural streams but no natural rights in artificial streams, i. e., streams which flow at the source by the operation of man, as opposed to natural streams which flow by operation of nature and in a defined natural channel. Not only has every land-owner a natural right to collect and retain within the limits of his own land, surface water not flowing in a defined channel, but he has also the right to draw it off on his neighbour's lower lands or put it to whatever use he pleases, agricultural or otherwise. But though there is a natural right of drainage, from higher lands to lower lands, of water flowing in the usual course of nature and in undefined channels, there is no obligation upon an adjoining land-owner to submit to a artificial discharge of water from his neighbour's land, unless he is bound by an easement to do so. Arkwright v. Gell (1), Young v. Bankier Distillery Co., (2), quoted in Peacock's Law of Easements, page 294, 3rd Edition.

The lower Appellate Court has held that in the present case plaintiff has not acquired a prescriptive easement and is not, therefore, entitled to drain the water of the tank by discharging it through sluice A over the land of defendant No. 2 for the specific purpose pleaded by him. Since he wants to put the submerged bed of the tank to a new use, namely, to grow kathan crop, and this use appears to be of only recent growth, the conclusion of the lower Appellate Court appears to be sound and legal. Plaintiff cannot by using artificial means of draining off the surplus water left after irrigation of dhan crops, convert and use the land, which forms the bed of the tank and ought to remain submerged under water, under ordinary condition, i.e., until it gets dry by the natural process of atmospheric evaporation by the action of solar rays, for the different purpose of growing the winter crop thereon. There is nothing to prevent him from using the land if and when it may get dry in the natural course, but if he were to use artificial means in draining off the water and the Courts were to help him to do so, he would be practically imposing a new burden on the defendants' land. I am clearly of opinion that plaintiff as a malguzar or as co-owner of the bodi has no such right under Law. The right he is trying to enforce in this suit could not be called a natural right of drainage, although the same could have been acquired by him as the result of a prescriptive right of easement, which, however, as shown above, he has failed to establish.

(1) (1839) 5 M. & W. 203; 2 H. & H. 17; 8 L. J. Ex. 201; 151 E. R. 87; 52 R. R. 671.

(2) (1893) A. C. 691; 69 L. T. 838; 58 J. P. 100.

For these reasons I uphold the dismissal of the plaintiff's suit for injunction and damages. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

G. R. D.

Appeal dismissed.

A. N. A.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 58-B OF 1926.

June 16, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Hallifax, A. J. C.

GOVIND AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—

APPELLANTS

versus

MALKARJUNAPPA AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Interest—Rule of damdupat, meaning of.

Under the rule of damdupat interest ceases to run altogether when it equals the principal. The rule does not mean that the amount of interest that may be recovered at any one time shall not exceed the principal and that the excess that may remain may still be recovered, though not at that time. [p. 206, col. 1.]

Dhondu v. Narayan (1) and Sukalal v. Bapu Sakharam (2), referred to.

Appeal against the decree of the Sub-Judge, First Class, Amraoti, dated the 30th June, 1926, in Civil Suit No. 52 of 1925.

Sir H. S. Gour, Kt., and Mr. M. B. Marathe, for the Appellants.

Messrs. K. G. Deshpande and R. R. Jayavant, R. B., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The question in this case is one of the meaning of the rule of damdupat by which the parties are bound. The suit rested on a mortgage for Rs. 5,000 executed on the 25th of September, 1914. The only payment was one of Rs. 4,865 made on the 16th of October, 1925. On the 16th of December of that year, that is two months later, the plaintiffs filed the present suit, in which they claimed a decree for Rs. 10,000, asserting that by that time more than Rs. 12,000 appeared due at the foot of the account.

In the plaint it is stated that by the account the amount due to the plaintiffs on the 16th of October, 1925, was Rs. 17,633 which the payment of Rs. 4,865 on that day reduced to Rs. 12,768. By adding interest to that, the amount due on the date of the suit, strictly according to account, would be about Rs. 13,456, though it is stated to be slightly less. Anyhow it is more than Rs. 10,000, and the plaintiffs claimed a decree for that sum only.

It was held in the lower Court that the amount due on the mortgage on the 16th of October, 1925, was, by the operation of the rule mentioned, only Rs. 10,000, and this was reduced to Rs. 5,135 by the payment made on that day. A decree was accordingly given for foreclosure on the 30th of December, 1926, in default of the payment by that date of Rs. 5,135 with interest thereon from the 16th of October, 1925. The total amounted to Rs. 6,585-5-0 and the plaintiffs have appealed, contending that they are entitled to get Rs. 10,000.

The texts on which the rule is based are cited in Dhondu v. Narayan (1) decided by the Bombay High Court in 1863 and in the judgment of the same Court in Sukalal v. Bapu Sakharam (2) thirty-six years later, and they seem to leave no doubt about the matter. The interpretation suggested for the appellants is not easy to understand; it seems to be that the amount of interest that may be recovered at any one time shall not exceed the principal, but that any excess there may be according to the account shall still be recoverable, though not at that time. Such an interpretation reduces the rule to a nullity, in addition to being directly contradictory of the words of the texts, which say that when the interest is equal to the principal, it "ceases" (Gautam) or "stops" (Katyayana).

(1) 1 B. H. C. R. 47.

(2) 24 B. 305; 2 Bom. L. R. 18; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 738.

The appellants themselves admit that if the respondents had paid Rs. 10,000 instead of a little less than Rs. 5,000 in October, 1925, the whole debt would have been wiped out, that is, that the amount due for interest on that day was Rs. 5,000 and no more. They have made the same admission in claiming no more than Rs. 10,000 in their suit; if, as they contend, a sum of Rs. 7,768 still remained due as interest after the payment in October, 1925, (though they were not allowed to recover it at that time), then there would still be more than Rs. 8,000 due to them as interest after the decree they claimed had been satisfied.

Another proof of the impossibility of the suggested interpretation will be found in an attempt to answer the question of the length of the period to be allowed between two recoveries of interest. If only interest equal to the principal can be recovered at one time, but the excess shown in the account is still recoverable later, how soon can that be done? Can it be done the next day or must there be an interval of a week or a month or a year, or need the interval be no more than a minute or two? The plaintiffs themselves left an interval of exactly two months between the payment and the suit.

The two contentions raised in a cross-objection by the respondents were expressly abandoned in this Court, and as the amount decreed in the lower Court has already been paid, it is not necessary to extend the time allowed for redemption. The appeal will accordingly be dismissed and the appellants will be ordered to pay all the costs with the exception of those incurred in connection with the cross-objection. The Pleader's fee in the appeal will be Rs. 350. There will be none for the cross-objection.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 64 OF 1927.

August 19, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Hallifax, A. J. C.
SECRETARY OF STATE (G. I. P. Ry.

Co.)—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus

NANDALAL—PLAINTIFF—NON-

APPLICANT.

Practice—Precedents—Rulings of High Court to which a Court is not subordinate, whether binding—Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 75—Goods charged at lower rates—Re-calculation at higher rates on destination when allowable.

The conclusions in any judgment of the Privy Council or in a judgment of the High Court to which a Court is subordinate, which is officially published must be accepted as correct by the subordinate Court but a conclusion in any other judgment, taken by itself and apart from the reasons for it, is not even relevant and much less is it to be accepted blindly, though the judgment will usually be of the greatest use as an exposition of the reasons for coming to the same conclusion. [p. 207, col. 1.]

If a Railway Company intentionally carries goods to their destination at owner's risk at a lower rate in spite of a general rule of the Company under which such goods can be carried only at Railway risk and at a higher rate, they are not entitled to charge the higher rate at the destination as if the goods had been carried at Railway risk under the rule. [p. 208, col. 2.]

Chunni Lal v. Nizam's Guaranteed State Ry. Co. (1), Alla-ud-din v. G. I. P. Ry. Co. (2) and B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co. v. Budh Sen Pusp Chand (3), discussed.

Application for revision of the decree of the Small Cause Court, Hushangabad, dated the 22nd December, 1926, in Civil Suit No. 763 of 1926.

Mr. W. B. Pendharkar, for the Applicant.

Mr. N. R. Alekar, for the Non-Applicant.

ORDER.—On the 25th of March, 1925, the first plaintiff, who opposes this application for revision, consigned a quantity of charcoal at the Byaora Station on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway for conveyance to Byculla on the same Railway. The Station Master informed him that the charcoal could be sent at what is called the "Q. rate", which in this case is a wagon-rate and worked out at Rs. 126. That is a reduced rate, and goods sent under it are carried at "owner's risk". As a matter of fact, however, charcoal had not been allowed to be booked at that Station at the wagon-rate since 1923; it could be sent only at the "First Class rate" or maund-rate, which entailed its going at "Railway risk."

On arrival at Byculla the charcoal was weighed and the freight was re-calculated at the maund-rate, with the result that the proper charge was found to be Rs. 305-7 in excess of the Rs. 126 paid at Byacra. This the plaintiff paid after some delay, which resulted in a further charge of Rs. 11 for demurrage. He then filed the "suit out of which these proceedings have arisen in the Small Cause Court, claiming a refund of the Rs. 316-7-0 he had paid, with interest. He was given a decree for the Rs. 370 he claimed and the defendant Company has applied for revision of the judgment.

The learned Judge of the Small Cause Court has taken the usual short cut of deciding the case according to "rulings", that is to say he has not decided at all. The conclusions in any judgment of the Privy Council or in a judgment of this Court which is officially published must be accepted as correct. A conclusion in any other judgment, taken by itself and apart from the reasons for it, is not even relevant, and much less is it to be accepted blindly, though the judgment will usually be of the greatest use as an exposition of reasons for coming to the same conclusion. Of the five judgments which the learned Judge mentions, only two are to be found in the Indian Law Reports, and only one gives reasons for the view taken.

The contract between the parties is embodied in two documents which are on the file, one executed by each of them. The first is a Consignment Note signed by the sender. In it he requests the Company to receive the goods specified by him and to send them to a certain Station. At the bottom of the document these words are printed. "N.B. The attention of the Sender or the Deliverer of the goods is invited to the principal terms and conditions applying to the carriage of goods by Railway, as set forth in the public notice printed on the back of the Railway Receipt."

The other document, which is the counter-part of the Consignment Note, is the Railway Receipt executed by the Company. It is an acknowledgment of the receipt of the goods, a statement of the sum paid by the consignor and the way in which that sum has been calculated, and an agreement to convey them to the destination stated and deliver them as directed, subject to certain conditions. A few of these are printed at the bottom of the front of the sheet, and among them are the words, underlined for emphasis: "Special attention is drawn to the notes on the back, which form a legal contract". On the back is a statement that the Railway Company gives public notice of eleven different matters of which the sixth is as follows.

"The Railway have the right of re-measurement, re-weighment, re-classification and re-calculation of rates, terminals and other charges at the place of destination, and of collecting, before the goods are delivered, any amount that may have been omitted or undercharged."

The plaintiff then undoubtedly did agree that the Railway Company was entitled to re-calculate the rates at Byculla, and that he would have to pay any amount that was then found to have been undercharged or allow the Company to realise it by selling the goods. It has been suggested on his behalf in this Court that the calculation at Byculla could only be made on the same basis as that at Byacra, for the sole purpose of discovering arithmetical errors in it; it could not be made on a different basis or at different rates. To limit the meaning of the word in that way would hardly be possible even if it stood alone, but it is quite impossible when it stands alongside the word "re-classification", nor with that limitation would the words "re-measurement" and "re-weighment" have much meaning.

In Chunni Lal v. Nizam's Guaranteed State Ry. Co. (1) Stanley, C. J., said that in his opinion the exacting of maundage instead of wagon-rates in circumstances similar to those of this case could not be considered to be covered by any of the words "re-measurement, re-weighment, re-calculation or re-classification of rates." This is a casual remark at the end of the judgment, not a part of the basis of the decision of the case, and for the reasons stated I am unable, with all respect, to concur in the opinion expressed.

Three Allahabad cases have been cited in support of the plaintiff's contention that the Station Master as the Company's agent having once agreed, by mistake or otherwise, to carry his goods at the wagon-rate, the Company could not go back on the contract and charge the maund-rate. They are Chunni Lal v. Nizam's Guaranteed State Ry. Co. (1), Alla-ud-din v. G. I.

(1) 29 A. 223; 2 M. L. T. 42; A. W. N. (1907) 21; A. L. J. 80.

P. Ry., Co. (2) and B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co. v. Budh Sen Pusp Chand (3). The last two merely follow the first, which was decided by a Full Bench in 1906, and they carry the matter no further. In all the three cases the basis of the decision was that the right of re-calculation of rates was not reserved to the Company by the written contract, but by a separate rule, of which notice was given to all persons who wished to send goods by the Railway.

On those facts there can be no doubt of the correctness of the decision in all three cases that, as the original contract was to carry the goods at the lower rate, the Company was not entitled to charge the higher rate by virtue only of their rule. But it is equally beyond doubt that in this case the sixth item printed on the back of the Railway Receipt was a part of the original contract, not a separate rule. That contract was that the Company would carry the goods for Rs. 126 or such greater sum as might be found due on re-classification or re-calculation according to the rates that should have been charged under the Company's rules, and that the plaintiff would pay any excess that might be so found due or allow the Company to sell his goods to realise it.

But there is the further consideration that the Company itself intended to carry the goods at "owner's risk" and not at "Railway risk"; that is to say, if the goods had been lost in transit, the Company would have refused to pay the difference between the damages and the higher rate, but would have pleaded that the sending of the goods at "owner's risk" was a part of the original contract, for which the consignor had received consideration in the reduction of the rate. That this would have been done as a matter of course is not denied, and anyhow it is an inevitable finding of fact, based on the common course of the conduct of Railway Companies in such circumstances.

The course of conduct which s. 114 of the Evidence Act calls "common" can be only that which is most common in the experience of the Judge who has to decide the point. Now at least two cases have occurred within my own experience in which goods, booked mistakenly at "owner's risk" as here, were lost in transit, and the plea was taken by the owner that the extra charge for "Railway risk" ought to be deducted from the damages that would be due to him if they had been booked at the higher rate and the balance paid to him. In each case the plea was successfully taken by the Company, (which in one if not both was the defendant Company here) that the contract was to carry the goods at "owner's risk".

If it were denied that this plea would have been taken in the present case, if the goods had been lost or damaged on the journey, the denial would be met by reference to the nature of the pleas taken by other Railway Companies in East Indian Ry. Co. v. Ram Lakhan Ram (4), Agent, Bengal Nagpur Ry. v. Behari Lal Dutt (5) and Radhe Lal v. East Indian Ry. Co. (6) and by this Company in Deorao v. G. I. P. Ry. Co. (7). No reprobation of the taking of such pleas is implied in this reference to them; they are mentioned as further proof of the certainty that if the goods had been lost in this case the defendant Company would have pleaded that they were carried at "owner's risk."

It is proved then that the Company itself intended to carry the goods at "owner's risk," in spite of their general rule to the contrary, and so accepted the agreement made by the Station Master to carry them at the lower rate for that consideration. The lower rate was, therefore, a part of the original contract, and the re-calculation at Byculla had accordingly to be made at that rate, so that the amount paid at Byaora was correct. As the Company intended to insist on the goods being at "owner's risk" if any damage or loss did occur on the journey, the contract with the consignor suggested by the claim for the higher rate the risk had ended is in effect: "Heds I win, tails you lose."

The decision of the lower Court is correct, though the reasons for it are not. The application for revision is rejected and the Company is ordered to pay the plaintiff thirty rupees as his costs in this Court.

G. R. D.

A. N. A.

Application rejected.

(4) 78 Ind. Cas. 312; 3 Pat. 230; (1924) Pat. 9; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 37; 6 P. L. T. 415.

(5) 90 Ind. Cas. 426; 29 C. W. N. 614; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 716; 52 C. 783.

(6) 90 Ind. Cas. 680; 5 Pat. 128; 7 P. L. T. 57; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 40.

(7) 14 Ind. Cas. 684; 8 N. L. R. 34.

(2) 34 Ind. Cas. 104; 14 A. L. J. 494.

(3) 79 Ind. Cas. 562; 46 A. 55; 21 A. L. J. 830; 2 O. & A. L. R. 1074; A. I. R. 1924 All. 150.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 249 OF 1926.

September 16, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.

THE OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE & THE PUNJAB NATIONAL BANK, LTD.

—PLAINTIFFS

versus

ABDUL HUSSAIN—DEFENDANT.

Mortgage—Lease by mortgagor—Payment of rent in advance—Sale of mortgaged property by mortgagee—Auction-purchaser's right to recover rent from date of sale—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 50.

A lessee from a mortgagor cannot resist a suit for ejectment at the instance of an auction-purchaser from a prior mortgagee or refuse to pay rent to him which has accrued due since the purchase on the ground that it has been paid to the mortgagor in advance. In order to be entitled to the benefit of s. 50 of the Transfer of Property Act, the tenant must pay rent as rent and must not pay rent in advance which in the circumstances would be a mere loan to the mortgagor. [p. 209, col. 2.]

Madan Mohun Singh v. Raj Kishori Kumari (2), Kiran Chandra Bose v. Dutt & Co. (3) and Tiloke Chand Surana v. Beattie & Co. (4), relied upon.

Mr. Dingomal Narainsingh, for the Plaintiffs.

ORDER.—This is a suit for a declaration that a certain lease executed by the Firm of Adamji Jafferji & Sons, in favour of the defendant is void, inter alia, on the following grounds:—

(a) that it was without consideration;
(b) that it was executed by that firm in favour of one of their relatives at a time when that firm was not in insolvent circumstances and the lease was a fraud on the creditors;

(c) that the property having been mortgaged to the Punjab National Bank, the lease was inoperative as against their rights; and

(d) that a sum of Rs. 36,000 alleged to have been paid as rent in advance for three years was in fact never paid.

An injunction has been sought restraining the defendant from recovering rents of the property from the date of suit and a prayer requiring the defendant to render accounts of the rents recovered by him. It appears that the Punjab National Bank have obtained a final decree on their mortgage, but have not been able to bring the property to sale in consequence of an injunction issued in Suit No. 1020 of 1924 filed by some of the relatives of the mortgagors claiming an interest in the mortgaged property. At their instance, however, the Court appointed Mr. Castellino as Receiver of the property to collect rents pending such sale. Both Mr. Castellino and the Punjab National Bank joined together in instituting this suit, and in this suit, again Mr. Castellino was appointed as Receiver to collect rents of the property subsequent to the institution of the present suit. The Firm of Adamji Jafferji and its managing proprietor Issaji have been adjudicated as insolvents and the Official Assignee in whom their estate has vested has been substituted as Receiver in place of Mr. Castellino.

The defendant has failed to appear. Mr. Fatehchand who appeared for him asked for an adjournment on the ground that the defendant had gone to Colombo to recruit his health, and on his application being disallowed he stated that he had no instructions. The suit has, therefore, proceeded ex parte.

The points at issue have been greatly simplified by two facts, first, that the lease has expired, and secondly, that the plaintiffs have limited their claim only to such rent as has been recovered by the Receiver appointed in this suit. The only question, therefore, is whether this rent should be held by the Receiver for the benefit of the mortgagee and the alleged co-sharers of the mortgagor or such of them as is held entitled to it or should it be paid over to the defendant.

Now, whatever doubt may exist as to the question whether the mortgagor possesses any larger powers of leasing under the Indian Law, than under the English Law [see the observations of Jenkins, C. J., in Bal Makund Ruiya v. Mati Lal Burman (1)], it is well settled that a lessee cannot resist a suit for ejectment at the instance of an auction-purchaser from a prior mortgagee or refuse to pay rent which has accrued due since the purchase on the ground that it has been paid to the mortgagor in advance. See Madan Mohun Singh v. Raj Kishori Kumari (2), Kiran Chandra Bose v. Dutt & Co. (3), Tiloke Chand Surana v. Beattie & Co. (4). As observed by Rankin, J., in the last

(1) 32 Ind. Cas. 195; 20 C. W. N. 350.

(2) 39 Ind. Cas. 182; 17 C. L. J. 384; 21 C. W. N. 88.

(3) 85 Ind. Cas. 522; 29 C. W. N. 94; 40 C. L. J. 500; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 251.

(4) 94 Ind. Cas. 538; 29 C. W. N. 953; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 204.

cited case in order to get the benefit of the protection of s. 50 of the Transfer of Property Act the tenant must pay rent as rent and must not pay rent in advance which in the circumstances is a mere loan to the mortgagor.

In the present case it cannot for a moment be disputed that the property should ordinarily have been sold in execution proceedings much prior to the date on which a Receiver was appointed and that it has not been so done only in consequence of the injunction operating on the mortgagees, and the appointment of a Receiver by way of equitable relief is for the benefit of the mortgagee in the first suit. It is also abundantly clear that the value of the property as a whole is much less than the mortgage claim. Under the circumstances it is inequitable that the defendant should be able to resist the recovery of the rent by the Receiver or claim an interest therein. Furthermore there is no proof in the present case that the defendant has paid any rent in advance. He has failed to appear and offered no evidence, and it is hardly likely that he could have paid any money.

I, therefore, pass a decree in favour of the plaintiffs declaring that the defendant has no claim to the rents realized or realizable after the date of the appointment of the Receiver in this suit.

I also allow costs of the suit to the plaintiffs as against the defendant.

P. B. A.

A. N. A.

Suit decreed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL
No. 39 OF 1925.

September 26, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Percival, J. C., and
Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.
NECHALDAS—APPELLANT

versus

OFFICIAL RECEIVER—RESPONDENT.

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 54—Onus of proof.

In applications under s. 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the onus is, in the first instance, on the Official Receiver to prove that the dominant or the substantial or effective, though not necessarily the sole motive which the insolvent had in view was to prefer a particular creditor. But the onus is shifted on to the creditor or transferee to prove the contrary where the insolvent has made the payment or transfer of property, as the case may be, in discharge of an old debt, and on the eve of bankruptcy. And where the reason of such payment or transfer remains unexplained it is competent for the Court to hold that a prima facie case of fraudulent preference has been established and to act on it. [p. 210, col. 2; p. 211, col. 1.]

Official Receiver v. Kewalmal Ajumal (1), relied upon.

Appeal against the judgment of Mr. Kennedy, J. C., dated the 16th April, 1925, in Judicial Miscellaneous No. 469 of 1922, Insolvency No. 23 of 1921.

Mr. Dingomal Narainsing, for the Appellant.

Mr. Tolasing K. Advani, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against the decision of the learned Judicial Commissioner, Mr. Kennedy, setting aside a transfer by way of sale of certain immoveable property made by the insolvents in favour of their uncle.

Now it is well settled that in applications under s. 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the onus is, in the first instance, on the Official Receiver to prove that the dominant or the substantial or effective, though not necessarily the sole motive which the insolvent had in view was to prefer a particular creditor. But this onus is shifted on to the creditor or transferee to prove the contrary where the insolvent has made the payment or transfer of property as the case may be in discharge of an old debt, and on the eve of bankruptcy. And where the reason of such payment or transfer remains unexplained it is competent for the Court to hold that a prima facie case of fraudulent preference has been established and to act on it: Official Receiver v. Kewmal Ajumal (1).

In this case, there is clear evidence that the transfer was made by the insolvents on the eve of their bankruptcy, and the consideration for the transfer was an old debt. It appears that the insolvent carried on business as piece goods merchant and also entered into extensive speculative transactions in sugar, cotton and other commodities. They had indented for piece goods worth several lakhs of rupees through different importing firms. The goods had arrived and were lying with the importing firms at the risk of the insolvents and under their lien. The exchange had considerably fallen prior to December, 1920 and with it the price of piecegoods had gone down considerably. The estimated loss payable to one of the importing firms, namely, Messrs. James Finlay & Co., was Rs. 98,000 and that payable to another firm, namely, Messrs. Khan Khan & Co., was about Rs. 40,000. The insolvent Ramchand has admitted this in his deposition.

It would also appear that the insolvents suffered heavy losses in cotton, sugar and other commodities. The total loss on sugar for January and February vaidas was Rs. 81,000. It is a matter of common knowledge that before the arrival of sugar and about the time when shipments are made, speculators like the insolvent enter into covering contracts and are liable to pay the loss or receive the profit resulting from such contracts though the amount of loss or profit is actually payable on the date when sugar arrives. The insolvents have not prepared a statement showing when they made the covering contracts. It may fairly be assumed that a good part of this loss of Rs. 81,000 was ascertained long prior to the transfer of property to the appellant. Reading the evidence of Ramchand insolvent as a whole, we have no doubt in our minds that at the trial it was more or less conceded that the transfer was made by the insolvents on the eve of their bankruptcy. To a certain extent this fact accounts for the fact that the potamels have not been prepared up to now; though so ordered by the learned Judicial Commissioner.

Even if we were to exclude from our consideration the losses on sugar we think that there was sufficient material on the record for the learned Judge to hold that the insolvents had transferred the property in dispute on the eve of their bankruptcy. Under the circumstances, the onus was shifted on to the appellant to prove that the transfer was a bona fide transfer. This onus has in no way been discharged and we have no hesitation in dismissing the appeal with costs.

P. B. A.

Appeal dismissed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 8 OF 1926.

September 2, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Percival, J. C., and Mr. Aston, A. J. C.

MAHOMED KASSIM—APPELLANT
versus

NATHO BHANO AND ANOTHER—
RESPONDENTS.

Co-owners—Adverse possession—Mere exclusive possession, effect of—Khojas, law applicable to.

In the case of tenants-in-common the possession of one owner, even though exclusive, is possession of all, and acts of ownership, even though exclusive, are not evidence of de-seizin. A tenant-in-common cannot claim adverse possession unless it is clear that he has repudiated the co-tenant's rights by acts of ouster or disclaimer or by putting forward an adverse title. [p. 212, col. 2]

Jogindra Nath Roy v. Baladeo Das (3), Balaram Guria v. Syama Charan Mondal (4) and Hukam Kaur v. Bihari Lal (5), relied upon.

The principles of Hindu Law relating to joint family are not applicable to Khojas; it applies only with regard to questions of succession and inheritance. [p. 213, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, Additional Judicial Commissioner of Sind, in Suit No. 684 of 1921, dated the 21st October, 1925.

Mr. Kimatrai Bhojraj, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. A. Kikla, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the judgment and decree of the learned Additional Judicial Commissioner of Sind who dismissed with costs a suit filed by Mahomed Kassim a Khoja Muhammadan living in Karachi against his nephew Natho Bhano and his sister-in-law Devikibai in which he prayed for partion of certain property which he alleged to be Khoja joint family property.

(1) 93 Ind. Cas. 372; A. I. R. 1926 Sind 123.

It appears that one Kassim, the father of the plaintiff, died on the 5th of October, 1894, leaving two sons, namely, the plaintiff Mahomed Kassim and his brother Bhano. Bhano married Devikibai, the second defendant, and had a son Natho the 1st defendant, who was born in or about 1901. Kassim at his death left a residential house in which Kassim and Bhano were living. The plaintiff at the time of his father's death was in Bombay. The residential house was small and from 1894 until the date of the suit in 1921, the plaintiff appears to have lived elsewhere. From 1894 until his death in about 1907 the residential house was in the occupation of Bhano and from thereafter in the occupation of his son Natho. Evidence was led to show that Kassim at his death left debts to pay. Accordingly to Devikibai the debts amounted to Rs. 2,000. On the other hand, evidence of Ghulam Ali and Noor Mahomed tended to show that the witness Devikibai had very much exaggerated the extent of the debts. Ghulam Ali's evidence was that he had to be paid Rs. 300 to Rs. 400 with interest. This witness was not sure whether the debt was re-paid or not in the lifetime of Kassim. According to Noor Mahomed a debt owing to Mahomed Bhoy a Bombay merchant was fully settled after Kassim's death for Rs. 300 to Rs. 500. The learned Additional Judicial Commissioner was of the opinion that the indebtedness of Kassim was about Rs. 900 or Rs. 1,000.

We see no reason to differ from his finding on this fact and hold that the debts paid by Bhano on Kassim's death amounted to Rs. 950.

With regard to funeral expenses Devikibai's evidence was that they amounted to Rs. 200. The plaintiff stated that Bhano had told him that the funeral expenses were Rs. 100 and had asked him to pay Rs. 50. The learned Additional Judicial Commissioner considered the funeral expenses were about Rs. 200. In view of the tendency to exaggerate the expenses incurred by her late husband, I am of opinion that Rs. 150 should be taken as the extent of the funeral expenses incurred.

It follows Bhano discharged debts and funeral expenses amounting to Rs. 1,000 in all, half of which were payable by the plaintiff.

The learned Additional Judicial Commissioner taking into consideration the fact that the plaintiff made no claim to the property in suit and allowed Bhano and his son Natho to remain in possession, to discharge the debts and to exercise the rights of an exclusive owner lost his rights through the adverse possession of Bhano and Natho. He has relied on the cases of Mirza Shamsher Bahadur v. Munshi Kunj Behari Lal (1), Dharani Kanta Lahiri v. Gabar Ali Khan (2). These cases, however, do not relate to co-sharers as in the present case. So far as the plaintiff and Bhano and Natho are concerned the cases which appear to me more applicable are those referred to in Jogindra Nath Roy v. Baladeo Das (3), Balaram Guria v. Syama Charan Mondal (4) and Hukam Kaur v. Bihari Lal (5) where it was pointed out that in the cases of tenants-in-common the possession of one owner even though exclusive is possession of both and acts of ownership even though exclusive are not evidence of de-seizin. A tenant-in-common cannot claim adverse possession unless it is clear that he has repudiated the co-tenant's rights by acts of ouster or disclaimer or by putting forward an adverse title. In the present case, all that can be urged against the plaintiff was that he allowed his brother and nephew to remain in the residential house, took no steps to pay the debts of his father and took no steps to repair the house or pay any taxes that might be due. Reliance has been placed on a letter written by Bhano to the plaintiff in which Bhano referred to the house as "my house." But the letter itself shows that it was written during the lifetime of Kassim. For Kassim is referred to in the letter as behaving in a very childish manner and while Bhano speaks of plaintiff's wish to come and live in "my house" the letter abounds in references to the house being plaintiff's as well. When it is remembered that the house was scarcely big enough for both brothers to occupy and that Natho was only an infant about 6 years old when his father Bhano died and

(1) 12 C. W. N. 273; 3 M. L. T. 212; 7 C. L. J. 414.

(2) 18 Ind. Cas. 17; 15 Bom. L. R. 445; 13 M. L. T. 185; (1913) M. W. N. 157; 17 C. L. J. 277; 25 M. L. J. 95 (P. C.).

(3) 35 C. 961; 12 C. W. N. 127; 6 C. L. J. 735.

(4) 60 Ind. Cas. 298; 24 C. W. N. 1057; 33 C. L. J. 344.

(5) 15 Ind. Cas. 192; 73 P. W. R. 1912; 110 P. L. R. 1912.

the plaintiff entitled under Muhammadan Law to the custody of his person from the year 1908; when it is also remembered that the plaintiff's name at the date of the suit was shown in the Record of Rights as an owner with Natho, I am of opinion, that it is impossible to hold that there were such acts of ouster or de-seizen or repudiation in the present case as would lead to the inference that the possession of Bhano and also Natho was adverse to that of the plaintiff.

Mr. Kikla has put forward an ingenious argument to the effect that under Hindu Law it is a joint son who inherits from his father and not a separate son. Since the Hindu Law of Succession and Inheritance applies to Khojas, Bhano would have succeeded to the estate of his father Kassim if Bhano had been joint with his father and the plaintiff separate. Mr. Kikla contends that it was, therefore, material to consider whether the plaintiff at the time of his father's death was joint with his father or not. With reference to this argument, it was conceded in the written statement of the defendant that the law of joint family was not applicable to the parties. It is settled law, I think, that the Hindu Law only applies to Khoja Muhammadans with regard to the question of succession and inheritance. The principles of Hindu Law relating to joint family are not applicable to Khojas. And I, therefore, concur in the finding of the learned Additional Judicial Commissioner that the finding on the issue whether the plaintiff was joint or not was unnecessary.

In view of the findings above referred to, the plaintiff, in my opinion, is entitled to a decree for partition subject to his paying a half share of the debts and funeral expenses paid by the deceased Bhano, namely, Rs. 550 in all together with interest at the rate of 3 per cent. from 1895 to date of suit and further interest at the same rate till payment.

In deciding on the amount of interest, I take into consideration the fact that the defendant has been enjoying the property the rental value of which appears to be about Rs. 5 per month.

Each party to bear his own costs in both Courts.

P. B. A.

Decree modified.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 231 OF 1927.

August 9, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.

FIRM OF CHETUMAL BULOHAND—PLAINTIFFS

versus

MESSERS. NOORBHOY JAFFERJI—
DEFENDANTS.

Power-of-attorney—Construction—'Security,' meaning of—Power to transfer 'securities,' whether includes power to endorse promissory notes.

Security is anything that makes the money more assured in its payment or more readily recoverable, as distinguished from a document which is merely evidence of a debt. The word 'security' is not confined to a document which gives a charge on specific property but includes personal securities for money, such as demand promissory notes. [p. 214, col. 1.]

Barry v. Harding (1) and Stirling v. John (2), relied upon.

Power to negotiate 'securities of any description whatever' includes power to endorse on demand promissory notes. [ibid.]

Mr. Srikishendas H. Lulla, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. Dipchand Chandumal, for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit for recovery of a sum of Rs. 5,543-8-0 said to be due on a demand promissory note for Rs. 5,000 executed by the defendants in favour of one Sheikh Ebrahimji son of Sheikh Jiwanji and endorsed on his behalf by his attorney in favour of the plaintiffs.

The claim is resisted on three grounds. In the first place, it is urged that the general power-of-attorney executed by Sheikh Ebrahimji Sheikh Jiwanji in favour of his son contains no express clause empowering the attorney to endorse demand promissory note. The power-of-attorney reads, inter alia, as follows:—

"I do make constitute and appoint.....my true and lawful attorney for me and in my name, on my behalf to negotiate and make sale, dispose of, assign and transfer or cause and procure to be assigned and transferred.....any of the Government promissory notes.....or securities, Bank share or shares in any public company and other stocks, funds, and securities of any description whatsoever now standing in my name or belonging to me or any part or parts thereof respectively."

There can be no doubt that in the power the expression "securities of any description whatsoever" has been used in its widest possible meaning, and is not confined only to charges on moveable or immovable property, but includes personal securities for money. In Stroud's Judicial Dictionary it is said that speaking generally a security is anything that makes the money more assured in its payment or more readily recoverable as distinguished from, e.g., a mere "I.O.U." which is only evidence of a debt. In Barry v. Harding (1) a bequest for securities of money has been held to pass Bills of Exchange, promissory notes and cheques. In Stirling v. John (2) the Court of Appeal held that the taking of post-dated cheque by the plaintiffs in names of nominees was the taking of a "security for money" otherwise than in the money-lender's registered name within s. 2, sub-s. (1) of the Money Lenders' Act, 1900, and it was pointed out that the word "security" was not confined to a document which gave a charge on specific property. The promissory note in question is not a mere "I.O.U." which is only evidence of a debt, but is something more. It contains a promise to pay the amount on demand to the person specified in the note or to his order, and renders the note transferable by endorsement. I have no hesitation in holding that the document in question is "security" within the meaning of the power-of-attorney and that the endorsement made by the attorney was effective.

The second point taken on behalf of the defendants is that there was an account between the defendants and Sheikh Ebrahimji Jiwanji on which a sum of Rs. 10,000 was due by the defendants. It is said that in payment of that sum the defendants executed two promissory notes for Rs. 5,000 each, that they made payments towards both the notes to the extent of about Rs. 2000, that the sum due by them at the date of suit was Rs. 8,000 as principal and that interest was only due by them subsequent to the 1st December, 1926. It is contended on their behalf that the plaintiffs are not holders in due course but nominal transferees from Sheikh Ebrahimji and are bound by all the equities existing between them and Sheikh Ebrahimji, and, therefore, they must sue on both the notes and not only on one. Assuming that these allegations are true, they are no defence to the present suit. The very object of executing two promissory notes was to enable the payee to sue on each of them individually. The defendants admit that a sum far in excess of Rs. 5,000 is due by them and, therefore, so far as the present action is concerned which is on the first of those two notes, they have no answer to this claim. The question now raised by them may possibly arise if the plaintiffs bring an action for the full amount upon the second promissory note. I, therefore, decline to go in that question in the present suit.

The last point urged is that in no case can the plaintiffs recover interest on the promissory notes prior to 1st December, 1926. Without admitting the validity of that contention Mr. Lulla has agreed to give up the interest prior to that date and this question does not, therefore, require any decision.

There will, therefore, be a decree in favour of the plaintiffs for Rs. 5,000 with interest at 6 per cent. per annum from 1st December, 1926, up to payment and costs.

P. B. A.

A. N. A.

Decree accordingly.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 83 OF 1925.
September 2, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Percival, J. C., and
Mr. Aston, A. J. C.

UDHAVDAS—APPELLANT

versus

DEVIDAS AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2 (2), 105, 115, O. XX, rr. 15 to 18—Partnership suit—Preliminary decree—Commissioner appointed to take accounts—Subsequent directions to Commissioner, whether further preliminary decree—Appeal or revision, whether lies.

Directions given to a Commissioner appointed to take accounts, subsequent to the passing of the preliminary decree in a partnership suit, do not constitute a preliminary decree against which an appeal lies but are in the nature of an interlocutory order within the meaning of s. 105, Civil Procedure Code, which could be questioned only in an appeal preferred against the final decree. [p. 215, col. 2.]

Channalswami Rudraswami v. Gangadharappa Baslingappa (3), Bhariendu v. Yaqub Husain (4), Jogodishury Debea v. Kailash Chandra Lahiry (7), Jagmohan Das v. Indar Prasad (5) and Kamini Debi v. Promotho Nath Mookerjee (6), relied upon.

Peary Mohun Mukherjee v. Manohar Mukherjee (1), not followed.

(1) 1 Jo. & Lat. 475; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 313.

(2) (1923) 1 K. B. 557; 92 L. J. K. B. 353; 128 L. T. 560; 67 S. J. 168; 39 T. L. R. 123.

Appeal against an order of the Additional Judicial Commissioner, Karachi.

Mr. G. A. Kikla, for the Appellant.

Mr. Kimatrai Bhojraj, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the order of the learned Additional Judicial Commissioner directing the Official Commissioner to allow credit to the appellants in respect of some partnership goods at the market price at the date of dissolution and some at the cost price.

The order was passed in a partnership suit in which a preliminary decree had been passed referring certain matters to the Official Commissioner. The latter at the request of the parties referred certain question to the Court for directions and the Court under O. XX, r. 17 gave the special directions above referred to.

Mr. Kimatrai for the respondents has raised a preliminary objection that an appeal does not lie.

It is contended by Mr. Kikla for the appellants that the directions given by the learned Additional Judicial Commissioner amounted to a formal expression of an adjudication which conclusively determined the rights of the parties with regard to some of the matters in controversy in the suit, and that the directions, therefore, constituted a decree within the meaning of s. 2, Civil Procedure Code, and that an appeal would lie. Reliance has been placed on the ruling of the Calcutta High Court referred to in Peary Mohun Mukherjee v. Monohar Mukherjee (1). In that case also after a preliminary decree had been passed, the Court gave certain directions with regard to the taking of account and the manner in which they should be taken and it was held by the Calcutta High Court that these directions amounted to a preliminary decree. The Court conceded in that case that the Legislature intended there should ordinarily be one preliminary decree and one final decree in a suit. It, however, observed that there might be exceptions to this rule. Reliance was placed on a ruling of Piggot, J., in Yakub Husain v. Bharat Indo (2). A reference to this case shows that Piggot, J., was not the Judge who decided the case and no ruling such as that referred to can be found in it. The reference was evidently mistaken.

For the respondents, reliance has been placed on the judgment of Hayward, J., in Chammalswami Rudraswami v. Gangadharappa Baslingappa (3), where various sections and orders of the Civil Procedure Code were referred to and the opinion was expressed that s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code must not be interpreted in a literal manner but read in connection with other sections and Orders and in particular with O. XX, rr. 15 to 18, and that if s. 2 is read in the light of the other sections in the Civil Procedure Code, it will be clear that the Legislature intended that there should be one preliminary decree and one final decree in a suit. In Bhartendu v. Yaqub Husain (4) which was a partition suit, the Court also observed that the Code of Civil Procedure contemplates only one preliminary decree in a suit. This was followed in Jagmohan Das v. Indar Prasad (5) where the opinion was expressed that orders to a Commissioner with regard to ascertainment of the value of certain property were merely interlocutory orders preparatory to the making of a final decree. This view was also accepted in Kamini Debi v. Promotho Nath Mookerjee (6) and in Jogodishury Debea v. Kailash Chundra Lahiry (7) a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court held that even an appointment of a Commissioner was an interlocutory order. In Kamini Debi v. Promotho Nath Mookerjee (6) the case above referred to, the opinion was expressed that a final decree ought to achieve the result of the preliminary decree.

If this view is good law and my own view is that it is, it would follow that a preliminary decree ought not only to provide an adjudication of some of the rights of the parties with regard to matters in controversy between them, but also as a general rule provide the means for bringing about a final decree in the suit. I am of opinion that the view adopted in the Bombay, Calcutta and Allahabad cases referred to is strongly supported by the wording of the Civil Procedure Code itself in O. XX, r.

(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 885; 39 B. 339; 16 Bom. L. R. 954.

(4) 18 Ind. Cas. 701; 35 A. 159; 11 A. L. J. 120.

(5) 65 Ind. Cas. 983; 24 O. C. 366.

(6) 27 Ind. Cas. 317; 19 C. W. N. 755; 20 C. L. J. 476.

(7) 24 C. 725; 1 C. W. N. 374; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1152 (F. B.).

(1) 74 Ind. Cas. 373; 27 C. W. N. 989; 38 C. L. J. 5; A. L. R. 1924 Cal. 160.

(2) 16 Ind. Cas. 372; 11 A. L. J. 120.

17, for, if s. 2 were construed literally the subsequent directions as to accounts for which provision is made in O. XX, r. 17 should also be a decree. But in O. XX, r. 17, it is enacted that the Court may either by the decree direct an account to be taken or by a subsequent "order" give special directions. The word there used is "order" and not "decree."

For the reasons above mentioned I am of opinion that Mr. Kimatrai's contention that no appeal lies must be accepted.

Mr. Kikla does not challenge the further contention that since an appeal will lie hereafter under s. 105 no revision application will lie at this stage.

In the circumstances, I am of opinion that this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

P. B. A.
A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUITS NOS. 398 AND 703

OF 1922 AND SUIT NO. 399 OF 1924.

August 12, 1927.

Present:—Mr. De Souza, A. J. C.
BUDHAR PRAGJI AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS

versus

RAHIMTULLA KHAN AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV, of 1882), s. 59—Transfer of Property (Amendment) Acts XXVII of 1926 and X of 1927—"Attestation"—Endorsement by Sub-Registrar of admission of execution, whether amounts to attestation.

A deed of mortgage, which has been attested by only one witness but in which there is an endorsement of the Sub-Registrar (of which judicial notice is to be taken) that the parties including the mortgagor, who were present before him and were duly identified, acknowledged having executed the document, is properly attested within the meaning of s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act read with Act XXVII of 1926 and Act X of 1927. [p. 218, col. 1.]

Radha Mohan Dutt v. Nripendra Nath Nandi (1), relied upon.

Messrs. Dipchand Chandumal and Khanchand Gopaldas, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. G. A. Kikla, for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—These three suits were by consent of parties heard together, the evidence recorded in Suit No. 398 of 1922 has by consent been treated as evidence in all the three suits, and all the three suits will be disposed of by one judgment.

The facts leading to this litigation are somewhat complicated and may shortly be stated as follows:—

One Abdulla Khan son of Manekhan had two sons Rahimtulla Khan and Ahmad who is still a minor and two daughters Mamiabai and Rajoobai. Abdulla Khan was a racket marker at the Sind Club and his son Rahimtulla Khan was for a time employed as a petty clerk at the Karachi Port Trust Office and resigned his clerical post about the end of the year 1916 to devote himself exclusively to the business of carrying out contracts under the P. W. D. For the purpose of obtaining financial accommodation for carrying out these contracts both father and son approached the Firm of Kala Gella and on the 12th October, 1918, they executed a mortgage bond (Ex. 6) in favour of the said Firm of Kala Gella stipulating to open a cash credit account with the firm up to the extent of Rs. 25,000 and as security for the said accommodation they mortgaged three properties (a) plot No. 227 S. S. E-7 Ranchore Lines quarter (b) Plots Nos. 165 and 166 S. S. E-7 Ranchore Lines quarter and (c) Plot No. 4 S. S. E-11 Garden quarter.

The account which had been opened in the name of Rahimtulla Khan was adjusted from time to time and according to the stipulation in the mortgage-bond interest was calculated with six monthly rests. Abdulla Khan died on the 24th December, 1919. But his son Rahimtulla Khan continued to draw on the account after his death and also made payments from time to time. It was found that the overdrafts were considerably in excess of Rs. 25,000 which had been secured by the mortgage (Ex. 6). On the 17th December, 1920, Rahimtulla Khan executed a mortgage (Ex. 8) in favour of the Firm of Kala Gella and one Umishanker Gangaram jointly creating a second mortgage on two of the above properties, viz., plot No. 227 S. S. E-7 Ranchore Lines quarter and plot No. 4 S. S. E-11 Garden quarter. The consideration for the mortgage is recited to be a sum of Rs. 20,000 whereof Rs. 10,000 are entered to the credit of Rahimtulla Khan by the Firm of Kala Gella in his account and the remaining Rs. 10,000 is said to have been advanced by Umiashanker in cash to Rahimtulla Khan and deposited by the latter with Kala Gella to be drawn upon from time to time for purposes of contract business.

Suit No. 398 of 1922 has been filed by Kala Gella on his mortgage (Ex. 6) for the recovery of Rs. 31,251 being Rs. 25,000 the principal amount and the balance interest. To this suit all the heirs of Abdulla Khan including Rahimtulla Khan and Umiashanker Gangaram have been impleaded as co-defendants. Suit No. 703 of 1922 has been filed by Ahmad, a minor son of Abdulla Khan, by his next friend Hanifabai and his two sisters, Maimunabai and Hajubai, for a declaration that the property plot No. 4 sheet E-11 Garden quarter is the joint property of the plaintiffs as heirs of Abdulla Khan and not the exclusive property of Rahimtulla Khan and for an injunction restraining Rahimtulla Khan and Umiashanker from interfering with the possession of the plaintiffs. The third Suit No. 399 of 1924 was filed by Umiashanker on the mortgage (Ex. 8) which was executed in favour of himself and Pragji Kalla jointly for the recovery of a sum of Rs. 33,000 being Rs. 20,000 principal and Rs. 13,000 interest.

In Suit No. 703 of 1922 an interim injunction was issued restraining Umiashanker from bringing the Garden quarter property to sale. At the hearing of the rule nisi a consent order was passed directing that the property in question be sold by Umiashanker as the attorney for Rahimtulla Khan free of all mortgages including the interests if any of Rahimtulla Khan and all the heirs of Abdulla Khan; the sale price of Rs. 30,000 to be paid to Khetsi on behalf of Pragji Kalla who should furnish security to the Nazir for payment of the amount or any part thereof whenever called upon by the Court to do so. The consent order went on to provide that the question whether the whole purchase money, viz., Rs. 30,000 or any portion thereof is to be appropriated towards the first mortgage (Ex. 6) or the second mortgage (Ex. 8) or in any other way is to be decided by the Court at the time of the decree. The parties including the plaintiffs to have the same rights to the application of the above proceeds Rs. 30,000 as they would have had against the property had it not been sold. A similar consent order was passed by consent in Suit No. 398 of 1922.

* * * * *

A technical point was raised by Mr. Kikla who impeached the validity of the mortgage-deed (Ex. 8) on the ground that it was not properly attested as there was only one attesting witness whereas the provisions of s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act require at least two attesting witnesses. The Legislature till recently had not defined 'attestation', and the Courts had held that the two attesting witnesses required under s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act should not only have actually seen the executant executing the document but also should have signed the document after it had been executed in token of attestation. In other words, the attesting witnesses were to have been witnesses to the actual execution and not merely to an admission of execution by the executant. The law has recently been amended by Act XXVII of 1926 which enacts as follows:—

“‘Attested’, in relation to an instrument, means attested by two or more witnesses each of whom has seen the executant sign or affix his mark to the instrument, or has seen some other person sign the instrument in the presence and by the direction of the executant, or has received from the executant a personal acknowledgment of his signature or mark, or of the signature of such other person, and each of whom has signed the instrument in the presence of the executant; but it shall not be necessary that more than one of such witnesses shall have been present at the same time, and no particular form of attestation shall be necessary.”

As doubts arose whether this provision applied to documents executed prior to this enactment a further Amendment Act X of 1927 was enacted which gave a retrospective effect to this definition of attestation.

In the present case it is true that only one witness Nabibux actually witnessed the execution of the mortgage-deed by the mortgagor. And the question arises whether on that account the mortgage-deed is invalid by virtue of s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. There is an endorsement on the document made by the Sub-Registrar that the parties including the mortgagor who were present before him and were duly identified acknowledged having executed the document. In the case of Radha Mohan Dutt v. Nripendra Nath Nandi (1) it has been held by a Bench of the Calcutta High Court that in these circumstances the document must be held to have been properly attested—that in view of the definition of the word 'attested' in the Amendment Act XXVII of 1926 to which a retrospective effect has been given by Act X of 1927 the Sub-Registrar before whom the executant admitted execution of the deed is a good attesting witness—that by Act X of 1927 the definition of the word "attested" in the Amendment Act XXVII of 1926 has been made applicable to transactions (however ancient they may be) that took place before the amendment and to which the Transfer of Property Act is applicable—and that the Courts will take judicial notice of the endorsement by the Sub-Registrar. Following this decision I would hold that the mortgage-deed (Ex. 8) is a validly executed mortgage.

Mr. Kikla raised another point regarding interest which he considered excessive not only because the rate of 18 per cent. was a very high rate but also because the six monthly rests which had been adopted by the mortgagees rendered the total interest exorbitant. But I find that each of the mortgage-deeds executed between the parties specifically provides for a rate of 18 per cent. and for six monthly rests and nothing has been urged by Mr. Kikla which would justify the Court in interfering with the express agreement between the parties.

I accordingly record findings on the issues in Suit No. 398 of 1922 as follows:—

1. In the affirmative.
 2. In the affirmative.
 3. In the affirmative.
 4. In the affirmative.
 5. It was the joint property of Rahimtulla Khan and the heirs of Abdulla Khan.
 6. 21st December 1919.
 7. Not necessary.
 8. Not necessary.
 9. They are liable to the extent of their interest in the property.
 10. Does not arise.
 11. Does not arise.
 12. In the affirmative.
- (1) 31 O. W. N. clx (notes).

13. The amount due on mortgage (Ex. 8) at the date of receipt of purchase money should be calculated and given to Pragji Kalla and Umiashanker in equal shares and the balance, if any, should be paid to Kalla Gella towards his mortgage (Ex. 6).

14. No relief.

15. In the affirmative.

16. Does not arise.

17. Usual preliminary mortgage decree with a direction that the balance remaining from Rs. 30,000 after paying Umiashanker and Kalla Gella under the mortgage (Ex. 8) should be appropriated towards the mortgage and a preliminary decree also to follow for the balance and costs. Liberty to plaintiff to apply for personal decree against defendant No. 1 (a) and against the estate of Abdulla Khan and Rahimtulla Khan.

P. B. A.

Decree accordingly.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 262 of 1927.

October 20, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Aston, A. J. C.
NARAINDAS & Co.—PLAINTIFFS
versus

CHANDIRAM & Co.—DEFENDANTS.

Jurisdiction—Suit on hundi—Endorsement, whether part of cause of action—'Cause of action,' meaning of—Suit on hundi or in the alternative for compensation, maintainability of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 20, O. XXXVII—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), ss. 32, 117 (c).

A suit based on a hundi can be instituted in a Court within whose jurisdiction there was an endorsement of the hundi and payment of the amount thereof to the endorsee after dishonour. [p. 219, col. 1.]

Roghoonath Misser v. Gobindnarain (1), Sobramonian Chetty v. Maung Po Tha (2), Mangamma v. Sathiraju (3), Read v. Brown (4) and Official Receiver v. Naraindas Lotaram (5), relied upon.

A suit claiming in the alternative on the contract contained in a negotiable instrument or for compensation under ss. 32 and 117 (c) of the Negotiable Instruments Act can be maintained, and such a suit can be instituted under the summary procedure provided by O. XXXVII of the Code of Civil Procedure. [p. 219, col. 2.]

"Cause of action" includes all the facts, which the plaintiff has to prove to sustain his action, in fact everything which, if not proved, will give the defendant the right to judgment. [p. 219, col. 1.]

Read v. Brown (4), relied upon.

Mr. Srikishendas H. Lulla, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. Kimatrai Bhojraj, for the Defendants.

ORDER.—By consent the question of jurisdiction has first been considered by the Court. Issue No. 10 is "Has this Court jurisdiction to try the suit?"

In support of his contention that the Court has jurisdiction Mr. Lulla relies on two facts, viz., that Messrs. Naraindas and Co., Karachi, whose partners are the same as the partners of Naraindas and Co., in Lahore, in whose favour the hundi was drawn by the defendants negotiated the hundi at Karachi with the Punjab National Bank and, secondly, that Messrs. Naraindas and Co., after dishonour paid the Punjab National Bank in Karachi the amount of the hundi.

Mr. Lulla has cited Roghoonath Misser v. Gobindnarain (1) to show that an endorsement on a hundi alone within the jurisdiction will suffice to give the Court jurisdiction. Sobramonian Chetty v. Maung Po Tha (2) is to the same effect and so too Mangamma v. Sathiraju (3) which, is a decision of the Madras High Court. Mr. Lulla has also relied on Read v. Brown (4) in which it was held that the words "cause of action" include all the facts which the plaintiff has to prove to sustain his action, in fact, everything which if not proved, will give the defendant the right to judgment and he has drawn my attention to a ruling of this Court in Official Receiver v. Naraindas Lotaram (5) where this Court held that the mere fact that the defendant had been adjudicated insolvent within the jurisdiction of the Court would give that Court jurisdiction to try a suit relating to a debt incurred outside the jurisdiction between parties residing outside the jurisdiction. In the present case the evidence clearly shows, in my opinion, that Messrs. Naraindas and Co. who have the same partners in Karachi as in Lahore and whose Lahore branch is financed by the Karachi branch which is the head branch negotiated the hundi in suit in Karachi with the Punjab National Bank. The Bank credited the current account of the firm with the amount of the hundi less interest and commission. Subsequently, after the dishonour of the hundi in Rawalpindi, the Punjab

National Bank debited Messrs. Naraindas and Co., in Karachi with the amount of the hundi. Under s. 32 of the Negotiable Instruments Act in default of payment on maturity the maker or acceptor is bound to compensate any party to the note or bill for any loss or damage sustained by him and caused by such default. Under s. 117 of the same Act an indorser, who being liable, has paid the amount due on the Bill of Exchange, is entitled to the amount so paid with interest at six per cent. per annum from the date of payment until tender or realization together with all expenses caused by the dishonour and payment.

In the present case Messrs. Naraindas and Co. had originally endorsed the hundi in blank when they negotiated it, and the Punjab National Bank after debiting the current account of Messrs. Naraindas and Co., (who at the time had a sufficient sum, to their credit to pay the amount debited), returned the dishonoured hundi to the plaintiffs. It seems to me that the plaintiffs could, had they chosen, have availed themselves of the provisions of s. 78 read with s. 82, cl. (c) of the Negotiable Instruments Act and sued the defendant on the hundi, which had not been honoured. But this did not, in my opinion, prevent them from availing themselves of their right to sue for compensation under s. 32 and under s. 117, cl. (c) and I am not aware of any objection to their having sued in the alternative on the contract contained in the negotiable instrument and for compensation, and to have brought this suit under the Summary Chapter. It was believed at one time that the Summary Chapter was only applicable to the simplest form of suits on negotiable instruments but the later amendment was introduced in order to remove this impression.

Taking all the circumstances into consideration, it seems to me clear that a part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of this Court, since, the hundi was endorsed within the jurisdiction, and payment was made after default to the Punjab National Bank within the jurisdiction and the issue must, in my opinion, be answered in the affirmative and I hold accordingly.

Plaintiffs to have costs of this issue.

P. B. A.

A. N. A.

Order accordingly.

(1) 22 O. 451; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 301.
 (2) 11 Ind. Cas. 851; 4 Bur. L. T. 183.
 (3) 37 Ind. Cas. 681; 31 M. L. J. 816; 5 L. W. 246.
 (4) (1889) 22 Q. B. D. 128; 58 L. J. Q. B. 120; 60 L. T. 250; 37 W. R. 131.
 (5) 89 Ind. Cas. 493; 20 S. L. R. 209; A. I. R. 1926 Sind 31.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION MISCELLANEOUS
CASE No. 253 OF 1926.

March 29, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.
Messrs. DONALD GRAHAM & Co.—
RESPONDENTS I

versus

MESSRS. BASANTRAM JHINGAN—
RESPONDENTS II.

Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 19—Suit disputing factum or validity of contract—Reference relating to payment of loss during pendency of suit, if competent—Notice regarding appointment of arbitrator issued in new name of one of the parties to reference—Reference and award in old name, validity of.

The institution of a suit by one of the parties to a contract for sale of goods disputing the factum or validity of the contract does not bar disputes regarding payment of the loss which has accrued on re-sale of the goods being referred to arbitration under the submission clause of the contract, nor is it a bar to the arbitrators proceeding with the reference, the matters referred to the arbitrators not being the same as those forming the subject-matter of the action; and it is not necessary to obtain an order staying such suit before proceeding with the arbitration. [p. 220, col. 2; p. 221, col. 1.]

Jai Narain-Babulal v. Narain Das-Jani Mal (1) and Monro v. Bognor Urban Council (2), relied upon.

Where a contract was entered into in the name of a party and since then there was a mere change in that name and the notice calling upon the opposite party to appoint his arbitrator was given in the new name but the reference and the award were in the old name in which the contract was made:

Held, that this did not invalidate the award, especially as the party receiving the notice was not misled on account of the change of name. [p. 221, col. 2.]

Mr. Tolasing Khushalsing, for Respondents I.

Mr. Javhermal Vilaitrai, for Respondents II.

ORDER.—This is an application by one Basantram Jhingan, proprietor of respondents II to have the award obtained by respondents I against respondents II set aside.

The first and the main ground urged on his behalf is that respondents I could not go to arbitration during the pendency of a suit filed by him in the Multan Court in respect of the same goods unless that suit was stayed.

In order to appreciate fully the nature of this objection, it is necessary to refer to the facts leading up to the disputes between the parties.

It appears that on December 7, 1923, respondents II signed two contracts in favour of respondents I for purchase of 35 cases mulls Nos. 593 and 594 Exs. D & E of February to April 1924 shipments. On arrival they took delivery of 21 cases but not of the remaining fourteen cases. On receiving a notice from respondents I that they would proceed to sell the fourteen cases and enforce payment of the loss resulting therefrom by arbitration in terms of the submission clause contained in the contracts, the applicant forestalled respondents I by instituting a suit in the Sub-Civil Court, Multan, for a declaration that the alleged contracts were mere offers which were not binding on him and had been cancelled by him and that the respondents I had no right to sell the goods on his account. He asked for a perpetual injunction restraining respondents II from auctioning the goods at his risk. In the plaint respondents I were described as Graham Trading Co., Ltd., which is the name in which respondents I are at present carrying on their business having formed themselves into a Limited Company. It is not clear from the record if a temporary injunction was issued to the respondents I restraining them from selling the goods at the risk of the respondents II or that it was served before the sale. Respondents I have sold the goods. They, however, refrained from going to arbitration for a while and applied to the Multan Court for stay of the suit under s. 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act. Being subsequently advised that the Multan suit was no bar to their going to arbitration, they called upon respondents II to nominate their arbitrator and on their failure to do so proceeded, in accordance with the submission clause, to appoint both the arbitrators and obtained an ex parte award which is being objected to.

Now, this is not the first case of its kind that has been filed in the Punjab Courts by up-country merchants who buy goods from Karachi firms.

The point now in issue is covered by the decision of the Punjab High Court in Jai Narain Babulal v. Narain Das-Jani Mal (1) where, on the construction of a submission clause identically the same as the present one, it was held that the institution of a suit disputing the factum or validity of the contract containing the submission clause was no bar to the arbitrators proceeding with the reference, the matters referred to the arbitrators not being the same as those which are the subject-matter of the action, and that there is, therefore, no encroachment by the arbitrators upon the jurisdiction of the Court. Reliance was placed on the case of Monro v. Bognor Urban Council (2) which distinguishes the earlier case of Doleman v. Ossett Corporation (3). It was, therefore, in no way obligatory for respondents I to await the disposal of their application under s. 19 of the Arbitration Act before proceeding to arbitration. It was open to the applicant to go to arbitration without prejudice to his rights under the suit. If he refused to go to arbitration, he did so at his risk. I hold that the pendency of the suit as framed by the applicant was no bar to the reference and award.

(1) 69 Ind. Cas. 585; 3 Lah. 296; A. J. R. 1922 Lah. 369.

The second objection pressed on behalf of the applicant is that stated in para. 6 of his application, which is as follows:—

"That the agreement to refer (i.e., the submission clause) and the 'actual reference to arbitration' are not between the same parties, hence neither the reference nor the award are binding on this respondent".

Now, it appears that at the time when the two contracts were made, respondents I carried on business in the name of Messrs. Donald, Graham & Co. After the goods arrived, they changed their name into "Messrs. Graham's Trading Co., Ltd." The whole of the correspondence as to non-delivery of the goods was, therefore, carried on by the Manager of respondents II in the name of Graham Trading Co., but when the reference was being signed, the Manager very rightly signed it in the name of Messrs. Donald, Graham & Co., and the award has also been made in the same name. It would, therefore, appear that the contracts containing the submission clause, the reference to arbitration and the award are all between the same contracting parties, namely, Donald, Graham & Co., on the one hand, and Basant Ram or Basant Ram's firm on the other. The objection as raised in para. 6, therefore, fails. Mr. Javhermal has attempted to argue that as the correspondence was carried on in the name of Graham Trading Co., Ltd., the reference and the award should also have been made in that name. I am afraid I cannot allow him to blow hot and cold in this manner or to urge grounds which were not stated in his objections at the proper time. Apart from this, I have dealt with a similar point in Jurisdiction Miscellaneous Case No. 120 of 1926 (Messrs. The Graham Trading Co. v. Messrs. Santoksing Rughbarsing) where I have shown that the identity of the two firms, namely, Messrs. Donald, Graham & Co., and Graham Trading Co., Ltd., is the same, and as observed by me in that case, before the applicant could succeed to have the reference set aside he should prove that he was misled in any way by the notice calling upon him to appoint an arbitrator, having been signed in the name of Messrs. Graham Trading Co., Ltd., and that he would have appointed his own arbitrator if the notice had been sent to him in the old firm name. Not only has the applicant not ventured into the witness-box to give any evidence on that point, but he has himself filed a suit in the new name treating the two firms as identical.

Mr. Javhermal has given up all other objections.

I, therefore, reject the application of Basant Ram Jhingan with costs. The award to stand filed, and the order granting stay of execution to stand discharged.

P. B. A.

A. N. A.

Award to stand filed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS JUDICIAL APPLICATION No. 527 OF 1922.

November 18, 1926.

Present :—Mr. D'Souza, A. J. C.

RAJMAL TRILOKCHAND—APPLICANT
versus

FIRM OF ISHERDAS-KISHENCHAND

—NON-APPLICANT.

Partnership—Joint Hindu family—Partnership conducted by one co-parcener—All co-parceners, whether partners—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 239—Signing plaints and other documents as managing proprietor, whether proof of partnership.

The co-parceners of a joint Hindu family are not necessarily partners in a firm of which one of the co-parceners is interested merely because they are co-parceners. They cannot be held to be partners unless there is evidence to show that they agreed to combine

(2) (1915) 3 K. B. 167; 84 L. J. K. B. 1091; 112 L. T. 989; 79 J. P. 286; 13 L. G. R. 431; 59 S. J. 348.

(3) (1912) 3 K. B. 257; 81 L. J. K. B. 1092; 167 L. T. 581; 76 J. P. 457; 19 L. G. R. 915.

their property, labour or skill and share the profits or losses of the concern. [p. 222, col. 1.]

Vadilal Lallubhai v. Shah Khushal Dalpatram (1), Sawanmal Pinanmal v. Pinanmal Danmal (2) and Trustees of the firm of Motharam Dowlatram v. Pahlajrai Gopaldas (3), referred to.

The fact that a person filed suits in the name of the firm and signed process sheets in its name as managing proprietor does not necessarily lead to the inference that he is a partner inasmuch as even salaried managers in a firm often conduct legal proceedings and sign documents for the firm in their own names signing as managing proprietors. [p. 222, col. 2; p. 223, col. 1.]

Mr. Tahirram Maniram, for the Applicant.

Mr. Fatehchand Asudamal, for the Non-Applicant.

ORDER.—This is an application under O. XXI, r. 50, Civil Procedure Code, for leave to execute an award decree obtained by the plaintiffs against Isherdas, Beharilal and Gulzarilal, sons of one Uttamchand, on the ground that they were partners in the Firm of Isherdas-Kishenchand.

The application is resisted by the opponents on the ground that they had no interest in the partnership business and that the real partners in the Firm of Isherdas-Kishenchand were their father Uttamchand and one Kishenchand.

It appears that Uttamchand had three sons: the present opponents. It is undisputed that Uttamchand himself was a partner with Kishenchand in the firm against whom the award decree was obtained. The question here is whether Uttamchand's sons are liable under the decree as being members of the firm.

The allegation of the plaintiffs is that the opponents were co-partners with Uttamchand in an undivided Hindu family. This is denied on behalf of the opponents who contend that Uttamchand had divided the interest from his sons as early as 12 years ago. Be it as it may, the rule of the law is well settled that the co-parceners of a joint Hindu family are not necessarily partners in a firm in which one of the co-parceners is interested merely because they are co-parceners. It is necessary to show that the co-parceners alleged to be partners agreed to combine their property, labour and skill and share the profits or losses in the concern as required by s. 239, Indian Contract Act. It is unnecessary to quote authorities for this proposition which is well settled. I need only refer to Vadilal Lallubhai v. Shah Khushal Dalpatram (1) and two rulings of this Court, Sawanmal Pinanmal v. Pinanmal Danmal (2) and Trustees of the firm of Motharam Dowlatram v. Pahlajrai Gopaldas (3).

The plaintiffs in this case state that the three sons of Uttamchand agreed to form a partnership with their father in the manner suggested. The learned Pleader for the plaintiffs points to the fact that the firm traded under the name and style of Isherdas-Kishenchand as indicating that the sons of Uttamchand must have had interest in the firm. He also points to the fact that Isherdas sued in the name of the firm as managing proprietor thereof in the plaints Ex. 6 and Ex. 12, and signed the process sheets Exs. 7 and 8, as managing proprietor of the firm as convincing proofs that Isherdas not only held himself out to be a managing proprietor, but was actually one of the proprietors of the firm.

The learned Pleader further argues that it was not till July, 1925, after the death of Uttamchand, that the idea suggested itself to the opponents to disclaim liability on the ground of their not being partners in the firm, and with this aim in view they concocted the partnership deed Ex. 13 and allowed the suit, the plaint of which is Ex. 6, to be dismissed on that ground as would appear from the judgment Ex. 15.

It is, however, not accurate to say that the opponents kept this plea up their sleeve till July, 1925, because we find that in the objections, Ex. 10 filed by Isherdas on 17th March, 1925, showing cause why execution should not proceed against him, Isherdas expressly says that the decree has been passed, not against him, but against the Firm of Isherdas-Kishenchand, and that he was not the manager of the Firm of Isherdas-Kishenchand nor was any summons issued to him, nor had he received any summons nor was he served. The theory advanced by the learned Pleader, that the plea was invented after the death of Uttamchand and the partnership deed Ex. 13, fabricated in support of this plea, seems to me to be too elaborate involving the putting together a considerable mass of perjured evidence to be readily accepted. The fact that Isherdas filed suits in the name of the Firm of Isherdas-Kishenchand and signed process sheets also in the name of the firm would not necessarily lead to the inference that he was a partner. It is well-known that the salaried managers in a firm not infrequently conduct legal proceedings and sign documents in Court in their own names going to the extent of describing themselves as managing proprietors. But this misdescription would not be sufficient to fasten upon them the character of the partners.

(2) 2 S. L. R. 13.

(3) 80 Ind. Cas. 141; A. I. R. 1925 Sind. 159.

(1) 27 B. 157; 4 Bom. L. R. 988.

The burden of proof to show that the opponents in this case were partners in the Firm of Isherdas-Kishenchand lies upon the plaintiffs. I do not think that that burden has been sufficiently discharged.

But I do not see how the plaintiffs would be adversely affected by my finding that the opponents are not shown to be partners; admittedly Uttamchand was one of the partners and his estate in the hands of his sons, the opponents, would be liable for his debts.

The present application must be dismissed against opponents Nos. 1 to 3. No order as to costs.

A. N. A.

Application dismissed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION APPLICATION No. 149 OF 1925.

September 29, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Percival, J. C., and Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.
ADAMALI—APPLICANT

versus

ABDULALI AND ANOTHER—OPONENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 149, Sch. II, paras. 3, 17, 20—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), ss. 6, 19, Sch. II, Art. 1 (b)—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 158—Rules of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind, Ch. VI, r. 5—Reference in pending suit—Award—Objection in writing—Court-fee—Expiry of ten days prescribed by Limitation Act—Court-fee, whether can be received thereafter.

Written objections to an award passed on a reference made through the Court in a pending suit must bear the Court-fee prescribed under Art. 1 (b) of Sch. II of the Court Fees Act. [p. 223, col. 2.]

(The practice to the contrary prevalent in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind disapproved.)

Gopalji Kallianji v. Chhaganlal Vithalji (1), distinguished.

Under the provisions of s. 149 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court can receive Court-fee stamp required to be affixed to an application to set aside an award, even after the expiry of the ten days prescribed by Art. 158 of Sch. I of the Limitation Act. [p. 224, col. 2.]

Application to revise an order of the Judge of the Small Causes Court, Karachi, dated the 10th September, 1925, in Suit No. 1198 of 1924.

Mr. Pahlajsing B. Advani, for the Applicant.

Messrs. Javhermal Vilaitrai and Santadas Idanmal, for the Opponents.

JUDGMENT.—Two points have been raised in this case; first that the learned Judge of the Court of Small Causes, Karachi, was in error in holding that the written objections to an award made in a pending suit require a Court-fee stamp of eight-annas under Art. 1 (b) of Sch. II of the Court Fees Act and secondly, that he was in error in refusing to grant an extension of time to supply the necessary Court-fee in the particular circumstances of this case.

In support of the first point considerable reliance has been placed on the uniform practice of this Court extending to several years according to which no Court-fee has been insisted upon in similar cases. It has been strenuously argued that though cl. (16) of Sch. II of the Code of Civil Procedure requires that the party objecting to an award shall make an application to the Court in that behalf such application may be oral. In this connection our attention has been invited to cls. (1), (17) and (20) of the same Schedule which expressly provide for applications referred to therein being made in writing and it is argued that a party who reduces to writing his objections in support of an oral application which is permissible under cl. (16) should not be penalised by being made to pay a Court-fee. Reference has also been made to the case of Gopalji Kallianji v. Chhaganlal Vithalji (1).

We have given our careful consideration to all these arguments and are of the opinion that the practice of this Court cannot be supported.

Section 6 of the Court Fees Act is imperative. It requires that in all Courts except in the High Courts in the exercise of their original jurisdiction and in the Presidency Small Causes Court no document of any of the kinds specified as chargeable in the First and Second Schedules to that Act shall be filed, exhibited or recorded or shall be received or furnished by any public officer unless in respect of such document there be paid a fee of an amount not less than that indicated by either of the said Schedules as the proper fee for such document.

(1) 63 Ind. Cas. 929; 45 B. 1071; 23 Bom. L. R. 614.

Written objections to an award are indubitably a document filed in Court. Such a document is nothing more or nothing less than an application to the Court to set aside the award on certain specified grounds. It, therefore, falls within the purview of Art. 1 (b) of the Second Schedule of the Court Fees Act and, prima facie, it cannot be filed or exhibited or made use of in any manner unless the prescribed fee of eight annas is paid on it.

The question whether an application to set aside an award may be made orally or not, therefore, hardly arises. Where an application is not made orally but in writing it must be stamped. It clearly does not fall within the exceptions provided by s. 19 of the Court Fees Act which, inter alia, exempt a written statement in a pending suit but make no mention whatsoever of written objections to an award. The argument that the objector should not be penalised for doing the work of the Court loses all its force when it is borne in mind that in the first place the Legislature has considered it necessary to exempt written statements filed in lieu of oral defences stated to the Court but has made no similar exception in the case of written objections to an award. In the next place a person objecting to an award is allowed ten days' time to apply for setting it aside. He is at liberty to make his application on any day he likes provided he does it within the time allowed. If his suit is not fixed for hearing on the day on which he wishes to apply, he cannot do so unless he puts in his application in writing and in that event he must necessarily apply the requisite stamp. It would also appear that the rules of the Court permit oral applications being made only in certain formal matters. Rule 5 of Chap. VI reads as follows: "Motions may be made orally only in matters of routine or indulgence or in matters wholly within the discretion of the Judge or Judges either in civil or criminal matters."

An application to set aside an award is hardly a matter which would fall within the purview of this rule. Before an award can be set aside the opposite side must be served with a notice of the application. Such applications must, therefore, necessarily be in writing.

The case of Gopalji Kallianji v. Chhaganlal Vithalji (1) cited by the learned Pleader has no bearing to the point in issue. That case turns on the question as to the form in which an application for setting aside an award should be made. It is to be noticed that that case was pending on the Original Side of the High Court and an affidavit had been filed within the time allowed disclosing the objections to the award. The point argued was whether any further application was necessary. As the suit was pending on the Original Side of the High Court s. 6 of the Court Fees Act had no application. The question what Court-fee, if any, should have been affixed on the affidavit under the rules of the High Court was neither raised nor decided. For the above reasons we are of opinion that the decision of the learned Judge below though contrary to the practice prevailing in this Court was right and should be maintained and that the practice of this Court which is not in accordance with law should be discontinued forthwith.

On the second question we think, however, that the learned Judge below was in error. He seems to have laboured under the impression that he had no power to extend the time for supplying the necessary Court-fee stamp after the expiry of ten days contemplated by Art. 158 of the Limitation Act. In this he was clearly mistaken. Section 149 of the Code of Civil Procedure expressly empowers the Court to receive at any stage of the proceedings the whole or any part of Court-fee payable on any document presented to the Court and declares that on payment of the requisite fee the document in question shall have the same force and effect as if such fee had been paid in the first instance. In the present case not only was there no definite order by the Court requiring the applicant to supply the necessary Court-fee or to supply it within a fixed time but the applicant was clearly misled by the practice of this Court in not complying with the order, if any, in that behalf.

In the circumstances we allow this application and order that the necessary Court-fee be supplied to the Registrar of this Court within three days of this date. On that being done we order that the learned Judge should take back the case on his file and dispose of the objections according to law. Costs to be costs in the cause.

P. B. A.,

Application allowed.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

May 27, 1927.

Present.—Viscount Sumner, Lord Atkinson and Lord Carson.M. A. SASSOON AND SONS LIMITED—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

THE INTERNATIONAL BANKING CORPORATION—PLAINTIFFS—

RESPONDENTS.

Banker and customer—Bills of Exchange—Sale of goods by shipment—Arrangement by purchaser with Bank for confirmed credit—Documents forwarded by vendor to another Bank for discounting—Duty of discounting Bank—Delivery of Bills of Lading to purchaser—Dishonour of Bills of Exchange at maturity—Rights of discounting Bank against vendor—Forwarding of draft D/A, meaning and effect of—Contracts—Construction of printed contracts—Principal and agent—Ambiguous direction—Reasonable interpretation—Agent's liability.

Messrs. Sassoon and Co. entered into a contract with Messrs. Knowles and Co. for the sale of 25 bales of gunnies by certain shipments. After the first purchase and sale had been concluded Messrs. Knowles and Co. entered into an agreement with the Eastern Bank by which the latter undertook to make advances against negotiable bills drawn by Messrs. Sassoon and Co. on Messrs. Knowles and Co. provided the Bills of Lading were presented to the Bank in complete sets. The Bank further agreed with Messrs. Sassoon and Co. to give confirmed credit. Messrs. Sassoon and Co. made a contract with the International Banking Corporation for the discounting of approved Bills of Exchange drawn at three months' sight D/A (delivery against acceptance). In pursuance of this agreement Messrs. Sassoon and Co. forwarded to the Banking Corporation drafts drawn by them on Messrs. Knowles and Co. against shipment with the shipping documents and the letter of advice of confirmed credit from the Eastern Bank, with a requisition for discounting the drafts and passing the amounts to their credit. The drafts were presented for acceptance to Messrs. Knowles and Co. and the documents of title were handed over to them on acceptance. Messrs. Knowles and Co. became bankrupts and the bills were dishonoured at maturity. International Banking Corporation sued Messrs. Sassoon and Co. as drawers for the amounts covered by the bills. The latter contended that in view of the confirmed credit from the Eastern Bank, the Banking Corporation ought to have delivered the Bills of Lading to the Bank and not to Messrs. Knowles and Co., that owing to the misdelivery of the documents they (Messrs. Sassoon and Co.) were deprived of their right to proceed against the Eastern Bank and that consequently they were not liable to the International Banking Corporation:

Held, (1) that as discounters the primary duty of the International Banking Corporation, both to Messrs. Sassoon and Co. and to themselves was so to present the drafts for acceptance as either to get them accepted or to get them dishonoured for lack of acceptance and that the Bank was entitled and bound to follow this instruction; [p. 231, col. 1.]

(2) that as the drafts were for the acceptance of Messrs. Knowles and Co., D/A, the Bank was entitled to deliver the Bills of Lading to them on acceptance; p. 233, col. 1.]

(3) that the primary liability of Messrs. Sassoon and Co., to the Banking Corporation as drawers was not in any way discharged by the conduct of the latter and that the plaintiff was, consequently entitled to recover the amounts due under the bills; [p. 233, col. 1.]

In re Agra and Masterman's Bank (8), distinguished.

Where a person gives an incomplete and ambiguous direction the party directed cannot be blamed if he reasonably interprets and acts upon it. [p. 231, col. 2.]

Ireland v. Livingston (7), referred to.

It is settled law that the effect of deleting words in a printed form of mercantile contract is the same as if the words had never formed part of the print at all. [p. 228, col. 2]

Appeal against the judgment of the High Court of Calcutta (Justice Sir Ewart Greaves, Kt., and Justice Sir George Claus Rankin, Kt.), dated the 11th February, 1926.

Messrs. A. Merriman, K. C., and J. Nissim, for the Appellants.

Sir H. Cunliffe, K. C., and Mr. M. R. Jardine, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Viscount Sumner.—The appellants in this case were sued in the High Court at Calcutta, as drawers of four Bills of Exchange, by the respondents, who discounted them, the bills having been dishonoured at maturity by the acceptors, Messrs. George Knowles and Company, Limited, of London. The decision went against them both at the trial and on appeal, but the High Court granted their certificate for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council.

The appellants are export merchants in Calcutta, and on the 9th August, 1923, they offered two drafts for discount to the respondents, who are bankers there. Two others for the same amounts were sent on the 6th September. The second transaction was a mere transaction of course, following on the first.

The documents were put before Mr. Thompson, the respondent's Manager, and on his approval of them the drafts were discounted. In addition to the two drafts, there were a Bill of Lading for 25 bales of gunnies to be delivered at Dundee and an invoice and mills' specification relating to them. By arrangement, an insurance policy was to be and was produced in England and it need not be further referred to. There was, further, a letter of advice, dated the 18th June, 1923, from the Eastern Bank, Calcutta, to Messrs. Sassoon and Company, and a memorandum from Messrs. Sassoon and Company, containing their request for discount, the amount to be passed to their credit.

This memorandum showed a conversion of the amounts of the two drafts, viz., £696 10s, into rupees at 1s. 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ d., as per Messrs. T. S. Apcar and Company's contract, dated the 11th May, 1923, being the amount for which credit was asked. The drafts were thus described: "For our 3 M/St. D/A drafts 2048 and 2048A on Messrs. George Knowles and Company, Limited, London," and they bore the words "value received for 25 bales gunnies shipped per ss. 'Malancha' to Dundee drawn under L/Agreement No. 237, dated the 30th May, 1923, signed with the Eastern Bank, Limited, London, at per advice dated the 18th June, 1923," but, except as showing the existence of some relevant agreement, with particulars to identify it and connect it with this particular transaction, these words do not carry the present case any further. The Bill of Lading for twenty-five bales of gunnies shipped by J. S. Ezra made the goods deliverable to order, and was dated the 2nd August, and the invoice, dated the 8th August, was an invoice of goods by Messrs. Sassoon and Company for account of Messrs. George Knowles and Company, Limited, for the net amount of £696-10s.

Although in the evidence nothing was specially disclosed as to the relations of Messrs. Sassoon and Company and Messrs. Knowles and Company, the transaction, so far, was of the most ordinary type. The contract with Messrs. Apcar had been made by that firm as exchange brokers between Messrs. Sassoon and Company and the International Banking Corporation. Messrs. Sassoon and Company, having sold the gunnies forward to Messrs. George Knowles and Company, wished to protect themselves against fluctuations in sterling exchange before the shipping date arrived. Accordingly, they at once made a contract, by which they became entitled to discount for their approved drafts later on at the rate current on the day of the contract itself. They were, in a word, content with their profit on the sale, and had no mind to speculate in exchange as well.

On examining the documents put before him, Mr. Thompson apprehended the nature of the transaction above stated quite as fully as was necessary, though Messrs. Knowles and Company and the terms of their purchase contract were unknown to him. Messrs. Apcar's exchange contract was for "approved Bills of Exchange drawn at 3 M/St. D/A on London at the exchange of 1s. 4 $\frac{3}{8}$ d. per rupee," with certain options for shorter or longer terms at rates fractionally higher or lower as specified, and the letter of advice from the Eastern Bank, Calcutta, sufficed, even if Messrs. Sassoon and Company's name had not done so, to secure his approval of the drafts on behalf of the respondent Bank. Accordingly, Mr. Thompson passed on the shipping documents to be examined by his shipping department and, being found in order, they were sent with the discounted drafts to London to be dealt with there. The form in which the International Banking Corporation instructed their London correspondents was, of course, a domestic matter and gave the appellants no further rights. The obligations arising out of the discounting of the drafts under the circumstances of this case were obligations which, as between these parties, arose in Calcutta. As the letter of advice required, the amount and date of this discount transaction were endorsed on it, and stamped with the respondent Bank's name. Messrs. Sassoon and Company got credit for their Rs. 10,326-7-9. On the other hand the respondents' correspondents in London, duly following out their instructions, presented the drafts for acceptance to Messrs. Knowles and Company on the 28th August, and acceptance being duly given, handed over the documents to them. Unfortunately, the acceptances were all dishonoured at maturity, in the case of the first two at the beginning of December. The events relating to the other two drafts sued on were in all respects similar, and do not require to be further mentioned.

On the face of the bill transaction, the respondents were entitled to recourse against Messrs. Sassoon and Company. By their pleadings, the latter contended that pursuant to Messrs. Apcar's exchange contract, the International Banking Corporation purchased the drafts and no longer had the right of recourse against the drawers, that would, prima facie, have belonged to the holder for value; that in view of the existence of a confirmed credit of which the International Banking Corporation had notice, they ought to have delivered the Bills of Lading to the Eastern Bank, Limited, in London, and not to Messrs. George Knowles and Company; that the appellants being precluded by this misdelivery from recovering the price of the gunnies from the Eastern Bank, were accordingly discharged from their liability on the bills to the respondents, and, in the alternative, that, if the respondents' liability for this misdelivery sounded in damages only, the amount of such damage was the same as the amounts of the bills, and could be set off so as to extinguish any liability on the bills. No custom of merchants or bankers as to confirmed credits in connection with documentary bills or otherwise was pleaded, proved, or relied on. At their Lordships' bar the appellants' Counsel did not insist on the contention that the mere negotiation of the drafts pursuant to the exchange brokers' contract was in itself an out-and-out purchase of them by the Banking Corporation without recourse to the drawers in any event, and the question whether the remedy was by way of set off or only of counter claim for damages was not debated before them.

The conclusion of the trial Judge that the transaction disclosed nothing to relieve the drawers from their liability was affirmed by the High Court, the learned Judges holding that the question really turned on the documents, and that whatever assumptions might be made in favour of Messrs. Sassoon and Company as regards their transaction with Messrs. Knowles and Company, the description which they gave of the drafts, unaccompanied by any explanation limiting the effect of D/A as a description, entitled the International Banking Corporation to surrender the Bills of Lading to the acceptors on getting their acceptance, as they did.

The facts are as follows. Messrs. Knowles and Company became known to Messrs. Sassoon and Company as early as September, 1922, and, after some correspondence, a contract was concluded between them on the 11th May, 1923, for twenty-five bales of gunnies per month, to be shipped from July to September. So far as the evidence shows Messrs. Knowles and Company were then in reasonably good credit, nor does it appear that their insolvency was suspected until the time when they dishonoured their first acceptances. They were throughout personally unknown to the International Banking Corporation.

The terms on which Messrs. Knowles and Company from the first proposed to deal and ultimately did deal with Messrs. Sassoon and Company included the following:—the price was c.i.f. U.K., and reimbursement was to be by drafts at ninety days' sight against confirmed credit, to be opened in the sellers' favour upon the conclusion of each contract. After the first purchase and sale had been concluded, the Eastern Bank in London wrote to its branch in Calcutta on the 31st May, 1923, enclosing copies of letters of agreement with that Bank signed by Messrs. George Knowles and Company on the previous day and described as being "in favour of Messrs. Sassoon and Company available to be presented at three months' sight against full shipping documents." While this letter was in the post Messrs. Sassoon and Company cabled to Messrs. Knowles and Company on the 5th June, "Referring to your letters of credit, they must be confirmed irrevocably." Thereupon, on the 19th June, the Eastern Bank in London cabled to its Calcutta branch that the letters of agreement signed by Messrs. Knowles and Company, of which copies had been forwarded, were "now confirmed credit." The communication itself, which had obviously been made by Messrs. Knowles and Company to the Eastern Bank in London between the 5th and 19th June, is not in evidence, but Messrs. Knowles and Company's letter of agreement addressed to the Eastern Bank in London and dated the 30th May, is endorsed by some one in pencil, "Made confirmed credit, 15th June, 1923." It is sufficient to quote from it the following:—

"We hereby authorise and request you and your agents in Calcutta to give banking facilities and accommodation . . . against and/or negotiate on or before 15th October, 1923, any . . . bills . . . not exceeding three months after sight and drawn on us by or endorsed by Messrs. A. Sassoon and Sons, Limited, and . . . we hereby agree duly to accept any such bill or bills for any sum or sums not exceeding in the aggregate £2,080 and to pay the amounts of such bill or bills at maturity.

"The drawers and/or endorsers and/or the holders of such bill or bills will hand over, but merely by way of collateral security, to you Bills of Lading for merchandise . . . and we agree that, in case you consider it necessary, you shall be at liberty to sell . . . any of the said merchandise . . . and apply the net proceeds . . . towards payment of the said bill or bills. . . ."

"It is further agreed that the granting of the said facilities and accommodation and/or the negotiation of any bill or bills above referred to shall be optional, and that this agreement cannot be either revoked or altered in any way except in writing with the express consent of your Bank. . . ."

On this document, which appears to have been headed "Agreement from London No. 2 (with recourse)," no copy was sent to Messrs. Sassoon and Company, though a copy was sent to the Eastern Bank's Calcutta Branch. On the 18th June, however, the Calcutta Branch sent to Messrs. Sassoon and Company a letter of advice, of which the following parts are specially material:—

"We beg to inform you that an advice has reached us from our London office of letter of agreement, No. 237, signed by G. Knowles and Company, Limited, authorising us to negotiate a bill or bills drawn by you on George Knowles and Company. . . ."

"We are informed that Bills of Lading for merchandise, together with the relative invoices and policies . . . will be handed to us. Such Bills of Lading should be presented to us in complete sets, made out 'to order,' blank endorsed and marked by the shipping Company 'freight paid.' . . ."

"We have pleasure in informing you, that we are prepared at our option as usual to make advances against and/or negotiate any bill or bills drawn in compliance with the terms of this letter."

This letter of advice was on a printed form, and after the above words "of this letter," the form proceeded as follows:—

"it being understood that this is not a confirmed Bank credit, and you are in no way released from the ordinary liability of drawers."

These last words from "it being" to "of drawers," were deleted, and after the signature of the Eastern Bank of Calcutta there followed two additions, viz.:—

"Please note that this authority is a confirmed credit."

"When offering drafts for negotiation under this authority, it is imperative that this letter be produced to enable the negotiating Bank to note payments on the back hereof."

On these documents the following observations arise. (1) It was apparently part of the appellants' argument that the deletion of the words in the form "you are in no way released from the ordinary liability of drawers" in combination with the added words, "this authority is a confirmed credit," imports that "you are in some way released from that liability." Their Lordships cannot accept this. There is a good deal of authority, now old, about the effect of deleting words in a printed form of mercantile contract, which it is not now necessary to cite, but they take it to be settled, in such a case as this, that the effect is the same as if the deleted words had never formed part of the print at all. The words expressly added of course, remain to be construed.

(2) The letter of agreement, signed by Messrs. Knowles and Company, contains only the authority given and the promise made by that firm to the Eastern Bank, Limited. So far as the record goes it is not shown how Messrs. Knowles and Company and the Bank arranged that the Bills of Lading should reach the latter in case the drafts were discounted elsewhere, nor is any actual agreement disclosed by which Messrs. Knowles and Company undertook to accept drafts presented by other parties, though no Bills of Lading were tendered. The general effect of the Bank's undertaking and liability may be easily surmised, but their precise terms must have been a matter of express arrangement between these two parties, and the actual undertaking of the Eastern Bank in London, which almost certainly was in writing, was not disclosed.

(3) What the Calcutta Branch of the Eastern Bank conveyed to Messrs. Sassoon and Company in their letter of advice, which was all the information that the latter had about the terms of the agreement between Messrs. Knowles and Company and the Eastern Bank in London, was confined, except for the second addition above set out, to transactions, in which Messrs. Sassoon and Company would send drafts, with documents attached, to the Eastern Bank in Calcutta for discount, and would then hand over to the Bank drafts and shipping documents against payment or credit of the relative sum in rupees. Thence forward the discounting Bank would hold both drafts and Bills of Lading and, in accordance with Messrs. Knowles and Company's letter of agreement, could look after itself.

(4) It is contended that in spite of the words "when offering drafts for negotiation under this authority," which authorise negotiations to the Eastern Bank alone, the succeeding words "to enable the negotiating Bank," convey that the authority advised in the letter of advice extends to transactions with other negotiating Banks, and should not be construed as merely meaning "to enable us when we negotiate the drafts" Even if this be so (and it is a very summary way of converting the terms of a discount offer by one Bank into and undertaking applicable to actual discounts by any other Bank), it does not follow that, if a third party Bank negotiates, all the undertakings and all the dealings referred to in this letter of advice will be or can be made applicable forthwith to such a substituted transaction.

If the drafts had been offered for discount to the Eastern Bank, in Calcutta, or if, by arrangement between Messrs. Knowles and Company and the Eastern Bank, the drafts of Messrs. Sassoon and Company had been drawn on the latter [Chartered Bank of India, Australia & China v. Macfayden (1), Scott v. Barclays Bank Ltd. (2)], the transaction would have been one of a normal type, which has often been explained and illustrated in the decided cases, and it would have completely met all the mercantile necessities which such a transaction has been devised to meet [Guaranty Trust Co. of New York v. Hannay & Co. (3)], except the possibility that the rate of exchange might have moved against Messrs. Sassoon and Company between the 11th May and the 9th August. The negotiation of the drafts with the International Banking Corporation under the circumstances above detailed is as far as reported cases go, a novelty. It is here that the difficulty of this case begins. In the case of Chandanmull Benganey v. National Bank of India, Ltd. (4) some of the drafts mentioned were dealt with in the same way and under similar circumstances, but nothing in the decision throws any light on the legal consequences, which this peculiarity may involve.

According to the evidence on both sides, however, there was nothing extraordinary, still less irregular, in offering drafts, fortified with the letter of advice of the Eastern Bank's confirmed credit, to be discounted by another Bank such as the International Banking Corporation. Mr. Young, an official of the Eastern Bank in London, said that the postscript to the letter of advice meant that the negotiating Bank might be the Eastern Bank or any other Bank, and in this he was not apparently speaking merely of his own view of the wording of the postscript but of banking practice generally, for the plaintiffs' Manager, Mr. Thompson, said frankly that, although the letter of advice "asked for the documents to go to the Eastern Bank, Limited, Calcutta," it was "quite customary for other Banks to negotiate drafts under credits belonging to other Banks," and, in fact, "likelier than otherwise." He said, further, that there was no particular difficulty about his sending the drafts and documents to the Eastern Bank for presentation to Messrs. George Knowles and Company, and that with different shippers he would have done so, but in this case he thought that the credit arrangement had been superseded by Messrs. Sassoon and Company, that for some reason they were deviating from the credit by sending in the bills for discount D/A, that they wanted to allow (sic) these as documents against acceptance, and that he was willing on the strength of their names to discount the drafts on those terms, viz., D/A. Under the terms of the letter of advice, he would have handed the documents to the Eastern Bank and not to Messrs. Knowles and Company, but he thought this credit arrangement had been superseded.

Of this evidence the appellants' Counsel have made much, as they were fully entitled to do, and their Lordships think it right to consider the main question in the case on the footing of these answers, as both the Courts in Calcutta appear to have done. They accordingly put aside certain contentions advanced by the respondents as follows. Neither the letter of agreement nor the letter of advice nor any document, which relates to them, makes them in terms "irrevocable," the term "confirmed" alone

(1) (1895) 64 L. J. Q. B. 367; 15 R. 333; 72 L. T. 428; 43 W. R. 397.

(2) (1923) 2 K. B. 1; 92 L. J. K. B. 772; 129 L. T. 108; 28 Com. Cas. 253; 67 S. J. 456; 39 T. L. R. 198.

(3) (1918) 2 K. B. 623 at p. 660; 87 L. J. K. B. 1223; 119 L. T. 321; 23 Com. Cas. 399; 34 T. L. R. 427.

(4) 79 Ind. Cas. 757; 51 C. 43; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 552.

being used, yet both words were stipulated for by Messrs. Sassoon and Company on the 5th June, 1923. According to Mr. Thompson, the appearance of both words on the credit document is an indispensable formality. It is not easy to see in what respect either word or both of them together would carry the matter further than the word "contract," used in its strict sense, would have done, for apparently a confirmed credit is something, formerly provisional, and now turned into something definite by way of promise, and the word "irrevocable" simply closes the door on any option or locus poenitentiae, and makes the agreement definite and binding—in other words, creates a true contract, which will either be performed or be broken. The trial, however, proceeded on the footing that the credit given in favour of Messrs. Sassoon and Company and referred to in the letter of advice, was in all essentials what Messrs. Sassoon and Company had bargained for, and at their Lordships' bar it was too late to argue the contrary. So, too, without actually holding that the words added to the letter of advice, which refer to "the negotiating Bank," mean that the credit and the advice are in law available to the full to any Bank other than the Eastern Bank of Calcutta, which may discount the drafts mentioned therein, their Lordships will discuss the present case on the footing of the view taken by Mr. Thompson himself, that such was their meaning to the minds of business men.

As the present case is one of first impression, two general observations may be useful. So long as trade is proceeding in its ordinary course without violent fluctuations in prices, and so long as all parties concerned are in good credit, Banks, whose business it is to facilitate trade, can and no doubt do by voluntary arrangements among themselves smooth out small difficulties and ignore informalities, when no serious consequences are likely to result. When, however, a Court of Law is for the first time called upon to fix legal liability, by declaring what the intentions of the parties must be taken to have been, it becomes necessary to consider how an unruffled and unquestioned business would work out, if difficulties were to arise such as would at each step bring out the risks to be run and the responsibilities to be borne by one or other of the respective parties. Suppose a fall in the price of gunnies, which made it important for the buyers to avail themselves of any legal ground open to them for refusing to take up the goods or to meet the bills; suppose a financial crisis, which for the time being seriously involved the reputation of the Bank which had granted the confirmed credit; in either case suppose a discounting house, ignorant, as here, alike of the exact terms of the purchase contract and of the agreement for the confirmed credit; how is the discounting house to know whether it can safely give up the Bills of Lading to the London Bank on the one hand or whether, on the other, it can reckon on acceptance of the drafts only when it has the Bills of Lading available to be handed to the drawee against acceptance? It is to be remembered that, common as it is for the grant of the credit to be made on the terms that the grantors are to be secured by possession of the Bills of Lading, other forms of security are sometimes used, the choice of the form depending on the relations between the two parties concerned and the solvency of the importing firm [see, for example, the terms of the credit in Kronprinsessan Margareta (5) and in Pfehn v. Royal Bank of Liverpool (6).] The legal rule must be one which will fit and make sense of the transaction equally under fair-weather conditions and under foul.

Take again the practical side of the matter. There are many business situations where an offer is made, in which it is hardly possible to ask questions or to go behind the documentary materials put forward by the proposer. Underwriting a slip is one; discounting a trade draft is another. Mr. Thompson, from the documents before him, had to judge whether he would approve or disapprove, whether he would risk taking the documents or risk letting the business go past him. To ask questions, even if there had been any one at hand to answer, might have betrayed either ignorance of his own business or a desire to know too much about his customers'. The exchange memorandum told him quite plainly that the drafts were D/A, which meant "document against acceptance." Here was an instruction as to the use he was to make of Messrs. Sassoon and Company's documents of title. True, it did not say who was to present the documents to the acceptor, but it was evident that, if the letter of advise was right in saying that the Eastern Bank was to have and keep the Bills of Lading, the documents could not be handed by the respondents to Messrs. Knowles and Company against acceptance at all. As discounters, their first duty, both to Messrs. Sassoon and Company and to themselves, was so to present the drafts for acceptance, as either to get them accepted or to get them dishonoured for lack of acceptance. In their Lordships' view, the respondent Bank was entitled and bound to follow this instruction. In face of it, there could be no question of such a misdealing with the drawers' rights by way of security as would afford any answer to their action.

(5) (1921) 1 A. C. 486; 90 L. J. P. 145; 3 P. Cas. 803; 124 L. T. 609; 37 T. L. R. 199.

(6) (1870) 5 Ex. 92; 39 L. J. Ex. 41; 21 L. T. 830; 18 W. R. 463.

Two answers have been attempted in argument. The first is that the drafts were tendered as D/A drafts only to comply with the terms of Messrs. Apar's exchange contract, which fixed a standard rate for D/A drafts and options for drafts on other terms, varying from the standard by fixed fractions. It is said that all Messrs. Sassoon and Company wanted was to get the rupee exchanged at 1s. 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. There is, however, some confusion in this. Messrs. Sassoon and Company wished to get this rate of exchange, and had to claim it under their contract by presenting drafts of such a description as that rate attached to, but the drafts were still described as D/A drafts, and, whatever the object which was immediately in view, D/A drafts they actually were. That these letters meant "documents against acceptance" was common ground, and accordingly some clear reason has to be shown for saying that, in the circumstances of this case, they nevertheless meant documents against the Eastern Bank's acceptance, which, in fact, they had not undertaken to give, or documents to the Eastern Bank against Messrs. Knowles and Company's acceptance of the draft, if they should be willing to give it without receiving the documents. Mr. Moise Sassoon actually answered the question, "Can you explain why D/A was put in the memo?" by saying, "Because the documents were deliverable to, and for acceptance of the Eastern Bank." This was an impossible construction. Equally so is the contention that D/A is a direction merely as to the time when the shipping documents are to be surrendered and not as to the person who is to receive them. Evidence as to the meaning of D/A as a term of art might possibly have gone as far as this, but, as the case stands D/A on this view would be an incomplete and ambiguous direction and the party directed cannot be blamed if it was reasonably interpreted and acted on [Ireland v. Livingston (7).] In any case, it assumes that the discounting Bank is to interfere radically with what is prima facie the right of the accepting consignee on what may be a mere surmise. The drafts were for acceptance of Messrs. Knowles and Company, and if the documents, that is, the shipping documents, were deliverable to the Eastern Bank, then, as far as the International Banking Corporation was concerned, these acceptors would not get any documents in exchange for their acceptance. It hardly appears that on either side there had been much consideration of the rights and obligations arising out of this use of the letter of advise as applicable to a negotiation with the International Banking Corporation.

Accordingly, a second and much more ingenious answer was given to their Lordships. On the faith of the confirmed credit, for which they had stipulated, Messrs. Sassoon and Company proceeded to put the shipment in train to come into the hands of those who might be interested in it in London. This was done by placing the documents in the hands of the International Banking Corporation in Calcutta, with notice that the transaction was backed by a confirmed credit. After this the credit could not be revoked by the Eastern Bank. Merely to hand to a banker a draft styled D/A and a corresponding letter of credit must be deemed in law to tell him that the Bills of Lading are to be handed to the issuer of the letter of credit and not to the acceptor of the draft, and his remedy is to decline to discount, however approved the bill may be as a bill, if he does not like these terms. It is true that Messrs. Sassoon and Company did not bring the terms of the credit to the Corporation's notice, nor did they know them themselves, but this does not matter. They put the Corporation in the position of being able to sue the Eastern Bank in London on the credit in accordance with the principle of In re Agra & Masterman's Bank (8) and on inquiry it would be ascertained, as business experience would have led the Corporation to anticipate, that the condition precedent to the Eastern Bank's obligation to give effect to the credit was the delivery of the Bills of Lading to them. All was really plain sailing. If only the Bills of Lading were given up to the Eastern Bank, somehow or other the drafts would be met either by Messrs. Knowles and Company, if they accepted and paid without getting the consignment or the documents which represented it, or by the Eastern Bank, if they did not. The delivery of the Bills of Lading to the Eastern Bank in London, it was said, became matter of contract between the appellants and the respondents, as the result of the discounting transaction, so that the latter's recourse against the former was suspended and became ineffectual unless and until the Eastern Bank made default. In effect, the respondent Bank was provisionally substituted for Messrs. Sassoon and Company as sureties for the acceptors on the Bills, though this substituted suretyship would itself be defeasible in case of any wrongful failure to pay on the part of the Eastern Bank.

(7) (1872) 5 H. L. 395; 41 L. J. Q. B. 201; 27 L. T. 79.

(8) (1867) 2 Ch. A. 391; 36 L. J. Ch. 222; 16 L. T. 162; 15 W. R. 414.

This argument was properly and indeed indispensably reinforced by the principles, which apply when a surety has secured his secondary liability by placing in the principal creditors' hands security which belongs to himself in the first instance. Here Messrs. Sassoon and Company, having shipped the gunnies under such a form of Bill of Lading as reserved the jus disponendi to themselves until the documents were delivered with their authority to the buyers for the purpose of passing the property, placed these instruments, representing the goods while afloat, in the Banking Corporation's hands, as collateral security giving them a special property in the goods, but remaining available generally for the protection of the sureties to whom they belonged. They also placed within the reach and control of the principal creditors another and still more important security, the commercial pivot of the whole transaction, namely, the confirmed credit of the Eastern Bank, and to this precisely the same rules applied as to the Bills of Lading. If the Banking Corporation entered into the transaction with notice of the existence of a confirmed credit of an ordinary banking character without knowing its exact terms, that was their own affair. They took the risk of its being such that they could comply with them. If for any reason they failed so to deal with the Bills of Lading as to secure to the drawers recourse to the confirmed credit, then, pro tanto, the drawers would be discharged. Between In re Agra & Masterman's Bank (8) on the one hand and Polak v. Everett (9) on the other, the discounting Bank would be quite able to look after themselves.

Their Lordships are unable to give effect to these contentions. The principle of the decision cited is one applicable between the discounting Bank and the Bank which, having established the credit in favour of the acceptor, gives notice urbi et orbi of its willingness to abide by the operation of the credit through the machinery of drafts discounted before acceptance. If the respondents discounted the drafts on the faith of the invitation (if any) contained in the letter of advice, In re Agra & Masterman's Bank case (8) entitled them, if they chose to do so, to sue on the credit agreed by the Eastern Bank with Messrs. Knowles and Company as if they had been parties to it from the beginning. If they had not discounted on the faith of that invitation, the principle would not apply, and Mr. Thompson said clearly in effect, what Messrs. Sassoon and Company can neither complain of nor deny, that for him the name of Sassoon and Company was good enough in this case, and the confirmed credit was accordingly superfluous. Apart from this, however, the principle would only confer a right of action on the International Banking Corporation against the Eastern Bank, if they chose to exercise it, but it would not impose on them a duty towards Messrs. Sassoon and Company, so as to modify the ordinary right of recourse at all events or in any event. It is a matter between the respondent Corporation and the Eastern Bank, not between Messrs. Sassoon and Company and the respondent Corporation.

On the other hand, they think that the letters D/A are a complete answer to the part of the argument, which rests on the obligation of the principal creditor not to waste the surety's security. If the creditor complies with the surety's instructions, there can be no further responsibility. The whole gist of the complaint, as far as the confirmed credit is concerned, is that by not handing the Bills of Lading to the Eastern

(9) (1876) 1 Q. B. D. 669; 46 L. J. Q. B. 218; 35 L. T. 350; 24 W. R. 689.

Bank the respondents failed to satisfy the conditions precedent to their liability and so nullified the confirmed credit. The appellants' description of the drafts as D/A drafts destroys the validity of this complaint. Messrs. Sassoon and Company instructed the respondents to surrender the documents to the acceptors against their acceptance, and this was done. Again, if the obligation of the principal creditor not to deal unreasonably or imprudently with the securities is relied on, the result is the same. All the information given to the respondents by the drawers of the drafts, who, after all, had made their own bargain with the acceptors, pointed to the quite normal intention of giving the buyer of the gunnies control of the goods on the faith of his acceptance to the drafts. This was prima facie the intention, in fact, so far as the information given indicated. If the confirmed credit modified this, it was not for the discounting Bank to make guesses or to run risks, but for the drawers to say what their wishes were. Their Lordships cannot say that the conduct of the International Banking Corporation was unreasonable under the circumstances.

No doubt, as soon as Messrs. Sassoon and Company had got a rupee credit for their sterling drafts at $1s. 4\frac{3}{4}d.$, they thought as a matter of business that they had done with the transaction, and it may be disappointing to merchant shippers to find that it nevertheless remained at their risk. It may be also true that, when the Calcutta Banks fell into a course of business, which may be called a good-natured convenience to merchants or a far-sighted development of legitimate business exactly as you please, it would have been better to have intimated to the trade, that the Banks were not undertaking all the burdens of shippers' transactions, however they might turn out, but this is not the present issue. How proof of a custom of bankers and merchants, applicable to these particular facts, would have affected the decision is a matter on which it is not permissible to speculate. It may also be that the case was not as completely presented at the trial as merchants generally might have desired, but with this their Lordships cannot deal. The appellants are not in a position to show that, when they discounted these drafts, they bargained that the transaction should be without recourse, and in order to qualify their direction, given by the letters D/A, and to limit the respondents' prima facie right of recourse against themselves, they must show some contract with them to that effect, or some breach of contract or of duty on their part, which would have that effect in law. No authority has been produced which enables them to do so, and their Lordships cannot say that any legal principle leads to that conclusion. They will accordingly humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. Sanderson, Lee & Co.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS (SINGAPORE).

November 28, 1927.

Present:—Lord Chancellor, Lord Buckmaster, Lord Carson, Lord Darling and Lord Warrington of Clyffe.

SIME, DARBY AND COMPANY LIMITED—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

THE OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE OF THE ESTATE OF LEE PANG SENG (A BANKRUPT)
—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), s. 56 —Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 54—Singapore Bankruptcy Ordinance, s. 51 (1)—Fraudulent preference—"With a view to prefer"—Question of fact—Dominant motive of debtor—Onus of proof—Transfer to avert criminal prosecution for breach of trust.

The question whether a transfer by a debtor is to be deemed fraudulent and void as against the Official Assignee in the bankruptcy depends on the answer to be given to the question, was the transfer made 'with a view of giving a preference over the other creditors'? [p. 234, col. 1.]

The question to be determined is one of fact, namely, was the dominant motive actuating the debtor in making the transfer a desire to prefer the particular creditor or was it of a different character? As the solution of this question involves an enquiry into the state of a man's mind, and as it must very seldom be the case that there is direct evidence on the point, the decision generally depends on the inference properly to be drawn from the circumstances attending the transfer as established by the evidence. [p. 234, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where the proper inference to draw from the facts is that the dominant motive actuating the debtor was that, in making the transfer to his creditor, he (the debtor) was only doing what he felt himself bound or compelled to do, and where it must have appeared to him that the alternative to handing over was a prosecution for criminal breach of trust, the case is not one of fraudulent preference within the Statute. [p. 237, col. 1.]

When the Official Assignee in the bankruptcy seeks to establish that a transfer by the debtor is void as a fraudulent preference, the onus of proof is on the assignee to show that the case is within the Statute. [p. 234, col. 2.]

When all the circumstances have been ascertained so far as the parties have thought fit to ascertain them, discussion on the question of onus becomes immaterial and the decision must be come to on the whole of the circumstances so ascertained, and the question of onus only becomes important if the circumstances are so ambiguous that a satisfactory conclusion is impossible without resort to it. [p. 234, col. 2.]

Judgment of Lord Dunedin in Robins v. National Trust Co. (1), referred to.

Appeal from a judgment of the Supreme Court of Singapore in its appellate jurisdiction, dated the 10th January, 1927, reversing that of the same Court on its Original Side (Deane, J.), dated the 18th August, 1926.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Warrington of Clyffe.—On the 10th June, 1925, Lee Pang Seng, the assignee of whose estate is the respondent to this appeal, transferred to the appellants, to whom he was largely indebted, a quantity of rubber as security for their debt. He was then unable to pay his debts as they became due from his own money. He was adjudged bankrupt on a petition presented within three months after the date of making the transfer. The question in this appeal is whether the transfer is to be deemed fraudulent and void as against the Official Assignee in the bankruptcy.

In Singapore the matter is regulated by s. 51 (1) of the Bankruptcy Ordinance, which is identical with the provision on the same subject in the English Bankruptcy Act.

The result depends on the answer to be given to the question was the transfer to the appellants made "with a view of giving them a preference over the other creditors"?

There is no doubt about the law; this has long since been settled as regards the effect of the English Statute, and it is common ground that the same principles are applicable to the Ordinance in Singapore.

The question to be determined is one of fact, was the dominant motive actuating the debtor in making the transfer a desire to prefer the particular creditor or was it of a different character? As the solution of this question involves an enquiry into the state of a man's mind, and as it must very seldom be the case that there is direct evidence on the point, the decision generally depends on the inference properly to be drawn from the circumstances attending the transfer as established by the evidence.

A word or two must be said on the onus of proof. In their Lordships' opinion, the onus is on the assignee—he has to show that the case is within the Statute. A good deal was said in argument as to the shifting of the onus at particular points in the development of the case, but when all the circumstances have been ascertained so far as the parties have thought fit to ascertain them, discussion on this point becomes immaterial and the decision must be come to on the whole of the circumstances so ascertained, and the question of onus only becomes important if the circumstances are so ambiguous that a satisfactory conclusion is impossible without resort to it. [See the judgment delivered by Lord Dunedin in Robins v. National Trust Co. (1).]

The action in which the present appeal arises was brought by the respondent against the appellants for the purpose of recovering the goods the subject of the transfer. It was tried by Deane, J., in the Supreme Court of Singapore, who on the 18th August, 1926, gave judgment for the appellants with costs. On the 10th January, 1927, this judgment was reversed in the Supreme Court in its appellate jurisdiction by a majority, Sir James Murison, C. J., dissenting.

At the trial the following facts were established to the satisfaction of the learned Judge.

The appellants are a Company carrying on business as merchants at Singapore, Mr. John Middleton Sime being Chairman of the Board of Directors. They have a high reputation amongst the members of the commercial community in the city.

The debtor was a Chinese merchant carrying on business under the firm name of Chin Seng & Co. The business was managed by another Chinese named Lim Soo Yan. The debtor is a son of Lu Choon Guan, now deceased, who was a share-holder in the appellant Company and a Director thereof. The shares form part of his estate, in which the debtor is interested. Mr. J. M. Sime was on friendly business terms with the father, but, though he knew the son, he had no business relations with him until those which resulted in the present proceedings. In January, 1925, the debtor applied to Mr. Sime for financial assistance. He told him that he was engaged in buying rubber on commission for certain firms in America, and that he wanted advances to enable him to finance these transactions. The business involved no or little risk. The debtor received instructions from the American firm to buy rubber on their behalf. The rubber thus bought in the debtor's name was then shipped to the American purchaser, the amount payable to the debtor was then covered by bills drawn on the American purchaser and discounted by a Bank in Singapore before acceptance, relying, no doubt, on a credit from America. The advances by the appellants were made against each lot of rubber, and the arrangement was that they were to be re-paid within a few days after the receipt of the money from the discounting Bank.

(1) (1927) A. C. 515 & p. 520; 96 L. J. P. C. 84; 43 T. L. R. 213; W. N. (Eng.) 1927 p. 59.

Each transaction was recorded in a letter written by Seng to the appellants. All these letters were in the same form, that of the transaction of the 29th May, 1925, may be set out as an example:—

"Singapore
29th May, 1925.

"Lee Pang Seng Chin Seng & Co.,
General Merchants,

Messrs. Sime, Darby & Co., Ltd.,
Singapore,

"Dear Sirs,

"In consideration of your having advanced me $ 87,887 only, being advance on 93,900lbs para rubber purchased by me and stored at basement, Raffles Chambers, I hereby convey the ownership of the said rubber to you and engage to act as your agent and factor in dealing with and shipping said rubber, re-paying you the amount advanced as soon after the said rubber has been shipped and proceeds of drafts received from negotiating bankers.

"I undertake to keep the said rubber fully insured against fire.

Yours faithfully,
(Sd.) Lee Pang Seng."

Advances amounting to a very large sum were made on the security of letters in the above form, and for some time all went well, the advances being duly re-paid out of the proceeds of the bills, but during May, 1925, considerable delay occurred in the payment of the advances and complaints were from time to time made by the appellants, but they did not then decline to advance further sums, and on the 10th June, 1925, there remained outstanding three advances amounting together to $253,620.06, made respectively on the 29th May, the 5th June and the 9th June. On the evening of the 9th June it came to the knowledge of Mr. Sime that in addition to the business which had been financed by him, the debtor had for some time been speculating in rubber, and Mr. Sime became anxious about his security. He did not, however, then or on the 10th June know more about the actual financial position of the debtor.

On the 10th June he consulted his Company's Solicitors, and as the result wrote the following letter to the debtor:—

"Singapore,
10th June, 1925.

"Messrs. Chin Seng & Co.,
Malacca Street,
Singapore,

"Dear Sirs,

"With reference to the advances made by us to you against your letters of lien dated 29th May, 5th June and 9th June, amounting in all to $253,620.06 as we are advised by our Solicitors that our security is not adequate, we must ask you to let us have your cheque to-day in re-payment of the advances or deliver to us immediately ample security in the form of rubber to cover the advances.

"Yours faithfully,
"Sime, Darby & Co., Ltd.,
"(Sd.) J. M. Sime."

It will be observed that the letter says that it is the Solicitors who advise that the security is not adequate and requires actual delivery of rubber to cover the advances. It must in their Lordships' opinion have conveyed to the recipient that it was in the nature of the security and not in the value of the rubber purported to be covered by it that the inadequacy consisted, and that what was required was actual physical possession of rubber instead of a mere paper lien over rubber remaining in the debtor's possession.

About 4 P.M. on the 10th June the letter was delivered at the debtor's place of business and was read by his Manager, Lim Soo Yan. It is now necessary to state the financial position of the debtor on the 10th June as it was known to himself, though not to Mr. Sime.

There is no doubt he was hopelessly insolvent as the result of speculative purchases of rubber sold by him for future delivery. During the few days preceding the 10th June and on that day he had bought from Chinese merchants large quantities of rubber, which had been delivered at his godown, but had not been paid for. He had on the 10th June after banking hours, drawn and signed six cheques for sums amounting to $92,000. His account was overdrawn and he knew that unless he obtained further credit these cheques, when presented, must be dishonoured and the general collapse of his affairs would ensue. He knew also that in breach of his duty as agent for the appellants he had applied the proceeds of rubber covered by one or other of the letters of lien to his own purposes. Some of the rubber covered by the outstanding letters of lien still remained in store, but a large part of the rubber there was that bought from Chinese merchants and not paid for.

On receiving the letter of the 10th June, Lim Soo Yan rang up the debtor on the telephone and either read the letter to him or told him its contents, asking what he was to do. The answer was there was no alternative but to deliver to Sime, Darby, as he could not pay the money. He told his Manager not to allow them to take more than was necessary, and he asked him whether, if he allowed Mr. Sime to take away the rubber, he would go on advancing. The Manager said he thought he would. Nothing further was said, and the Manager thereupon, on behalf of and in the name of the debtor, wrote to the appellants the following letter:—

"With reference to your letter of even date, as it is not convenient to re-pay you the advances to-day please note that we have given instructions to our storekeeper to deliver to your order sufficient rubber to cover the advances made by you."

Delivery of the rubber began about 5 P.M. and continued during the night until 6 A.M. on the morning of the 11th June, the debtor's Manager attending to see that no more than the proper quantity was removed.

On the morning of the 11th June, two of the cheques drawn on the 10th were presented and paid, the Bank apparently assuming that an advance would be made by the appellants, as on previous occasions, but about noon Lim Soo Yan was informed by Mr. Sime, on his application for further advances, that further advances would not be made. He immediately informed the Bank Manager. The remaining four cheques were dishonoured and the final crash came.

One further fact should be mentioned. During May arrangements were made for the formation of a limited Company to take over the debtor's business, with Mr. Sime as Chairman. Such a Company was registered, but did not do any business, and nothing came of the scheme.

It was suggested that the last-mentioned fact, coupled with the possession by the father's estate of shares in the appellant Company and the interest of the debtor in that estate, provided a motive for desiring to avoid serious loss on the appellants' part, with the possible diminution of the value of the estate. But no detailed facts were elicited such as were necessary to support such a suggestion, and in these circumstances their Lordships think no importance should be attached to it.

What then, is the proper inference to be drawn as to the dominant motive of the debtor? The learned trial Judge expressed his view as follows:—

"It seems to me that the expression he used that there was no alternative but to hand over did most accurately and realistically represent what must have been in the mind of the debtor. To him, believing that he was bound by the terms of the letter, it must have appeared that the alternative to handing over was a prosecution for criminal breach of trust."

Their Lordships agree that the proper inference to draw from the facts is that the debtor believed, and on the form of the letter reasonably believed, that the appellants were entitled in the events which had happened to have actual possession of the rubber, and to put an end to the possession and power of disposition which he had as their agent, and, further, that as he had wrongly disposed of the proceeds of some of the appellants' rubber for his own purposes, he would be running grave risks if he failed to deliver rubber of his own in its place. He would be fortified in this view by the information that the demand was made on the advice of Solicitors. Moreover, the Manager said in evidence that he believed:—

"Sime, Darby, under the letter we gave, controlled the rubber, the letter was a sort of security for the money advanced to us, and we thought it bound the firm."

In their Lordships' opinion, the dominant motive actuating the debtor was that, in making the transfer, he was only doing what he felt himself bound or compelled to do.

The possibility of obtaining further advances probably weighed with him also, but if, the above view is correct it is unnecessary further to pursue this matter.

Upon the whole case their Lordships are of opinion that the Official Assignee failed to establish his case under the Ordinance, that the trial Judge rightly dismissed the action, and that this appeal ought, therefore, to be allowed with costs, the order of the Court of Appeal being discharged, and that of the trial Judge restored, and they will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

K. J. R.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. Mayo, Elder & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. Turner & Sons.

Note.—This pronouncement of the Privy Council settles the law, on which there has been considerable conflict of judicial opinion both in India and in England: see the recent judgment of the English Court of Appeal in (1924) 2 Ch. 515; (1924) B. & O. R. 143; 69 S. J. 35 (In re Cohen; Ex parte Trustee), where Pollock, M. R., dissented from his learned colleagues, Warrington and Sargant, L. JJ.—K. J. R.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE RANGOON HIGH COURT.

October 28, 1927.

Present:—Lord Shaw, Lord Sinha and Sir John Wallis.

V. P. R. V. CHOCKALINGAM CHETTY—
PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SEETHAI ACHE AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11, O. XLI, rr. 20, 33—Suit against two sets of defendants—Dismissal of suit—Appeal—Omission to implead one set—Res judicata—Impleading of parties in appeal—Passing decree under O. XLI, r. 33—Discretion—Interference in appeal—Official Assignee—Sale of properties sold by insolvent—Mere right to sue—Validity of sale—Duty of Official Assignee—Right of appeal—Substantive right.

Sales by an Official Assignee of lands in possession of alienees from an insolvent are, in substance if not in form, nothing more than sales of the right to litigate, and, assuming that they do not come within the prohibition in the Transfer of Property Act against the transfer of a mere right to sue—which has not been contended—they are open to the same objections and are strongly to be deprecated. [p. 239, col. 1.]

It forms no part of the Official Assignee's duties as an officer of the Court charged with the realisation of insolvent estates either himself to prefer frivolous claims unsupported by reliable evidence or to transfer them to others and thus promote unnecessary and useless litigation. [ibid.]

The plaintiff instituted a suit for recovery of possession of certain properties from the first defendant and certain persons who had purchased the properties from the first defendant, alleging that the sale in favour of the first defendant was invalid and that the sale in favour of the purchasers was benami for the original owner. The sales were upheld and the suit was dismissed. The plaintiff preferred an appeal against the purchasers alone without impleading the first defendant as a party. The lower Appellate Court refused to implead him as a party under O. XLI, r. 20 and to exercise its powers under O. XLI, r. 33, Civil Procedure Code:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff could not be allowed to question the finding that the sale-deeds were valid in the appeal as he had not made the first defendant a party to the appeal; [p. 240, col. 1.]

(2) the first defendant against whom the suit had been dismissed and as against whom no appeal had been preferred and the right to appeal had become barred, was not in the circumstances interested in the result of the appeal against the other defendants within the meaning of O. XLI, r. 20 of the Civil Procedure Code; [ibid.]

(3) that the discretion exercised by the lower Appellate Court in refusing to exercise its powers under O. XLI, r. 33 of the Civil Procedure Code could not, in the circumstances of the case, be interfered with in appeal. [p. 240, col. 2.]

The right of appeal is a substantive right of a very valuable kind of which a party should not be lightly deprived. [ibid.]

Chockalingam Chetty v. Seethai Ache, 84 I. C. 522, affirmed.

Appeal from a judgment and decree of the High Court, Rangoon (Young and Baguley, JJ.), dated the 1st July, 1924, reported as 84 Ind. Cas. 522, confirming on appeal the decrees of the District Judge, Pegu, dated the 29th July, 1922.

Messrs. G. R. Lowndes and M. R. Jardine, for the Appellants.

Messrs. A. M. Dunne and E. B. Raikes, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Sir John Wallis.—The point for decision in these appeals from the High Court at Rangoon is a very short one, but there is one other matter dealt with by the trial Judge to which their Lordships desire to refer in the first place—the transaction by which the plaintiff acquired the right to sue for these and other properties in Burma, now valued by him at three lakhs of rupees, from an Official Assignee in Insolvency in another province for the trifling sum of Rs. 580, which could be of no real advantage to the insolvent estate, having regard to the extent of the liabilities.

The lands in Burma, which are the subject of these two consolidated suits in the District Court of Pegu, were acquired by a joint Hindu family of Nattukottai Chetties, a money-lending community residing with their families in what is now the Ramnad District in the south-east of the Madras Presidency, and carrying on business by their agents in other parts of India, Burma, the Straits Settlements and elsewhere. The family was known in Burma as the K. P. firm, these being the distinctive initials prefixed to all their business signatures according to the practice of the community.

In 1908 K. P. Ramanathan Chetty, a young man who had recently succeeded his father as managing member of the family, finding that the Burma agency was in difficulties, got the other members of the joint family to join with him in executing a deed of trust by which they transferred the properties mentioned in the schedule to the deed to a trustee for the benefit of their creditors. The trustee was empowered, among other things, to sell the scheduled properties and invest purchasers with full proprietary rights therein, but was to act in certain matters with the consent of another person described in the deed as a "co-adjutor."

In 1911 the first defendant's firm, who held two decrees against the K. P. firm for over Rs. 72,000, were pressing for payment, and it was arranged that certain properties in the Pegu District, included in the trust deed, should be transferred to them in satisfaction of their claim. A deed of transfer was accordingly executed on the 1st December, 1911, in Burma by the duly authorised agents of the trustee under the deed, and K. P. Ramanathan, the managing member of the family.

Satisfaction was duly entered up, and the first defendant took and remained in possession without any question being raised by anyone until some six years later the present plaintiff, V. P. R. V. Chockalingam Chetty, a member of the same community as the K. P. family, who was employed in Rangoon as the agent of another firm, obtained a transfer from the Bank of Bengal of a decree against the K. P. firm for Rs. 90,000, in consideration, the District Judge states, of a payment of Rs. 2,500 and proceeded to attach as the properties of the judgment-debtors the lands which had been conveyed to and were in possession of defendant No. 1. Finding, however, that the attachment proceedings must prove infructuous owing to the fact that the two senior members of the K. P. family had been adjudged insolvents on their own petition in January, 1918, in the Court of the District Judge of Ramnad at Madura, the plaintiff went over from Burma to Madura, and on the 19th October, 1919, presented a petition to the Official Assignee at Madura, alleging that the properties mentioned in a list annexed to the petition, containing some 75 items, had either been sold benami for the benefit of the insolvent or obtained in the name of his agent or agents with the same object, and praying that they should be sold by public auction, as there were numerous persons prepared to bid, and in case no one appeared the petitioner was prepared to purchase them himself.

The affidavit filed in support of the petition has not been exhibited, but the petition itself contains no mention of the point chiefly relied on in the suits, that the sale to the first defendant was not in accordance with the trust deed. It was opposed by the first insolvent, who stated that he had no personal knowledge of the transactions of his agents in Burma, and prayed for further enquiry in order that the truth might be ascertained. The next thing that appears is that in December, 1919, the Official Assignee advertised the properties for sale as being part of the insolvents' estate, and on the 26th January, 1920, there being no other bidders, the plaintiff became the purchaser for Rs. 580 of lands which he stated in his evidence to be worth three lakhs of rupees; the lands now in suit being valued at Rs. 40,000 and the remainder, for which he proposed to institute other suits, at Rs. 2,60,000.

The District Judge found that the plaintiff's allegation that the sales in question in these suits were benami for the K. P. family was made recklessly and without any foundation, and described his conduct in this matter as most astounding and repugnant. He also criticized the Official Assignee for not making further inquiry as to whether the insolvents had properties in Burma in the names of their agents, and inferred from the insignificant price which the Official Assignee accepted that he attached very little weight to the plaintiff's case that these valuable properties still formed part of the insolvents' estate. It seems difficult to resist this inference; but, however this may be, their Lordships desire to observe generally that it forms no part of the Official Assignee's duties as an officer of the Court charged with the realisation of insolvent estates either himself to prefer frivolous claims unsupported by reliable evidence or to transfer them to others and thus promote unnecessary and useless litigation. Further sales by an Official Assignee of lands in possession of alienees from an insolvent are, in substance if not in form, nothing more than sales of the right to litigate, and, assuming that they do not come within the prohibition in the Transfer of Property Act against the transfer of a mere right to sue—which has not been contended—they are open to the same objections and in their Lordships' opinion are strongly to be deprecated. In the present case, as already pointed out, there was not even any corresponding advantage to the insolvent estate.

Having obtained the transfer, the plaintiff proceeded to file two suits in the District Court of Pegu, which were tried together, against the first defendant and those claiming through him, in which he not only set up the benami character of the transactions, but also contended that the sale to the first defendant was invalid as not in accordance with the provisions of the trust deed.

The plaint in the first suit alleged that the sale to the first defendant was invalid and inoperative in law; that the sale by the first defendant to the second defendant, the E. N. M. K. firm, on the 20th December, 1919, was benami for the K. P. firm, which had been adjudged insolvent; and that the sale of the 1st April, 1920, by the second defendant to P. R. N. Nadesan Chetty, represented by the third and fourth defendants, was also benami for the K. P. firm; and that the sales by Nadesan to defendants Nos. 5 to 11, the defendants in possession, were made fraudulently and collusively with a view to defeating the plaintiff's claim, and were invalid and inoperative. The plaint in the second suit was in similar terms and challenged the transfers made to the first defendant and by the first defendant to the second defendant, Singaram Chetty, the defendant in possession. The District Judge rejected all the plaintiff's contentions and dismissed both suits, holding, as already stated, on the admissions and the plaintiff's own evidence, that the allegation that the sales were benami was made by the plaintiff recklessly and without any foundation.

The plaintiff filed appeals from these decrees to the High Court at Rangoon, but did not make the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, in the first suit or the defendant No. 1, in the second suit, parties to the appeals.

The learned Judges state in their judgment that when the appeals came on for argument it was pointed out that the foundation of title of all the defendants was the sale-deed to the first defendant; that the decrees of the lower Court declared the sale-deed to be perfectly valid as between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1; that owing to the failure to make the defendant No. 1, a respondent, there was no appeal from this finding, which had consequently become res judicata as between the plaintiff and the first defendant, and must also be regarded as res judicata against the respondents, who claimed through the first defendant, or, in other words, as it was put by the learned Judges at the end of the judgment, the finding that the sale to the first defendant was good carried with it a finding that it was also good as between the plaintiff and the purchasers from the first defendant.

As regards this question, their Lordships agree with the learned Judges of the High Court that the plaintiff cannot be allowed in these appeals to question the validity of the sale to the first defendant or to set up in the first suit the benami character of the purchase by the E. N. M. K. firm from the first defendant so long as the findings in favour of the first defendant and the E. N. M. K. firm stand, and are, therefore, of opinion that as regards this part of the case the plaintiff must fail unless the first defendant and the E. N. M. K. firm are made parties to the appeal. The purchase from the E. N. M. K. firm and the subsequent purchases in the first suit and the purchase from the first defendant in the second suit might stand on a different footing were there any evidence worthy of the name to show that they were made benami for the K. P. firm because the first defendant and the E. N. M. K. firm would not be necessary parties as regards these issues, but this contention was not raised either in the Court below or before their Lordships, and may, therefore, be disregarded.

As regards the rest of the case, owing to the plaintiff's failure to make these defendants respondents within the time limited for filing an appeal, these appeals, so far as they are concerned, are prima facie barred by limitation, and they are entitled to hold the decrees in their favour, which, as pointed out by their Lordships in a very recent case, is a substantive right of a very valuable kind of which they should not lightly be deprived. When parties are added by the Court after the institution of a suit under O. I, r. 10 (2), s. 22, Limitation Act, provides that the date when they are added is to be deemed to be the date of the institution of the suit so far as they are concerned for purposes of limitation and the rights which they may have acquired under the Limitation Act are, therefore, sufficiently safeguarded. The addition of a respondent whom the appellant has not made a party to the appeal is expressly dealt with in O. XLI, r. 20 on which the plaintiff relied, both, in the Appellate Court and before their Lordships. That rule empowers the Court to make such party a respondent when it appears to the Court that he is interested in the result of the appeal.

Giving these words their natural meaning—and they cannot be disregarded—it seems impossible to say that in this case the defendants, against whom these suits have been dismissed, and as against whom the right of appeal has become barred, are interested in the result of the appeal filed by the plaintiff against the other defendants. It was for the plaintiff-appellant, who applied to the Court to exercise powers under this rule, to show what was the nature of their interest, and this he has failed to do.

Their Lordships are, therefore, of opinion that the Appellate Court was right in rejecting his application under this rule.

The Appellate Court was then asked to take action under O. XLI, r. 33. That rule empowers an Appellate Court to pass any decree and make any order which ought to have been passed or made, and to make or pass such further decree or order as the case may require, and provides, further, that this power may be exercised notwithstanding that the appeal is as to part only of the decree and, 'may be exercised in favour of all or any of the respondents or parties, although such respondents or parties may not have filed any appeal or objection.'

Here the plaintiff, whose suits had been dismissed against all the defendants, failed to appeal against the decrees in so far as they affected some of them and allowed the appeal as against them to become barred. In these circumstances the Appellate Court, in the exercise of their discretion, refused to take action under the rule so as to deprive these defendants of the very valuable right which they had acquired in consequence of the plaintiff's failure to appeal against the decrees in so far as they affected them. Assuming that under this rule the Court in a proper case might add a defendant as respondent for the purpose of passing a decree against him, their Lordships see no sufficient reason for interfering with the refusal of the Appellate Court to do so in this instance. They are, therefore, of opinion that these appeals fail on both grounds, and will humbly advise His Majesty that they should be dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeals dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Custler, Allingham & Ford.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. Brammell & Brammell.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 572 OF 1927.

August 12, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Boys and

Mr. Justice Iqbal Ahmad.

HAR PRASAD—ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 234, 236, 238—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 411, 413—Charge under s. 413—Conviction for three offences under s. 411—Legality of conviction—Misjoinder of charges—Conviction for minor offence on charge for major offence.

The accused was charged under s. 413 of the Penal Code of being a habitual receiver of stolen property. Some ten or eleven instances of receipt of stolen property were put forward by the prosecution. At the trial the Sessions Judge thought it proper to add charges of three separate offences under s. 411. The three incidents which formed the subject of these charges were three of the incidents relied on by the prosecution to establish the habit of receiving stolen property. The charges under s. 411, though proved, were found by the Judge not a sufficient basis for the finding of habit necessary to a conviction under s. 413, and the accused was convicted of the offences under s. 411.

Held, that the convictions were not illegal inasmuch as the offences under s. 411 were merely minor offences forming ingredients of the main charge under s. 413, for which the accused could be convicted under s. 238 of the Criminal Procedure Code even if separate charges had not been framed, and that ss. 234 and 236, Criminal Procedure Code, had no application to the case.

Criminal appeal from an order of the Sessions Judge of Budaun.

ORDER OF REFERENCE.

Iqbal Ahmad, J.—For the determination of this appeal, it is necessary to decide whether or not ss. 234 and 236 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, are mutually exclusive of each other. It is argued by the learned Counsel for the appellant that they are, and in support of his contention the learned Counsel relies on the case of Sheo Saran Lal v. Emperor (1) and Suja-ud-din Ahmad v. Emperor (2) and Faujdar Mahto v. Emperor (3). The learned Government Pleader contests the proposition of law put forward by the learned Counsel for the appellant and relies on the case of In re Bal Gangadhar Tilak (4).

In my opinion, the point is of sufficient importance to merit a discussion before two Judges. Accordingly I refer the case to a Bench of two Judges.

Messrs. Peary Lal Banerji and Kumuda Prasad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Sankar Saran (Government Pleader), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This was referred to a Bench of two Judges because of the argument raised at the hearing before a Single Judge as to whether ss. 234 etc. were mutually exclusive of each other or could be jointly applied with a resultant increase in the number of offences tried at one trial. The two sections in this case, in regard to which discussion arose, were ss. 234 and 236; but in our view, s. 236 has no application whatever to the particular case.

The accused here was committed to the Court of Session on a charge under s. 413 of the Indian Penal Code of being a habitual receiver of stolen property. Some ten or eleven instances of the receipt of stolen property were put forward by the Crown. At the trial the learned Sessions Judge thought it proper to add charges of three separate offences under s. 411. The three incidents which formed the subject of these charges were three of the ten or eleven incidents stated above to have been relied on by the Crown to establish the habit of receiving stolen property. Such difficulty as there may be in applying s. 236, whether by itself or in combination with another section, e. g., s. 234, turns really on the question whether the doubt referred to in s. 236 is doubt owing to the absence of proof of some fact or facts, or doubt on a question of law. We do not say that this is really any serious difficulty, but it constitutes such difficulty as there is. In this case, there is no question of doubt either as to fact or as to law, and, therefore, no question of the applicability of s. 236 arises.

The situation here is simply this, that there was a charge of an offence under s. 413 of the Indian Penal Code which involved ten or eleven separate incidents of the receipt of stolen property, and several of those at any rate had to be proved before the charge could be established. Each of the incidents would really amount to a separate offence under s. 411, and each of the incidents would involve as its elements a finding that the property was stolen, that the accused was in possession of it, and

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 896; 32 A. 219; 7 A. L. J. 225; 11 Or. L. J. 235.

(2) 66 Ind. Cas. 322; 20 A. L. J. 320; 23 Or. L. J. 258; A. I. R. 1922 All. 214; 44 A. 540.

(3) 91 Ind. Cas. 815; 24 A. L. J. 239; 27 Or. L. J. 143; A. I. R. 1926 All. 261; 48 A. 236; L. R. 7 A. 32 Or.

(4) 2 Ind. Cas. 277; 33 B. 221; 10 Bom. L. R. 973; 9 Or. L. J. 226; 4 M. L. T. 45.

that there was justification for holding that he must have known it to be stolen property. The charges under s. 411 were only really charges as to three out of the ten or eleven incidents, and were found by the Judge not to constitute a sufficient basis for the finding of "habit" necessary to a conviction under s. 413. The section really applicable is s. 238, according to which in such a case the accused could have been convicted under s. 411 as to the three minor offences, even though he had not been charged with them. A conviction of such minor offences, each of which was an ingredient of the major offence, is clearly not to be regarded as a conviction to which s. 233 is applicable. There has really only been a charge of a major offence constituted by a number of incidents, and three minor offences alone have been found to be proved each of those minor offences being an ingredient of the major offence—the other ingredients of the major offence, viz., the other minor offences, having been found not proved. There is, therefore, no force in the legal objection taken that the accused was tried for more offences than could be joined in one trial.

For the reasons we have given, also no question of the power to apply s. 234 and any other of the cognate sections simultaneously arises.

The merits of appeal were fully argued before the Single Judge who is a member of this Bench, and it is conceded by Counsel here that there is nothing further to be said in favour of the appellants on the merits.

The appeal is dismissed.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE No. 575 OF 1927:

October 17, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Dālal.

GAURI SHANKAR—ACCUSED—APPLICANT
versus

SRI KRISHNA—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V. of 1898), s. 133—Construction of latrine on one's own land—Magistrate's power to order removal of latrine.

The mere construction of a latrine on one's own land cannot be considered a nuisance within the meaning of s. 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

A Magistrate has, therefore, no power to make an order under s. 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code directing a person to remove a latrine built by him on his own land, though he can direct him not to use it in such a way as to cause a nuisance to the neighbours.

Indra Nath Banerjee v. Queen-Empress (1), followed.

Criminal Reference made by the Sessions Judge, Mainpuri.

Mr. G. K. Shinde, for the Applicant.

Mr. S. C. Goyle, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This reference must be accepted. The complaint was that one Gauri Shankar was building a latrine on his own land, and the smell thereof was likely to cause a nuisance. The latrine had not been finished, and the Magistrate ordered the building to be stopped and the materials removed. This order passed under s. 133 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was made absolute under s. 136. Gauri Shankar applied in revision to the learned Sessions Judge, who has rightly pointed out that there was no unlawful obstruction and nuisance, and that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to interfere. An unlawful obstruction and nuisance may be removed from any way, river or channel, or from any public place. Admittedly the latrine was not being built on any way, river or channel, or in any public place. It was being built on Gauri Shankar's own land. What might happen if the use of the latrine was made in such a way as to be objectionable to the public is not in question here. The ruling in Indra Nath Banerjee v. Queen-Empress (1) is in point. There a complaint was made as to a burning ghat and its removal was desired. The Bench held that a Magistrate had no power under s. 133 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to order the removal of a burning ghat from its position but he can direct the proprietor to remove the nuisance, that is, to take such steps as would result in the cremation of corpses ceasing to be a nuisance to the public. The construction of a latrine by Gauri Shankar on his own land cannot be considered a nuisance. There would be a nuisance if on its construction its use was made in such a way as to lead to a nuisance to the neighbours. In that case also Gauri Shankar may be directed to remove the nuisance of the misuse and not to remove the latrine itself.

I set aside both the conditional order and the final order of the Magistrate.

A. N. A.

Order set aside.

(1) 25 O. 425; 2 O. W. N. 113; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 282.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE No. 552 OF 1927.

October 28, 1927.

Present:—Justice Sir Cecil Henry Walsh, Kt.
GULAB AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—APPLICANTS
versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Co-operative Societies Act (II of 1912), s. 52—U. P. Co-operative Societies (Amendment) Act (III of 1919), s. 2—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 146—Liquidation of Society—Heir of deceased member, liability of, to be arrested.

A Liquidator of a Co-operative Society can arrest the heir of a deceased member of the Society for an arrear due from his deceased father.

Criminal Reference made by the Sessions Judge, Benares.

ORDER OF REFERENCE.

This is an application in revision against a judgment of B. Birendra Pratab Sahi, Deputy Magistrate, First Class, sentencing the accused-applicants to pay fines of Rs. 25 each under s. 353, Indian Penal Code, and 225, Indian Penal Code, for assaulting an Amin and rescuing one Ram Charitr from arrest.

The application for revision raises the important point whether Liquidator of a Co-operative Bank can arrest the heir of a deceased member of a Co-operative Society for an arrear due from his deceased father. I am in considerable doubt whether under the law he can do so. It appears to me that the Liquidator can proceed only against the assets of the heir, vide the new sub-para. 9-A after para. 167. (9) on page 148 of the Manual of Co-operative Society, Vol. I. I am, therefore, of opinion that the heir cannot be made personally liable and that the arrest in the present case was not warranted by law.

I, therefore, forward the record to the Hon'ble High Court with the recommendation that the conviction and sentence passed by the Deputy Magistrate be set aside if the Hon'ble High Court agrees with my views. The Deputy Magistrate is asked to let me have an explanation within a week.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—It seems to me that the Magistrate was right. I reject the reference and direct the record to be returned to the Court below.

A. N. A.

*Reference rejected.ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 49 OF 1923.

May 11, 1927.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, Kt.,
 Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Lindsay.
NARSINGH DAS—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT*versusGOKUL PRASAD AND ANOTHER—*DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 33—Witness dying before cross-examination—Evidence in examination-in-chief whether admissible.

The incomplete deposition of a witness who dies before he is cross-examined is not admissible in evidence under s. 33 of the Evidence Act. [p. 244, col. 1.]

Boisagomoff v. Nahapiet Jute Co., Ltd. (1), followed.

First appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Allahabad.

Mr. B. E. O'Connor, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Surendro Nath Sen, Durgā Charan Banerji, Peary Lal Banerji and Narain Prasad Asthana, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit originally instituted to recover the value of ornaments alleged to be worth Rs. 5,993 and to recover Rs. 2,007 which was alleged to have been taken out of Court by the defendants, on the ground that they were accountable in both these respects to the plaintiff.

The learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit and when this matter came up in argument in first appeal, it became so apparent that complete justice could not be done between the parties if the claim was limited in the manner in which the plaintiff by his plaint had limited it. We, therefore, sent the matter down to the lower Court to consider particularly the state of account in respect of certain zemindari property. It was alleged that a lady, Musammat Chandrawal, the mother of Narsingh Das, owned zemindari property, and that for a period of some eight years, from 1908 to 1916, that zemindari property had been managed by the defendants. The findings have been returned to us, and in this Court even wider arguments have taken place on both sides, and in the result we have had, upon very scanty material, to go into the whole of the transactions between these parties to arrive at the best and fairest decision we can.

The first difficulty that we have been met with is this. On the 15th of February, 1922, Musammat Chandrawal was examined on Commission and had on that day concluded her examination-in-chief and had been under cross-examination for a considerable period. Her cross-examination, we are told, occupied some seven pages of print. By that time 9 o'clock in the evening had arrived, and not unnaturally the parties wished to separate. Musamat Chandrawal was not well at that moment. There arose a discussion as to when next her cross examination should be continued, and whilst the Pleader for Narsingh Das was willing for the lady to be examined on the next or any of three or four subsequent days, the Pleader for the defendants had other engagements and the matter was left open. In that state of affairs Musamat Chandrawal died on the 19th of February, 1922—it is said she died of plague. The plaintiff naturally wished that evidence to be used in the lower Court and here. It was excluded in the lower Court and we have been obliged to exclude it here, being guided by the decision which is reported as Boisagomoff v. Nakapiet Jute Co., Ltd. (1) and on a consideration of the terms of s. 33 of the Evidence Act, and we have had to decide that the evidence cannot be received because the evidence was not concluded. That is to say, although her examination-in-chief was concluded, it was open to the defendants to argue that a subsequent cross-examination would have destroyed to a great extent the effect of the evidence-in-chief, and, therefore, one could not take an incomplete deposition of the lady and pay any attention to it. We have no doubt that the argument put forward by the defendants was a good argument, and we did decide to exclude her incomplete statement, and it has not been presented to us.

[Note.—The rest of the judgment is not material for the purposes of this report.—Ed.]

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 5 C. W. N. 230n.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 545 AND 546
OF 1925.

June 9, 1927.

Present:—Justice Sir Cecil Henry Walsh,
Kt., and Mr. Justice Ashworth.

HUKUM CHAND AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS
versus

SITAL PRASAD AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow—Property inherited from husband—Custom conferring absolute power of disposal—Property, whether stridhan for purposes of devolution—Precedents—Assumption of certain view of law, how far binding.

Under the Mitakshara School of Law there is no distinction between the word 'stridhan' and the expression 'property that a woman can deal with at her pleasure.' [p. 246, col. 2.]

Consequently, when a custom is proved as affecting persons otherwise subject to the Mitakshara School of Hindu Law, e. g., the Jains, and that custom is said to confer upon the widow a right to deal with property inherited from her husband, at her will, it must be held to mean that the property is her stridhan and will devolve as stridhan. [ibid.]

Per Ashworth, J.—The assumption of a certain view of law in a judgment for the purpose of deciding another question cannot be regarded as a binding decision. It has even less force than an obiter dictum for it is not necessary to prove or decide what is admitted. [p. 246, col. 2.]

Second appeal from a decree of the Additional District Judge, Saharanpur.

Mr. Peary Lal Banerji, for the Appellants.

Mr. Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Ashworth, J.—These two appeals arise out of two suits brought by the plaintiffs appellants against the respondents for possession of certain property. The property belonged to one Amolak Ram, who died in 1879, leaving a widow Musammam Bir Kunwar. She died in 1881, leaving three daughters. Two of these daughters jointly, in 1882, alienated a portion of the property in suit. The third daughter in 1885 alienated the rest of the property in suit. All three daughters are now dead, and the plaintiffs claim that they are entitled to the property as reversionary heirs of Amolak Ram, and that the alienations mentioned are ineffective against them, now that the daughters are dead. The Appeal No. 546 deals with the Original Suit No. 164 of 1923. In that suit the District Judge held that the alienation of 1882 by Musammatt Lachhmi and Musammatt Barfi was for necessity. This was a finding of fact, and the appellants have not been able to show that it was based on any mistake of law. Their suit, therefore, No. 164 must fail, and the appeal fails, in my opinion, on the ground that the question is concluded by a finding of fact. I may mention that it was in this suit that the question of the suit being barred under O. II, r. 2 arose. It does not seem to me necessary to decide this point, but if it had been necessary I would have concurred with the view of my learned brother.

As regards the Appeal No. 545, which is in respect of Suit No. 131, it was necessary for the plaintiffs to prove that, on the death of the last of the three daughters of Musammatt Bir Kunwar, they were entitled to the estate of Amolak Ram. One amongst other pleas taken by the defendant was that Amolak Ram having been a Jain, and this property being his self-acquired property, his widow Musammatt Bir Kunwar got an absolute estate in that property by Jain custom. Both the lower Courts have found that the custom was proved, and the extent of the custom as found by the trial Court was this. The custom gave the widow absolute right to transfer the property derived from her husband in her lifetime, but, on the other hand, if not transferred, the property would descend as the estate of her husband and not as the stridhan of the widow. The lower Appellate Court accepted this view. It went on, however, to hold that the widow had made a Will conferring an absolute estate on her three daughters. I concur with my learned brother that there was no evidence by which the making of an oral Will, by Musammatt Bir Kunwar or the terms of such oral Will if one was made, could be held proved. The document relied upon was the award of an arbitrator, who was appointed by the three daughters of Musammatt Bir Kunwar to settle their inter se claims on the assumption of a Will. The arbitrator said in his award that he had ascertained by inquiry the terms of the Will. Now if the arbitrator had been alive and had come into Court, it appears to me that his evidence would have been inadmissible as mere hearsay evidence. I cannot think, that, because this hearsay evidence has been expressed by him in an old document it ceases to have to be regarded as mere hearsay evidence. There are only two questions with which I consider it now necessary to deal in this appeal. One is whether under Jain custom Musammatt Bir Kunwar inherited this property as her stridhan or whether, for the purposes of succession to her, she must be regarded as only having had a widow's estate notwithstanding that according to the Jain custom she could, before her death, have disposed of it as she liked.

The contention of the appellants is that Mitakshara Law makes no distinction between property of which a woman can dispose as she likes and stridhan property. It considers the two expressions synonymous. For the respondents it is maintained that it is possible for a widow to have a widow's estate in her husband's property and yet, by reason of a custom such as the one now set up, to have a right of absolute disposal during her lifetime. It is pointed out that, according to the Bombay School, property inherited by a woman from a male may be, if inherited in one way, her stridhan and if in another way, not her stridhan. Reference is made to Mulla's Hindu Law, 5th Edition, page 134. The following decisions have been invoked in favour of each contention, e. g., Debi Mangal Prasad Singh v. Mahadeo Prasad Singh (1), Sheo Shankar Lal v. Devi Sahai (2) and Lakshmi Narain Misr v. Sumarni Kuar (3).

It appears to me that the matter has to be looked at in the following way. The family in question, though a Jain family, was governed by the Mitakshara Law except so far as that law was varied by custom. In order to find out the custom set up we must refer to the Privy Council decision in Sheo Singh Rai v. Dakho (4). In this decision is set forth at length the evidence on which their Lordships came to the conclusion that the custom now set up was established. On page 700* a representative body of the leading members of the Jain community expressed the opinion

(1) 14 Ind. Cas. 1000; 34 A. 231; 9 A. L. J. 263; 11 M. L. T. 217; 16 C. W. N. 409; (1912) M. W. N. 324; 14 Bom. L. R. 220; 15 C. L. J. 314; 22 M. L. J. 462; 39 I. A. 121 (P. O.).

(2) 25 A. 468; 7 C. W. N. 831; 5 Bom. L. R. 828; 13 M. L. J. 330; 30 I. A. 202; 3 Sar. P. O. J. 465 (P. O.).

(3) 79 Ind. Cas. 383; 46 A. 439; A. I. R. 1924 All. 731; L. R. 5 A. 312 Civ.

(4) 1 A. 688; 2 C. L. R. 193; 5 I. A. 87; 3 Sar. P. O. J. 807; 3 Suth. P. O. J. 529; 2 Ind. Jur. 396; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 481 (P. O.).

ion that, in the absence of any son, a Jain widow succeeds to the estate of her husband, moveable and immoveable, in absolute right, (ii) that she can deal with it at pleasure and without restriction and (iii) that she can adopt her daughter's son without the authority of her husband, and that such adopted son would succeed to her deceased husband's estate. The last five words "to her deceased husband's estate" appear to me to be merely descriptive and cannot be invoked to mean that the investigators of the custom considered that the widow would hold the property as her husband's estate. Even if they could be construed as having this meaning, they would merely represent an incidental and not authoritative view, it being no duty of the investigators to determine the implication of the facts they ascertained. On the other hand, in this statement of the custom, a distinction was made between the finding that the widow succeeded in absolute right and the finding that she could deal with the estate at pleasure and without restriction. I should deem the first finding as meaning that the property was taken by her as her stridhan. Apart from this, whatever distinction other Schools may make between property with which the widow can deal at her will and property which is her stridhan, because the property comes to her in various ways, I am not able to hold, after considering the various decisions brought to my notice, that according to the Mitakshara School any distinction is made between the word 'stridhan' and the expression 'property that the widow can deal with at pleasure.' The fact that other schools make such a distinction will not affect a consideration of the law according to the Mitakshara School. The dictum in various text-books and decisions as to Mitakshara Law "that inherited property is never stridhan" is inapplicable to that law when overlaid by a Jain custom such as the one in question, no such custom being in contemplation of these authorities, when expressing the dictum. Consequently, when a custom is proved as affecting persons otherwise subject to the Mitakshara School and that custom is said to confer on the widow a right to deal with property at her will, I consider that this must mean that the property is her stridhan and will devolve as her stridhan. In this view of the case, it is admitted that the plaintiffs can have no present right in the property. On the death of Musammam Bir Kunwar the property passed to her daughters, and on the death of the last of them it would pass to her grand daughters and not to her grand-sons.

It is said, however, that we are bound by the Privy Council decision reported as Sheo Shankar Lal v. Devi Sahai (2) and that that decision decides that under the ordinary rule of inheritance the grandson of a woman holding property as her stridhan will succeed in preference to her grand-daughter. Whether this is so, is the second question with which I have to deal. I consider that for the reasons stated in Ram Kali v. Gopal Dei (5) the Privy Council decision need not be held to lay down the law on this subject. A reference to the Privy Council decision relied upon will show that their Lordships only considered one question of law. This question they have propounded at pages 468 and 469* in the following words:—

"This involved the question of law, whether according to Benares Law, by which the family was governed, the property on the death of Jagarnath descended as stridhan and went to her daughter, or whether it lost its character of stridhan and descended according to the ordinary rule of inheritance to her sons the plaintiffs."

It is obvious that the legal question arising might have been equally well stated even if the words "to her sons, the plaintiffs", had been omitted. They were added on the obvious assumption that this was the law. The respondents in that case were not represented, and thus had no opportunity of questioning the proposition involved. Nor does it appear that at any stage of the suit was an issue framed on the matter. If it was, there was no appeal on this issue. The assumption of a certain view of law in a judgment of the Privy Council for the purpose of deciding another question cannot, in my opinion, be regarded as a binding decision. It has even less force than an obiter dictum; for it is not necessary to prove or decide what is admitted.

For the above reasons, I would concur with my learned brother in dismissing Appeal No. 546, but on the other hand I do not concur in allowing Appeal No. 545. I would dismiss that appeal also in concurrence with the District Judge but on a different ground.

(5) 96 Ind. Cas. 757; 24 A. L. J. 742 at p. 745; A. L. J. 1926 All. 557; 48 A. 648.

*Pages of 25 A.—[Ed.]

Walsh, J. concurred.

By the Court.—Appeals Nos. 545 and 546 of 1925 are dismissed with costs.

A. N. A.

Appeals dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1336 OF 1925.

June 28, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mukerji and Mr. Justice Ashworth.

SIDH GOPAL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

BEHARI LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Family arrangement—Existence of claims believed to be true, whether necessary—'Bona fide dispute,' meaning of.

The only requisite required to make a family arrangement valid is that it should be a transaction between members of the same family which is for the benefit of the family generally, as, for example, one which tends to the preservation of the family property, to the peace or security of the family and the avoiding of family disputes and litigation, or to the saving of the honour of the family. [p. 248, col. 1.]

It is not necessary that the claim by each party to the settlement must be a claim which that party believes to be justified upon facts and law. [ibid.]

The expression 'bona fide dispute' used in this connection means nothing more than that each party must intend to press his claim to the property by litigation or otherwise. [ibid.]

Second appeal from a decree of the Judge of the Court of Small Causes, exercising the powers of a Subordinate Judge, Allahabad, reversing that of the Munsif, West Allahabad.

Messrs. A. P. Dube, Ambika Prasad and B. B. Chandra, for the Appellant.

Mr. Rama Kant Malaviya, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Ashworth, J.—This second appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-respondent, Behari Lal, against the defendant-appellant, Sidh Gopal, for recovery of a certain half share in zemindari property. The plaintiff was admittedly in possession of the other half share. There were three brothers Behari Lal, the plaintiff, Nandkishore and Hargobind. Nand Kishore is the father of the defendant Sidh Gopal. He died 30 years ago. Hargobind died only four years ago, and it is the share of the zemindari property which he enjoyed during his lifetime that is the subject-matter of the present suit. The plaintiff Behari Lal's case is that Hargobind died separate from the others, and that he, as Hargobind's brother, has a preferential right to the property over his nephew Sidh Gopal. The defence of Sidh Gopal is that the deceased Hargobind and his father (afterwards himself) were joint and that Behari Lal was separate. This plea was rejected by both the lower Courts, and we are precluded by this finding of fact from considering it. Sidh Gopal also pleaded a family arrangement between himself and Behari Lal arrived at the time of Hargobind's death, whereby it was agreed that they should each take a moiety of Hargobind's property. The trial Court found in favour of this alleged settlement. The lower Appellate Court has found against it. The question in this appeal is whether the finding of the lower Appellate Court was a correct one.

The lower Appellate Court has found that on Hargobind's death Behari Lal was claiming the whole of Hargobind's fractional share and Sidh Gopal was also claiming the whole of it. It found that Sidh Gopal had in law no title whatever as the evidence clearly showed that he was separate, from Hargobind. It found, however, that the parties were advised by their community to settle the matter, and agreed to take the property of Hargobind half and half. In pursuance of this agreement they put in an application to the Revenue Court that they should be entered jointly in the revenue papers. The lower Appellate Court was of the opinion that this would have been a family settlement if there had been a bona fide dispute and a bona fide settlement. It held, however, that there was no bona fide dispute because bona fide dispute implies a bona fide claim by each party, and Sidh Gopal could have no belief in the validity of his claim. It, therefore, refused to acknowledge the settlement as a binding family settlement, and decreed the suit.

In appeal the appellant Sidh Gopal argues that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in considering it necessary that Sidh Gopal's claim should have been based on some valid ground. His Counsel urges that it is sufficient to say that there was dispute between the parties and that each party was determined to press his claim whatever its merits. With this reasoning I am disposed to agree. The learned Counsel for the respondent has taken the following grounds upholding the decision of the lower Appellate Court. His first ground is that the fact of any agreement is merely based on an application to the Revenue Court, and that application merely asked for the names of both parties to be entered jointly inasmuch as both parties were legal representatives of the deceased. There is no authority for holding that an application to a Revenue Court cannot be good evidence of a preceding settlement. The Privy Council case of Chokhey Singh v. Jote Singh (1) was merely authority for holding that a particular application in a particular case was not sufficient proof of any preceding compromise. In the present case the lower Appellate Court has relied not only on the application to the Revenue Court for mutation, but also on the oral evidence and on the surrounding circumstances. I consider that there was material on which the lower Appellate Court could come to the finding that there had been a compromise before mutation, and that in second appeal it is not open to us to set aside this finding. A second point taken was that the evidence of a family arrangement did not disclose any sufficiently precise settlement to justify effect being given to it. It is pointed out that the application to the mutation Court did not specify the shares of the parties, but only asked for an entry that they hold jointly. This application, however, to the Revenue Court had to be read in the light of the previous history of the property and in the light of surrounding circumstances. It could also be read in the light of the oral evidence produced in this Court which was believed by the lower Court. So read, there can be no question that, if there was a compromise at all, it was a compromise that the parties should hold the property of Hargobind in equal moieties. The next point taken up is this. It is said that for a family settlement to be recognised as such there must be a bona fide dispute between the parties, and this is interpreted by Counsel to mean that the dispute must arise out of a bona fide claim raised by each party. In this case he urges that the Court below has come to a finding that Sidh Gopal could have had no real belief in the validity of his claim. Consequently his claim was not bona fide and could not give rise to a bona fide dispute or to a bona fide settlement. The expression "bona fide dispute" has been used in many decisions as requisite for a family settlement. In my opinion it means nothing more than that each party must intend to press his claim to the property. The word "bona fide" indeed will have no meaning except when one of the parties to the dispute is a trustee or qualified owner. In such a case, the trustee or the qualified owner cannot defend a transfer of the property, made to defeat the interest of his beneficiary or a person for whom he stands, by merely alleging that another member of the family claimed the property and that there was a dispute. In such a case, there is really no dispute. The expression "bona fide" is not applicable to a case where each party is contending for an advantage to himself in his own right. Every decision relied upon by Counsel for the contention that the dispute must be a bona fide dispute deals with a case where one of the parties was a Hindu female with qualified ownership. Nor again do I hold that the claim by each party to the settlement must be a claim which that party believes to be justified both upon facts and law. It is sufficient to point out that there might be an illegitimate son, who as such could have no title to the property and who was not likely to be able to produce evidence to prove his legitimacy. Supposing he claimed to be legitimate and threatened to litigate. If the rest of the family came to an arrangement with him, it could not be said that this failed to be a family arrangement. In other words I would construe a bona fide claim merely as a claim which the person making it intended to press by litigation or otherwise. The only requisite required to make valid a family arrangement is that it should be "a transaction between members of the same family which is for the benefit of the family generally, as, for example, one which tends to the preservation of the family property, to the peace or security of the family and the avoiding of family disputes and litigation, or to the saving of the honour of the family" (see the definition of "family arrangement" in Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume XIV, page 540). In this case it is clear that the community considered that the uncle and nephew should not fight over the matter. There can be no doubt that this arrangement was accepted by Behari Lal for the purpose of avoiding litigation and he cannot be permitted to go back on the arrangement.

(1) 1 Ind. Cas. 166; 31 A. 73; 11 Bom. L. R. 69; 13 G. W. N. 274; 6 A. L. J. 100; 9 O. L. J. 151; 5 M. L. J. 167; 19 M. L. J. 123; 36 I. A. 38; 12 O. C. 288 (P. O.).

For the above reasons, I hold that the lower Court was wrong in finding that this settlement was not valid as a family settlement and prefer the reasoning of the trial Court. I would allow this appeal, and restore the decree of the trial Court.

Mukerji, J.—I agree with my learned brother that the decree of the lower Court should be set aside and the decree of the Court of first instance dismissing the respondent's suit should be restored.

The facts found are very simple. A person died leaving a brother and a nephew. If the deceased person was separate from his relations, the brother would succeed and not the nephew. If the nephew and the deceased were joint, the brother would be excluded. There was a claim for the deceased's property both by the brother and the nephew. The castemen decided that in order to avoid litigation the parties should divide the property equally amongst themselves. Accordingly an application was put before the Revenue Court stating that the names of the claimants should be put down as the heirs of the deceased person. This entry continued for four years. On foot of this entry the plaintiff, the brother of the deceased person, brought two suits for recovery of profits against the defendant. It is clear then that there was a dispute between two male persons about the heirship of the deceased person. That dispute was settled at the instance of castemen in a particular way.

The settlement arrived at was given effect to at the instance of the claimants in the revenue papers, and the plaintiff in this case brought suits for profits in pursuance of that agreement. The question then is whether after all this has happened, the settlement of dispute is to be set aside merely on the ground that there was no "bona fide claim" on the part of defendant, and the settlement of the dispute was of no consequence. I am not prepared to say that any such contention should prevail.

Cases after cases have been quoted before us. It is enough to say that each case was decided on its own peculiar facts. Where parties are sui juris and understand their own interest, where each party is prepared to press his claim and where these parties, in order to avoid a litigation, come to an arrangement, I fail to see why that arrangement should not hold good. It is a contract which has been entered into for consideration and it should be binding on the parties. For these short reasons I would hold that the plaintiff's suit was rightly dismissed.

By the Court.—The appeal is allowed with costs, the decree of the Court below is set aside and the decree of the Court of first instance restored with costs throughout.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 51 of 1925.

November 17, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sulaiman and
Mr. Justice Ashworth.NAJAF ALI KHAN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MUHAMMAD FAZAL ALI KHAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND NARAIN DASS alias RAMDAYAL—DEFENDANTS—

RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Zarpeshgi lease—Instalment bond for lease money—Bond, whether mere security or extinguishes liability under lease—Tests—Intention—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 74—Provision to pay high rate of interest on default of instalment—Penalty.

Where a lease is executed and simultaneously, or as part of the same transaction, the lessee purports to pay in advance the lease money by executing a bond making himself liable to pay the lease money in certain instalments, the question, whether the bond is executed as a mere security for the due payment of the lease money or whether it entirely puts an end to the liability of the lessee under the lease, depends on the intention of the parties as indicated by the documents and by the surrounding circumstances. [p. 250, col. 2.]

Where there is no liability to pay interest till default is made, but a high rate of interest is stipulated to become payable on default of payment of an instalment, the stipulation is in the nature of a penalty within the meaning of s. 74 of the Contract Act. [p. 251, col. 2.]

Avuthani Muthukrishnair v. Shankaralingam Pillai (2) and Khagaram Das v. Ram Sankar Das Pramanik (3), relied on.

First appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge of Bulandshahar, dated the 4th November, 1924.

Messrs. S. K. Dar and Aziz, for the Appellant.

Dr. K. N. Katju, Messrs. Pearey Lal and Umashankar Bajpai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Ashworth, J.—This appeal arises from a suit brought by the plaintiff-respondents against the defendant-appellant on the basis of a bond dated the 23rd January, 1917.

On one and the same day the defendant Najafali Khan signed what purports to be a zarpeshgi lease in his favour executed by Narain Das, defendant second party in respect of the zemindari rights in certain land. The lease I construe to be a lease of the property in consideration of the execution by the lessee of the bond now sued upon. The bond has not been printed, but both the lease and the bond show that the transaction effected by both the deeds was that the lessee was regarded as having discharged before occupation the total rent due for the whole period of occupation by means of his execution of the bond now sued upon. That bond has not been printed, but was consistent with this interpretation. The lower Court was asked to hold that the two documents in effect, resulted merely in a lease, and not a zarpeshgi or advance lease but one requiring lease money in the instalments and on the date fixed by the bond. In other words, it was asked to hold that the effect of the bond was merely to supply the instalments and dates on which the lease money was to be paid which details have been omitted from the lease. It was asked to hold this because the defendant's contention was that he could not be required to pay the lease money since he had lost possession of the leased property by the action or at any rate with the connivance of the plaintiffs. Alternatively it was asked to hold that the rate of interest imposed on failure by the defendant Najafali Khan to pay up any instalment was penal being $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent per month compound interest.

The subordinate Judge repelled both these contentions. He held that the execution of the bond by the defendant was intended to discharge his liability to pay lease money in advance as recorded in the lease. He held that the rate of interest was not exceptional in the District and gave no cause for interference by the Court. He did not specifically consider whether the rate could be required as a penalty or not.

In this appeal both decisions of the lower Court are impugned. As regards the first point, I hold that the lower Court was right. Where a lease is executed and simultaneously or as part of the same transaction the lessee purports to pay in advance the lease money by executing a bond making himself liable to pay the lease money (calculated in advance) in certain instalments the question to be decided is what was the intention of the parties as indicated by the two documents. That intention may be that the bond should only be security for the payment of the lease money. The intention may be that on discharge of the bond the lessee should cease to be liable for lease money that is to say that discharge of liability under the lease is conditional on discharge of the terms of the bond. Lastly it may be that bond entirely puts an end to any liability of the lessee under the lease. In the present case the last named intention appears to me to be abundantly clear from the terms of the documents. It is sufficient to quote the words in the lease printed on page 22 of the printed book: "I have received Rs. 2,250 the amount of the zarpeshgi lease aforesaid under a bond of to-day's date executed by Najafali Khan in my favour." We may also invoke for interpreting this document the attending circumstances that is to say the existing facts including the state of the law. If the liability of the lessee were to remain one merely of a lessee and not of a debtor, under a bond, the rate of interest that could have been obtained by suit would have been limited to 12 per cent. per annum, see s. 151 of the Agre Tenancy Act, 1901, read with the definition of "tenant" which includes a thekadar. At least this may well have been the idea of the lessor Narain Das. That being so we can well understand why he should wish to substitute liability in his favour of a debtor under a bond for the liability of a lessee under a lease. Nor would such an arrangement, if assented to by the lessee, amount to an evasion of the Tenancy Act which should not be allowed as contrary to public policy. It is only in the case of a lessee or tenant that the rate is restricted by the Tenancy Act. If that tenant likes to substitute a liability under a bond the Tenancy Act cannot be held to protect him.

The meaning of these documents as interpreted by surrounding circumstances being clear I hold that we are not entitled to resort to the subsequent conduct of the parties for the elucidation of the meaning of these documents. The appellant's Counsel cannot, therefore, invoke as he would like to do a subsequent suit brought by the lessor Naraindas in respect of the first instalment under the bond wherein he described the bond as merely by way of security for the payment of the lease money. I accordingly hold that the lower Court was right on this point.

As to the second question whether the Court could and should have reduced the interest the first question to decide is whether the provision for payment of interest was penal. It seems unnecessary to me to refer to the numerous decisions in favour of its being penal. It is sufficient to refer to one of them, namely, Sundar Koer v. Rai Sham Krishen (1) and to say that a similar view has been taken by the Bombay and Madras High Courts. There is no recent decision of our Court on the point of which I am aware. It was held in the Calcutta case that the imposition of interest on default of the payment of an instalment even though that interest is only to be reckoned from the date of the failure, nevertheless must be regarded as penal, because it does provide for a further obligation on the part of the debtor, by reason of his failure to fulfil his contract to pay the instalment on the prescribed date. With this reasoning, I concur. A penalty is something imposed on a person by reason of his failure to do something, and it can make no difference whether that something is the payment of interest or any other obligation, giving rise to pecuniary loss. I am not aware that the Privy Council has anywhere expressed a contrary view. Doubtless it has expressed the view that the imposition of an excessive rate of interest by itself cannot justify a finding of undue influence under ss. 16 and 19 (a) of the Contract Act. But it has never held so far as it has been brought to our notice, that the imposition of such interest cannot be regarded as a penalty.

The next question is whether this interest should be reduced under s. 74 of the Contract Act. Having regard to the fact that 37 per cent. is a very high rate, in our opinion, and that the object of the person requiring it was to evade restriction of interest by the Tenancy Act to 12 per cent. I consider that this is a case where the Court may interfere and would reduce the interest to interest at 12 per cent. per annum. I see no reason for refusing compound interest.

For the above reasons, I would allow this appeal in part and give a decree on the bond sued upon for the principal with 12 per cent. compound interest in lieu of the contract rate. I would allow costs of this appeal and of the lower Court according to success and failure.

Sulaiman, J.—I concur in the order proposed. Having regard to the stipulations contained in the lease and in the bond, it is clear that the intention was to make the defendant-appellant liable under the bond for the payment of the instalments and to give to Narain Das respondent the right to recover the amount through the Civil Court.

I agree that where a high rate of interest is stipulated to become payable only on default of payment of an instalment, the stipulation is in the nature of a penalty within the meaning of s. 74 of the Contract Act. There is no liability to pay interest until default is made, and, therefore, the liability is a punishment for the breach. The explanation to the section indicates that where there is an increase of rate of interest on default of payment the stipulation may be penal. On the same principle, when no interest is payable originally and some interest becomes payable only on default, the agreement would be penal. There is plenty of authority in support of this view, vide Avathani Muthukrishniah v. Sankaralingam

(1) 34 C. 150; 34 I. A. 9; 11 C. W. N. 249; 5 C. L. J. 106; 4 A. L. T. 109; 9 Bom. L. R. 304; 17 M. L. J. 43; 2 M. L. T. 75 (P. C.)

Pillai (2) and Khagaram Das v. Ram Sankar Das Pramanik (3).

I also agree that the rate of interest fixed was exorbitantly high.

By the Court.—The appeal is allowed in part and the claim decreed for the principal with interest at 12 per cent. per annum compounded annually upto the date of the suit, and thereafter at 6 per cent. per annum simple till realization. The parties are to receive and pay costs in both Courts according to success and failure. The costs in this Court will include fees on the higher scale.

A. N. A. Appeal allowed in part.

(2) 18 Ind. Cas. 417; 36 M. 229; 13 M. L. T. 20; 24 M. L. J. 135.

(3) 27 Ind. Cas. 815; 42 C. 652; 21 C. L. J. 79; 19 C. W. N. 775.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 489 OF 1924.

November 29, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sulaiman
and Mr. Justice Kendall.

Goshain SHEO GHULAM PURI—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

*SHIAM LAL BHAGAT—*DEFENDANT

—RESPONDENT.

Religious institutions—Dasnami Goshains—Succession to private property—Devolution of property in spiritual line, whether raises presumption that property belongs to institution.

In the case of a mahant belonging to an order the members of which have to sever their relationship altogether with their natural family, the mere circumstance that certain properties have for several generations devolved in the spiritual line does not lead to any presumption that the properties are trust properties and not the private properties of the mahant. [p. 253, col. 2.]

Indar Singh v. Fateh Singh (2), distinguished.

First appeal from the decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Ghazipurat Ballia, dated the 26th September, 1924.

Dr. Sen, Messrs. B. Malick and Ajudhia-nath, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. P. Pantley, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—First Appeals Nos. 489 of 1924 and 141 of 1925 arise out of two distinct suits which were tried together. The plaintiff in both the suits claimed to be the disciple and the spiritual successor of the late Goshain Rup Puri who was the mahant of the math of Sawdhari Puri. His case is that the deceased under two sale deeds, dated the 21st of October, 1919, and the 13th of January, 1922, transferred the property in dispute in these cases to the contesting defendant and his wife in order to pay off certain amounts due to previous mortgagees, that these properties were part of the math property and there was no legal necessity for their transfer. The defendant contested the claim by denying that the plaintiff was the chela of the deceased and denying that the property was trust property. There was also a plea that there was legal necessity for the alienation.

The learned Subordinate Judge has found most of the issues in favour of the plaintiff. He has held that it has been proved that the plaintiff is the lawful chela of the deceased Goshain, that the sale was for consideration and without any legal necessity and that there was no force in the defendant's plea that the suit was barred by s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act. He has, however, held that it is not shown that the property belonged to the math or appertained to it and that it was the trust property which the deceased could not transfer. On these findings he has dismissed both the suits.

The main point before us is whether the properties covered by the sale deeds were part of the trust property belonging to the math. There was some oral evidence led in the Court below consisting of statements of witnesses based mainly on hearsay to the effect that these properties belonged to the math. The first witness was plaintiff Sheo Ghulam Puri himself who was an interested party. The second witness Ram Subhag Singh was a person of ordinary status, a cultivator in the village, whose deposition did not show that he had any intimate knowledge of the previous history of this estate. Similarly Debi Dayal Tewari's statement also appears to have been based on what he might have heard in the village about the origin of these properties. The same remarks apply to the evidence of Dipa Singh, another cultivator. One of the defendant's witnesses Jagannath Misir was a previous mortgagee of some of the properties and those properties have to be taken out of his possession by redemption. His statement also appears to have been based on a mere opinion. The learned Subordinate Judge who heard these witnesses did not believe that their evidence satisfactorily established that the properties were trust properties. Having examined that evidence we agree that it is not possible to place implicit reliance on the evidence of these witnesses and hold that by their statements they have established that these properties were trust properties.

The learned Advocate for the appellant has next contended that having regard to the fact that these properties have descended from guru to chela for several generations and that it is found that there is some nucleus of trust property, it should be presumed that the succession in the spiritual line took place because these properties were trust properties.

The mahants of this math are Puris and belong to one of the Dasnami Goshains and order founded by the famous Shankaracharya. As pointed out in the case of Ramdhan Puri v. Dalmir Puri (1) before a person is taken into this order finally a number of ceremonies are performed, e.g. the taking off of janeo, the cutting off of his chotia (tuft of hair) and his performing his own saradh. All these indicate that his connection with his natural family and the secular life is altogether severed, and he belongs completely to this order. This would suggest that after he has been taken into the order finally no tie of relationship remains between him and his natural relations, and neither can succeed to the private property of the other. No authority has been cited before us to show that the private property which a mahant of this order might acquire can descend to his natural relations in preference to his spiritual chelas. Prima facie, one would imagine that the devolution of both the trust property and the private property would be in the spiritual line. It cannot be doubted that the rules of succession and devolution prevailing in a particular math are governed by particular customs applicable to it. It cannot be denied that a mahant might acquire private property with his own money, but such property also could not be inherited by the members of his natural family. In this view of the matter there is no significance attached to the mere circumstance that the devolution of these properties has for several generations been in the spiritual line. Great reliance has been placed by Dr. Sen on the case of Indar Singh v. Fateh Singh (2). But it was assumed in that case that there could be devolution on the natural heirs and it was then held that when it was shown that property had descended from one mahant to another to the exclusion of the natural heirs there was a presumption that the property was trust property. In this particular case we are unable to hold either on the evidence or any authority that even the private property of any mahant could have been inherited by his natural heirs.

On the one hand, we have the circumstance that these properties were in the possession of persons who were the mahants of this math, on the other, we have the undoubted fact that between the years 1874 and 1922 there had been various transfers in the form of usufructuary mortgages made by the spiritual great grandfather, grandfather and the father of the present plaintiff. These mahants had been treating these properties as their own properties as if over them they had full disposing power. In the sale-deeds which are disputed in this case, Rup Puri asserted that these properties belonged to him and he was competent to transfer them. We have, therefore, the assertions of private ownership made by these mahants for so long a period, and we also have their course of conduct during all this time. In the absence of any evidence to the contrary it must be assumed that they were dealing with properties which belonged to them as owners. There is no presumption that they were trust properties and the plaintiff has, therefore, failed to prove that they were part of the trust properties belonging to the math. We accordingly dismiss these appeals with costs including fees in this Court on the higher scale.

A. N. A.

Appeals dismissed.

(2) 59 Ind. Cas. 734; 1 Lah. 540; 64 P. W. R. 1920; 49 P. L. R. 1921.

(1) Ind. Cas. 335; 14 C. W. N. 191.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 271 CF 1924.

November 8, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Sulaiman and Mr. Justice Ashworth.KIRTARATH RAI AND OTHERS—DEFEND-ANTS—APPELLANTS
versusSRIPAT RAI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND RAM SURAT RAI alias SURAT RAI—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 27—Specific performance against subsequent transferee for value—Burden of proof of want of notice—Practice—Evidence adduced on both sides—Question of onus of proof immaterial.

Per Ashworth, J.—Where a plaintiff is seeking to take advantage of s. 27 of the Specific Relief Act, it is for him to show that he is entitled under every word of that section to the relief claimed. [p. 256, col. 1.]

Where a person has to prove that notice has been given to another person, the mere fact that the transaction in question might have been known to a considerable number of people will not amount to the necessary proof. [ibid.]

Per Sulaiman, J.—In a suit to enforce specific performance against a transferee for value, the burden of proving want of notice in the first instance lies on the defendant transferee. But, as he can do this by merely denying the fact on oath, the question of burden of proof loses much of its importance. [p. 256, col. 2.]

The question of burden of proof is merely one of procedure and where both parties have led evidence the question loses all its importance. [ibid.]

First appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Ghazipur, dated the 25th April, 1924.

Dr. Sen, Messrs. Umashanker Bajpai and A. P. Pandey, for the Appellants.

Mr. Kamlakant, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Ashworth, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell certain property by the plaintiffs-respondents Sripat Rai and others, the owners of the property.

The suit was brought by the plaintiffs on the allegation that Ramsurat Rai had executed an agreement to sell the property in suit on the 18th of January, 1923. The alleged agreement was that the property would be sold within 10 days for a consideration of Rs. 5,099 set off against previous debts which the vendee would pay at all events and for Rs. 99-15-9 earnest money. There is some contradiction in the terms of this agreement, because in one part it is stated that the whole consideration was Rs. 5,099 whereas reading the deed as a whole it would appear to be Rs. 5,099 plus

Rs. 99-15-9 earnest money. This discrepancy, however, does not appear to me to be of any importance. The plaintiff went on to state that on the 28th of August, 1923, Ramsurat Rai had sold this property and other property to the defendant Kirtirath Rai and others for a cash payment of Rs. 2,500. In this case it appears that the vendees were to take the property with the risk of any encumbrances attaching to it. The reason given in the plaint for the owner of the property selling the property to Kirtirath Rai in spite of having agreed to sell it to the plaintiffs is said to be a desire to cause the plaintiffs and other creditors loss. Although it is difficult to demonstrate positively that the sale to Kirtirath Rai was more valuable to Ramsurat Rai than the sale which the plaintiffs allege was agreed upon by him, on general considerations it is probable that the sale impugned by this suit must have been considered by the vendor more to his advantage. The vendor was at least getting Rs. 2,500 in cash, whereas under the agreement he would only get Rs. 99 in cash. It is true that the property for which he was getting Rs. 2,500 exceeded the property for which he would get Rs. 99 in cash, but it would appear probable that this extra property was encumbered. It is unlikely that the vendor would have acted against his agreement unless he obtained a better price than he could by that agreement.

The suit was resisted on two grounds. One ground was that the agreement was a forgery in the sense that it was never executed by the defendant Ramsurat Rai. He made the usual allegation that he signed a blank paper. The blank paper he said was to have contained a mere bond for Rs. 20 odd. It is obvious that before such a story can be accepted on the part of the defendant there must be very cogent evidence. In this case little reliance has been placed on this plea by the appellants, and I am not disposed to accept it.

The other ground on which the decision of the Subordinate Judge is contested is that the appellant, that is to say, the vendee under the second deed, had no notice of the former deed, and this is the real question in this appeal.

On this point the Subordinate Judge has used the following language in his judgment, "I have no doubt the vendees had knowledge of the agreement when they got the sale-deed executed. The evidence on the plaintiffs' side shows this. On the other side the statement on this point is that of Raja Ram alone. The burden of want of knowledge lay on the defendants. In my opinion the defendants had knowledge of the agreement with the plaintiff. Now the evidence on which the Subordinate Judge based the remarks is as follows:—The plaintiffs through the mouth of Sakhray Rai, one of them, stated that he was told of the proposed sale to Raja Ram by two persons Maheshwar Rai and Raghunayak, and thereupon took the agreement executed in his favour to Raja Ram and showed it to him. Raja Ram said then that he would not proceed with obtaining the sale-deed. In cross-examination Sakhray said that Raghunayak and Maheshwar gave him the information severally, and that there was no third person present on either occasion. He did not remember the date when they told him. Now, ordinarily, I should hold that when a plaintiff suing for specific performance under s. 27 of the Specific Relief Act stated in the proceedings that he had given notice to the defendant vendee it was for that vendee to shake his statement by cross-examination. In this case, however, it appears to me abundantly clear that Sakhray Rai has attempted by his answers to certain preliminary questions in the cross-examination to make it impossible for the vendee to cross-examine effectively on this point. He says that his two informants came separately and no third person was there. He only put up one of these informants as a witness named Maheshwar. He did not remember the date when they told him. His evidence seems to suggest that he straight away went to object to the vendor. It may be assumed, therefore, that the day that he gave notice to the vendor was the same date as that on which he was spoken to by Raghunayak and Maheshwar. He did not remember this date. Every thing seems to have been said by him with a view to exclude cross-examination. In the circumstances I hold that the vendee cannot be prejudiced by not having asked in cross-examination questions to shake the affirmative statement of Sakhray Rai. On the other hand, Raja Ram came into the witness box and denied that he had received notice. It is necessary, however, to point out that it is not only Sakhray Rai who alleged having given notice to the vendee. His witness Maheshwar Rai states that the vendee came to him and asked him to join him in the purchase, and he refused because he knew of the agreement in favour of the plaintiff. But this witness appears open to the objection that no reason whatever has been shown why he should be requested by the vendee to join him in the purchase. He had to admit in cross-examination that he had not joined Raja Ram in any other transaction, and gave no reason why he should be especially asked to join him in this case. In these circumstances I am of the opinion that the plaintiff's evidence to show notice is of a very unreliable kind and would be sufficiently met by the denial of Raja Ram on oath. I should ordinarily have felt disposed to give considerable weight to the Subordinate Judge's estimate of the evidence inasmuch as he actually heard the witnesses, but the Subordinate Judge has not stated that the demeanour of the witnesses impressed him one way or the other. He seems to have thought that because two persons on behalf of the plaintiffs spoke of notice and only one person on the side of the defendant denied notice, the plaintiff must succeed on the point. This argument is not in any case of much weight but in this particular case, as remarked above, the two persons on behalf of the plaintiffs spoke of totally different proceedings. So neither could be tested against the other by cross-examination. Moreover, one of them is open to the objection that he has by his answers precluded all chance of being shaken in cross-examination and the other one is open to the objection that he alleges an improbable thing, namely, that he was asked to join the vendee in the sale without giving any satisfactory reason, indeed any reason whatsoever, for such an improbability taking place. I would note that the judgment in this case by the Subordinate Judge was recorded a month and a half after the evidence was recorded, and this is an additional reason for my not giving much weight to the apparent impression made on him by the witnesses. The only reason for holding that the witnesses did make an impression on him is that he decided the case in favour of the plaintiffs. But the language in the judgment seems to ascribe this decision to another reason, namely, the fact that two witnesses spoke for the plaintiffs and only one for the defendant, a reason which, I have already answered.

The Counsel for the respondents has addressed to us an argument not adopted by the Subordinate Judge. It is that in a village like the one where this transaction took place the agreement by the vender in favour of the plaintiffs could not have taken place without being known to other persons. The village appears from the Gazetteer to have had over 12,000 inhabitants in 1908. The houses of the respective parties appear to be separated by an arm of the river and the two portions of the village bear different names, one being called the main village and other the small village. In these circumstances little force will attach to this argument. Apart from this, it is quite clear to me that where a person has to prove that notice has been given to another person, the mere fact that the transaction in question might have been known to a considerable number of people will not amount to the necessary proof. It has also been contended by the appellant's Counsel that the Subordinate Judge was quite right in placing the burden of proof on the respondents. There is no doubt considerable authority of the Courts in India is in support of this view. Personally I hold that where a plaintiff is seeking to take advantage of s. 27 of the Specific Relief Act it is for him to show that he is entitled under every word of that section to the relief claimed. In the present case the matter is of no great importance as there has been evidence adduced on both sides and it is not a question of an initial burden of proof.

Taking this view of the case I consider that for me to refuse to dissent from the finding of the lower Court as to notice merely on the ground that the lower Court heard the evidence, would in effect amount to hold that there can be no first appeal on a matter of fact.

For the above reasons I would allow this appeal and dismiss the suit with costs throughout.

Sulaiman, J.—I concur in the conclusion.

As regards the question of burden of proof, it seems to me that under s. 27, sub-cl. (b) of the Specific Relief Act a contract can be enforced not only against a party thereto but also against any other person claiming under him by a title arising subsequently to the contract. There is, however, an exception in favour of a transferee for value who has paid his money in good faith and without notice of the plaintiffs' contract. From the language of this section it is clear that any person who wishes to bring himself within the exception must in the first instance show that he is entitled to that exception. I expressed the same view in my dissenting judgment in First Appeal No. 183 of 1919, decided on the 25th of May, 1923, where I quoted cases of all the High Courts in support of that view. Out of these I may only refer to the case of Naubat Rai v. Dhaunkal Singh (1). Since then these rulings have been followed in several other cases. In this view of the matter it is correct to say that the burden of proving want of notice in the first instance, lies on the defendant transferee. But this he can do by merely denying the fact on oath, and, therefore, the question of burden of proof loses much of its importance.

In this particular case no specific ground has been taken in the memorandum of appeal that the burden was laid on the wrong party. The question of burden of proof is merely one of procedure and it is significant that the plaintiff in the lower Court did not insist on the defendant leading the evidence in the first instance but he himself led evidence to prove the giving of notice. Both parties have, therefore, led evidence before the Court and the question of mere burden of proof has lost almost all its importance. We have to weigh the evidence as it stands and come to conclusion whether the fact of notice has or has not been established.

By the Court.—The appeal is allowed and the plaintiffs' suit stands dismissed with costs throughout.

A N. A.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 32 Ind. Cas. 953; 38 A. 184; 14 A. L. J. 111.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.
FULL BENCH.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 148 of 1926.

August 26, 1927.

Present:—Sir Amberson Marten, Kt.,
Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Crump and Mr.
Justice Blackwell.

GANPAT TUKARAM MALI—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SOPANA TUKARAM MALI—DEFENDANT.

—RESPONDENT.

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 80—Promissory note payable on demand—No provision for interest or place of payment—Maker's liability to pay interest at 6 per cent. from date of note.

In a suit brought after demand made on a promissory note payable on demand which is silent as to interest and specifies no place of payment, interest is recoverable under the Negotiable Instruments Act from the maker of the note at six per cent. per annum from the date of the promissory note. [p. 265, col. 1.]

Framroz Eduljee Dinshaw v. Mahomed Essa (1) and Bishun Chand v. Audh Bihari Lal (3), followed.

Best v. Haji Muhammad Sait (2), dissented from.

Per Marten, C. J.—Section 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act gives interest as a matter of right in cases to which it applies. [ibid.]

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Poona, in Appeal No. 7 of 1925, varying the decree of the Joint Second Class Subordinate Judge at Poona, in Civil Suit No. 1006 of 1923.

The case came on for hearing before Marten, C. J., and Crump, J., and their Lordships made the following

ORDER OF REFERENCE TO A FULL BENCH.

Marten, C. J.—This second appeal raises a short but important point, viz., whether in a promissory note payable on demand but not at a specified place interest can be awarded under s. 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act from the date of the promissory note, or only from the date of actual demand or else from the date of suit. The trial Court awarded interest from the date of the promissory note. The lower Appellate Court varied that decision and awarded interest from the date of actual demand. The plaintiff appeals. The respondent does not appear.

The promissory note itself is dated September 8, 1920, whereby the promisee promised to re-pay Rs. 2,600 "whenever you demand either in this country or in any other country." It was executed apparently at Bombay where the promisee resides. Nothing was said in the instrument about interest. We hold that on the true construction of this note there is no specified place of payment within the meaning of ss. 64 and 69 of the Act. A specific demand for payment was made on July 4, 1923. The suit was brought about September 4, 1923.

Turning next to s. 80, that section, as modified by s. 2 of Act XXX of 1926, runs:—

"When no rate of interest is specified in the instrument, interest on the amount due thereon shall, notwithstanding any agreement relating to interest between any parties to the instrument, be calculated at the rate of six per centum per annum from the date at which the same ought to have been paid by the party charged, until tender or realization of the amount due thereon, or until such date after the institution of a suit to recover such amount as the Court directs."

The question then is what is the date at which the suit promissory note "ought to have been paid" by the defendant within the meaning of s. 80. In this respect s. 80 may be contrasted with s. 79 which provides:—

"When interest at a specified rate is expressly made payable on a promissory note or Bill of Exchange, interest shall be calculated at the rate specified, on the amount of the principal money due thereon, from the date of the instrument, until tender or realization of such amount, or until such date after the institution of a suit to recover such amount as the Court directs."

There is, therefore, a contrast, as pointed out by my brother Crump, in the wording of these two sections, s. 80 providing for interest from the date when the money ought to have been paid, and s. 79 from the date of the instrument itself.

Mr. B. G. Rao who has assisted the Court by bringing several authorities to our attention, whether they tell in his favour or against him, naturally relies on Framroz Eduljee Dinshaw v. Mahomed Essa (1), where Sir Norman MacLeod and Mr. Justice Coyajee held that in such a case interest is payable from the date of the instrument. They expressly differed from Best v. Haji Muhammad Sait (2), where a Division Bench of that Court held the contrary. There is another authority in Bishun Chand v. Audh Bihari Lal (3), where Mr. Justice Mullick and Mr. Justice Atkinson held, in a judgment delivered by the latter, that interest ran from the date of the instrument. We were also referred to Brojendro Kissore v. Hindustan Co-operative Insurance Society (4), where Sir Lancelot Sanderson in a case on limitation held that time ran from the date of the instrument. A further authority was cited, viz., D. N. Shaha & Co. v. Bengal National Bank, Ltd. (5), a decision of Mr. Justice Mookerjee, with respect to s. 9 of the Act on an overdue bill. Reference was also made to some observations by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ameer-con-nissa v. Moorad-con-nissa (6), showing that in certain classes of cases a demand may be necessary and in others not.

(1) 94 Ind. Cas. 21; 50 B. 266; 28 Bom. L. R. 141;
A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 241.

(2) 23 M. 18; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 407

Now if I may be excused for any charge of egotism, it so happens that this particular point is one which has frequently come before me on the Original Side and for which I have been awaiting an opportunity for many years to have argued and finally settled. It came before me in a case Mathuradas v. Maganlal, Original Civil Jurisdiction Suit No. 1848 of 1919, on October 11, 1919. I then made an examination as best I could of the available authorities, and the uncorrected notes of my judgment should, I think, be kept and be available to the present parties for assistance in argument. I then came to the conclusion (which of course will be open to revision) that as far as English Law was concerned, it was clearly settled by two different lines of authorities: (1) that in the case of a promissory note payable on demand interest runs from the date of demand, or if no demand is made, from the date of the writ or its service; and (2), that as a promissory note payable on demand is payable at once, the Statute of Limitations runs from the date of the note and no demand is necessary before action is brought. I there referred, inter alia, to Norton v. Ellam (7), In re George Francis

v. Bruce (8); In re Brown's Estate, Brown v. Brown (9) and Edwards v. Walters (10) as showing that a demand prior to writ is not essential; that the writ itself is a demand; and that the note itself matures as soon as it is made and delivered to the payee. Norton v. Ellam (7) is cited by Sir Lancelot Sanderson in his judgment in Brojendro's case (4), which I have already alluded to.

There is, however, another line of authority beginning with Vernon v. Cholmondeley (11): also Blaney v. Hendricks (12), Upton v. Lord Ferrers (13), Lowndes v. Collens (14), Webster v. British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co. (15) and Pierce v. Fothergill (16). In this last case the head-note runs:—

"On a promissory note payable on demand, where there is no proof of any agreement for interest, the plaintiff is only entitled to interest from the day of issuing the writ of summons."

Then there is another case in In re East of England Banking Co., (17). That was a case where some notes were payable at Norwich and others at the London and Westminster Bank in England, and it was held that if the note required to be presented at a particular place, it must, of course, be presented at that place. As to the more general proposition, Vice Chancellor Mallins in In re East of England Banking Co. (18) in the Court below (with whom the Judges in the Court of Appeal agreed) said (page 375*):

"Where a note is payable on demand which on the face of it does not carry interest, it is perfectly well-known that it carries interest only from the time when the demand is made."

The law is similarly stated in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. II, page 524.

(8) (1890) 44 Ch. D. 627; 59 L. J. Ch. 709; 63 L. T. 49; 38 W. R. 617.

(9) (1893) 2 Ch. 300; 62 L. J. Ch. 695; 3 R. 463; 69 L. T. 12; 41 W. R. 440.

(10) (1896) 2 Ch. 157 at p. 166; 65 L. J. Ch. 557; 74 L. T. 396; 44 W. R. 547.

(11) (1722) Bunbury 119; 145 E. R. 617.

(12) (1770) 2 Black. W. 761; 3 Wils. 205; 96 E. R. 445.

(13) (1801) 5 Ves. Jun. 801; 31 E. R. 866; 5 R. R. 167.

(14) (1810) 17 Ves. Jun. 27; 31 E. R. 11.

(15) (1850) 15 Ch. D. 169; 49 L. J. Ch. 769; 43 L. T. 229; 28 W. R. 818.

(16) (1835) 2 Bing. N. C. 167; 132 E. R. 66.

(17) (1869) 4 Ch. A. 14; 38 L. J. Ch. 121; 19 L. T. 299; 17 W. R. 18.

(18) (1868) 6 Eq. 368.

*Page of (1868) 6 Eq.—[Ed.]

(3) 40 Ind. Cas. 350; 2 Pat. L. J. 451; 1 P. L. W. 615; (1917) Pat. 279.

(4) 39 Ind. Cas. 705; 44 C. 978 at p. 989; 25 C. L. J. 238; 21 C. W. N. 482.

(5) 60 Ind. Cas. 940; 47 C. 861; 33 C. L. J. 541.

(6) 6 M. L. A. 211; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 211; 19 E. R. 79.

(7) (1837) 2 M. & W. 461; 1 M. & H. 69; 1 Jur. 423; 6 L. J. Ex. 121; 46 R. R. 646; 150 E. R. 839.

Those two lines of authorities must, therefore, be, I think, carefully considered. They do not appear to have been considered in the Indian cases at present cited to us. Of course, apart from what the English Law is or even mercantile custom, we have to consider primarily what is the true construction of the Indian Act, viz., the Negotiable Instruments Act, by which we are governed. In Mathuradas v. Maganlal, Original Civil Jurisdiction Suit No. 1848 of 1919, I had not got to decide this precise point because the note there was payable at a specified place. I held on the evidence that a demand had been made at the specified place at some date prior to the plaint, but as that date was not proved I only awarded interest from the date of the plaint.

There is a subsidiary point, as to whether s. 80 applies to a case where no interest is mentioned at all. But that has been decided in the Indian cases, that is to say, both in Best v. Haji Muhammad Sait (2), and Bishun Chand v. Audh Bihari Lal (3), as well as in Framroz Eduljee Dinshaw v. Mahomed Essa (1), that s. 80 does apply to such a case.

Under all the circumstances we think this is a case where the matter ought to be decided finally by a Full Bench. We will, accordingly, refer the question to a Full Bench.

It is unfortunate that the respondent does not appear in the present case, and, therefore, we have been without the benefit of any argument on his behalf. If the same unfortunate position should arise before the Full Bench, possibly it may be arranged that some member of the Bar will act as amicus curiæ, and assist the Bench by a legal argument in support of the view taken by the lower Appellate Court.

I should have added that the other provisions as to interest will be found in the Interest Act of 1839, and s. 34 of the Civil Procedure Code. But the present claim for interest is not made under either of those Acts but under the Negotiable Instruments Act.

The precise question for the consideration of the Full Bench will be, as framed by my brother Crump, viz.,—

"A suit is brought after demand made on a promissory note payable on demand. The note is silent as to interest and specifies no place for payment. Is interest recoverable? If so, from what date and at what rate?"

The reference was heard by a Full Bench composed of Marten, C. J., and Crump and Blackwell, JJ.

Mr. B. G. Rao, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. J. Wadia, Amicus Curiae, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Marten, C. J.—The question submitted to this Full Bench runs as follows:—

"A suit is brought after demand made on a promissory note payable on demand. The note is silent as to interest and specifies no place for payment. Is interest recoverable? If so, from what date and at what rate?"

I will first consider whether interest can be claimed under the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881. This depends primarily on two points arising on the construction of s. 80, viz., (1) whether the section includes cases where as here no interest at all is mentioned in the instrument, or whether it is confined to cases where interest is mentioned in the instrument, but not the actual rate, and (2) what is the date at which the amount due on the instrument ought to have been paid by the party charged. It is important to observe that the party charged in the present case is the maker, and not an indorser. Throughout this case, therefore, we are dealing only with the liability of a maker of a promissory note.

As regards the first point the section provides that "when no rate of interest is specified in the instrument, interest on the amount due thereon" shall be calculated, etc. On the true construction of this section I would hold that if no interest is mentioned at all, then "no rate of interest" is mentioned, and consequently the section applies. This, I think, is the ordinary meaning of the language used, and I see no reason to cut down what seems to me its plain meaning. In fact, cases where interest is mentioned, but not the rate, are rare cases, on the other hand, where no interest is mentioned at all, are quite common. It is true that s. 79 deals with cases where interest at a "specified rate" is made payable in the instrument. But I do not think that it follows from this that s. 80 ought to be construed as referring only to cases where interest at an unspecified rate is mentioned. The Legislature intend, ed, I think, by s. 80 to provide for all the other cases generally.

The above view has been the one adopted either expressly or by assumption in the Indian authorities on the point. As regards Best v. Haji Muhammad Sait (2) where the Court expressly adopted that construction and reversed the decision of the trial Judge to the contrary, I would only mention that I do not rest my opinion on the law merchant prior to the Act, but on the plain words of the Act itself. In this respect I would refer to what Lord Herschell has said in Bank of England v. Vagliano (19) to the effect that the proper way of construing an Act is in the first place to examine closely the language of the Act itself, and not to start with inquiring how the law previously stood, and then to base the construction of the Act on that.

Turning next to the second point, this is the crux of the case. It depends on the meaning to be given to the words "be calculated" from the date at which the same "ought to have been paid by the party charged." When then is the amount on a promissory note like this due, and when ought it to be paid? This throws us back on the earlier sections of the Act. Section 19 provides that a promissory note in which no time for payment is specified is payable on demand. The Act contains no definition of the words on "demand." But s. 21 provides that the expressions "at sight" and "on presentment" mean on demand; whereas the expression "after sight" means, in a promissory note, after presentment for sight. Next comes an important section, viz., 22, which provides that the maturity of a promissory note is the date at which it falls due. Then it provides for days of grace, except in the case of promissory notes payable on demand.

Next, turning to another important section, viz., 32, this provides that "in the absence of a contract to the contrary, the maker of a promissory note and the acceptor... are bound to pay the amount thereof at maturity according to the apparent tenor of a note... In default of such payment as aforesaid, such maker... is bound to compensate any party to the note or bill for any loss or damage sustained by him and caused by such default." This section has clearly a material bearing on the meaning of the word "ought" in s. 80.

Next, s. 64, which deals with presentment for payment, provides that "where a promissory note is payable on demand, and is not payable at a specified place, no presentment is necessary in order to charge the maker thereof." Section 74 provides that a negotiable instrument payable on demand must be presented for payment within a reasonable time after it is received by the holder. This, I take it, must be subject to the exception in s. 64. Section 76 provides that no presentment for payment is necessary, and the instrument is dishonoured at the due date for presentment in certain cases e. g., sub-s. (b) "as against any party sought to be charged therewith, if he has engaged to pay notwithstanding non-presentment." Then follow ss. 79 and 80, which I have already referred to. Section 81 provides that any person liable to pay, and called upon by the holder thereof to pay, the amount due on a promissory note, is, before payment, entitled to have it shown to him. It will be noted that this section contemplates two contingencies, viz., (1), a liability to pay, and (2) a request to pay. Section 92 provides that a promissory note is said to be dishonoured by non-payment when the maker of the note makes default in payment upon being duly required to pay the same. The above, I think, are the more material clauses for our consideration.

In my opinion, the first essential to determine is what is the maturity of the suit promissory note, for under s. 32 this is the date at which the maker has to pay it. Now under s. 22 the maturity of this note is the date at which it falls due. We have no further guidance in the Act as to the meaning of maturity in the case of the suit promissory note. Nor, as I have already said, is there any definition in the Act of the words "on demand" which are mentioned in s. 19 and elsewhere. But it is well-settled law in England that a promissory note payable on demand becomes payable at once. A leading case on the subject is Norton v. Ellam (7). In that case there was a note payable with interest on demand, and the question was from what time the Statute of Limitations began to run. Baron Parke, in giving judgment, said (page 464*) :—

"I entertain no doubt at all on this point. It is the same as the case of money lent payable upon request, with interest, where no demand is necessary before bringing the action. There is no obligation in law to give any notice at all; if you choose to make it part of the contract that notice shall be given, you may do so. The debt which constitutes the cause of action arises instantly on the loan. Where money is lent, simply, it is not denied that the Statute begins to run from the time of lending. Then is there any difference where it is payable with interest? It is quite clear that a promissory note, payable on demand, is a present debt, and is payable without any demand, and the Statute begins to run from the date of it. Then the stipulation for compensation in the shape of interest makes no difference, except that thereby the debt is continually increasing de die in diem."

(19) (1891) A. C. 107 at p. 144; 60 L. J. Q. B. 145; 64 T. 353; 39 W. R. 657; 55 J. P. 676.

*Page of (1831) 2 M. & W.—[Ed.]

That decision has often been followed. I may refer, for instance, to In re George : Francis v. Bruce (8), where Mr. Justice Chitty held that a promissory note payable on demand with interest from the date thereof, is a present debt, and "at maturity" as soon as given. This decision was approved by the Court of Appeal in Edwards v. Walters (10), where Lord Lindley says (page 166*):—

"A promissory note payable on demand is payable at once without any demand, and may be sued upon accordingly. Such a note, therefore, 'matures' within the meaning of s. 62 as soon as the note is made and delivered to the payee (see In re George, Francis v. Bruce (8))."

Lord Lopes says (page 169*):—

"Unders. 62, for a renunciation to be effectual the note must be mature. A note such as this—a note payable on demand—is at maturity immediately it is made, and therefore that portion of the section is complied with."

In In re Brown's Estate, Brown v. Brown (9) Mr. Justice Chitty applied this principle, to a case where there was a covenant by a father and son in a mortgage to pay "on demand," and also "in the meantime from the date hereof" to pay interest. The father was surety for the son. There the learned Judge said (page 304†):—

"I am not satisfied that the distinction attempted to be made between the law merchant and the general law with regard to the meaning of the words 'pay on demand' can be supported."

Then after citing a part of the above passage from Norton v. Ellam (7), he proceeded (page 304*):

"That is a general proposition and not one based upon the law merchant; and, without going through the whole of the cases to which I have referred in the course of the argument, it is plain that a distinction has been taken and maintained in law, the result of which is, that where there is a present debt and a promise to pay on demand, the demand is not considered to be a condition precedent to the bringing of the action. But it is otherwise on a promise to pay a collateral sum on request, for then the request ought to be made before action brought."

The learned Judge then held, on the construction of the particular deed before him, that the father was only liable as a surety and that a demand should be made before bringing any action on the father's covenant.

As far as the Indian authorities are concerned, the English Law on this particular point has been followed in Bishun Chand v. Audh Bihari Lal (3), a decision of Mr. Justice Mullick and Mr. Justice Atkinson, and in Framroz Eduljee Dinshaw v. Mahomed Essa (1), a decision of Sir Norman Macleod and Mr. Justice Coyajee. These two cases do not, however, refer to another line of English authorities which lay down that though an action may be brought without a prior demand, no interest will be awarded in a case like the present except from the date of demand (if any) or alternatively from the date of suit. These other authorities I will deal with later. Further, as regards Framroz Eduljee Dinshaw v. Mahomed Essa (1), I notice that there the note was payable "in Bombay". It does not appear to have been discussed whether by these words the note was payable "at a specified place" within the meaning of s. 69. If so, then a demand was necessary as I held in an unreported case of Mathuradas v. Maganlal, Original Civil Jurisdiction Suit No. 1848 of 1919, decided by Marten, J., on October 11, 1919. But it is unnecessary to discuss that question in the present case, and I give no opinion on it. I would only refer in that connection to a case I previously followed, viz., In re East of

*Page of (1896) 2 Ch.—[Ed.]

†Page of (1893) 2 Ch.—[Ed.]

*Page of (1893) 2 Ch.—[Ed.]

England Banking Co. (17), which I will deal with later.

On the main point I am dealing with Sir Lancelot Sanderson in Brojendra Kissore v. Hindustan Co-operative Insurance Society (4), in deciding a case of limitation, stated (page 988)*:—

"The promissory note being payable on demand, there was a present debt, which was payable without any demand."

Then after citing Norton v. Ellam (7), above mentioned, the learned Chief Justice proceeded (page 989)*:—

"This is the English Law, and in my judgment it is the same here, and this is recognised by the provision in the Statute of Limitations, Art. 73, which provides that in the case of a promissory note payable on demand and not accompanied by any writing restraining or postponing the right to sue, the period of limitation begins to run from the date of the note".

So, too, in Secretary of State for India v. Radhika Prasad Bapuli (20), the trial Judge, Mr. Justice Coutts Trotter, stated (page 276†):—

"The result of the English cases is clearly this that where you merely have 'on demand' without its being a necessary factor in the determination of the time of payment it means nothing more than the money is to be paid unconditionally as in the ordinary cases of promissory notes 'on demand I promise to pay,' the 'on demand' does not import that it is a condition precedent to the liability arising that a demand should be made; but where demand is necessary to fix some subsequent date or where the obligation is collateral and, therefore, a contingent liability, so that until the demand is made the person said to be liable does not know that his liability has come into being then demand is a condition precedent to a successful claim".

On appeal Sir Walter Schwabe said (page 288†):—

"According to the Law of England when money is payable on demand and nothing further is said, it is payable at once and without demand and time under the Statute of Limitations begins to run at once. The most common instances of the application of that principle are of money lent repayable on demand or at request, and promissory notes payable on demand".

The learned Chief Justice then referred to Tarinee Parshad Ghose v. Pran Kishen Banerjee (21), where it was held that the principle of the English Common Law did not apply to cases in the Mofussil. That case, however, was long before the present Negotiable Instruments Act. And it would appear that the notes or bonds in Secretary of State for India v. Radhika Prasad Bapuli (20) were not promissory notes within the meaning of the Indian Limitation Act (see page 269*). The eventual decision was that a demand was necessary because the instruments were payable at a particular place and in some cases in a particular manner (page 290*).

In D. N. Shaha & Co. v. Bengal National Bank, Ltd. (5), a case on a promissory note, Mr. Justice Mookerjee said (page 864†):—

"As explained in Norton v. Ellam (7)... no demand is necessary before bringing an action upon a note payable on demand, because its payment is a duty which attaches the moment the loan is given and the note is made. To put the matter differently, the creditor cannot extend the period of limitation by omission to make a demand and time runs against him from the date of the note, on the principle that the cause of action arises instantly on the loan and the contract on the note is in a state of being broken perpetually".

Counsel also cited to us Ram Chunder Ghosaul v. Juggutmonmohiney Dabee (22). This was the case of a mortgage-deed where the money was expressed to be paid on demand, and there Sir Richard Garth and Mr. Justice Markby differed as to whether a demand was necessary.

I may also state that in Madhavbhai Shivbhai v. Fattesing Nathubhai (23) it appears that Sir Michael Westropp had in an earlier case on the Original Side followed the English Law as to a demand not being necessary before suit brought. But in a case then before the Court from the Mofussil, the learned Judge was not pre-(20) 74 Ind. Cas. 785; 46 M. 259; 44 M. L. J. 685; 18 L. W. 210; A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 667.

*Pages of 44 C.—[Ed.]

†Pages of 46 M.—[Ed.]

(21) 14 W. R. 224; 6 B. L. R. 160.

(22) 4 C. 283; 3 C. L. R. 336; 2 Shome L. R. 2; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 180.

(23) 10 B. H. C. R. 487.

*Pages of 46 M.—[Ed.]

†Page of 47 C.—[Ed.]

pared to say that that necessarily applied to Mofussil cases.

Reference may also be made to Amceroon-Nissa v. Moorad-oon-Nissa (6), where at page 229* their Lordships recognise that the "authorities show that there may be cases where an action would not lie except where a request or demand is made, and others where such demand is not necessary".

The clear trend then of the cases above mentioned, at any rate the more modern ones, is to accept the English view on the subject. In Best v. Haji Muhammad Sait (2) the opposite conclusion was arrived at. But that decision turned on the following sentence in the judgment with relation to the application of s. 80: "The notes being payable on demand, it is not the date of the making, but the date of demand, that must be taken as the point from which to calculate interest". Accordingly, interest was only given from the respective dates of demand. With all respect to the learned Judges this conclusion was arrived at without any express reference to the Negotiable Instruments Act, nor as to the meaning usually given in a Court of Law to the words "on demand". Under these circumstances, and with all respect, I am unable to follow the decision.

So far as the Indian Limitation Act is concerned, it will be seen from Art. 73 that on a promissory note payable on demand, time runs from the date of the note. So, too, under Art. 59 where money is lent under an agreement that it shall be payable on demand, time runs from the date when the loan is made. On the other hand, if money is deposited under an agreement that it shall be payable on demand, including money of a customer in the hands of his banker, then under Art. 60 time runs from the date when the demand is made. And as my brother Blackwell has pointed out, a demand may be necessary in certain other cases, apart from the Indian Limitation Act, e. g., where the cause of action is in detinue or in trover. [See Clayton v. Le Roy (24), a decision of the Court of Appeal].

A main point for the respondent which we have considered very carefully is that under English Law interest only runs from the date of demand under a promissory note (24) (1911) 2 K. B. 1031; 81 L. J. K. B. 49; 104 L. T. 419; 75 J. P. 229; 27 T. L. R. 206.

*Page of 6 M. I. A.—[Ed.]

like the present. Curiously enough this point does not appear to have been considered in the Indian cases so far reported. But the proposition itself is clear in English Law from the long line of authorities cited in the referring judgment.

Thus in Pierce v. Fothergill (16) the head-note runs:—

"On a promissory note payable on demand, where there is no proof of any agreement for interest, the plaintiff is only entitled to interest from the day of issuing the writ of summons".

So, too, in In re East of England Banking Co. (18), Vice Chancellor Malins said (page 375*):—

"The law is perfectly well-known and distinct, that with regard to all negotiable instruments, by the law merchant, every Bill of Exchange and promissory note carries interest from the date of its maturity. Where a note on demand, having no period of payment, is intended to bear interest, the usual course is to say 'I promise to pay on demand so much money with interest at a certain rate', otherwise it will carry no interest until the demand is made. But where a note is payable on demand which on the face of it does not carry interest, it is perfectly well-known that it carries interest only from the time when the demand is made. The notes in respect of which interest is here claimed were common Bank notes, I presume in the usual form. The Banker promises to 'pay bearer on demand'".

That case went on appeal, and it would appear from the arguments and judgments that the notes were to be presented either at the Company's bank at Norwich or at the London and Westminster Bank in London [see In re East of England Banking Co. (17)]. It was held on appeal that a demand was, therefore, necessary, but that in fact such demands had been made at the proper places.

The above general proposition is stated to the like effect in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. II, page 524. It is now embodied in s. 57 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882. We have, therefore, in the English Act a clear provision that presentment is necessary so far as a claim to interest is concerned. But we have no corresponding section in the Indian Act. On the contrary, s. 80 awards interest from the time when the money due ought to have been paid. But if we once arrive at a clear opinion as to the true construction of the Indian Act, then we cannot be influenced by the circumstance that the English Act contains an equally clear provision to the contrary. It may be unfortunate that there should thus be a difference between Indian and English Law as to the effect of a particular class of negotiable instruments. But this is a matter for the Legislature to remedy, if remedy is needed, and not for us.

*Page of (1868) 6 Eq.—[Ed.]

It was strenuously argued by Mr. Wadia that the words "on demand" in the promissory note and in s. 19 ought to be given their popular meaning, and that consequently the maker was under no obligation to pay until he received a demand as was indeed held in Best v. Haji Muhammad Sait (2) already cited. The argument further ran that there was no "injuria", and, therefore, no cause of action until a demand had been made and refused; and that to hold otherwise would be to give a legal cause of action without a legal injury having been suffered. But as regards the meaning to be attributed to the words "on demand", in a negotiable instrument, I think, they have become too crystallised by mercantile usage and judicial decisions to be given now a different meaning. We are really invited to hold that a promissory note payable on demand does not fall due within the meaning of s. 22 at its date and ought not to be paid at once. This I find myself quite unable to do. The argument is really in the teeth of the main decisions to the contrary in England and India, and its acceptance would certainly cause considerable confusion in the mercantile community, and incidentally lead to other difficulties in the construction or application of the Act which I need not consider.

As regards the absence of an "injuria" it must be taken that the "injuria" is the non-payment of the promissory note at the date thereof. No doubt parties do not usually intend that the money should be re-paid the instant it is advanced. But clearly in law the promisee may, if he likes, make an immediate demand for the money. Therefore, the corresponding legal position as regards the promisor is not so illogical as it might at first sight appear.

Nor is there anything really inequitable in arriving at this conclusion. A man who borrows money and gives a promissory note can hardly expect that the lender is a philanthropist, and will not charge any interest. And if the interest the borrower has to pay is confined to six per cent, as it is by s. 80, then he may think himself lucky to get off with that rate and not to have to pay a substantially higher rate, as is more usually the case in present-day money transactions in India.

The real explanation is that the words "on demand" are only a sort of label to identify a particular form of document, and that to ascertain the rights and obligations of the parties under a document in that particular form one has to turn to the provisions of the Act itself, as explained by settled authority on the point.

As regards the criticisms of Austin on Jurisprudence as to this particular principle of the English Common Law, it may be answered that if a plaintiff brings a suit on a promissory note without any prior demand, he may be able to maintain the suit. But, on the other hand, if the litigation is really unnecessary and vexatious and brought without any previous warning, it is conceivable that the Court might refuse him any costs [Walter v. Steinkopff (25)]. In that event the result of the writ might have little more effect than a demand in writing, assuming the defendant at once tendered the amount.

After careful consideration then of the Act, and of the numerous authorities in India and in England that have been cited to us, I would hold that a promissory note like the one we have here matures and falls due within the meaning of s. 22 at the date when it is made. Consequently, under s. 32 the maker is bound to pay it at that same date, and presentment for payment is unnecessary having regard to s. 64. In my judgment, therefore, the date at which the suit note "ought to have been paid by the party charged" within the meaning of s. 80 is the date of the note itself. In the present case the party charged is the maker. If he had been the indorser, different considerations would arise, for, under the explanation to s. 80, the indorser would be liable to pay interest only from the time that he received notice of dishonour.

In this connection I am not prepared, on the construction of this particular Act, to draw a distinction between the words "are bound to pay" in s. 32, and the words

(25) (1892) 3 Ch. 489 at p. 501; 61 L. J. Ch. 521; 67 L. T. 184; 40 W. R. 599.

"ought to have been paid" in s. 80. I think in this Act they mean substantially the same thing, and that if the maker of a note was "bound to pay" it at maturity, then he "ought to have paid" it at maturity.

In the result, therefore, I would hold that in the present case the promissory note became payable immediately on its execution, that that was the date at which it ought to have been paid within the meaning of s. 80, and that accordingly as against the maker, the promisee is entitled to interest at six per cent. per annum from the date of the note. I would, therefore, answer the specific question submitted to us as follows: "Yes, under the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, from the maker of the promissory note at six per cent. per annum from the date of the promissory note."

As then, in my judgment, the promisee is entitled to interest, I think it is unnecessary to consider the effect of the Interest Act, 1839. For there the matter depends on the discretion of the Court, and if the debt is not payable "at a certain time", then interest would only run from the date of a demand giving notice that interest would be claimed. So, too, as regards s. 34 of the Civil Procedure Code, that is also discretionary, and only applies to interest from the date of the suit. On the other hand, s. 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act gives interest as a matter of right in cases to which it applies.

In conclusion, I would like to acknowledge the assistance given to the Court by the able arguments of Mr. Rao and Mr. Wadia, and to say that the latter's argument as amicus curiae has been none-the-less valuable because in the result we have decided in favour of the appellant. We have thereby had an advantage which the Court in Framroz Eduljee Dinshaw v. Mahomed Essa (1) and in some other cases did not have, viz., arguments on both sides of the question.

Crump, J.—I agree and have nothing to add.

Blackwell, J.—I agree.

The Division Bench passed the following judgment on the merits.

Marten, C. J.—Having regard to the decision of the Full Bench, the interest payable under the promissory-note runs from the date of the note itself, viz., September 8, 1920, and not, as found by the lower Appellate Court, from the date of demand. The appeal, consequently, must be allowed on that point. Further, the learned Judge has not awarded any costs to the successful plaintiff, and his order must be varied in that connection also.

That being so, our order will be: Appeal allowed. Orders in both Courts below set aside. Decree that the defendant do pay to the plaintiff Rs. 2,600 with interest at six per cent. per annum from September 8, 1920, to the date of to-day's judgment, and costs throughout in all Courts with further interest from the date of this judgment at six per cent. per annum on the balance of the principal sum of Rs. 2,600 and costs for the time being remaining unpaid. The said amount to be recoverable from and to be paid by the defendant in equal annual instalments of Rs. 400 each, the first of the same to be paid on November 30, 1927. On failure of the defendant to pay any two instalments, the plaintiff is to be at liberty to recover the whole amount outstanding.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 798 OF 1925.

July 21, 1927.

Present:—Sir Amberson Marten, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.
SAKHARAM BALA NIKAM—PLAINTIFF
—APPELLANT

versus

THAMA BALA NIKAM AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow—Surrender—Alienation by widow—Subsequent surrender to next reversioner—Validity of surrender.

A Hindu widow who has parted with her property to the extent of her estate or interest as a widow cannot thereafter make a valid surrender to the next reversioner. [p. 267, col. 1.]

A Hindu widow made a gift of estate inherited by her from her husband to her husband's brother's son. She then made a gift of the same to her daughter, the next reversioner, and again, made an adoption. The adopted son sued the daughter for possession:

Held, that the gift to the daughter was invalid inasmuch as the widow had put it out of her power to make a valid surrender by the earlier gift. [ibid.]

Second appeal from the decision of the Assistant Judge, Satara, in Appeal No. 27 of 1925, reversing the decree of the Subordinate Judge at Satara, in Civil Suit No. 139 of 1923.

Mr. Ambedkar (with him Mr. B. G. Modak),
for the Appellant.

Mr. K. N. Koyajee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Marten, C. J.—In this case a Hindu widow Thama defendant No. 1 passed two deeds of gift, viz., (1) on September 23, 1918, Ex. 23, in favour of Rama, and (2) on August 20, 1921, Ex. 20, in favour of her own daughter and reversioner, Sau, defendant No. 2. Then on January 22, 1922, she adopted the plaintiff. The present contest is between the daughter Sau claiming under the deed of gift of August, 1921, Ex. 20, and the plaintiff, the adopted son. The trial Court decided in favour of the adopted son. The lower Appellate Court decided in favour of the daughter. The adopted son appeals.

The daughter bases her claim on this that there was a valid surrender by the deed of August, 1921, of the mother's life-interest in favour of the daughter and reversioner, whereby the reversion became accelerated and the life-interest of the widow extinguished. On the other hand it is contended by the adopted son that the widow could not in August, 1921, pass her whole interest in the property because she had already purported to convey it to Rama by the earlier deed of gift of 1918.

The question, therefore, becomes one of law as to what are the essential conditions to enable a Hindu widow effectually to surrender her interest to the reversioner. Now fortunately their Lordships of the Privy Council have laid down the essentials to such a surrender in Rangasami Gounden v. Nachiappa Gounden (1), where it is stated (page 34*):

"The result of the consideration of the decided cases may be summarized thus: (1) An alienation by a widow of her deceased husband's estate held by her may be validated if it can be shown to be a surrender of her whole interest in the whole estate in favour of the nearest reversioner or reversioners at the time of the alienation. In such circumstances the question of necessity does not fall to be considered. But the surrender must be a bona fide surrender, not a device to divide the estate with the reversioner."

In my judgment, having regard to the earlier deed, Ex. 23, of September, 1918,

(1) 50 Ind. Cas. 498; 46 E. A. 72; 21 Bom. L. R. 640 36 M. L. J. 493; 17 A. L. J. 536; 29 C. L. J. 539; 23 C. W. N. 777; (1919) M. W. N. 262; 42 M. 523; 26 M. L. T. 5; 10 L. W. 105; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 66 (P. C.).

*Page of 46 I. A.—[Ed.]

the widow had put it out of her power to surrender her whole interest in the whole estate in favour of the nearest reversioner. It is true that by that earlier deed there was a small portion of the property that was not conveyed to Rama, viz., some two acres, so we are told. But apart from those two acres, the whole estate consisting, we are informed, of some eighteen acres and a house, was conveyed to Rama, who was her nephew.

We have been referred to various authorities, but none of them appear to be precisely on all fours with this case, although one in Prafulla Kamini Roy v. Bhabani Nath Roy (2) comes close to it. There unfortunately the learned Judges differed in their opinion, and consequently I take it that so far as that High Court is concerned, the matter must be regarded as an open question. That was not a case of adoption. It was a case where a widow had made a gift of a part of her estate to T, and had subsequently purported to surrender the whole of her estate to her next reversioner. It was held by Mr. Justice Page that the reversioner became immediately entitled to recover possession of the property given to T, and that his right in that behalf was not postponed until after the widow's death. Mr. Justice Walsmely took the opposite view. Now I quite appreciate the observations which Mr. Justice Page has made there as to the nature of a Hindu widow's interest. As has been pointed out by their Lordships of the Privy Council it is not an interest which can be specifically described in terms of western law as a life-estate or any other particular estate. But in so far as one follows the analogy of life-estates, it would be perfectly clear that if a tenant for life assigns his life interest to A, then he would be unable to surrender that life-interest to the next remainderman. There could be, as far as the English Law is concerned, no merger either in law or equity. If, on the other hand, the surrender was by A of his life-interest to the remainderman, then it would follow that the life-interest would ordinarily be merged in the reversion, as is shown in the well-known taxing case of Attorney-General v. Beech (3) (Cf. Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. XIII, page 187).

(2) 91 Ind. Cas. 897; 52 C. 1018; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 121.

(3) (1899) A. C. 53; 68 L. J. Q. B. 130; 63 J. P. 116; 47 W. R. 257; 79 L. T. 565; 15 T. L. R. 85.

If then, in the present case, the widow has parted with the property so far as she can—to the extent at any rate of her estate or interest as a widow—then it would seem to be erroneous to say that notwithstanding that she can still surrender that whole interest to the reversioner. I quite appreciate that a widow's interest may be determined in various ways: by her natural death, by her re-marriage, by adoption, or by a valid surrender. But if it is to be a surrender, then it is essential that she should comply with certain conditions. It seems to me that here she does not comply with those conditions, as she has put it out of her power so to do by an earlier document.

Under those circumstances I arrive at the conclusion that the decision of the learned trial Judge was correct, and that it ought to be restored.

There is another point, viz., that the second deed contains a provision for the maintenance of the widow, and so is not an absolute surrender, and that it cannot possibly be said that this was a case of compromise by a widow or anything of that sort, as was the case in Sureshwar Misser v. Maheshrani (4). I, however, do not think it necessary in this case to go into that question; but would only refer to a subsequent case in the Privy Council of Man Singh v. Nawlakhbati (5) and a decision of our own Court in Rama Nana Babar v. Dhondi Murari Tarade (6). Personally I express no opinion on that point.

In the result, I would hold that this appeal ought to be allowed, and the judgment of the trial Judge restored, with costs here and of the lower Appellate Court.

Crump, J.—I agree with the judgment now pronounced by the learned Chief Justice, and upon the first point I do not desire to add anything, for the ground of my decision is precisely that which has already been stated.

Upon the second question as to whether the provision in the second deed for the maintenance of the widow would make the surrender inoperative, I also agree that it is unnecessary for the purposes of this case to pronounce any decision. But I will only say this much that it seems to me a matter of some doubt whether their Lordships of the Privy Council in Sureshwar Misser v. Maheshrani (4) intended to differ from what had been said in the previous decision in Rangasami Gounden v. Nachiappa Gounden (1) or indeed to distinguish that decision upon the question of the effect of the provision for maintenance in a deed of this description. In the former of these cases, Sureshwar Misser v. Maheshrani (4), it is said that the provision of a small portion of the land for the maintenance of the widow was not objectionable, and it is that principle which we find is applied by this Court in Rama Nana Babar v. Dhondi Murari Tarade (3) a decision to which I was a party. Whether it is correct to say that in Sureshwar's case (4) the judgment upon that point rested upon the fact that there was a compromise, is a matter upon which I feel some doubt. The question of compromise was, no doubt, discussed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in that case, but, as I understand it, it was rather upon the point whether the surrender was or was not bona fide, or a device to divide the estate between the widow and the reversioner. But, as I have already said, it is unnecessary in the present case to specifically decide that point because I am quite clear from the first ground that the decision should be as stated by the learned Chief Justice.

Per Curiam.—Appeal allowed. Decree of trial Judge restored. Respondents to pay costs of this appeal and in the lower Appellate Court.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

(4) 57 Ind. Cas. 325; 47 I. A. 233; (1920) M. W. N. 472; 39 M. L. J. 161; 28 M. L. T. 154; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 128; 12 L. W. 461; 18 A. L. J. 1069; 25 C. W. N. 194; 48 C. 100; 41 O. L. J. 433 (P. C.).

(5) 94 Ind. Cas. 830; 53 I. A. 11; 28 Bom. L. R. 841; A. I. R. 1926 P. C. 2; 24 A. L. J. 250; 50 M. L. J. 332; 43 O. L. J. 259; (1926) M. W. N. 332; 7 P. L. T. 223; 5 Pat. 290; 31 C. W. N. 49 (P. C.).

(6) 76 Ind. Cas. 607; 47 B. 678; 25 Bom. L. R. 361; A. I. R. 1923 Bom. 432.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 282 OF 1926.

September 27, 1927,

Present:—Sir Amberson Marten,
Kt., Chief Justice, and

Mr. Justice Crump.

HUCHANGOUDA RUDRAGOUDA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

KALLAVA KALLAPPA AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Bombay Hereditary Offices (Amendment) Act (Bom. Act V of 1886), s. 2—Female member of watan family—Exclusion from inheritance—Conditions—Mere descent from common ancestor, whether sufficient.*

In order that a female member of a watan family may be postponed in the order of succession to the male members of the family under s. 2 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices (Amendment) Act it is not sufficient for the male members to show that they are descended from a common ancestor. It must further be shown that the common ancestor was a holder of the watan. [p. 268, col. 2.]

Bai Laxmi v. Maganlal Jamietram (1), followed.

First appeal from the decision of the Joint First Class Subordinate Judge at Dharwar, in Suit No. 175 of 1922.

Mr. A. G. Desai, for the Appellants.

Mr. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. Nilkant Amaram), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Crump, J.—The plaintiffs in this suit seek to recover possession of certain properties which are patilki inam land assigned for the remuneration of the office of Patil in the village of Kotbagi. It is common ground that there are two families holding these patilki inam lands, and that they hold them half and half. The plaintiffs are the sisters of one Kallangouda who succeeded to a half share of the property in that family some thirty years ago. Kallangouda died in 1885 leaving a widow Yellava, and Yellava held the property, having the ordinary Hindu widow's interest therein, till the date of her death in 1917, and upon that event the succession opened to the deceased Kallangouda. The two plaintiffs are the sisters of Kallangouda, and it is not disputed that under the Hindu Law they would be entitled to succeed. But, the property being watan property, it is necessary to consider the provisions of s. 2 of Bombay Act V of 1886 which lays down a special rule of succession in such cases. For the purposes of the present appeal that section runs as follows:—

"Every female member of a watan family [I here omit certain exceptions which are not relevant to this case] shall be postponed in the order of succession to any watan, or part thereof,...devolving by inheritance after the date when this Act comes into force to every male member of the family qualified to inherit such watan, or part thereof...".

The question, therefore, is whether the plaintiffs are excluded by the operation of this Statute. And that gives rise at once to the question whether the plaintiffs and defendants are members of a watan family. The word "family" is defined in s. 4 of the Hereditary Offices Act, 1874, and the definition is as follows:—

"'Family' includes each of the branches of the family descended from an original watandar."

The meaning to be attached to this definition has been explained in Bai Laxmi v. Maganlal Jamietram (1). The following passage from the judgment of Scott, C. J., may be cited (page 684*) :—

"The learned District Judge in dealing with the definition of 'family' observes that it is inclusive and not exclusive, that is to say, that it does not exclude the application of the ordinary meaning of the word 'family'. Now the Dictionaries of Webster and Murray are both agreed in giving as one of the meanings of the word 'family', (which would be an appropriate meaning in the present connection) 'those descended (really or putatively) from a common progenitor'. In the case of a 'watan family', taking the expression family in the ordinary non-technical sense it does not appear to be unreasonable to assume that the common progenitor must be a watandar".

Thus, in order that the defendants may show that the plaintiffs are postponed to them in the order of succession they must show that there was an original watandar from whom these two families were descended. It is not sufficient to show that there was a common ancestor. Let us assume that there is a family as in the subjoined pedigree.

(1) 42 Ind. Cas. 450; 41 B. 677; 19 Bom. L. R. 730.

*Page of 41 B.—[Ed.]

In that case on the death of D the original watandar, the estate would go half and half to his uncles B and C from whom the two supposed existing branches are descended. And in such a case, as explained in the case cited, the female heirs in the one branch would not be excluded by the male heirs in the other. Many similar cases could be put, but, of course, they are all conjectural. I merely seek to illustrate the position that it is not sufficient for the defendants to show that there was a common ancestor from whom these two families are descended. They must also show that that common ancestor was a holder of this watan.

The first point, therefore, would be whether there is evidence going to show that these persons with whom we have to deal are descended from a common ancestor. Now we have here two families of the same caste living in the same village holding half and half patilki inam lands. And in the typical case those persons would in all probability be descended from the same person. Ordinarily the grant of a watan is to an individual, and it is held by his descendants, and may be divided between them in the course of family partitions. That, I say, is the typical case. There may be cases where a portion of the watan, before the date of the legislation prohibiting the alienation of watan, has gone out of the original family into another family. But that is a less common case. The evidence with which we have to deal must be considered in that light. It is impossible in matters of this kind, where the grant is an ancient one, and there have been many degrees in the family since the date of the grant, to expect direct evidence of the precise relationship. But if there is evidence, whether what is ordinarily called "hearsay" evidence or otherwise, that two families so holding a watan half and half are related to one another, and if that relationship shows that they are, to use a vernacular term, bhaubands; then it is by no means a violent inference that they are descended from a common ancestor. And there is evidence in the present case which points to some such conclusion.

[His Lordship referred to the evidence and proceeded as follows:—]

That is a summary of the evidence upon this question of relationship, and upon that evidence I should be inclined to hold that it is established that these two families are in reality different branches of one and the same family. And seeing that the relationship having regard to the terms used implies male descent, it is not an unreasonable inference that these persons are in all probability descended from a common male ancestor. To that extent, I think that the lower Court has perhaps not fully appreciated the weight of the evidence.

But when that is said, it is absolutely impossible to say how remote that common ancestor was. Nor is it possible to say whether he existed before or after the acquisition of this watan. It was urged upon us that upon this latter point some light could be derived from other documents in the case bearing upon the history of a watan as distinct from the holders thereof.

[His Lordship referred to the documents and continued:—]

Thus when all is said and done, we come back to this position. At some remote period there probably was a common ancestor of these two families. At some unknown period some member of the family acquired the watan, that is, assuming that there was a grant by the Peshwas' Government to one individual, but whether the acquisition was made by the common ancestor or before his time or after his time is a matter of the merest conjecture. If then reference be made once more to the conjectural pedigree which I set out at the beginning of this judgment, it would be seen that though there may be an original watandar from whom these persons are descended, there may just as well have been a collateral who was the original watandar from whom the two existing branches of the family inherited this property. And there are a variety of other hypotheses consistent with the facts of this case which it is unnecessary to enumerate. It follows, therefore, that there is a fatal obstacle to the defendants' success, and that they have failed to show that plaintiffs, the nearest heirs under Hindu Law, are excluded by the operation of s. 2 of Bombay Act V of 1886.

There is one further point to which reference was made in the course of argument, that is, whether in these circumstances it can be said that the defendants are persons qualified to inherit under the Hindu Law. Now here we are entirely in the dark, because we do not know how remotely they are connected with the plaintiffs, assuming the connection to be established, and therefore without a clear knowledge of the facts, it is somewhat difficult to endeavour to apply legal principles. The question whether any remoteness of descent would exclude a samanodaka has been considered in several cases. We have a decision of our own Court in Bai Devkore v. Amritram Jamaitram (2), and that decision lays down that the word samanodaka, meaning literally those participating in the same oblation of water, includes descendants from a common ancestor more remotely related than the thirteenth degree from the propositus. Such cases are of very rare occurrence, but so far as this Court is concerned, that decision is still an authority. And if it be followed, however remote the descent might be, the result would be that the defendants would be qualified to inherit.

But in Rama Row v. Kuttiya Gounden (3) the Madras High Court has taken a different view. And they have dissented from the Bombay decision. They say there that the general tendency is to confine the relationship to the fourteenth degree. In Kalka Prasad v. Mathura Prasad (4), the matter incidentally came for consideration before their Lordships of the Privy Council. But the judgment does not contain any decision upon the exact point. It appears to have depended upon their Lordships' view of the facts of the particular case, and, therefore, so far as I understand it, that decision furnishes no guide. But upon the facts of this case it is unnecessary to decide that point, because there is, as I have indicated, in any view, a fatal obstacle in the way of the defendants. It follows that this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Marten, C. J.—I agree. The learned Pleader for the appellants has taken us carefully and in detail through all the documents, and facts which tell in favour of his clients. He has clarified the position by giving numbers to the various parties appearing in the rival pedigrees produced before the Inam Commission in 1844, viz., the pedigree, Ex. 92, produced by the branch of the defendants and the pedigree, Ex. 93, produced on behalf of the plaintiffs' branch. The necessity for this will be seen by the paucity of names in this family. There are no less than three Kallangoudas who play an important part in this story. It was Kallangouda No. 13 who produced the pedigree, Ex. 92. It was Kallangouda 4-F who produced the pedigree, Ex. 93. It was the latter's grandson Kallangouda 4-H, who died in 1885 and whose widow Yellava died in 1917, and thus opened the succession which is now in dispute.

On the merits of the case there are several interesting points that have been raised, but the crux of the case seems to me to be whether the defendants can show that they were not merely descendants of a common ancestor with the plaintiffs, but that both the plaintiffs and the defendants were descended from a common watandar. That is the effect of the decision of this Court in Bai Laxmi v. Maganlal Jamietram (1). There Sir Basil Scott laid stress on the meaning of the word family, viz., descent from a common ancestor and held that under the Hereditary Offices Act, the common progenitor must be a watandar. In Balai Shidli Jogati v. Subba Santu Mahar (5) Mr. Justice Patkar accepted the interpretation put by Sir Basil Scott on the meaning of the word family, and held that the particular person in that case was a descendant from the common watandar. On the other hand, in Sir Basil Scott's case the parties were not descended from the common watandar, because as is shown at page 731* of the report in Bai Laxmi v. Maganlal Jamietram (1) the original watandar was one Gopinath, and on his death collaterals succeeded to the property. No doubt there were separate sanads granted by Government on Gopinath's death in that case but apart from that the case is an illustration of what might easily have happened in the present case in days long gone by in the absence of any positive knowledge on the point.

As to whether the parties in the present case were descended from a common ancestor, it may well be that the learned Judge went too far in holding that even that point was not proved. But we have stopped Counsel for the respondents on his argument on that and other points in the case.

(5) 101 Ind. Cas. 135; 29 Bom. L. R. 246; A. I. R. 1927 Bom. 191.

*Page of 19 Bom. L. R.—[Ed.]

(2) 10 B. 372; 5 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 636.

(3) 34 Ind. Cas. 294; 40 M. 654; 3 L. W. 331; 19 M. L. T. 275; 30 M. L. J. 514.

(4) 35 I. A. 166; 10 Bom. L. R. 1088; 30 A. 510; 5 A. L. J. 701; 18 M. L. J. 424; 8 C. L. J. 447; 13 C. W. N. 1; 11 Q. C. 362; 4 M. L. T. 380 (P. C.).

Accordingly, speaking for myself, I do not propose to give a definite finding on the point. I am prepared to assume for the sake of argument that the defendants were descended from the same common ancestor as the plaintiffs were.

But assuming that, in my judgment, the next step, which I regard as the crux of the case, is fatal to the defendants. After carefully considering all the documents and matters laid before us, and after giving due consideration to the presumptions which we are entitled to make under s. 114 of the Indian Evidence Act, I am quite unable to say that it is any more likely here that the original watandar was a common ancestor of both branches than that those branches acquired the watan by collateral descent. In 1844 before the Inam Commission the respective parties who gave evidence and produced those pedigrees, I mean Kallangouda No. 13 and Kallangouda No. 4-F, were unable to say who the original watandar was. In 1880 when the defendants' branch sought to acquire the land now in dispute, viz., that held by the plaintiffs, they were unable to satisfy the trial Judge as to their genealogy, and their right to succeed even if they had been able to prove that the then succession by Kallangouda No. 4-H was not a rightful succession. In fact they failed on the latter point.

If then in 1845 and in 1880 the defendants were unable to prove successfully their exact heirship, it is not strange that the present defendants are in no better position. I appreciate what Mr. Desai for the appellants has forcibly urged upon us that the watan lands have been equally divided over a long series of years, into eight and a half mars for each branch, a mar being said to be about seventeen acres. I also appreciate that it does not necessarily follow that because a watan has been partitioned, it is thereby split up into two distinct watans. The contrary has been held in Yeshwant v. Satyanna (6). But from that it seems to me a long step to go to hold that the original watandar must have been a common ancestor whose descendants subsequently partitioned the watan, and that it is unreasonable to hold that there may have been a collateral succession from the original watandar.

That being so, this point, as I have already intimated, seems to me to be fatal in any event to the defendants.

Consequently, in my judgment it is unnecessary to go into the point raised by my brother Crump as to whether the defendants, being further remote in degree than the thirteen degrees, could claim in any event to succeed to this property. If it was necessary the case in Madras and the case in the Privy Council would have to be considered along with the decision in Bai Devkore v. Amritram Jamaitram (2).

I should have mentioned that certain pedigrees, Exs. A, B and C, were not relied on to any great extent by Counsel for the defendants. Even so far as they are admissible, they do not carry the matter much further on what I have described as the main point of the case. I should also state that I fully appreciate that it has been held that the definition of family in the Watan Act is an inclusive definition and not an exclusive definition. But, notwithstanding that, on the authorities of this Court, it does not absolve the parties from the necessity of proving that the original watandar was an ancestor of the parties. In the result, therefore, I agree that this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

As to the question of interest on costs, the learned Judge should not have awarded interest at twelve per cent. The maximum fixed by s. 35 (3) of the Civil Procedure Code is six per cent., but as he has considered this to be a case where interest on costs ought to be given, we will let his order in that respect stand subject to substituting six per cent. for twelve per cent.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.FIFTH CRIMINAL SESSIONS CASE No. 25
OF 1927.

November 25, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fawcett.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

MAHOMED HASAN GHANCHI

—ACCUSED.

Coroners' Act (IV of 1871), s. 20—Statement of accused on oath before Coroner, admissibility of.

A statement made by an accused before a Coroner in the course of inquest proceedings, after due warning that he is not bound to make any statement and that if he did so, it may be used against him in his trial, can be admitted in evidence against him at his trial and the mere fact that the statement was made on oath does not render it inadmissible.

Emperor v. Ramnath Mahabir (2), followed.Emperor v. Kazi Dawood (1), not followed.

Mr. Kanga, Advocate-General (with him Mr. Binning), for the Prosecution.

Mr. Oliveira, for the Accused.

JUDGMENT.—The Coroner of Bombay, in an inquest upon the deceased Ahmed, allowed the accused to make a statement after warning him that he was not bound to make any statement and that if he did so, it might be used against him in the High Court. The statement was taken on oath. Mr. Oliveira for the defence objects to this statement being put in evidence and relies upon the ruling of Mr. Justice Taraporewala in Emperor v. Kazi Dawood (1). He contends that s. 19 of the Coroners' Act of 1871 makes it clear that the accused should not be examined on oath, as if he were a witness, because it enacts that "the Coroner shall be bound to receive evidence on behalf of the party (if any) accused of causing the death of the deceased person," and does not mention any evidence being given by the accused himself. The statement having been made on oath is, he contends, inadmissible in evidence, in spite of the provisions of the last paragraph of s. 20 under which, for the purposes of s. 26 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, a Coroner shall be deemed to be a Magistrate. Shortly after Mr. Justice Taraporewala gave his decision on this point, I had the same question before me, when presiding in this Court, and Mr. Justice Taraporewala's decision was cited to me, but I differed for reasons given in Emperor v. Ramnath Mahabir (2). After hearing what Mr. Oliveira has to say, I still adhere to that opinion. I have given reasons there for my view, which I do not think it necessary to repeat. As regards the point I have mentioned about s. 19, it is, I think, to be noted that the first paragraph of that section is restricted to the taking of evidence, and it naturally says that all evidence given under the Act shall be on oath. The subsequent words that "the Coroner shall be bound to receive evidence on behalf of the (suspect) party," to put the thing briefly, is natural, having regard to the fact that the paragraph is dealing with the question of evidence. Therefore, it naturally says "evidence on behalf of the party (if any) accused" instead of including "evidence by any party", because there is nothing in the section to prevent the accused giving evidence on his own behalf, just as a plaintiff or a defendant in a civil suit is allowed to give evidence on his own behalf. It must be remembered that an inquest is not the same thing as a trial before a Court, where under a special provision of the Criminal Procedure Code the accused is not to be examined on oath. Accordingly, in the absence of any similar provision in the Coroners' Act, I am inclined to say that a person, who is accused of causing the death of the subject of the inquest, can give evidence on his own behalf. But, even supposing that this view is wrong, in my opinion, there is nothing in the Act to prevent such an accused being allowed to make a statement after due warning, as was done in this case; and supposing that an oath ought not to have been administered, the mere fact that such additional sanction has been given to the statement does not, in my opinion, exclude the statement from those that can be made to the Coroner as a Magistrate in accordance with the provisions of s. 20 of the Coroners' Act. The statement, which is in question here, contains some incriminating admissions in regard to the charge against the accused and so comes under the provisions of s. 26 of the Indian Evidence Act. For these reasons I hold that the statement is admissible in evidence.

A. N. A.

Order accordingly.

(2) 93 Ind. Cas. 690; 28 Bom. L. R. 111; A. I. R. 1924 Bom. 151; 50 B. 111; 27 Cr. L. J. 466.

(1) 93 Ind. Cas. 225; 28 Bom. L. R. 79; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 144; 27 Cr. L. J. 433; 50 B. 56.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 742 OF 1926.

October 31, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Harrison.

MATWAL DAS AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS
—PETITIONERS

versus

NAND LAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS

Musammam GANGO BAI AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Punjab Courts Act (VI of 1918), s. 44—Revision—Error of law—Wrong interpretation of document, whether ground for revision—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, para. 8—'House rent,' whether includes shop rent.

Where there are two possible views of the meaning of the words used in a document and the lower Courts have accepted one, it is not open to the High Court to interfere in revision whether it agrees with that view or not.

A wrong decision on a point of law is no ground for interference in revision.

Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (1), followed.

The words 'house rent' as used in para. 8, Sch. II, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, cover and include shop rent.

Petition for revision of a decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Multan, dated the 5th May, 1926, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Multan, dated the 6th February, 1926.

Mr. Faqir Chand, for the Petitioners.

Mr. B. P. Khosla, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This revision was admitted on the question of the interpretation to be placed on a certain document. The suit was between certain landlords and their tenants, the remaining landlords being impleaded as defendants. The agreement in question which ended the previous litigation provided for the raising of the rent from a certain date and immediately after the sentence which made this provision the words are to be found that repairs would be done on behalf of the landlords by one Haji Karim Bakhsh before that date. The contention of the defendants has been throughout that the raising of the rent was conditional on the previous carrying out of the repairs. The view taken by both the trial Court and the lower Appellate Court was that the two conditions were independent and that the raising of the rent was not dependent upon the previous performance of the repairs. I have been referred to the standard authority Amir Hasan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (1) and also to Shew Prosad

(1) 11 O. 6; 11 I. A. 237; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 559; Rafique and Jackson's P. C. No. 33; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 760 (P. C.).

Bungshidhur v. Ram Chunder Hari Bux (2) and on the other side reliance has been placed upon Satish Chandra Bhattacharjee v. Sri Jogunnessa Bibi (3). It appears to me that this is essentially a case governed by Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (1). There are two possible views of the meaning of the words used in the document but the trial Court and the Appellate Court have taken one, and whether I agree with that view or not, it is not open to me to take the question up in revision and the petition should not have been admitted by me in the first instance for I am of opinion that it is a revision and not a second appeal and that the words 'house rent' as used in para. 8 of the Second Schedule of Act IX of 1887 cover and include shop rent. If it be conceded in the first instance that the interpretation of this document is a question of law and not a finding of fact on the intention of the parties similar to that explained in Diwan Chand v. Sundar (4) and even if it be further conceded that the question of law has been wrongly decided no revision can be entertained as laid down in Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (1).

The further point about the suit in this form not being maintainable is again a question which has been decided wrongly but with complete jurisdiction.

The petition is dismissed with costs.

R. L.

Petition dismissed.

(2) 23 Ind. Cas. 977; 41 C. 323.

(3) 78 Ind. Cas. 958; 51 C. 690; 28 C. W. N. 559; 39 O. L. J. 434; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 633.

(4) 36 Ind. Cas. 199; 68 P. R. 1916; 182 P. W. R. 1916; 77 P. L. R. 1917.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 2703 OF 1926;

November 24, 1927.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice,
and Mr. Justice Bhide.ALLAN ROBERT SHAW—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MRS. EMILY MAY SHAW—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.

- Divorce—Petition for dissolution of marriage on ground of adultery—Unreasonable delay, effect of.
- A petition for dissolution of marriage on the ground of adultery is liable to be dismissed if the applicant is guilty of unreasonable delay in presenting the petition.

First appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Rawalpindi, dated the 28th April, 1926.

Mr. Anant Ram, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—The District Judge of Rawalpindi has dismissed the petition of one Allan Robert Shaw, for dissolution of his marriage with his wife, on the ground that, while the adultery of the wife had been established, the husband has been guilty of unreasonable delay in presenting the petition. The evidence on the record shows that the offence complained of was committed in the summer of 1921, and that it came to the knowledge of the husband shortly afterwards. He did not, however, make the application for divorce until after the expiry of five years. It is not disputed that there was unreasonable delay in presenting the petition, and the explanation offered by the husband to account for the delay has been considered by the trial Judge and found to be unsatisfactory.

The learned Counsel for the appellant has again put forward the explanation which has already been rejected by the District Judge, but we do not think that any ground has been established, such as would justify our dissent from the conclusion of the trial Judge. We accordingly dismiss the appeal, but as there is no appearance by or on behalf of the respondent we make no order as to costs in this Court.

R. L.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 1000 OF 1927.

September 27, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Addison.

BABU SINGH—DECREE-HOLDER—

APPELLANT

—versus—

S. GURBAKSH SINGH—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 69, 84—Sale outside Court precincts—Power of officer conducting sale to adjourn sale—Bidder withdrawing from sale, liability of—Subsequent sale conducted after fresh proclamation, effect of—Order refusing to hold defaulting purchaser liable—Appeal.

Where an execution sale is not being conducted in or within the precincts of the Court house, the officer conducting the sale has a discretion to adjourn the sale to the following day.

Where a bidder at a sale refuses to deposit the one-fourth amount of the bid, and a re-sale is effected after a fresh proclamation, the bidder cannot be held liable for any deficiency in the purchase-money inasmuch as the second sale cannot be said to be held 'forthwith' within the meaning of O. XXI, r. 84, Civil Procedure Code.

An order refusing to hold a defaulting bidder liable for the deficiency of price in such a case is open to appeal.

Sit Ram v. Janki Ram (1), followed.

First appeal from an order of the Senior Sub-Judge, Amritsar, dated the 8th January, 1927.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellant.

Dr. Gokal Chand Narang, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The decree-holder-appellant attached certain immoveable property of his judgment-debtors and the auction sale was fixed for the 23rd August, 1926. On that day no bid was obtained and the sale was continued to the 24th when certain bids were obtained. It was again continued to the 25th when the last bid was one of Rs. 4,200 made by the decree-holder. The sale, however, was continued till the morning of the 26th at the request of the judgment-debtor. That day the last bid was of Rs. 4,400 by one Gurbaksh Singh a Vakil of this Court. When the property was going to be knocked down to him, however, he refused to sign his bid and said he withdrew from it. He also refused to deposit one-fourth of the amount of his bid. The Nazir who was auctioning the property did not close the sale but reported the matter to the Executing Court for orders. The Court instead of ordering a re-sale forthwith at the risk of Gurbaksh Singh, commenced the usual dilatory investigation. On the 2nd of October it ordered a re-sale to take place after a fresh proclamation and the property was sold to the decree-holder for Rs. 4,025 on the 17th of November. Before the Executing Court Gurbaksh Singh admitted that he gave the bid but explained that he withdrew it, this of course being no explanation. The Executing Court refused to make him pay the difference of price amounting to Rs. 425 on the ground that the auctioneer should not have adjourned the sale till the 26th and on a further ground that the auctioneer should have proceeded with the sale and should not have concluded the auction. Against this decision the judgment-debtors and decree-holder have appealed.

Both the reasons given by the Executing Court are wrong. The sale was not conducted in or within the precincts of the Courthouse and the officer conducting it had discretion to adjourn the sale to the 26th under O. XXI, r. 69, Code of Civil Procedure. Further, the officer conducting the sale did not close the auction but reported the matter for the orders of the Executing Court and it gave no order as it should have done. The order it should have given was that the property be re-sold forthwith under O. XXI, r. 84, Code of Civil Procedure. Unfortunately this appeal cannot, however, be accepted as the re-sale did not take place forthwith within the meaning of O. XXI, r. 84. If it had, Gurbakhsh Singh would have been liable for the deficiency on the re-sale under O. XXI, r. 71, Code of Civil Procedure.

It was contended that no appeal lay. This is clearly wrong, as it was held in the Full Bench Allahabad case, Sita Ram v. Janki Ram (1), that such an order was appealable. In that case the highest bidder failed to deposit 25 per cent of the purchase money and in consequence the property was re-sold next day. It was held that the re-sale had been held forthwith within the meaning of O. XXI, r. 84, Code of Civil Procedure, and the first purchaser was liable to make good the deficiency of the purchase-money. In the present case the official conducting the sale could have gone on with the re-sale, but instead of doing so he reported the matter to the Executing Court which also could have passed the necessary order for re-sale forthwith. Had this been done Gurbakhsh Singh could have been held liable. He seems to have been trying to raise the bid made by the decree-holder, and when the decree-holder did not give another bid he promptly refused to ratify his own bid by depositing the 25 per cent. Such conduct of a Vakil of this Court is most regrettable. For the reasons given, however, I dismiss this appeal but leave parties to bear their own costs.

R. L.

*Appeal dismissed.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1314 OF 1927.

November 10, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.Musammat PLUNGUN—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versusMusammat JASODHAN—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Co-owners—Partition—Presumption of partition of entire property.

Where co-owners are proved to have effected a partition the presumption is that the entire joint property has been partitioned.

Second appeal from a decree of the Additional Judge, Kangra at Dharamsala, dated the 25th of February, 1927, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Kangra, dated the 3rd December, 1926.

Mr. Gullu Ram, for the Appellant.

Mr. Qabul Chand Mital for Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The parties in this case are the widows of the brothers who were co-owners of a holding. When the holding devolved on the widows it was partitioned between them and the partition was given effect to in the Revenue Records. One of the widows now sued for partition of the residential house. The defendant pleaded that the joint house was partitioned along with the land and that the house in her possession had been constructed by herself. Neither party having produced any evidence the trial Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit. On appeal the learned Senior Subordinate Judge reversed the order of the trial Court and decreed the plaintiff's suit.

Now, it is clear that in view of the partition of the holding that took place in 1902 the presumption was that the house also had been partitioned along with the land. As there was no evidence to rebut this presumption the plaintiff's suit must fail. I, therefore, accept the appeal, set aside the order of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the trial Court with costs throughout.

R. L.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 65 Ind. Cas. 813; 44 A. 266; 20 A. L. J. 105; A. I. R. 1922 All. 200.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 1698
OF 1927.

November 18, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

S. JAI DEV SINGH—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT
versusS. JAI SINGH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908); O. XXXVIII, rr. 5, 6, O. XLIII, r. 1 (g)—Attachment before judgment, unconditional order of, when justified—Appeal.

An order for attachment before judgment which is unconditional must be deemed to be an order under O. XXXVIII, r. 6 of the Civil Procedure Code even though it is stated to be passed under r. 5, and is appealable under O. XLIII, r. 1 (g).

An unconditional attachment before judgment can only be ordered under r. 6 of O. XXXVIII, Civil Procedure Code, when the defendant has failed to comply with an order made under r. 5 of the said Order.

Miscellaneous first appeal from an order of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Rawalpindi, dated the 18th May, 1927.

Bhagat Gobind Das, for the Appellant.

Mr. Har Gopal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a miscellaneous first appeal against the order for attachment before judgment made by the Senior Subordinate Judge of Rawalpindi. The order runs thus:—

“.....under the circumstances I think that it is necessary to attach the kothi before judgment under O. XXXVIII, r. 5 of the Civil Procedure Code and I order it accordingly.”

Now, an order under the said r. 5 is not appealable while O. XLIII, r. 1 (g) of the Civil Procedure Code gives the right of appeal against an order under r. 6. In the present case, however, though the learned Senior Subordinate Judge purports to have acted under r. 5, that rule has no application. That rule contains three clauses and the Court while calling upon the defendant to furnish security etc., under cl. (1) may also order conditional attachment of his property. The learned Senior Subordinate Judge having made an order under cl. (1) could make none under cl. (3).

Further under cl. (3) “the Court may also in the order (made under cl. (1) direct the conditional attachment.....”. But the attachment ordered by the Senior Subordinate Judge was not conditional. An unconditional attachment can only be ordered under r. 6 when the defendant fails to comply with an order made under r. 5.

Counsel for the respondent concedes that the order is irregular but contends that it is not appealable. He further urges that it cannot be revised. He contends that the order should be amended by this Court and should not be set aside.

On the other hand, the Counsel for the appellant argues that the order is irregular and illegal but all the same it is an order under r. 6 because there is no other provision in the Civil Procedure Code empowering a Court to order attachment before judgment.

As unconditional attachment could be ordered under r. 6 only and as the attachment was unconditional it may be taken that the order was under r. 6. But it was irregular and illegal because the circumstances under which it could be made did not exist.

I, therefore, accept the appeal and set aside the order with costs.

R. L.

Appeal accepted.

A. N. A.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 2721 OF 1922.

April 10, 1926.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau and
Mr. Justice Dalip Singh.DURGA DATT-JAGAN NATH—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

GANESH DAS-ISHAR DAS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.Contract—Sale of goods by shipments—Construction of contract—Damages for breach, measure of—Time for performance, whether date of actual arrival of goods or date on which they ought to have arrived.

The defendants agreed to sell to the plaintiffs goods of certain shipments. The contract stipulated that patterns and invoices were to be delivered when they arrived, that the defendants were to give intimation to the plaintiffs of the arrival of the goods, that when the goods arrived the plaintiffs were to take delivery on payment to the Bank, and that they would be liable for godown rent if they did not take delivery at once. In a suit for damages for breach of contract:

Held, that, upon a proper construction of the contract, the time for performance was the time of the actual arrival of the goods, and that damages must accordingly be calculated with regard to the rates prevailing on the actual dates of the arrival of the goods and not those prevailing on the dates on which the goods might reasonably have been expected to arrive, [p. 277, col. 2.]

Appeal from a judgment of the Senior Sub-Judge, Delhi, dated the 31st July, 1922.

Messrs. Sardha Ram and B. Narain, for the Appellants.

Bakhshi Tek Chand and Mr. Mehr Chand Mahajan, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties are cloth merchants of Delhi. On the 1st December, 1916, the defendants agreed to sell to the plaintiffs 75 cases of white shirting D. 1 of R. J. Wood & Company's Office of the November, December and January, February, March and April shipments. They did not deliver 37 cases of the February, March and April shipments and the plaintiffs have accordingly sued for damages for breaches of contract, together with interest claiming Rs. 18,394-2-3 in all. The defendants deny liability, pleading that they did not receive 33 out of the 37 cases from the persons from whom they had bought them, and that the plaintiffs did not demand the goods.

The Subordinate Judge found for the plaintiffs, but has given decree for only Rs. 1,418-12-0 calculating the damages with reference to the market rates prevailing at the times when the goods might have been reasonably expected to arrive, which he takes to be three months after shipment. The plaintiffs have appealed.

There is nothing in the contract to show that the delivery of the goods by the defendants to the plaintiffs was contingent on the defendants receiving them from their own sellers and we agree with the lower Court's finding on this point.

On the question of demand the lower Court held that as the defendants had undertaken to send invoices and patterns and to report the arrival of the goods to the plaintiffs, it was not incumbent on the latter to make a demand for the goods. It is unnecessary to discuss this point, as we think that the making of the demand has, as a matter of fact, been sufficiently proved by the evidence of the plaintiffs' agent Jhandu Mal (P. W. No. 13), who states that they made several demands and that he went personally also to make them. The defendant Ishar Das, though he went into the witness-box, did not contradict Jhandu Mal's statement on that point and we, therefore, see no good reason for rejecting it.

It is argued for the defendants that the plaintiffs have not proved that they were ready and willing to perform their part of the contract, but we must decline to go into this question as although an issue was framed by the lower Court on the point the defendants did not raise it in their pleas. They pleaded that the plaintiffs did not tender the money but that is a different matter.

Similarly, we cannot entertain the arguments that the goods contracted for did not arrive, as the plaintiffs distinctly stated in the third paragraph of their plaint that the goods arrived and specified the periods during which the several shipments arrived; and these allegations were not denied by the defendants in their pleas.

The main question in the case is whether the dates for the performance of the contract were the dates on which the goods might reasonably have been expected to arrive in Delhi as held by the lower Court, or the actual dates of their arrival, as contended by Mr. Sardha Ram on behalf of the appellants. It was stipulated in the contract (page 7 of the paper-book) that patterns and invoices were to be delivered when they arrived, that the defendants were to give intimation to the plaintiffs of the arrival of the goods, that when the goods arrived the plaintiffs were to take delivery on payment to the Bank, and that they would be liable for godown rent if they did not take delivery at once. This shows that the time for performance was to be the time when the goods actually arrived. The learned Subordinate Judge thinks that if the goods after having been shipped at the proper time, arrived after great delay the buyers would not have been bound to take them up. We have, however, merely to construe the contract from its terms, and we are of opinion that the appellants' interpretation is the correct one, notwithstanding that in other cases decided by this Court [see Civil Appeals No. 3259 of 1921 and Prag Das Budhsen v. Munni Lal (1).] relating to contracts of a similar nature, a different view has been taken as to the due date for performance. We hold that for the calculation of the damages regard has to be had to the actual dates of arrival of the goods and not to the dates on which the goods might have been expected to arrive.

It is stated in the plaint that the February shipment arrived from September to December and the April shipment from September, 1917, to March, 1918. The dates of the various months are given in Ex. P. W. No. 1/1, page 8 which is proved by Mr. Shariff, has Manager of R. J. Wood & Co.'s Office and has been prepared from his registers. The last dates are the 4th October, 1917, for the February shipment, the 7th December, 1917, for the March shipment and the 4th March, 1918, for the April, 1917, shipment. These are the dates of the arrival of the Railway receipts, and ten days may reasonably be added for the time which it would take for the goods to reach Delhi from Bombay. Thus the due dates for the February, March and April shipments, respectively, would be the 14th October, 1917, the 17th December, 1917, and the 14th March, 1918.

The rates prevailing on these dates are given in entries in the account books produced by P. W. Nos. 4 and 11, the rate on the 14th October, 1917, being Rs. 21-4-0 per piece (page 19 of the paper-book); the rate on the 17th December, 1917, Rs. 24-3-0 (page 36) and the rate on the 14th March, 1918, Rs. 25 (page 20).

It is contended for the respondents that the rates have not been proved as the witnesses in whose books they are shown have stated nothing more than that the copies which they produced are true translations of the entries. It would appear, however, that the defendants did not really dispute the correctness of the entries in the books, for they made no attempt to cross-examine the witnesses in regard to them; so that, although the examination of the witnesses was defective, we think that in the circumstances the rates given in the books may be taken to be the correct rates. A further contention is that it has not been shown whether the rates covered were the rates for ready goods or for forward goods, but on this point also there was no cross-examination, and we think the argument has little force. We, therefore, take the rates shown in the books to be those prevailing on the due dates. A deduction of 4-annas per piece has, however, to be made as the rates entered are the retail rates, and it is in evidence (see statement of D. W. No. 1) that goods sold wholesale are 4 annas per piece cheaper. The contract rate, including the seller's profit and the expenses payable by the buyers, was Rs. 16 per piece. The difference between the contract rate and market rate is thus Rs. 8 per piece for the February shipment, Rs. 15 for the March shipment, Rs. 8-12-0 for the April shipment. But the plaintiffs claimed damages in respect of the February shipment at the rate of only Rs. 7-11-0 and they must be limited to that.

The damages for the non-delivery of the 12 cases (i. e., 600 pieces, of the February shipment, 12 cases of the March shipment and 13 cases of the April shipment come to Rs. 612-8-0, Rs. 762-8-0 and Rs. 687-8-0 respectively. The total to which the plaintiffs are entitled for damages, is, therefore, Rs. 15,062-8-0. We do not think that any interest should be allowed.

We accept the appeal and give the plaintiffs a decree for Rs. 15,062-8-0 with proportionate costs in both Courts.

A. N. A.

Appeal accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 226 OF 1922.

April 10, 1926.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau and

Mr. Justice Dalip Singh.

GANESH DAS-ISHAR DAS—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS

versus

BASHESHA LAL-BANSI DHAR—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract—Sale of goods by shipments—Condition for informing purchaser of date of arrival of goods and for removal of goods on that date—Time for performance—Damages.

Where a contract for sale of goods by shipments provided that as soon as goods were received the defendants were to inform the plaintiffs, who were to remove the goods on payment of the money to the Bank, that if the plaintiffs were to remove the goods after "due date" they would be liable for interest and godown rent, and that the plaintiffs were to pay the godown rent from the time when the goods arrived:

Held, that the time for performance was the time when the goods actually arrived, that the due date mentioned in the contract could only mean the date of arrival and that, consequently, damages had to be calculated with reference to the market price on the date of the arrival of the goods and not the date on which the goods might reasonably have arrived. [p. 279, col. 1.]

First appeal from a decree of the First Class Sub-Judge, Delhi, dated the 26th October, 1921.

Messrs. Sardha Ram and Jagan Nath Bhandari, for the Appellants.

Moti Sagar R. B. and Messrs. Nanwan Mal for Mr. Raj Krishna, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties are cloth merchants of Delhi. On the 21st November, 1916, the defendants agreed to sell to the plaintiffs 75 cases of white shirting D-1, of the Office of R. J. Wood & Co., of the November, December, January, February, March and April shipments. The plaintiffs sued for damages for non-delivery of 33 cases of the February, March, and April, 1917 shipments, and for interest in addition, claiming Rs. 17,300 in all. The defendants said that the 33 cases not delivered comprised 5 of the November shipment, 4 of December, 4 of February, 8 of March, and 12 of April. They pleaded that as the persons who had agreed to sell the goods to them did not supply them, the plaintiffs were not entitled to damages, and they also denied that the plaintiffs had suffered any loss.

The lower Court, while finding that the contract between the parties was not contingent on the receipt of the goods by the defendants from their sellers, has dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiffs did not suffer any damage, inasmuch as the rates prevailing on the dates of the breach of contract were less than the cost price. The plaintiffs have appealed.

In the contract printed on page 7 of the paper-book the defendants mentioned that they had bought in the market the goods which they sold to the plaintiffs, but there is nothing to show that it was intended that they were not to be liable to supply the goods to the plaintiffs unless they themselves received the goods from their own sellers, and we agree with the lower Court's finding on this point.

The first question is what were the due dates for the performance of the contract. The lower Court has held that they were those on which the goods ought to have been received in the ordinary course. Mr. Sardha Ram, for the plaintiffs-appellants, contends that the due dates were the dates on which the goods actually arrived in Delhi, and he lays stress on the conditions in the contract that as soon as goods were received the defendants were to inform the plaintiffs, who were to remove the goods on payment of the money to the Bank, that if the plaintiffs were to remove the goods after "due date" they would be liable for interest and godown rent, and that the plaintiffs were to pay the godown rent from the time when the goods arrived.

Mr. Moti Sagar, for the defendants respondents, argues that these conditions indicate only the way in which the contract was to be performed, but, in our opinion, the agreement, that when the goods arrived the defendants were to send intimation to the plaintiffs who were then to pay for them and take them away and were to be liable for godown rent from the time of the arrival of the goods, shows that the time for performance was to be the time when the goods actually arrived and the due dates expressly mentioned in the contract can only mean the dates of arrival. The argument that the buyers would not be bound to take up the goods if they arrived after much delay is of no avail in construing the contract, which has to be taken as it stands and we are of opinion that appellants' interpretation is the correct one. We hold, therefore, that for the calculation of the damages regard has to be had to the actual dates of the arrival of the goods; and not to the dates on which the goods might have been expected to arrive.

The next question is on what dates the goods arrived. We have the evidence of Mr. Grey, the General Manager of Messrs. R. J. Wood & Co., who has filed a statement, P. W. No. 1/1 prepared from his godown book showing the dates of arrival of the Railway receipts of the various shipments, and we see no good reason for not accepting that statement. It is contended that the plaintiffs have not proved when the goods were shipped, but Mr. Grey was not questioned in regard to the dates of the shipments, and we think that the goods of the particular shipments mentioned in his register should, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be taken to have been shipped at the proper time. The Railway receipts for goods of the February shipment are shown in the statement put in by Mr. Grey as having arrived from the 2nd July to the 4th October, 1917, the Railway receipts for goods of the March shipment are shown as having arrived from the 3rd September to the 7th December, 1917; and those for the goods of April shipment from the 3rd September, 1917, to the 4th March, 1918. Allowing ten days, as the lower Court has done, for the goods to reach Delhi from Bombay we take the 14th October, 1917, to be the due date so far as the February shipment is concerned, the 17th December, 1917, to be the due date for the March shipment, and the 14th March 1918 to be the due date for the April, 1917 shipment.

The number of cases of the several shipments in respect of which the plaintiffs are entitled to compensation has then to be determined. The lower Court is wrong in thinking that the plaintiffs ultimately cancelled the contract for the February shipment. In their letter, page 19, dated the 29th June, 1917, they cancelled, not the contract but eight cases, for which the defendants had sent them an invoice and pattern, on the ground that they were late. In the invoice D. 18, sent to them by the defendants on the 25th June while the shipment was mentioned as the February shipment, the goods of which had under the contract to be shipped by the 10th March, the date of the Bill of Lading was given as the 13th April. On the face of the invoice, therefore, the goods had been shipped late. We cannot agree with the argument that the plaintiffs were bound to accept them as goods of the April shipment, seeing that the defendants had appropriated them to the February shipment, and we must hold that the plaintiffs were justified in rejecting them and are entitled to damages for non-delivery for all the twelve cases of the February shipment. Out of the March shipment four cases were delivered to the plaintiffs, and they are entitled to damages in respect of the remaining eight. Admittedly none of the goods of the April shipment were delivered.

It remains to assess the damages. The contract price per piece was 17s. 3d. which at the rate of a 5-1/32d. per rupee (the rate of exchange current from the 29th August, 1917 to the 31st March, 1918 (see page 13 of the paper-book A) was equivalent to Rs. 12-2-6. To this has to be added Rs. 1-3-5 for expenses which the buyers had to bear under the contract, and Rs. 2 for the sellers' profit, making a total of Rs. 15-5-11. The market rate on or about the due date in respect of each shipment is shown by entries in the books produced by P. Ws. Nos. 3 and 9 who have stated that they keep regular books.

The market rate on the 12th October, 1917, two days before the due date for the February shipment, is shown as Rs. 24-4-0 per piece (page 15). Deducting Rs. 15-5-11 from this the plaintiffs' loss comes to Rs. 8-14-4 per piece. On the 12 cases of the February shipment, each of which contains 50 pieces, the loss amounts to Rs. 5,328-2-0.

The market rate on the 16th December, 1917, the day before the due date for the March shipment, was also Rs. 24-4-0 (page 22). The plaintiffs' loss in respect of eight cases of this shipment amounts to Rs. 3,582-1-4.

The market rate on the 14th March 1918, which was the due date for the April shipment, was Rs. 25-1-0 (p. 16). The plaintiffs' loss is Rs. 9-11-1 per piece and on 12 cases it amounts to Rs. 5,316-10-0.

The damages to which the plaintiffs are entitled in respect of the shipments of February, March and April, 1917 thus amount to Rs. 14,695-13-4. They have, however, limited their claim in appeal to Rs. 11,500.

We accordingly accept the appeal and give the plaintiffs a decree for Rs. 11,500 with full costs in this Court and proportionate costs in the lower Court.

A. N. A.

Appeal accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 994 OF 1923.

November 22, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway and Mr. Justice Jai Lal.

PIR BAKHSH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

Musammat GHULAM BIBI AND ANOTHER
—PLAINTIFFS AND Musammat RAHMATE
—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Custom — Succession — Self-acquired property — Daughters, whether exclude collaterals — Punjab Colonization of Government Lands Act (V of 1912), s. 20 as amended by Punjab Act (III of 1920), application of — Devolution of tenancy.

The general rule of Customary Law of Amritsar District and, in fact, that of the Punjab is that daughters exclude collaterals in succession to self-acquired property. [p. 281, col. 2.]

Section 20 of the Punjab Colonization of Government Lands Act provides only for the devolution of a tenancy in cases where after the commencement of the Act any original tenant dies. In other cases it is the general rule of custom by which the parties are governed which determines devolution. [ibid.]

First appeal from a decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Lyallpur, dated the 18th April, 1923.

Mr. Abdul Ghani Khan, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Mehr Chand Mahajan and Faqir Chand, for Lala Moti Sagar, R. B., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Broadway, J.—This is an appeal by Pir Bakhsh against a declaratory decree passed by the Senior Subordinate Judge of Lyallpur declaring that the plaintiffs, the daughters of one Nathu, were entitled to succeed to the land in dispute after the death of their mother Musammāt Rahmate. The learned Senior Subordinate Judge has written a lengthy judgment in which all the points have been carefully discussed. It appears that the original tenant of this land was one Nathu who was granted the holding as an abadkar and subsequently acquired occupancy rights therein. He died in 1908 leaving him surviving a widow Musammāt Rahmate and two daughters Musammāt Ghulam Bibi and Mehtab Bibi. Musammāt Rahmate attempted to dispose of this tenancy but her attempt failed as the Revenue Authorities declined to sanction the alienation proposed by her. Later on she made a gift in favour of her daughters. When this gift was placed before the Revenue Authorities for sanction Pir Bakhsh protested urging that he was the ultimate heir to this property as a collateral of the deceased Nathu. The Revenue Authorities accordingly declined to enter up the gift and referred the parties to a Civil Court. Thereupon the two daughters (both of them married) of Nathu brought a suit for a declaration of their rights as the heirs of Nathu, impleading Musammāt Rahmate widow of Nathu and Pir Bakhsh as defendants. Musammāt Rahmate admitted the claim while Pir Bakhsh contested it.

It has been urged before us that the suit is governed by the provisions of Act V of 1912 as amended by Act III of 1920. This appears to have been the position taken up by both parties in the Court below. In the grounds of appeal to this Court it was alleged that Act V of 1912 did not apply. The learned Advocate for the appellant appears to have been in a somewhat of a quandary as to the line he was prepared to take in this Court for at one time he said that he was prepared to give up that ground and urged that the parties were governed by the Act of 1912. It seems to me, however, that that Act does not afford any assistance in this matter. The succession in this case is clearly succession to Nathu and s. 20 of Act V of 1912 as amended by Act III of 1920 provides for the devolution of a tenancy in cases where after the commencement of the Act any original tenant dies. Admittedly in the present case Nathu died in 1908 and succession to his rights, therefore, is clearly not governed by this section. In order to ascertain who his successor is recourse must be had to the ordinary custom by which the parties are governed. The general rule of custom as laid down in para. 23 of the Digest of Customary Law by Sir William Rattigan, is that daughters exclude collaterals in succession to self-acquired property. Admittedly this estate is the self-acquired or non-ancestral property of Nathu and, therefore, by the general custom the plaintiffs in this case would exclude collaterals. An attempt was made by Pir Bakhsh to establish a custom to the contrary and certain evidence was led in support. That evidence has been carefully examined by the learned Senior Subordinate Judge and it has been pointed out that the instances given by the witnesses have no real application to the facts before us whereas the instances relied on and proved by the plaintiffs, support their claim. So far as the Customary Law of the Amritsar District, (from which district Nathu originally migrated to Lyallpur), shows the general trend of opinion was that daughters succeed to non-ancestral property to the exclusion of agnates. In every respect, therefore, the claim of the daughters appears to me to be superior to that of Pir Bakhsh and I would, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs.

Jai Lal, J.—I agree.

E. L.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 2232 OF 1923.

November 10, 1927.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

NARAIN SINGH AND ANOTHER—CREDITORS
—APPELLANTS

versus

GURBAKSH SINGH, MINOR, PER
ISHAR SINGH, SON AND REPRESENTATIVE OF RAM SINGH, DECEASED, INSOLVENT, AND THE OFFICIAL RECEIVER, LYALLPUR
—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 4—Appeal by creditors against adjudication of insolvency—Death of insolvent—Abatement of appeal.

An appeal preferred by the creditors against an order adjudicating a debtor as an insolvent abates on the death of the insolvent and cannot be continued against his sons.

Hardian Singh v. Sham Sundar (1), followed.

Miscellaneous first appeal from an order of the District Judge, Lyallpur, dated the 9th May, 1923.

Mr. V. H. Sethi, for the Appellant.

Dewan Mehr Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Ram Singh applied to be declared insolvent and his application was accepted by the trial Court and he was adjudicated an insolvent. Some of his creditors preferred the present appeal against the order of adjudication, but during the pendency of the appeal Ram Singh died, and the creditors seek to implead his minor son as his legal representative for the purposes of the appeal.

Now it has been held by a Division Bench of the Punjab Chief Court in Hardian Singh v. Sham Sundar (1) that an appeal preferred against the adjudication of an insolvent abates on his death as the right to sue does not survive within the meaning of s. 378 of the Civil Procedure Code (corresponding to O. XXII, r. 4) on the death of respondent insolvent in an appeal by creditors against an order adjudging him to be an insolvent. Such an order is purely personal to the insolvent. The learned Counsel for the appellants has not invited our attention to any judgment which lays down the contrary rule. It is true that as enacted in s. 17 of the Provincial Insolvency Act if a debtor, by or against whom an insolvent petition has been presented, dies, these proceedings in the matter shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, be continued so far as may be necessary for the realization and distribution of his property. It must be remembered that the object of the section is that the death of the debtor should not affect the realization and distribution of his assets but it has no bearing upon the question before us.

We must accordingly hold that the appeal has abated. The appellants must pay the costs for the appeal.

R. L.

Order accordingly.

(1) 69 P. R. 1883.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 301 OF 1927.

November 10, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

WALI MUHAMMAD—DEFENDANT—

PETITIONER

versus

FAZL DAD—PLAINTIFF, FATEH KHAN
AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. V, r. 20 —Substituted service—Plaintiff giving several different addresses of defendant—Inference—Service by proclamation.

Before substituted service can validly be effected all reasonable efforts must be made to find out the whereabouts of the defendant in order to effect personal service. [p. 283, col. 1.]

Where the plaintiff gives several addresses of the defendant and every time a different one it may be inferred that the defendant's address is not correctly known to the plaintiff and an order for substituted service should not be made. [ibid.]

Where the defendant is not in his village service by proclamation of the date of hearing is of no avail. [ibid.]

Petition for revision of an order of the District Judge, Rawalpindi, dated the 28th January, 1927, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Gujjar Khan, District Rawalpindi, dated the 12th October, 1926.

Mr. Muhammad Rafi, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Aziz Ahmad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The trial Court as well as the lower Appellate Court having refused to set aside the ex parte decree in a money suit that had been passed against the defendant-petitioner, he has come up to this Court with an application in revision, and his learned Counsel contends (1) that the trial Court was not justified in ordering substituted service of summons on the defendant, and (2) that the substituted service ordered had not been duly effected.

The suit was instituted on the 2nd of January, 1926, and the first date of hearing fixed was the 19th January, 1926. The summons issued to the defendant for that date was returned unserved, the process-server having made no attempt to serve it. A fresh summons, therefore, ought to have been issued in the ordinary way but the trial Court sent one by post in a registered envelop. (It may be noted here, that according to the rule added by this Court to O. V, r. 10 of the Civil Procedure Code the Court was bound to have service effected in accordance with the provisions of the said Order, of the Civil Procedure Code, if the defendant should have failed to put in an appearance after receiving the summons by post.) The envelope however, came back with the report that the addressee could not be found. Then a summons was issued through a process-server whose return was that the defendant was absent in Montgomery. No real attempt was made to find out the whereabouts of the defendant and from the fact that the plaintiff gave each time a different address of the defendant it follows that his correct address was not known to him. There was no ground for assuming that the defendant was keeping out of the way to avoid service of summons. The Court, therefore, before ordering substituted service should have had reason to be satisfied that service of summons could not be effected in the ordinary way. It is difficult to say in the present case that the trial Court had sufficient reason to be satisfied. In Bhowanidas Ramgovind v. Pannachand Luchmipat (1) it was held that before substituted service can validly be effected all reasonable efforts must be made to find out the whereabouts of the defendant in order to effect personal service. Similarly in Kassim Ebrahim Saleji v. Johudmull Khemka (2) it was laid down that proper inquiries and real and substantial effort should be made to find out when and where the defendant is likely to be found. In the present case as the defendant was not in his village service by proclamation of the date of hearing in that village was of no avail.

The petitioner's application to have the ex parte decree set aside was within time and from the fact that he made his appearance in Court with this application some 20 days after the ex parte decree, it cannot be inferred that he had been wilfully keeping out of the way previously.

In view of all that has been stated above I come to the conclusion that the contention No. 1 of the Counsel for the petitioner is well-founded, and accordingly accepting this petition and reversing the order of the Courts below I set aside the ex parte decree and direct that the case be proceeded with by the trial Court according to law. No order as to costs of the proceedings in this Court.

R. L.

Revision allowed:

Case remanded.

(1) 88 Ind. Cas. 929; 52 C. 453; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 801.

(2) 34 Ind. Cas. 799; 43 C. 447; 23 C. L. J. 183; 20 C. W. N. 173.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1542 OF 1923.

October 20, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Fforde and Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

RALLIA SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

PARSHOTAM SINGH—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT.

Appeal—Court refusing to entertain plea not taken in grounds of appeal—Second appeal—Interference.

When the lower Appellate Court in the exercise of its discretion has refused to entertain a plea not taken up in the grounds of appeal, the High Court will not interfere with this exercise of discretion by entertaining that plea where the discretion has not been exercised improperly or unjudicially.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Amritsar, dated the 13th April, 1923, affirming that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Amritsar, dated the 29th June, 1916.

Mr. Chandar Gupta for Mr. Fakir Chand, for the Appellant.

Lala Badri Das, R. B., and Mr. Kishen Dayal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Mr. Chandar Gupta for the defendant-appellant has sought to challenge the judgment of the lower Appellate Court on grounds which were not raised in the memorandum of appeal to that Court.

He urges that the agreement in question cannot be enforced on account of uncertainty. The point was not taken in the appeal to the District Judge.

He further urges that the decree went beyond the plaint, in which the plaintiff stated his readiness to pay costs of registration which have been wrongly imposed upon the defendant by the decree. That is a point which was not raised before the learned District Judge in the memorandum of appeal to his Court and the learned District Judge for that reason refused to entertain that ground when the appeal came before him for hearing. The learned District Judge in refusing to allow that point to be taken was exercising his discretion and it cannot be said that he exercised that discretion improperly or unjudicially. That being so, no second appeal lies against that exercise of discretion.

Another point which Mr. Chandar Gupta now seeks to argue is that there was no consideration for the original sale contract of 1903. That matter has been determined by the decision of the High Court in a judgment delivered on the 27th of October, 1921, and is now not open to the appellant.

There is no other point raised before us and accordingly, as the other questions are concluded by the findings of the learned District Judge, this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

R. L.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS SECOND CIVIL APPEAL

No. 1299 of 1927.

October 19, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Dalip Singh.

GOPAL SINGH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

MANGAL SINGH—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151, O. XLI, r. 23—Remand order purporting to be under O. XLI, r. 23, but really under inherent powers—Appeal.

Right of appeal is determined by what the Court purports to do and not by what the Court should have done. Therefore, where the Court purports to remand under O. XLI, r. 23, Civil Procedure Code, an appeal is competent from the remand order, even though the order is really one passed under s. 151 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Miscellaneous second appeal from an order of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Amballa, dated the 11th April, 1927, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Rupar, District Ambala, dated the 26th January, 1927.

Lala Faqir Chand, for the Appellants.

Mr. Sunder Das, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the Appellate Court remanded the case under O. XLI, r. 23, Civil Procedure Code, in a judgment, which is perfectly impossible for me to follow.

So far as the Counsel for the respondent has been able to support it, he says that certain persons have not been made necessary parties to the suit and that the question is whether the relationship of landlord and tenant is proved and that there are certain documents which are to be legally proved and others whose admissibility is in question.

So far as the necessary parties are concerned there is no reason why they should be considered necessary parties at all. The other reasons given are questions of fact or law, which the Appellate Court decided without any question of remand arising. It has been urged by Counsel for the respondent that the remand is not under O. XLI, r. 23, but under s. 151 and, therefore, no appeal lies. But the right of appeal is determined by what the Court purported to do, and not by what the Court should have done and, therefore, this objection has no force.

I accept the appeal. The respondent will pay the costs of this hearing. The case is sent back to the learned Senior Subordinate Judge to dispose of according to law.

R. L.

Appeal accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 297 of 1927.

November 30, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

Musammat RAJO—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER
versus

ALI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 164—Application to set aside ex parte decree—Onus of proving date of knowledge of decree.

In an application for setting aside an ex parte decree the onus of proving that the applicant became aware of the decree within 30 days and not before lies on him.

Petition for revision of an order of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Phalia, District Gujrat, dated the 14th March, 1927.

Mr. S. L. Puri for Mr. M. L. Puri, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Mohsin Shah, for the Respondents.

ORDER.—The ex parte decree in question was passed on the 6th November, 1925 and the application to have it set aside was filed on the 23rd March, 1926. The Court below held, therefore, to determine first of all whether the application was within limitation and the onus of proving that the applicant became aware of the decree within 30 days before the application and not before was upon him. The question of limitation, however, does not appear to have occurred to the Court below at all and without going into that question it set aside the ex parte decree. I, therefore, accept this petition for revision, set aside the order of the Court below and direct that the application be decided afresh in the light of the observations made above.

R. L.

Petition accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1383
OF 1927.

December 13, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Dalip Singh.
DEVI DIAL AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—
PETITIONERS
*versusMusammat RATTAN DEVI—COMPLAINANT
—RESPONDENT.Criminal trial—Warrant case—Accused reserving right of cross-examination—Charge framed for offence triable as summons case—Procedure relating to summons case, legality of adopting—Accused's right to re-cross-examine prosecution witnesses.

Where a case is tried as a warrant case and the accused reserves his right of cross-examination, he is entitled to have the prosecution witnesses summoned for cross-examination after the framing of the charge even if the charge is framed for an offence triable as a summons case.

Case reported by the District Magistrate, Gujranwala, with his No. 2124 of 24th August, 1927.

Facts appear from the following report of the District Magistrate :—

REPORT.—Musammat Rattan Devi complainant lodged a complaint under ss. 147, 323, 354, 504, Indian Penal Code, against Devi Dial and others. The case was sent to the Bench of Honorary Magistrates, Gujranwala, exercising Second Class powers. The Court issued summons under s. 323, Indian Penal Code. The prosecution witnesses were examined, but the complainant and one or two other prosecution witnesses were not cross-examined at all by the accused, evidently because the case was proceeded with as a warrant case and they knew that they had a right to re-cross-examine the prosecution witnesses in case a charge was framed against them. However, at this stage the Court ordered that the case should be treated as one under s. 352, Indian Penal Code, i. e., a summons case and that the accused should produce their defence. On this the accused applied that the prosecution witnesses should be summoned for re-cross-examination as they had reserved their right to re-cross-examine them; but this application was refused by the Court and now the accused have applied to me for the revision of the said order.

I have perused the file and I find that the complainant was not cross-examined at all and there was practically no cross-examination of another prosecution witness also. I certainly think the refusal of the Court to summon these witnesses for re-cross-examination cannot be considered justifiable and the order of refusal is prejudicial to the interests of justice. The accused party must have an opportunity to cross-examine them.

As I cannot pass the order myself, I submit the case to the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court with the recommendation that the order of the Court, dated 6th July, 1927, may be revised and the Court directed to re-summon the prosecution witnesses whom the accused want to re-cross-examine.

Mr. Partab Singh, for the Petitioners.

JUDGMENT.—This case has been reported by the District Magistrate, Gujranwala, under s. 438, Criminal Procedure Code. The facts are that on a complaint by Musammat Rattan Devi the case was being tried by a Bench of Honorary Magistrates as a warrant case under s. 323, Indian Penal Code. Some of the prosecution witnesses were cross-examined, the complainant was not cross-examined at all and a charge was framed against the accused. At this stage the Bench of Honorary Magistrates ordered that the case should be treated as one under s. 352, Indian Penal Code, that is to say, as a summons case and refused to allow the accused to further cross-examine the prosecution witness. It is obvious that the accused may have been considerably prejudiced by this and in the circumstances I direct that the Bench of Honorary Magistrates allow the accused to cross-examine all the prosecution witnesses that they may wish to and then the case will be disposed of according to law.

The reference is accepted accordingly.

R. L.

Reference accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 665 OF 1927.

November 11, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Agha Haidar.
GULAB AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED—APPELLANTSversusEMPEROR—RESPONDENT.Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 489—Reference—Enhancement of sentence—Reference by District Magistrate for enhancement, legality of—Proper procedure.*

A reference for enhancement of sentence by a District Magistrate direct to the High Court is irregular and unwarranted by law. The proper course for a District Magistrate to adopt is to instruct the law officers of the Crown in the High Court to file an application for revision asking for the enhancement of sentence.

Criminal appeal from an order of the Magistrate, First Class, exercising enhanced powers under s. 30, Criminal Procedure Code, Attock at Campbellpur, dated the 30th May, 1927.

Mr. Abdul Ghani Khan, for the Appellants.

Mr. B. H. Beven Petman, for the Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Three persons, namely, Gulab, Dalli and Shah Sufaid, had been chalaned by the Police under s. 397 of the Indian Penal Code. Dalli has been acquitted by the learned trying Magistrate and Gulab and Shah Sufaid have each been convicted under s. 394 and sentenced to a term of 'five years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 100. They have appealed to this Court through Mr. Abdul Ghani Khan.

The District Magistrate, Campbellpur, has made a reference to this Court for the enhancement of the sentence of the appellants by convicting them under s. 397 of the Indian Penal Code. The procedure adopted by him appears to be irregular and not warranted by law. The proper course for him to adopt would have been to instruct the law officers of the Crown in the High Court to file an application for revision asking for the enhancement of the sentence. However, a learned Judge, of this Court was pleased to issue notice on the 28th of July, 1927, to the accused to show cause why the sentence which has been passed upon them, should not be enhanced. The notice has been duly served. Both the appeal and the reference are before me for disposal.

[Note.—The rest of the judgment is not necessary for the purposes of this report.—Ed.]

R. L.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1462 OF 1927.

November 18, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Addison.

EMPEROR—PETITIONER

versus

MUHAMMAD AKBAR—ACCUSED—

RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 118, 123 (2)—Security not furnished—Reference to Sessions Judge—Magistrate's power to accept security pending reference—Effect of accepting security.

Where an accused fails to furnish security under s. 118, Criminal Procedure Code, and a reference is made to the Sessions Judge under s. 123 (2) of the Code the Magistrate does not become functus officio. Notwithstanding such a reference he can accept security if one is offered before the decision of the reference by the Sessions Judge and when security is accepted by the Magistrate the reference to the Sessions Judge automatically comes to an end, and the right of the accused to appeal which was in abeyance revives.

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Delhi, with his No. 744 of 1927.

Facts appear from the following report of the Sessions Judge:—

REPORT.—Muhammad Akbar was sent up by the Police for security under s. 110, Criminal Procedure Code. Chaudhri Surat Singh, Magistrate First Class, Delhi enquired into the case and under s. 118 Criminal Procedure Code, the learned Magistrate ordered Muhammad Akbar to give security for good behaviour for three years and furnish a bond in the sum of Rs. 5,000 to that effect with two sureties for a like sum jointly and severally responsible. (See his order dated 5th of August, 1927.) Muhammad Akbar failed to furnish security and the learned Magistrate referred the case to this Court under s. 123, sub-s. (2), Criminal Procedure Code, by his order dated 15th of August, 1927. A notice was issued to Muhammad Akbar to appear on 29th of August, 1927, and to show cause why the order of the learned Magistrate requiring him to give security to be of good behaviour for three years should not be confirmed. On 29th of August, 1927, it was brought to my notice that Muhammad Akbar gave security in the Court of the learned Magistrate and was released by his order on 19th of August, 1927. I sent for the record of the proceedings in which the security was accepted by the learned Magistrate. Section 123, sub-s. 2 runs as follows:—

"When such person has been ordered by a Magistrate to give security for a period exceeding one year, such Magistrate shall, if such person does not give such security as afore-said, issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge or, if such Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, pending the orders of the High Court; and the proceedings shall be laid, as soon as conveniently may be, before such Court".

I am of opinion that the learned Magistrate could accept the security before the reference had been made to this Court but as soon as the reference was made to the Sessions Judge the learned Magistrate became functus officio and the Sessions Judge was seized of the case. The learned Magistrate had no jurisdiction to accept security after he had issued a warrant directing Muhammad Akbar to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge. After the reference was made the Sessions Judge was the only person who could make such orders as he thought proper in the case. The proceedings of the Magistrate accepting the security after the reference had been made to this Court were without jurisdiction and void. Muhammad Akbar the person who was called upon to give security is no longer under detention and under the circumstances, I am unable to decide the reference on the merits till the proceedings taken by the Magistrate after he had made the reference to this Court are set aside by the High Court and Muhammad Akbar was ordered to be re-arrested and to be detained in prison. I submit the record of the proceedings of the learned Magistrate to the High Court with the recommendation that the proceedings of the learned Magistrate accepting the security be quashed and Muhammad Akbar be ordered to be re-arrested and detained in prison pending the order of the Sessions Judge. The hearing of the reference on the merits will be postponed till the order of the High Court is received on this recommendation.

Mr. C. H. Carden Noad, Government Advocate, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Bishen Narain, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a case reported by the Sessions Judge of Delhi. One Muhammad Akbar was ordered by a Magistrate of the First Class under s. 118 of the Criminal Procedure Code to give security for his good behaviour under s. 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code for a period of three years. Muhammad Akbar failed to furnish security then and there and he accordingly was ordered to be detained in prison, pending the orders of the Sessions Judge, in accordance with the provisions of s. 123 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code. A day or so later he offered security to the Magistrate who accepted it and he was released from Jail. This came to the notice of the learned Sessions Judge when he was hearing the reference. The learned Sessions Judge was of the opinion that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to accept the security after making the reference to him and he had accordingly forwarded the proceedings of the Magistrate to this Court with the recommendation that the Magistrate's order accepting the security be quashed and Muhammad Akbar be ordered to be re-arrested and detained in prison, pending the orders of the Sessions Judge on the reference.

Sub s. (1) to s. 123 of the Criminal Procedure Code directs that in cases where security is demanded up to the limit of one year and security is not given the person ordered to give security shall be committed to prison until the security is given or the period fixed expires. Sub s. (2) provides that where a security for a period exceeding one year is demanded from a person the Magistrate shall, if security is not given, issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison, pending the orders of the Sessions Judge before whom the proceedings shall be laid. Sub-s. (3) lays down that the Sessions Judge after examining the proceedings may pass such orders as he thinks fit. Finally sub-s. 4 is to the effect that if security is tendered to the officer-in-charge of the Jail he shall forthwith refer the matter to the Court or Magistrate who made the order and shall wait the orders of such Court or Magistrate.

The argument of the learned Government Advocate was that it follows from the fact that sub-s. (4) comes after both sub-ss. (1) and (2) and that it is left to the Magistrate who made the order to deal with the security offered in both cases when such security is tendered to the officer-in-charge of the Jail. What corresponded to sub-s. (4) in the old Code of 1882 came to the end of what is now sub-s. (1). According to him the change effected in the later Code was a clear indication that it was intended that the Magistrate should still take security even though the matter had been referred to the Sessions Judge if such security was offered before the Sessions sions Judge dealt with the case. The matter is not free from difficulty and it must be said that there is nothing in the Act, clearly indicating what should be done if security is offered to the Magistrate after he has referred the matter to the Sessions Judge and before the latter has heard the reference. It must be a common occurrence that sureties are only available a day or two later. In my judgment, therefore, a reasonable view of the matter should be taken. The purpose of the security sections is not that the persons proceeded against should be sent to or kept in Jail but that that should only be done when they are unable to give security. I do not think that it was intended that persons should remain in Jail possible for months until the Sessions Judge owing to pressure of work was unable to deal with these cases. It must have been meant that they could offer security to the Magistrate when they are able to procure it and in this way get out of Jail. That implies that the reference to the Sessions Judge, if not disposed of, would automatically come to an end when security is taken. In my judgment this is the most reasonable and convenient view to take, seeing that there is no specific provision of the Code dealing with this matter. At the same time it follows that the right of appeal given under s. 406 of the Criminal Procedure Code to the person from whom security is demanded revives once he has given security and in the present case if an appeal is preferred the fact that Muhammad Akbar has been engaged in these proceedings should be taken into account by the Court or Magistrate hearing the appeal if one is preferred.

For the reasons given I decline to set aside the proceedings of the Magistrate accepting security and hold that the reference to the Sessions Judge automatically ended when Muhammad Akbar gave security to the Magistrate a day or two after he was ordered so to do, and the same time that the right of appeal which was in abeyance by reason of the reference revived when he gave security.

R. L.

*Reference rejected.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1492 of 1927.

November 11, 1927.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice.BATAN SINGH—ACCUSED—PETITIONERversusEMPEROR—RESPONDENT.Wild Birds and Animals Protection Act (VIII of 1912), s. 4—Offence under the Act, what constitutes.

To convict a person under the Wild Birds and Animals Protection Act, 1912, it is necessary to prove that he has either killed or attempted to kill one of the animals or birds mentioned in the Schedule to the Act.

Merely wandering about with a gun round a reserved nursery does not constitute an offence under the Act.

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Jullundur, with his No. 323-J of the 7th September, 1927.

Facts appear from the following report of the Sessions Judge:—

REPORT.—At about 5 P.M. on the 13th July, 1927, the Superintendent of Police Jullundur and the Superintendent of Police Training School Phillaur, heard the sound of a shot fired, and proceeding in that direction discovered the accused Batan Singh with a loaded gun wandering round the reserved Nursery of Phillaur. He was seized and made over to Jhangir Khan Constable, who is the only prosecution witness in the case.

From the evidence of Jhangir Khan it would appear that he has no personal knowledge of the facts. The Magistrate in his judgment, convicting the accused, has stated that the accused pleaded guilty, but this is not a fact. To convict the accused under the Wild Birds and Animals Protection Act, it was necessary to prove that he had either killed or attempted to kill one of the animals or birds mentioned in the Schedule. But there is no evidence to show that he had actually fired at any bird or animal, much less one mentioned in the Schedule of the Act. It is no offence for a person holding a license to go about with a loaded gun in his possession.

I accordingly forward the record of the case to the High Court with a recommendation that the conviction be quashed and the sentence of fine set aside.

Mr. Din Dayal, for the Petitioner.

ORDER.—For the reasons recorded by the learned Sessions Judge, I set aside the conviction and the sentence and direct that the fine, if realised, be refunded to the accused.

R. L.

Revision allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1402 OF 1924.

August 10, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Curgenven and
Mr. Justice Ananthakrishna Ayyar.MUPPIDATHI AMMAL—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

MUTHUSWAMI PILLAI AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Construction of deeds—‘Santhathi’, whether includes adopted son.

The word ‘santhathi’ used generally includes an adopted son as well as a natural born son.

Balasubramania Pillai v. Pitcha Pillai (1), followed.

Per Curgenven, J.—In ordinary Hindu usage expressions signifying ‘offspring, progeny, issue’, though in English they are ordinarily restricted to natural children, include children by adoption.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Tinnevely, in A. S. No. 4 of 1924, (A. S. No. 507 of 1923 on the file of the District Court, Tinnevely), preferred against that of the Court of the District Munsif, Tenkasi, in O. S. No. 557 of 1921.

Mr. S. Ramaswami Iyer, for the Appellant.

Messrs. P. N. Appuswami and P. S. Nagaswami, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Curgenven, J.—The first question in this second appeal is as to the meaning to be attached to the word ‘santhathi’ as used in the compromise Ex. D, whether it includes an adopted as well as a natural born son. There is perhaps a significant difference between the phrasing of Ex. C, embodying the provision made by Nainar Pillai in favour of his daughter Piramu Ammal born after the adoption of his son, and Ex. D, the compromise now in question, for, in the former, the words, used are ‘if issue (santhathi) are not born to (or forthcoming from) you,’ which seems clearly to exclude an adopted son, while in the latter the expression is ‘if the defendant had no issue (santhathi).’ This phrase appears to me to be fully compatible with the view that both a natural and an adopted son was contemplated, for there is no doubt that in ordinary Hindu usage expression signifying ‘offspring, progeny, issue’ though in English they are ordinarily restricted to natural children include children by adoption. One would, therefore, expect the word to have been accompanied by some appropriate qualification had it been intended to exclude an adopted son. This was the meaning attached to the word in Balasubramania Pillai v. Pitcha Pillai (1) while in Rajarajeswara Dorai v. Sundarapandiyaswami Thevar (2) Seshagiri Ayyar, J., went so far as to hold that it included heirs other than lineal descendants. I do not think that any useful guidance is to be obtained from the consideration of a somewhat similar expression in Shiyali Subraya Chetty v. Calve Subraya Chettiar (3) because the context there led to a different conclusion. I see no reason to differ from the learned Subordinate Judge in the view he has taken, and since this finding is sufficient to dispose of the second appeal, it is dismissed with costs.

Ananthakrishna Ayyar, J.—I agree. The question that arises for decision in this case is about the proper interpretation to be placed on the expression used in Ex. D if the defendant Piramu Ammal left no ‘santhathi’ the properties should go to the plaintiff (Shanmuga Nainar Pillai). It is contended by the learned Vakil for the appellant that the word ‘santhathi’ should be confined to children born of Piramu Ammal, and that the existence of an adopted son of Piramu Ammal would not prevent the property going to the plaintiff. I am unable to accept that contention. The word ‘santhathi’ though a Sanskrit word is also in general use among people who use Tamil. This question whether the word ‘santhathi’ is wide enough to include adopted son, arose for decision in the case of Balasubramania Pillai v. Pitcha Pillai (1) and I agree with Sankaran Nair, J., that the word in general use is wide enough to include adopted son also. Justice Seshagiri Iyer would seem to go further and would seem to be of the opinion that the word means ‘the heir in general’ see Rajarajeswara Dorai v. Sundarapandiyaswami Thevar (2). If the context clearly shows that the word was not used in its ordinary sense, the question might be different. In the present case, I am not able to say that the context justifies us in placing a different construction. On the other hand, turning to Ex. C, under which Nainar Pillai settled the properties on his daughter Piramu Ammal, we find the expression used is "if no 'santhathi' be born to you." After Nainar Pillai's death, there was litigation between his son Shanmuga Nainar Pillai (the husband of the present plaintiff) and Piramu Ammal. The suit was compromised, under Ex. D. Under Ex. D, Piramu Ammal gave some property to Shanmuga Nainar, and as regards the other properties received by Piramu Ammal under Ex. C, it was stipulated that she was to take the same and if she left no 'santhathi' then Shanmuga Nainar was to take possession of the same.

(1) 33 Ind. Cas. 552; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 306.

(2) 27 Ind. Cas. 283; 27 M. L. J. 694.

(3) 37 Ind. Cas. 404; 5 L. W. 740; 21 M. L. T. 315.

The difference in the expression used in Exs. C. and D would, if at all, only go against the contention urged by the appellant.

On the whole I am of opinion that the expression used in Ex. D includes a case of adopted son, and that the heirs of Shanmuga Nainar are not entitled to recover possession of the properties. The decree of the Subordinate Judge is correct and the second appeal is dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 410 OF 1926.

May 6, 1927.

Present:—Justice Sir William Watkins Phillips, Kt.

MURUGIAH PILLAI—PLAINTIFF

—PETITIONER

versus

PAKKIRIA PILLAI—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 57, 60—Loan or deposit—Question of fact—Presumption.

Where there is a doubt as to whether a transaction amounts to a loan or a deposit, there is no presumption that it is a deposit and not a loan. The question is one of fact in each case.

Narayan Chettyar v. Vellayappa Chettyar (1), commented upon.

Petition under s. 25 of Act IX of 1887, praying the High Court to revise the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Tiruvalur, in S. C. S. No. 641 of 1925,

Mr. N. S. Srinivasa Iyer, for the Petitioner.

Mr. K. Raghavachari, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The only question which arises in this case is whether the money sued for was a deposit with the defendant's father or whether it was a loan. The money was remitted to defendant's father by one Govinda Pillai in 1914 and this suit is brought in 1925 the plaintiff having taken an assignment of the debt from a lady who purchased it in Court sale. The Subordinate Judge has found that prima facie the suit is barred by limitation and, unless plaintiff can show that this remittance was in the nature of a deposit and that the suit had been brought within three years of demand having been made, the suit must fail. He has held on the evidence that plaintiff has failed to prove his case and dismissed the suit.

It is contended here that there is evidence sufficient to prove the case and reliance is placed on a remark in Narayanan Chettyar v. Vellayappa Chettyar (1). This refers to Ramanathan Chetty v. Subramaniam Chetty (2) a prior case, reported in 28 M. L. J. 372 and says as pointed out in that case, if there is any doubt as to whether a transaction amounts to a loan or a deposit the presumption is that it is a deposit and not a loan. The above presumption does not find a place in Ramanathan Chetty v. Subramaniam Chetty (2) and I think we must read that remark as relating solely to the circumstances of that case, for I can find no authority for the presumption as a general presumption of law. If there is no such general presumption I think the Subordinate Judge was justified in holding that there was not sufficient evidence to prove the case.

The revision petition is dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

Petition dismissed.

(1) 34 Ind. Cas. 347; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 206; 19 M. L. J. 237.

(2) 28 Ind. Cas. 688; 28 M. L. J. 372; 17 M. L. T. 266.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
FULL BENCH.

REFERRED CASE No. 12 OF 1926.

May 5, 1927.

Present:—Sir Victor Murray Coutts-Trotter, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Wallace and Mr. Justice Beasley.

THE COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX,
MADRAS—REFERRING OFFICER

versus

TRICHINOPOLY TENNORE HINDU
PERMANENT FUND, LTD.—RESPONDENT.

Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), s. 4—“Mutual Benefit Society,” what is—Object of fund not inconsistent with making profit—Fund, liability of, to be assessed to income-tax.

The question whether a Fund is a society constituted essentially for the mutual benefit of its members, the income of which is not liable to be assessed to income-tax, or whether it is an ordinary money-lending Bank engaging in money with a view to earning profit for distribution among its shareholders is one of fact to be decided on the circumstances of each case. [p. 291, col. 2.]

The object of the Trichinopoly Hindu Permanent Fund as set out in its Memorandum of Association was “to enable persons to save money” and “to secure loans at favourable rates of interest.” The capital, paid up or subscribed, was made up of shares limited in number and in value, and the shareholders and subscribers constituted the controlling authority while membership was restricted to such shareholders or subscribers. Outside these members was a class called monthly depositors who were by a bye-law practically on the same footing as subscribers but were not subject to the losses and liabilities of the Fund. Loans were granted to any one and were of two kinds, ‘term loans’ restricted to subscribers and monthly depositors and ‘temporary loans’ to any constituent. There was no special concession whatever which was confined to shareholders and subscribers. They were exactly on the same footing as outsiders, for example, monthly depositors. Profits were distributed in the way of dividends in the ordinary business fashion and were expressed to be “out of the net profit arising from the business of the Fund”:

Held, that the Fund was not one which did not aim at making profit by lending money on interest, that in the constitution and object there was no purpose of mutual benefit, and that the Fund was, therefore, liable to be assessed to income-tax as a Company. [p. 293, col. 1.]

Secretary, Board of Revenue, Income-Tax, Madras v. Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund, Ltd. (1), New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2), Liverpool Corn Trade Association v. Monks (3) and Thomas v. Evans & Co., Jones v. South West Lancashire Coal Owners' Association, Ltd. (4), distinguished.

Case stated under s. 66 (2) of the Income Tax Act, XI of 1922, for the decision of the High Court on the following questions of law which have arisen in assessing the Trichinopoly Tennore Hindu Permanent Fund, viz.,

(1) Should this Fund be assessed as a Mutual Benefit Society or as a Company,

(i. e.) should the assessment be made only on the income earned from non-members or on the total income?

(2) If the Fund should be assessed as a Mutual Benefit Society (i. e.) only on its income from non-members, are the depositors members of the Fund?

(3) Should the sums paid to the term shareholders and depositors in respect of subscriptions and deposits be deducted as expenditure incurred solely for the purpose of earning the profits or gains of the Fund?

Mr. M. Patanjali Sastri, for the Referring Officer.

Mr. M. Subbaraya Iyer, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In this Reference three questions have been referred to this Court by the Commissioner of Income-tax. Of these, questions Nos. 2 and 3 have not been pressed. Then question No. 1 remains, that is: “Should this Fund be assessed as a Mutual Benefit Society or as a Company?” The Commissioner of Income-tax has decided that the Fund is not a Mutual Benefit Society and is, therefore, not entitled to the benefit of the ruling of this Court reported as Secretary, Board of Revenue, Income-Tax, Madras v. Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund Ltd. (1).

In the main this question is a question of fact and this Court will not differ from the finding unless that finding is vitiated by some error of law. The chief contention of the learned Vakil who appears for the Fund is that the Commissioner has radically misunderstood the constitution of the Fund as set out in its Memorandum of Association and its Articles.

The point at issue is whether the Fund is a society constituted essentially for the mutual benefit of its members or whether it is an ordinary money-lending Bank engaging in money-lending with a view to earning profit for distribution among its shareholders. A legal definition of a Mutual Benefit Society has not been set out in any Statute and we do not attempt such definition here as it is not necessary. The claim put forward here on behalf of the Fund is that it is of the same nature and constituted on the same footing as the New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2) and as the Secretary, Board of Revenue, Income-Tax, Madras v. Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund (1)

(1) 76 Ind. Cas. 833; 47 M. 1; (1923) M. W. N. 409; A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 684; 20 L. W. 27.

(2) (1889) 14 A. C. 381; 59 L. J. Q. B. 291; 61 L. T. 201.

If that claim is substantiated, then by force of these rulings the present Fund will be a Mutual Benefit Society. We shall, therefore, examine that claim.

The New York Life Insurance Company was founded on principles of Mutual Life Insurance. Two sorts of policies were issued, participating policies and non-participating. There were no shares, but the holder of every participating policy became ipso facto a partner while the holder of a non-participating policy was a mere creditor, without any interest in the assets or liabilities of the Company. The rate of premium for participating policy-holders was calculated from time to time at a figure sufficient to cover the probable disbursements. Then an account was taken of the transactions of the Company, and the excess, if any, of premiums received over expenditure was returned or re-paid to the members. The essential condition in the constitution of this Company was that the contributions of the members so far as they were not required for the common purpose of the Company should be re-paid to them; that is, the aim of the Company was not to make a profit for distribution to members but to make no profit; any realisation of profit meant that the purpose of the Company had so far been imperfectly fulfilled because too large a contribution had been levied. The return of such profit, if it could be called profit, to the members was merely a return to them of the excess of contribution which had been levied from them, and any dividend, if it can be called a dividend, was paid to them not as share-holders but as policy-holders. In the report of that case at page 411* Lord Macnaghten says: "What is to become of the surplus if everything goes right? The practice is to take an account every year of assets and liabilities, and to give the insured the benefit of the surplus, either by way of reduction of premium or by way of addition to the sum insured. It can make no difference in principle whether the surplus is so applied, or paid back in hard cash. In either case it is nothing but the return of so much of the amount contributed as may be in excess of the amount really required. I do not understand how this excess can be regarded from any point of view or for any purpose as gain or profit earned by the contributors." That this was the principle underlying this decision is also the view adopted by Rowlatt, J., in Liverpool Corn Trade Association v. Monks (3) and it has been applied to a similar case Thomas v. Evans & Co., Jones v. South West Lancashire Coal Owners' Association, Ltd. (4) where the Company was an association founded solely for affording indemnity to its members against compensation in respect of fatal accidents to workmen. In the case of Secretary, Board of Revenue, Income-Tax, Madras v. Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund, Ltd. (1) learned Judges held that it was on all fours with the New York Life Insurance Company (2), since the income did not come from outside, but from inside, and was, therefore, not taxable. There the capital was made up solely of investments by members, and the income was derived from interest earned on loans to members. The essence of the society was mutuality and the members and constituents were one and the same.

*Page of (1869) 14 A. C.—[Ed.]

Now we have to see whether the constitution of the present Company is at all on those lines of mutuality. Its object as set out in the Memorandum of Association is "to enable persons to save money" and "to secure loans at favourable rates of interest." This is a perfectly general object and there is no hint that those who are to be enabled to save money or to secure loans are confined to the members of the Company, or that the essence of the object is the low rate of interest; so that, for example, the purpose aimed at is not profits but a lowering of the rate of interest as far as possible. The stated object of this Fund is not incompatible with a purely business effort to make as much profit as possible out of lending money on favourable rates of interest. The capital paid up or subscribed is made up of shares limited in number and in value, and the share holders and subscribers constitute the controlling authority while membership is restricted to such share-holders or subscribers. Outside these members is a class called monthly depositors who are, by a bye-law under Art. 34, practically on the same footing as subscribers but are not subject to the losses and liabilities of the Fund. Here the principle of mutuality, if it existed before at all, is entirely abandoned. Loans are granted to any one and are of two kinds, 'term loans' restricted to subscribers and monthly depositors and 'temporary loans' to any constituent. There is no special concession whatever which is confined to shareholders and subscribers. They are exactly on the same footing as outsiders, for example, monthly depositors. Profits are distributed in the way of dividends in the ordinary business fashion and are expressed to be "out of the net profit arising from the business of the Fund." See Art. 55 (1-a). There is no suggestion that the dividends paid to the shareholders and subscribers are merely by way of return of their original capital subscribed, and, as we have noticed, there is no hint that the aim of the Company is not to make a profit by lending money on interest. We find, therefore, in the constitution and objects of this Fund no purpose of mutual benefit, no society of persons banded together to lend money to each other, no benefit to be obtained by, or derived from, membership alone. The constitution of this Fund, therefore, differs fundamentally from that of the New York Life Insurance Company (2) or the Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund (1) and the claim of the Fund that they are entitled by virtue of the rulings in those cases to be exempt from taxation in regard to any of their profits cannot be sustained. The Commissioner has made no mistake in holding that there is here no mutual benefit society and that the net profits of the Fund are taxable in full.

(3) (1926) 2 K. B. 110; 95 L. J. K. B. 519; 131 L. T. 756; 10 Tax. Cas. 442; 42 T. L. R. 393.
(4) (1927) 1 K. B. 33.

We must, therefore, answer this Reference that this Fund should be assessed as a Company. The Fund will pay the costs of this Reference which we fix at Rs. 250.

V. N. V.

Reference answered.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 566 OF 1924.

May 5, 1927.

Present.—Mr. Justice Jackson.

KARUPANNA KONAR AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RANGASWAMI KONAR AND OTHERS

—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 32 (3) (7), 13, cl. (a) —'Statement against proprietary interest'—Statement of boundaries, admissibility of—'Assertion of title'—Mere statement or mention, whether amounts to assertion.

Under s. 32 (3) of the Evidence Act it is the statement, not the document containing the statement, which must be against the proprietary interest of the person making it. [p. 294, col. 1.]

A mere "mention" of a right not amounting to an "assertion" of it is not admissible in evidence under cl. (7), s. 32. [ibid.]

Where the question in issue was whether certain property was the joint property of the plaintiffs and the defendants and certain old documents executed by the defendants' ancestors which contained a recital in a statement of boundaries that the said property was common property were sought to be adduced in evidence:

Held, that the documents could not be admitted in evidence either under s. 32, cl. (3) or s. 32, cl. (7) of the Evidence Act. [p. 294, cols. 1 & 2.]

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Trichinopoly, in A. S. No. 22 of 1923 (A. S. No. 85 of 1922 on the file of the District Court, Trichinopoly) preferred against that of the Court of the District Munsif, Trichinopoly, in O. S. No. 561 of 1918.

Mr. T. M. Krishnaswami Iyer, for the Appellants.

Mr. K. Narasimha Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Plaintiffs sued for a declaration that a room belonged to the family of defendants and themselves in common. The lower Appellate Court decreed the suit and defendants appeal.

In the trial Court the District Munsif thought the oral evidence adduced by plaintiffs to be worthless. Witnesses said that they worshipped in the room with no clear idea how or what they worshipped. The lower Appellate Court does not traverse the reasoning of the District Munsif but merely holds that the plaintiffs' evidence is better than that of defendants' which may not necessarily mean that plaintiffs have made out their case. Evidently what chiefly impressed the learned Subordinate Judge was the entry in certain old documents that a boundary was the "God's house enjoyed in common." Exhibit E, a partition deed of 1874, Ex. H, a mortgage of 1874, and Exs. A and B, sale deeds of 1881 all contain this recital. Their admissibility as evidence was challenged in the lower Appellate Court and the Subordinate Judge ruled: "The documents are old and their executants are not alive. Statements made by persons deceased about the ownership of the adjacent property in describing boundaries, are, I think, relevant evidence." This is a most perfunctory pronouncement on a point of law. The Subordinate Judge was presumably applying s. 32 of the Evidence Act, and he should have stated with precision and reasons the sub-clause under which in his opinion the documents came. The District Munsif's treatment of the matter was even worse. He thought the documents inadmissible, but proceeded on the assumption that they were admissible. It is now argued that the documents come under sub-cl. (3); statements made against the proprietary interest of those making them; or sub-cl. (7); statements contained in a deed which relates to a transaction such as is mentioned in s. 13, cl. (a).

It cannot be said that a statement of boundaries is against the proprietary interest of the person making it except on the assumption that every person must be presumed to own the universe until he makes a statement circumscribing his title. On the contrary a person may be presumed to own nothing until he brings into existence an effective deed evidencing his title to property and such a deed with the boundaries stated therein, is a document not against but in his proprietary interest. In Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Lakhputtee Takoorain (1) it was held that a mortgage-deed is a statement against the proprietary interest of the person making it, and, therefore, a statement in a mortgage-deed that so much rent was payable on the property, was also a statement admissible in evidence because the whole document was admissible in evidence. It is difficult to see how this argument could be founded on s. 32 of the Evidence Act of 1872 and possibly the learned Judges considered themselves governed by Act II of 1855 [see Ningava v. Bharmappa (2)]. Under s. 32 (3) it is the statement not the document containing the statement which must be against the proprietary interest of the person making it. But Ningava v. Bharmappa (2) follows Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Lakhputtee Takoorain (1) and holds that a mortgage is against the proprietary interest of the executant, and, therefore, a statement of boundary in the mortgage is admissible. This view has been dissented from in this Court in In re Dadapaneni Narayanappa (3) and Saripalli Venkatarajagopala Raju v. Fota Narasayya (4) and I defer to that authority. Lastly it is argued that sub-cl. (7) is applicable because in the partition deed Ex. E, the parties assert the family's common right to the holy room. The exact phrase in Ex. E is "east of the Swami house which is common to the said dayadis and ourselves, north of the thatched house, etc." It is obviously a mere statement of boundary and as such cannot be classed with any of the verbs in s. 13, created, claimed, modified, recognized, asserted or denied; "mentioned" would be the appropriate verb, which means considerably less than "asserted." Therefore, it must be held that Exs. E, H, A and B are not admissible in evidence.

The learned Subordinate Judge has no doubt been influenced by the idea that these ancient documents are obviously not intentionally false and are, therefore, presumably true. But he has overlooked that parties making statements which are not material to their interests have no occasion to be accurate. Suppose that the holy room was never common in any legal sense, yet was thought to be common because sometimes the whole family met there in worship. The parties who drew up these documents might easily have called it the common room, as a sufficient description, without troubling to see if that appellation was strictly accurate. It is exactly in view of such contingencies that the provisions of the Evidence Act are framed.

I find that the Subordinate Judge was materially influenced in his finding on issue No. 2 by inadmissible evidence and remand the suit to the lower Appellate Court for a fresh finding upon that issue on the evidence on record excluding Exs. E, H, A and B. Time for submitting finding will be six weeks. Time for filing objections to the finding will be six days.

[In the light of the finding submitted his Lordship pronounced judgment for the appellants with costs throughout.]

V. N. V.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 22 W. R. 231.

(2) 23 B. 63; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 42.

(3) 8 Ind. Cas. 268; (1910) M. W. N. 668; 9 M. L. T. 91.

(4) 26 Ind. Cas. 747; (1914) M. W. N. 779.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 82 OF 1925.

August 15, 1927.

Present :—Mr. Justice Ramesam and
Mr. Justice Cornish.T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYANGAR, OFFICIAL RECEIVER OF RAMNAD AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS No. 8 AND PETITIONER
—APPELLANTS

versus

M. L. M. RAMA NATHAN CHETTIAR

—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 90 —Court sale—Property consisting of numerous plots in various villages—Sale in one lot, whether proper—Gross inadequacy of price, meaning of—Sale subject to prior mortgage—Order fixing upset price for decree-holder in reference to value of both mortgages, effect of—Sale, whether void.The fact that property consisting of various parcels of land situated in several villages was sold in one lot does not by itself constitute a gross irregularity in conducting the sale. [p. 296, col. 1.]A Court sale cannot be set aside under O. XXI,
r. 90, Civil Procedure Code, where it is not possible to infer that the price which was realised by the sale was substantially less than the real market value or that such inadequacy of price, if any, was the result of an irregularity. [p. 297, col. 1.]In execution of a decree on a puisne mortgage, the mortgaged properties were proclaimed for sale subject to the first mortgage. The Court subsequently gave permission to the decree-holder "to bid for Rs. 3,20,000 which will be the upset price so far as he is concerned." At the sale the only bid by an outsider was for a sum which if added to the amount of the first mortgage was less than the decree-holder's bid of Rs. 3,20,500. The sale was concluded in favour of the decree-holder. On an application being made to set aside the sale:Held, that the order giving permission to bid did not amount to an order to sell free of the encumbrance in variation of the sale proclamation but only directed that the decree-holder could bid only for such a sum which if added to the first mortgage amount would come up to Rs. 3,20,000 and that what was sold was not, therefore, different from what was advertised for sale, so as to make the sale a nullity. [ibid.]Raja Thakur Barmha v. Jiban Ram Marwari (2) and Mahomad Kala Mea v. Harperink (3), distinguishished.Appeal against an order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Dindigul, dated the 29th of September, 1924, and passed in E. A. No. 33 of 1920, in E. P. No. 40 of 1919, in O. S. No. 11 of 1917.Mr. A. Krishnaswami Iyer, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. Varadachari, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.Ramesam, J.—This is an appeal arising out of an application to set aside a sale in execution of the mortgage decree in O. S. No. 11 of 1917, under O. XXI, r.
90, Civil Procedure Code. The mortgageitself being subsequent to a prior mortgage, the decree directed the sale subject to the prior mortgage. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the petition without enquiring into the petitioner's allegations.
There was an appeal to the High Court and the case was sent back for further enquiry by Spencer and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ. The matter has been fully enquired into by the present Subordinate Judge of Dindigul and the petition has been again dismissed. The petitioner appeals.The sale is sought to be set aside on account of the following material irregularities in making the proclamation and effecting the sale:—1. the property consists of various parcels of land situated in six villages and it was directed to be sold in one lot instead of being sold separately thus reducing the number of possible bidders, and as the whole property is certainly worth about three lakhs a number of purchasers were deterred from joining in the sale and bidding;2. the proclamation was not properly published in all the six villages; and3. the market value fixed in the proclamation was too low.It is said that these irregularities have led to substantial injury to the petitioner as the properties were sold for a gross undervalue. The appellants have also taken another question which, it is alleged, is a question of jurisdiction and makes the sale null and void. It is said that the property that was advertised for sale was only the equity of redemption of the first mortgage, where as what was sold was the whole property free of all encum-brances and it is contended that this irregularity is so gross as to make the sale a nullity.On the first point it is now contended that the properties ought to have been sold in separate parcels. The execution petition was filed in April, 1919. On 29th April, the 1st defendant was declared insolvent and the properties were vested in the Official Receiver. In August, the Official Receiver applied for the adjournment for four months on the ground that a private sale at the spot would be more advantageous than the Court sale. Though the petition was not granted, practically the petitioner had the four months' time he sought, for the sale ultimately took place only in January, 1920. Anyhow, in this petition no request was made to sell the property by separate parcels. Notice was ordered, but none of the judgment-debtors appeared, nor did the Official Receiver appear. On 3rd December, 1919, it was ordered that all the properties should be sold in one lot subject to the first encumbrance the principal of which was Rs. 1,10,000 and the market value of the equity of redemption was estimated to be Rs. 40,000. The reason for directing the sale of all properties together is that they were all subject to one prior mortgage and if parcels were sold separately and purchased by different purchasers there will be numberless suits, for contribution among the purchasers if the amount of the prior mortgage is recovered from some of them only, a course open to the prior mortgagee. These considerations might deter purchasers and; therefore, all were directed to be sold together. On the other hand, it is now urged that there is a way of selling separately without the inconvenience of giving rise to numerous suits for contribution. It is suggested that all the parcels should be sold free of encumbrances and that a reservation should be made in the proclamation that the bids will be accepted only if the total price realised on all the parcels exceeded the amount due on the first mortgage. In this way the inconvenience resulting from the sale of several parcels subject to one common mortgage is avoided and the payment of the first mortgage is ensured while the purchasers secure an unencumbered title. The suggestion is, no doubt, good and in this particular case would have probably worked out well, but this suggestion requires the consent of the first mortgagee. He might have given the consent or not. The suggestion has been made for the first time only before us now and it cannot be said that the course followed by the Subordinate Judge constituted a gross irregularity merely because there is a better way of carrying out the sale. This first objection, therefore, fails.

The second objection is that the proclamation was not properly published in various villages. There were six villages, three of them lying in one group and the other three lying in a different region.

[His Lordship referred to the evidence and proceeded:—]

From the above documents and oral evidence it is not only likely that the proclamation was properly made and, at any rate, was known to many likely purchasers, but no complaint was made about it at any time.

It is next suggested by the petitioner that the lands were sold for an under-value, and this is the result of non-proclamation and also of the low market value mentioned in it. A large amount of evidence was referred to to show the value of the lands. Two kinds of evidence were brought to our notice: (1) the sale-deeds of adjacent lands, and (2) the income of the lands. Here again it is unnecessary to refer to the evidence in great detail because the petitioner has not produced his best evidence. The 1st defendant is P. W. No. 46. He says in his evidence, "He (the Official Receiver) took possession of the villages. I was in possession till Fasli 1327. My elder brother Adaikappa Chettiar has got the accounts of these lands for Fasli 1326. He would help me in the conduct of this case in appeal. I have not filed those accounts now." If the income of the lands is to be relied upon for estimating the market value, the accounts which the 1st defendant and his brother have must be produced. It is futile to rely upon oral evidence. It is easy to work out arithmetically that the lands are worth 4 or 5 lakhs. A small variation in the method pursued will produce a large amount of difference. For instance, Mr. Sastri was always trying to capitalise the value of land at 25 times the annual income. It is not very clear that it ought to be 25 times and not 20 times. Making allowance for the revenue of the land and capitalising the value at 20 times the annual income, it seems to me that the lands cannot be worth more than Rs. 3,60,000 and it cannot be said that the market value mentioned in the proclamation is such a gross under-estimate as to vitiate the sale. [See Saadatmant Khan v. Phul Kuar (1) where the estimate given in the proclamation was 1/10th of the real value]. In the present case it must be remembered that, though the principal of the first mortgage was Rs. 1,10,000 its actual amount at the time of the sale was Rs. 1,93,000 so that the market value as given in the proclamation works out at the figure Rs. 2,35,000 for the value of the land free of any encumbrance. Thus, whatever the truth about the proclamation may be, it is not possible to infer that what was realised is substantially less than the real market value and such inadequacy of price, if any, was the result of irregularity, if any.

(1) 20 A. 412; 2 C. W. N. 550; 25 I. A. 146; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 380; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 624 (P. O.).

It is next suggested that the sale itself was void for want of jurisdiction. This portion of the case was argued by Mr. Krishnaswami Iyer and he relied on Raja Thakur Barmha v. Jiban Ram Marwari (2) and Mahomad Kala Mea v. Harperink (3). The facts necessary for this portion of the case are these. The Subordinate Judge gave the decree-holder permission to bid on 10th January. In his order he refers to the fact that, in a prior execution at the instance of a money decree-holder against the same properties subject to both the mortgages the bid went up only to Rs. 10,000 and the two mortgages then amounted to Rs. 3,10,000. He then said, "Having regard to the bid in the previous sale I think it safe to give permission to the decree-holder to bid over Rs. 3,20,000 which will be the upset price so far as he is concerned." This order does not say that the property should be sold free of encumbrance in variation of the proclamation. It merely says, that the total price which the decree-holder should pay for the lands should not be less than Rs. 3,20,000. This was for the protection of the judgment-debtor. Though other bidders may bid for any sum, however low they like, the decree-holder cannot do so. He can only bid for such a sum which if added to the first mortgage amount will come up to Rs. 3,20,000. This is the clear meaning of the order of the 10th January. What happened on the actual date of sale was this. On 19th January the only bid outstanding was that of P. S. P. L. Palaniappa Chettiar for Rs. 45,000. It is said for the petitioner that this Palaniappa Chettiar was merely a creature of the decree-holder; but whatever it may be, there was no other bid. Then the figure for the decree-holder was Rs. 3,20,500, free of all encumbrances. Then there is a note to this effect: "The other bidder T.S.P.L.P.

Palaniappa Chettiar is not prepared to bid for over this amount. This sale will, therefore, be concluded in favour of the decree-holder for Rs. 3,20,500...free of the first encumbrance which is in pursuance of the effect of my order on 10th January 1920." It seems to me that what the Subordinate Judge meant in his order is that Palaniappa Chettiar is not prepared to bid for the equity of redemption by offering an amount larger than Rs. 45,000 and also larger than what the decree-holder's bid comes to for the equity of redemption. No complaint seems to have been made by Palaniappa Chettiar that the property was being sold free of encumbrances and, if so, he finds it difficult to bid though he might be able to bid for a higher amount if only the equity of redemption is to be put up for sale. In these circumstances it is not clear that the decision in Thakur Barmha v. Jiban Ram Marwari (2) has any application to this case. In that case the facts are that the judgment-debtor's property consisted of two parts a 10-annas share subject to encumbrance and a 6-annas share not so subject. The decree-holder's petition attached the 6-annas share subject to encumbrances and a 6-annas share not so subject. The decree-holder's petition attached the 6-annas share subject to encumbrances. It was afterwards suggested that there was a slip in the petition and that what was meant to be attached was the 6-annas share not subject to encumbrances. This suggestion was accepted by the High Court, but the Privy Council held that, whatever might have been meant, the attachment made was only of 6-annas share subject to encumbrances and as this is less than 10-annas share which was subject to encumbrances, the petition on its face, referred only to a 6-annas share subject to encumbrances and it must be taken that what was sold was only a 6-annas share subject to encumbrances and if it is attempted at a later stage to change this into a 6-annas share not subject to encumbrances, it will amount to a case of changing the identity of the property sold and not a case of mere slip in description. In the present case, there is nothing to show that anybody understood that what was finally knocked off was property which was only the equity of redemption. On the other hand, no such objection was taken in the present petition, nor was it taken in the grounds of appeal to the High Court on the former occasion. Mr. Krishnaswami Iyer informs us that he mentioned it at the time of argument and also when the judgment was delivered by our brothers Spencer and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ., but they made no reference to this point. Their order merely says that the case should go back and the Subordinate Judge should take further evidence on all the objections raised by petitioner in his petition and affidavit. Nor is the objection taken in the present grounds of appeal. For these reasons we do not think that there is any substance in the objection that the sale was a nullity. This argument is merely to take advantage of the looseness of the language employed by the decree holder's Vakil and by the Subordinate Judge in the final order accepting the bids. It is not suggested that the prior mortgagee ever consented to sell free of encumbrances and it seems that nobody could have contemplated such a sale.

(2) 21 Ind. Cas. 936; 41 C. 590; 18 C. W. N. 313; 15 M. L. T. 137; 12 A. L. J. 156; 19 C. L. J. 161; 28 M. L. J. 89; 16 Bom. L. R. 156; (1914) M. W. N. 118; 41 I. A. 38 (P. C.).

(3) 1 Ind. Cas. 122; 36 C. 323; 13 C. W. N. 249; 6 A. L. J. 34; 5 M. L. T. 126; 9 C. L. J. 165; 11 Bom. L. R. 227; 19 M. L. J. 115; 36 I. A. 32 (P. C.).

The appeal fails and is, therefore, dismissed with costs. Pleader's fee Rs. 500.

Cornish, J.—I agree.

V. N. V.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1328 OF 1924.

April 26, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Devadoss and
Mr. Justice Jackson.

K. ABDUL SALAM SAHEB TRADING
UNDER THE NAME AND STYLE OF K. SHEIK
MEERA SAHIB & Co. OF MADRAS
—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BATOHU VEERABHADRA RAJU

—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 73, O. XXI, r. 11—Rateable distribution—'Application for execution', requisites of—Application for attachment of fund in Court to credit of judgment-debtor, whether one in execution or merely interlocutory—Informal applications, effect of.

All that s. 73 requires in order to enable a person to get rateable distribution is that he should make an application for the execution of the decree before the receipt of the assets by the Court. [p. 299, col. 2.]

An application purporting to be under O. XXI, r. 11, Civil Procedure Code, contained the names of parties and prayed that the amount belonging to the defendant and in deposit in the Court in another suit may be attached immediately on condition of producing the copy of the decree, later on. But the petition contained neither verification, the date of the decree, nor the particulars required by the subcls. (d), (e), (f), (g) and (h) of the Rule. The Court, however, acted upon the petition and ordered an attachment of the fund:

Held, Per Jackson, (Devadoss, J., dissenting), that the application was merely an interlocutory one and not an application for execution within the meaning of s. 73, Civil Procedure Code. [p. 301, col. 1.]

Per Devadoss, J.—Where a Court overlooks certain small informalities and grants the relief asked for, it is not open to the party against whom the relief is granted to question the correctness or the legality of the Court's order on the ground that the application on which the relief is granted is not in the proper form. [p. 299, col. 2.]

Per Jackson, J.—A Court cannot take up a mere application for rateable distribution and fill in the particulars necessary in order to make it a regular application for execution. Nor can it do so with a mere application for attachment. [p. 301, col. 1.]

Arunachellum Chettiar v. Haji Sheik Meera Rowther (1) and Vishnu Dhonev Palkar v. Rampratap Daulatram Marwadi (3), relied on.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Cooanada, in A. S. No. 50 of 1924, preferred against that of the Court of the District Munsif, Cooanada, in O. S. No. 204 of 1923.

Mr. T. Krishnaswami Iyengar, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. Somasundaram, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Devadoss, J.—The plaintiff's suit is for the recovery of a sum of money said to have been paid by the District Munsif's Court to the defendant who was not entitled, to receive the same. The defendant got a decree in O. S. No. 99 of 1922 against certain persons in July or August, 1922. Before decree, he had attached certain moveables belonging to the defendants and the proceeds of their sale were paid into Court. He applied for a cheque for the amount due to him on 11th September, 1922. The plaintiff who had filed O. S. No. 103 of 1922 against the same defendants obtained a decree on 29th June, 1922, and applied for attachment of the amount in Court on 30th June, 1922, and the attachment was effected on 11th August, 1922. Both the lower Courts have held that the plaintiff failed to file a proper execution application before 11th September, 1922, and, therefore, he did not come within the provisions of s. 73, Civil Procedure Code, so as to be entitled to rateable distribution of the assets in Court.

The plaintiff has preferred this second appeal.

The only point for consideration is whether Ex. C is an execution application within the meaning of s. 73, Civil Procedure Code. Exhibit C is headed "Petition filed by the plaintiff under O. XXI, r. 11 Civil Procedure Code," and the prayer is "that the amount belonging to the defendants and now in deposit in this Court in O. S. No. 99 of 1922 may be attached immediately on condition of producing the decree copy later on". The Subordinate Judge who is inclined to hold that this is an execution application is of opinion that he should have filed another application for a transfer of the money standing to the credit of Suit No. 99 of 1922 to the credit of his own Suit No. 103 of 1922. If Ex. C is an execution application, no second application would be necessary in order to enable the plaintiff to get the benefit of s. 73. The contention for the respondent is that this is only an interlocutory application and, therefore, it cannot be treated as an execution application. If considering whether the application is an execution application or not we have to look at the substance and not the form of the application. No doubt Ex. C is not in the form prescribed by the Civil Rules of Practice but it is filed under O. XXI, r. 11 which lays down what particulars should an execution application contain. Exhibit C complies with the main particulars required by r. 11, the names of the parties, the order under which it is filed and the relief claimed. The condition mentioned in Ex. C of producing the copy of the decree shows that it was in pursuance of the decree that the relief mentioned in it was claimed. The Court acted upon it and ordered an attachment of the fund in Court and the attachment was made on 11th May, 1922. In these circumstances can it be said that Ex. C is not an execution application? It was the duty of the Court to have returned the application when it was not in proper form but when the Court overlooked the want of form or the absence of certain particulars required under the rules and passed an order granting the relief prayed for it would be pedantry to say that the petition on which the relief claimed was granted was not a proper petition. Forms and rules are prescribed for the guidance of the Courts and the litigants. Where a Court overlooks certain small informalities and grants the relief asked for, it is not open to the party against whom the relief is granted to question the correctness or the legality of the Court's order on the ground that the application on which the relief is granted is not in the proper form. Where one relief is claimed and another is granted the Court may be said to act illegally or with material irregularity but where a certain prayer is specifically made under a rule which permits the making of that prayer and when the Court grants the prayer overlooking the informality, if any, the order of the Court is legal. I, therefore, hold that Ex. C is an execution application.

If Ex. C is an execution application, it is unnecessary that there should be a further application in order to enable the plaintiff to come within s. 73. All that s. 73 requires in order to enable a person to get rateable distribution is that he should make an application for the execution of the decree before the receipt of the assets by the Court. In this case it is admitted that the assets were not received before 11th September, 1922, and the application made on 20th June, 1922, was, therefore, made before the assets were received. A number of cases are relied upon by the respondent for the position that Ex. C is not an execution application but none of the cases touch the point at issue. In Arunachellum Chettiar v. Haji Sheik Meera Rowther (1) it was held that an attachment before judgment was in no sense an application for execution. In Nachiappa Chettiar v. Subbier (2) it was held that the amount deposited in Court became "assets held in Court" within the terms of s. 73, Civil Procedure Code, only when the Court passed an order on an application for payment in execution of the decree.

In Vishnu Dhondav Palkar v. Rampratap Daulatram Marwadi (3), the petitioner applied for attachment before judgment. The property attached was sold and the sale proceeds were paid into Court to the credit of the suit. Another person who had previously got a decree against the same defendant applied for execution

(1) 7 Ind. Cas. 856; 34 M. 25; 8 M. L. T. 226; (1910) M. W. N. 6.

(2) 72 Ind. Cas. 820; 46 M. 506; 44 M. L. J. 413; 17 L. W. 390; 32 M. L. T. 198; A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 505.

(3) 59 Ind. Cas. 713; 45 B. 360; 22 Bom. L. R. 1407.

and asked that the proceeds which were lying in Court to the credit of the petitioner's suit must be attached. His application was heard and the money in Court was paid to him without any notice to the petitioner. The petitioner could not then apply for execution as he had not obtained a copy of the decree in his suit. He brought a suit against the person who got the sale-proceeds from Court and it was dismissed by the lower Courts. He made an application to the High Court under s. 115 and the High Court held that there was no material irregularity in not giving the petitioner notice of the application of his opponent before paying the proceeds out of Court. This decision is in conformity with Arunachellum Chettiar v. Haji Sheikh Meera Rowher (1). If the plaintiff relied upon only on his application for attachment before judgment as entitling him to rateable distribution under s. 73 he would no doubt be out of Court but here he made an application for execution by way of attachment after he obtained a decree in his favour.

The decision in Visvanadhan Chetti v. Arunachalam Chetti (4) has no application to the present case. If the plaintiff had applied for the transfer of the assets standing to the credit of O. S. No. 99 of 1922 to the credit of his own suit he would be entitled to the whole of the amount for, the defendant did not obtain a decree till August, 1922. Now he claims only rateable distribution under s. 73 and, therefore, his not applying to have the amount standing to the credit of O. S. No. 99 of 1922 transferred to the credit of his own suit does not stand in the way of his obtaining relief under s. 73. The decision in Kasiwar De v. Aswini Kumar Pal (5) is strongly relied upon in support of the position that another application was necessary in order to enable the plaintiff to come within s. 73. In that case an application was made for the issue of a precept to another Court for attachment of certain property. No further application was made for execution. A Bench of the Calcutta High Court held that a mere application for the issue of a precept to another Court was not an execution application so as to entitle the applicant to the benefit of

s. 73. Section 46, Civil Procedure Code, requires that an application should be made to the Court to which the precept is issued for the sale of the property attached. If this application is not made within two months or within such period as is extended by the order of the Court which passed the decree the attachment by the Court to which the precept is issued will cease to continue. That decision has no application to the present case, for, here the custody Court was the Executing Court and the attachment was made by the Court which passed the decree.

Though the plaintiff claims in the suit the whole of the amount which was paid to the defendant he is only entitled under s. 73, Civil Procedure Code, to a rateable distribution. The appeal is allowed. The decrees of the lower Courts are set aside and the District Munsif will pass a decree in conformity with the provisions of s. 73. Both the parties will pay and receive proportionate costs throughout.

Jackson, J.—The point for determination is whether the plaintiff can be said to have made application to the Court for the execution of his decree by filing the petition Ex. C. This document runs "Petition filed by the plaintiff under O. XXI, r. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code. For reasons stated in the affidavit herein, it is prayed that the amount belonging to the defendant and now in deposit in this Court in O. S. No. 29 of 1922 may be attached immediately on condition of producing the decree copy later on... Signed.....Pleader."

Although O. XXI, r. 11 is cited at the head, few of the requirements of that rule are fulfilled. The petition contains neither verification, the date of the decree, nor the particulars required by the sub-clauses (d), (e), (f), (g) and (h) of the rule. I cannot regard these defects as immaterial. It is not as though the party had made some accidental omission which is now sought to be turned to account as invalidating the application. From the outset, it must have been clear to the party and Court alike that in form and substance this was not an application under O. XXI, r. 11 and, as a matter of fact, the Court treated it as an interlocutory application and not as an execution petition, if it treated it as the latter, the Court under r. 17 had the alternative of rejecting the application or returning it for amendment. It could not adopt a third course and order attachment as if it was seized of a proper application or though not so seized, by its inherent power.

(4) 60 Ind. Cas. 302; 39 M. L. J. 608; 12 L. W. 744; 28 M. L. T. 412; (1921) M. W. N. 14; 44 M. 100 (F. B.).

(5) 90 Ind. Cas. 527; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 249.

There can be no question of inherent or of dispensing power in this matter. Execution is an invasion of private right and can only be done under and in compliance with the Code. "Section 235 (O. XXI, r. 11) specifies the form and contents of the application. The mere application for rateable distribution, therefore, which does not comply with the requirements of the section in form or substance cannot be treated as the sort of application for execution falling within the scope of s. 295 (s. 73)." Arunachellum Chettiar v. Haji Sheik Meera Rowther (1). In other words, the Court having regard to the known circumstances of the case cannot take up a mere application for rateable distribution and fill in the particulars necessary in order to make it a regular application for execution. Nor can it do so with a mere application for attachment.

In Vishun Dhondav Palkar v. Rampratap Daulatram Marwadi (3) the Court was confessedly confronted with a very hard case, but there was no question of straining the Code on behalf of the party who had failed to comply with its provisions. "He did not apply for the execution of the decree so as to make his position secure."

The general equity in these cases appears to follow the common maxim, first come first served. The person who is sufficiently alive to his interests to attach the property of his debtor is left undisturbed, and others who are behind him in the chase can only claim rateable distribution if they create such circumstances under s. 73 as entitle their claim to be regarded as simultaneous. In the absence of those circumstances, they have no right and the Court has no concern to deprive the other creditor of his legitimate gains.

Therefore, I see no reason to differ from the Courts below and should dismiss the appeal with costs.

By the Court.—As there is a difference of opinion, the appeal will stand dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 910 OF 1925.

March 23, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jackson.

MEENAKSHI AMMAL—PETITIONER

versus.

ISWARAM IYER—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Order allowing claim petition—Failure to determine question of possession—Revision—Interference.

Where the lower Court whose order is impugned has entirely misconceived the question before it or committed an obvious irregularity, there is no reason why the High Court should not interfere in revision under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Petition under s. 115 of Act V of 1908 and s. 107 of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the District Munsif of Ambasamudram, dated the 19th, March, 1925, in C. M. P. No. 253 of 1925, in S. C. S. No. 505 of 1919, on the file of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Tinnevely.

Mr. E. Krishna Ayyar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. K. S. Ramabhadra Ayyar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner seeks to set aside the order of the District Munsif of Ambasamudram in C. M. P. No. 253 of 1925 allowing a claim in S. C. S. No. 505 of 1919 on the file of the Tinnevely Sub-Court. A preliminary point has been taken that this Court cannot interfere by way of revision. I have already discussed the authorities on this question in Veeraswami Mudali v. Venkatachala Mudali (1). I think the rule is that this Court will not do anything like going into the merits when an appeal is available to the party, but if the lower Court whose order is impugned has entirely misconceived the question before it or committed such obvious irregularity, there is no reason why this Court should not interfere. In the very short order written by the learned District Munsif in this case he finds that the claimant's prima facie title is proved, and evidently he has not addressed his mind at all to the question of possession which is the question to be decided in this connection. In these circumstances the order is set aside and the petition referred to the District Munsif for disposal according to law.

Costs of this petition will be costs in the proceedings.

V. N. V.

A. N. A.

Order set aside.

(1) 92 Ind. Cas. 20; 50 M. L. J. 102; 22 L. W. 44 (1925) M. W. N. 763; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 18.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 64 of 1926.

July 29, 1927.

Present:—Justice Sir William Watkins
Phillips, Kt., Offg. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Ananthakrishna Iyer.

Rai Bahadur BANSILAL

ABBEROHAND—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

V. SRIRANGANACHARAMMAL

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 55 (1)—Vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money, whether lost by execution of pro-note by vendee for sale—consideration—Recital in sale-deed that properties were not to be sold till pro-note was discharged, effect of.

The vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money is given by Statute and continues until there is a contract between the parties that it shall cease.

Swaminatha Odayar v. Subramania Iyer (1), referred to.

A purchaser of immoveable property executed a pro-note for the amount of the consideration for the sale but the sale-deed contained a distinct recital that the vendee was not to alienate the property until the pro-note had been discharged. The promissory note was subsequently renewed in the name of the vendor and his wife for either or survivor. In a suit after the death of the vendor by the wife to enforce vendor's lien:

Held, that the vendor's lien could not, under the circumstances, be held to have been abandoned.

Appeal from the judgment and decree of Mr. Justice Kumarswami Sastri, dated the 22nd April, 1926, and passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court, in C. S. No. 381 of 1926.

Mr. V. C. Gopalratnam, for the Appellant.

Mr. Surayanarayana, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this appeal the first question that arises and one which formed the leading part of the argument in appeal was that the vendor's lien in this case had been given up by a contract to the contrary. The plaintiff's husband sold a certain property to the 1st defendant and a sum of Rs. 10,000 was not paid in cash but a promissory note was executed for the amount. It is of course possible that the parties might have intended that this promissory note by itself would form part of the consideration and that they would not treat the Rs. 10,000 as unpaid purchase-money. The only question is whether in the present instance that was the intention of the parties. It is clear that this intention is negatived by the recital in the sale-deed by which the vendee was not to alienate the property until the promissory note had been discharged. If the lien was abandoned, this provision is perfectly useless for it can only be of use in order to enforce such a lien. That lien is given by Statute and continues until there is a contract between the parties that it shall cease. Even the fact that the renewal of the first promissory note is taken in the name of the vendor and his wife for either or survivor does not remove this lien in view of the recital in the document. We agree with the learned Judge that this lien was not given up by the vendor.

A further point has been taken in appeal, namely, that the very fact of getting the pro-note renewed in the vendor's name and also his wife's name is proof of the abandonment of the lien, and reference has been made to a case recently decided in this Court Swaminatha Odayar v. Subramania Iyer (1). After referring to that case and as a development of the argument it was contended that the plaintiff who is only the wife of the vendor and; therefore, a third party to the original contract, could have no vendor's lien. This assumes that the plaintiff is not also the legal representative of the vendor. The point was not taken in the written statement, nor is it even taken in the grounds of appeal to this Court, but it is sought to be put forward now as a pure question of law and, therefore, one which should be allowed to be taken for the first time in arguing the appeal. Apart from the facts that the other side had no notice whatever of this contention, there are various other reasons against the advisability of allowing this course to be taken. If this case had been taken in the pleadings it would have been open to the plaintiff to amend her plaint or possibly withdraw the suit with leave to bring another suit, or it might be within her power to prove that she is the legal representative. She is now deprived of these opportunities, but it is suggested that the remedies which would have been open to her before the trial began are still open to her. That may be so, but she would still be seriously prejudiced by having been allowed to proceed through two Courts without any objection being taken. In these circumstances we must decline to discuss this ground of appeal which is put forward for the first time in the course of the argument, and which depends upon a fact of which no evidence has been adduced.

(1) 100 Ind. Cas. 10; 51 M. L. J. 856; A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 219; 25 L. W. 411; 50 M. 518.

The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDER No. 161
OF 1925.

May 3, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Waller and Mr. Justice Madhavan Nair.

EDAVALATH POTAYUR MANAKKAL
MAHESWARAN NAMBU DRIPAD KARNAVAN AND MANAGER OF THE ILLOM.—APPELLANT

versus

THIRUVAZHIYOT VALAPPA MENON—
RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 11, 17 (1) and (2)—Application for execution—Deceased judgment-debtor's name entered as legal representative—Defect not noticed by Court—Subsequent amendment after period of limitation—Application, whether in accordance with law.

Parties should not be made to suffer by reason of the failure of the Court to check the correctness of the entries in their execution petition. [p. 304, col. 1.]

An application for execution was presented against the legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor. A subsequent application was presented against the deceased judgment-debtor by oversight. The Court failed to detect the mistake and notice was issued in the name of the dead man. The attention of the Court was drawn to the defect later on by an application for amendment which was, however, granted after the expiry of the period of limitation:

Held, that the amendment fell within the scope of O. XXI, r. 17, sub-r. (1) of the Civil Procedure Code and that, therefore, by virtue of sub-r. (2) the application as amended must be deemed to have been one in accordance with law presented on the date when it was first presented. [p. 304, col. 1.]

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge, South Malabar at Calicut, dated the 27th July, 1925, in Appeal No. 22 of 1925, (A. S. No. 335 of 1924, on the file of the District Court, South Malabar) preferred against that of the Court of the District Munsif, Parappanangadi, in E. P. No. 591 of 1923, in O. S. No. 521 of 1907, (A. S. No. 634 of 1909, S. A. No. 85 of 1909—C. M. P. No. 663 of 1914—A. S. No. 783 of 1914, and A. S. No. 70 of 1915.)

Mr. K. Kuttikrishna Menon, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. S. Narayanaswami Aiyar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The legal representative of the judgment-debtor is the appellant. The question for decision is whether the execution application presented by the respondent on 4th April, 1923, is barred by limitation.

The facts are these: the original judgment-debtor one Narayanan Nambudripad died. On his death, execution was taken in 1917, against his legal representative Vasudevan Nambudripad. He also died. In 1920, as per Ex. B execution was then taken against his legal representative Maheswaran Nambudripad. This execution petition was dismissed for non-payment of patta for notice. The petition out of which this civil miscellaneous second appeal arises was presented on 4th April, 1923, within three years from the last application and on the last day of the 12th year from the date of the second appeal decree. In this application the respondent showed the deceased Vasudevan as the counter-petitioner and not Maheswaran as he should have done. The notice was returned with the endorsement that the counter-petitioner was dead. Then the petitioner applies for amendment of the execution application by substituting the name of Maheswaran for that of the deceased Vasudevan. The amendment was allowed on 6th July, 1923, when it was more than 12 years after the decree in the second appeal.

The last execution application presented on 4th April, 1923, was admittedly infructuous as nothing could be done in pursuance of it, as it was presented against a dead man and not against the proper living legal representative. If the substitution of the present appellant's name is valid under the provisions of sub-r. (1) of r. 17 of O. XXI, of the Code of Civil Procedure then by virtue of sub-r. (2) the application as amended must be deemed to have been an application in accordance with law, and presented on the date when it was first presented and, therefore, not barred by limitation. If the amendment does not, however, satisfy the requirements of the said rule, then the appellant's name having been substituted only on 6th July, 1923, the execution petition under appeal can be deemed to have been presented against him only on 6th July, 1923, when 12 years had elapsed after the passing of the decree and is, therefore, clearly barred by limitation. That it is so barred is the argument urged on behalf of the appellant.

Under O. XXI, r. 11, sub-r. 2, cl. (1) every application for execution shall contain among other particulars the names of the persons against whom execution of the decree is sought. Under O. XXI, r. 17, cl. (1), Civil Procedure Code the Court shall ascertain whether the requirements laid down in r. 11 have been complied with, if not complied with, it is open to the Court, to reject the application or to allow the defect to be rectified.

In the present case the name of the legal representative was not correctly entered in the application for execution. On this ground the Court could have either rejected it at once or allowed the defect to be remedied; but the Court did not detect the defect on account of the destruction of the previous records due to the Moplah rebellion. If the records had been available there can be no doubt that the Court would have adopted either of the courses mentioned above. The attention of the Court, however, was drawn to the defect later by the application for amendment already referred to and the amendment asked for was allowed by the Court. Parties should not be made to suffer by reason of the failure of the Court to check the correctness of the entries in their execution petition [See the principle of the decision in Vemuri Pitchayya v. Ankineedu

Bahadur Zemindar Garu (1). The dictum of Jackson, J., in Sankaran Nair v. Urappoyil Ambu (2) relied on by the appellant, no doubt, supports him to a certain extent but that is in conflict with the decision of the Bench in Vemuri Pitchayya v. Ankineedu Bahadur Zemindar Garu (1). Further we may point out that the failure to furnish a list of immoveable and moveable properties by the decree-holder stands altogether on a different footing.

It is true that the lower Court is wrong in ascribing decree-holder's mistake to the destruction of his Vakil's records during the rebellion. The evidence shows that the prior application was in the office of his Vakil and that by the exercise of some care and diligence the mistake could well have been avoided. It is, however, not shown that the mistake was otherwise than bona fide. Evidently the error must have crept in on account of an oversight.

In these circumstances we think the amendment fell within the scope of O. XXI, r. 17, cl. (1) of the Code of Civil Procedure and, therefore, by virtue of sub-r. (2) the application as amended must be deemed to have been one in accordance with law presented on the date when it was first presented.

In this view, we agree with the learned Subordinate Judge and hold that the present application is not barred by limitation. The appeal against the appellate order is dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 76 Ind. Cas. 750; 45 M. L. J. 651; 18 L. W. 739; 33 M. L. T. 125; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 367.

(2) 92 Ind. Cas. 109; 49 M. L. J. 699; (1925) M. W. N. 917; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 260.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEALS NOS. 35 AND 39 OF 1927.

April 26, 1927.

Present:—Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, Kt., and Mr. Justice Wort.

GHANSHYAM SINGH AND OTHERS—

ACCUSED—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal trial—Duty of prosecution and defence respectively—Defence merely relying on defects in prosecution evidence, propriety of—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 107—Abetment, what constitutes.

Although the prosecution must prove their case in the first instance before the accused can be called upon to make their defence, yet when evidence has once been given on oath by witnesses who profess to have seen the occurrence and who directly implicate the accused and ascribe particular acts to them, it will not avail the accused merely to rely upon discrepancies here and there or upon the absence of adequate motive or on indications that there may be exaggerations in the prosecution story. [p. 306, col. 2.]

A, B and C had an altercation with D. B was armed with a lathi and C with a spear and A gave a general order to beat D. C thereupon inflicted a mortal blow on D with his spear:

Held, that A must be deemed to have intended all the results that followed from his general order to beat, and was, therefore, guilty of the offence committed by C. [p. 309, col. 2.]

Criminal appeals from a decision of the Sessions Judge, Saran, dated the 19th February, 1927.

Sir Ali Imam and Messrs. Yunus, Jafar Imam and S. Ali Khan, for the Appellants.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Mullick, J.—This is an appeal against an order made by the Sessions Judge of Chapra sentencing the appellant Ramkhushi to rigorous imprisonment for ten years for an offence under s. 304 of the Indian Penal Code. The appellant, Ghanshyam, has been sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for three years and a fine of Rs. 300 for an offence under s. 304 read with s. 109 of the Indian Penal Code. The appellant Ramautar has been sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for one year for an offence under s. 323 of the Indian Penal Code.

The case of the prosecution is that Ghanshyam, who was the President of the Panchayat of Mauza Sabalpur, set out about 1-30 on Saturday, the 27th November last, for the house of a Kayasth named Ramlagan who resided in another part of the same village. Ghanshyam was accompanied by his relatives, Ramautar and Ramkhushi, who resided in the same house with him, Ramkhushi was armed with a spear and Ramautar and Ghanshyam were both armed with lathis. It is said that owing to the conduct of Ramlagan, which will be presently explained, Ghanshyam was annoyed and intended to punish Ramlagan that day. The evidence as regards the previous acts of Ramlagan is this: Ramlagan has a nephew called Ramchandra, a boy of 9 or 10 years of age. Ramlagan alleges that this boy has come under the influence of Audh Behari Singh, the son of Sheodhar, and of Baliram, the younger brother of Ghanshyam. Ramlagan did not approve of Ramchandra's association with these two youngmen and had been objecting for some time. Shortly before the 25th November Ramchandra disappeared from home. On the 25th November Ramlagan went to the fair at Sonepur which is close to Ghanshyam's house. There he found Ramchandra in the company of Baliram and Audh Bihari. An altercation took place between him and these two youngmen and he alleges that he gave them a beating.

It is suggested that Ghanshyam was annoyed at Ramlagan's impertinence and that he intended on the 27th November to take revenge upon him.

There are four eye witnesses in this case, Deoki Singh, Sukhan Singh, Rambaran Singh and Rambadan Singh, and they all depose to seeing Ghanshyam and his two companions coming from the direction of Ghanshyam's house and meeting the deceased Pardip, also a Babhan of the same village but apparently belonging to a separate faction.

It is alleged by these men that Pardip made some slighting remark about Ghanshyam and twitted him about his abusing his authority as the President of the local Panchayat. Pardip next abused Ghanshyam in foul language who thereupon ordered his companions to beat Pardip. Ramautar then struck Pardip with his lathi and Ramkhushi delivered a mortal blow with his spear. It appears that owing to some peculiarity of conformation the deceased Pardip had his liver on the left side instead of the right and Ramkishun's blow penetrated his liver and intestines and caused almost instant death.

The evidence further is that the village chaukidar Bhajan arrived on the scene almost immediately afterwards but was unable to obtain from Pardip any account of who had caused his injuries. It is said that Pardip was alive but speechless. A stretcher was brought and, according to some witnesses, Pardip died before being placed upon the stretcher, and, according to others, he died on the way to the Police Station. Under the orders of Bhajan, Roshan Dusadh another chaṛukidar of the village then started for the Police Station which is about three miles from Sabalpur. Roshan arrived at the Police Station about 2 o'clock and made a communication to the Sub-Inspector which was recorded as a first information, although whatever he knew about the occurrence was mere hearsay.

In the meantime, Deoki Singh and Sukhan Singh set out with the body of Pardip Singh for the Thana and arrived there some time about 4 o'clock.

The Sub-Inspector, after having recorded Roshan's information, set out on horseback for Sabalpur and arrived there about 3-30 p. m. He stayed there for about half an hour and then went back to the Police Station in order, as he says, to take the dying declaration of Pardip in case he should be alive. He arrived at the Police Station about 4 p. m. and found that Pardip was dead and that Deoki and Sukhan were there with the body. At 5 p. m. he took the statements of Deoki and Sukhan and then learnt for the first time that Ramkhushi had killed the deceased with a spear thrust under the orders of Ghanshyam and that Ramautar also had joined in the assault. The Sub-Inspector immediately hurried back to the village and proceeded to the house of Ghanshyam. He did not find any marks of violence in the house; but on the way to that house he noticed at the house of Sheodhar Singh, the gomashta of the village, traces of an attack of some kind. He then went to the house of a chaṛukidar named Raja Singh and there took down the statement of Ramautar who had several injuries upon his person. In consequence of what Ramautar said, he next sent for Sheodhar and took down a statement from Sheodhar containing a more or less detailed account of an attack upon his house by a large number of villagers. At 7 or 7-30 p. m. he took down the statements of Rambaran and Rambadan. The investigation was continued for many days after that and the result was that the Police rejected the account given by Sheodhar and accepted the account given by Deoki, Sukhan, Rambaran and Rambadan and sent up the present appellants for trial.

The four assessors distrusted the prosecution evidence and found all the accused not guilty.

The learned Sessions Judge in a careful and elaborate judgment has come to a different conclusion and has sentenced the accused as stated above.

Now before us the evidence of the four material witnesses has been examined very carefully and subjected to very destructive criticism by the learned Counsel for the appellants.

But after having considered all the matters brought into prominence in the course of the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses in the lower Court and in the address of the learned Counsel before us, I think on the whole that the learned Sessions Judge has taken a right view of the evidence. The fact is that in this case the accused have too unwisely relied upon the abstract doctrine of the burden of proof. They had a definite counter-case which they put forward before the Police on the very evening of the day of the occurrence. It was a clear-cut case capable of precise proof. Ghanshyam was a well-to-do man and was the head of the village. Sheodhar, the man who was attacked, was the gomashta of the landlord. The village consists of a thousand houses and Ramlagan, the leader of the Kayasths, represents a very small minority. It was the easiest thing in the world for Ghanshyam to produce conclusive evidence before the trial Court of the attack upon Sheodhar's house and of the manner in which Pardip came by his death. Instead of that the appellants have relied upon suggestions, indications and improbabilities for the purpose of discrediting the sworn testimony of the eye-witnesses. It is true that the prosecution must prove their case in the first instance before the accused can be called upon to make their defence; but when evidence has once been given on oath by witnesses who profess to have seen the occurrence and who directly implicate the accused and ascribe particular acts to them, I do not think it will avail the accused merely to rely upon a discrepancy here and a discrepancy there or upon the absence of adequate motive or on indications that there may be exaggerations in the prosecution story. I think in this case something more was expected of the accused and they should have called witnesses to prove on oath that Pardip was attacked not on a path near the houses of the witnesses Rambadan and Rambaran but in the house or outside the house of the gomashtha, Sheodhar. The fact is that there is only one version before us of which there is any legal evidence, and cross-examination has not materially shaken it.

As to what Sheodhar's account was, we have no idea whatever. It is said that the first information was allowed to be read out at the trial, but we have no knowledge of the contents of that information. I thought perhaps that we should be able to gather from the statements of the accused what their precise case was; but I find that in his examination in the Sessions Court on the 12th February Ramkhusi was asked why he had been implicated by the witnesses who had deposed against him. His answer was: "They have falsely implicated me out of malice. I shall make further statement in writing." He also stated that he was not in the village at all on the day of occurrence; but no evidence has been given to prove alibi.

Ramautar also was asked the following question: "Would you at all like to say if Pardip was struck with a bhala to your knowledge?"

Answer—"No, Sir."

Then he was asked: "Did you appear as a witness for Sheodhari Prasad before the daroga and supported Sheodhar's story by saying that you had witnessed Pardip being struck with a bhala?"

Answer—"I will not say anything further orally. Whatever I have to say I will submit in writing."

Ghanshyam was asked: "Is it a fact that you admitted your presence at the occurrence and supported the case of Sheodhar made to the daroga as his witness who had seen such an occurrence?"

Answer—"No, Sir, I shall file a written statement."

The written statements filed do not give any details. They merely state that the accused have been falsely implicated owing to enmity and that the real truth as to the cause of Pardip's death and the place of the occurrence has been suppressed.

In this unsatisfactory state of affairs I think that unless it can be shown beyond all doubt that the witnesses for the prosecution have broken down, their testimony is entitled to be accepted as a substantially true account of the occurrence.

Now the first of these witnesses is Deoki Singh. This man says he was going to the house of Bhajan chaukidar to borrow a tarwa, which is a small basket attached to a plough for the purpose of distributing grain along the furrows made by the plough. His cross-examination shows that he has been previously convicted and that he has been a party in many civil and criminal cases; but there is nothing in the cross-examination which established beyond all doubt that this man could not have been at the place at the time of the occurrence. As a matter of fact he appeared before the Sub-Inspector at the earliest possible time and as Pardip had no wife or child, there was nothing unusual in his accompanying Sukhan who was a relation of Pardip's to the Thana with the body. The witness has admitted in his cross-examination that at the time that he went to Bhajan's house for the tarwa, Bhajan's son was in the house and it is contended that this cannot be possibly true and that, therefore, his whole story must be false. Now, the day was a Saturday and Deoki says that the school closed early on that day. At one place he does say that the school closed at 4 p. m., but he qualifies this by saying that the school sometimes closed earlier. And it is a question whether the boy could have been at home at the time of the attack on Pardip. I cannot say that it is established beyond all doubt that the boy could not have left school earlier on that day than usual and been in his own house at the time that Deoki came to see his father.

Then as regards Deoki's statement to the Sub-Inspector, it is clear from it that Deoki knew about the dispute that had been going on between Ramlagan on the one hand and Ghanshyam's brother Baliram and Sheodhar's son Audh Behari on the other. The Sub-Inspector was cross-examined on the point and he said that he does not think that Deoki told him about the presence of Baliram at Sonapur on the 25th November; but Deoki asserts that he did tell the Sub-Inspector this and he is corroborated by the statement which he made to the Sub-Inspector at 5 p. m. Further he states that he heard Ghanshyam coming along with the two other appellants shouting that he would teach Ramlagan a lesson for having assaulted Baliram and Audh Behari.

The next witness is Sukhan Singh. This man was related to Pardip and he was going to his zemindar to get a settlement of some land and he deposes that Pardip abused Ghanshyam and that he was then assaulted. I have no doubt that the witness was present at the assault upon Pardip and it is to be noticed that he has the courage to admit that he chased Ramautar for some distance and struck him several blows with his stick.

It is contended on behalf of the appellants that Sukhan would never have dared to attack Ramautar in this manner; but Sukhan is a Babhan just as much as Ramautar is and although Ramautar was armed with a lathi and Sukhan only with a stick, I do not think Sukhan's statement must necessarily be rejected.

But the main objection advanced against the story of both Deoki and Sukhan is that they have introduced into their depositions details of the abuse that was uttered by Pardip against Ghanshyam. It is said that in their statement to the Police there was no mention of any abusive or filthy language. The Sub-Inspector, however, states that he did not consider it necessary to put down the actual words used and that he contented himself merely by making a memorandum to the effect that "hard words" were used by Pardip to Ghanshyam.

Sukhan was also subjected to a very rigorous cross-examination to show that he could not have passed along the path where Pardip was attacked in order to go to the zemindar's house; but I am not satisfied that the cross-examination had been driven home sufficiently. As far as I can see, it has not been shown that Sukhan should not have come by that path at the time alleged.

There are, however, two other witnesses who seem to me to stand on a much higher footing than Deoki and Sukhan and these are the two cousins Rambaran and Rambadan who occupied a house close to the tree near which the occurrence took place. These witnesses state that they had come home and were watering their cattle when the altercation between Ghanshyam on the one side and Pardip on the other began. No reason has been shown why they should have perjured themselves in this case. They are Babhans and it has not been shown that they have any special enmity against the accused. It is pointed out that if they had seen the occurrence chaukidar Bhajan would certainly have seen them there as soon as he arrived; but Bhajan states in his deposition that he saw 30 or 35 men and does not mention the names of Rambaran and Rambadan. The argument is inconclusive because Bhajan was not asked definitely whether these two men were present or not.

It is also argued that if these witnesses had been eye-witnesses they would certainly have appeared before the Sub-Inspector either when he first arrived or during his second visit at about 5 or 5-30. This assumes that in this country witnesses will come forward to give evidence gratuitously out of a sense of public duty; but experience shows that here a person who has seen an occurrence will often leave the place as quickly as possible and that his first thought will generally be to say that he does not know anything about the case. As a matter of fact, Rambaran and Rambadan did appear before the Police at 7-30 p. m., and it has been suggested by the learned Counsel for the appellants that the reason for this was that they knew that Sheodhar had been examined and had implicated them and it was, therefore, necessary for them to give a counter-version for the purpose of meeting Sheodhar's case. In my opinion Rambaran and Rambadan were not concerned to account for Pardip's death, nor was there time to manufacture a false case. It is far more likely that if they had taken part in an attack on Sheodhar they would have denied all connection with Pardip. I do not think that sufficient reason has been shown for disregarding their sworn testimony in Court.

With regard to the witness Bhajan, it is to be noticed that he says in his examination-in-chief that he told Roshan chaukidar to go to the Thana and to tell the Sub-Inspector that a collision had taken place between the President's party and Sheodhar's party. That is nobody's case and is obviously false. On the contrary, what Roshan did say was that a collision had taken place between the villagers on the one hand and the President and Sheodhar on the other. Bhajan does not explain now where he got his information. It is suggested by the learned Counsel on behalf of the Crown that Bhajan's evidence must be looked at with some suspicion as he was serving under Ghanshyam. I agree with this view and I do not think that his evidence can be accepted as satisfactory. The fact that he did not tell Roshan who had killed Pardip or that Rambadan and Rambaran and Deoki and Sukhan had seen the occurrence does not, in my opinion, detract from the general value of the evidence of these four eye-witnesses. Deoki says that he told Bhajan that Ramkhusi was the man. Bhajan denies this. As Deoki was ready with this charge against Ramkhusi at the Police Station within three hours and as it does not appear that there was any time for his taking advice for the purpose of concocting a false story, I prefer to believe him rather than Bhajan. I also find that Roshan was present when Deoki and Sukhan made their statements to the Sub-Inspector and that Roshan made no attempt to set them right and to tell the Police that Pardip had been killed in an attack on Sheodhar's house.

The result, therefore, is that I agree with the learned Sessions Judge in believing that the four eye-witnesses are substantially speaking the truth in the Court.

It may be that the motive alleged was not adequate for so severe an injury, but it is impossible to speculate as to the sufficiency or insufficiency of motive for a criminal act. There may have been other matters of enmity between Ghanshyam on the one hand and Pardip on the other, or it may be that Ramkhusi acted under the excitement of the moment and delivered the fatal blow without thinking what he was doing. In this connection it has to be mentioned that Pardip was wearing wooden sandals. It is suggested that this part of the story is a fabrication; but we have the evidence of the Sub-Inspector that as soon as he came to the place he found the wooden sandals on the road and that they were besmeared with blood. The fact that Pardip was wearing these sandals to some extent supports the case that he was not a member of a mob making a determined attack upon the house of Sheodhar.

As regards the damage to the house, the evidence is that the Sub-Inspector found that some tiles were dislodged from the roof and one of the pillars of the verandah was cut with a sharp cutting instrument and a picture in the verandah had fallen or been pulled down and the glass of the frame was smashed. He also found some blood marks upon the top of the plinth of the verandah about three feet from the ground. He suspected that in the yard in the front of the house there were blood marks also; but the Chemical Examiner reports that no blood was found in the earth scraped from these places. But the bricks removed from the plinth showed that the smears thereon were human blood. The learned Sessions Judge thinks it possible that after Pardip received his injuries on the road a large number of villagers attacked Sheodhar's house and did the damage found by the Sub-Inspector. With regard to the blood, he thinks that it might have come from Ramautar's injuries. He also observes that between Sheodhar's house and the spot marked B upon the Police map there are no traces of any blood at all on the ground but that from B to G a distance of about 128 feet there were several patches, and that the theory that Pardip could not have been injured in Sheodhar's house gains some support from the fact that there are no blood marks between Sheodhar's house and the spot B. In my opinion the evidence in the case is consistent with the theory and on the whole we must hold the learned Sessions Judge's view of the guilt of the accused to be correct.

A point has been made with regard to the conviction of Ghanshyam. It is said that as he gave only the order to beat he cannot be held liable for the results of the act of Ramkhusi and that at most he can be convicted only of the offence of abetting Ramautar in voluntarily causing hurt; but having regard to the fact that Ramkhusi was armed with a spear and Ramautar was armed with a lathi and that Ghanshyam gave the general order to beat, I think it is a reasonable inference that he intended all the results that followed. Ramkhusi would not have attacked Pardip if it has not been for that order and this is the learned Sessions Judge's view and, in my opinion, it is correct.

The result, therefore, is that the convictions and sentences are affirmed and the appeals are dismissed.

Wort, J.—I agree.

A. N. A.

Appeals dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 142 OF 1925.

November 14, 1927.

Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Adami.

BADLU PATHAK AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS

versus

SIBRAM SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 158, 167—Rent-decree—Sale—Failure to serve notice on co-sharer landlord, effect of—Landlord purchasing himself at rent sale—Mortgagee of occupancy holding, rights of, against landlord—Failure to annul mortgage, effect of.

The failure to serve notice under s. 158 of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not necessarily relegate the purchaser at a sale held in execution of a rent-decree to the position of an ordinary purchaser under a money-decree. The obligation to serve notice upon the co-sharer landlord is enacted to protect his interest and it is open to him at his option, to waive the necessity for such notice. [p. 312, col. 2.]

Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Rahaman Gazi (1), followed.

A mortgagee of an occupancy holding though he has obtained a decree on his mortgage and purchased the property in execution has no right to hold the land as a raiyat against the will of the landlord, who has purchased the holding in execution of a rent-decree, and his incumbrance, although never formally annulled under s. 167 of the Act and although still subsisting for what it is worth, is a barren right against the landlord when he seeks to enforce it by taking possession of the property. [p. 313, col. 1.]

Surat Lal Chowdhery v. Murlidhar (2), followed.

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Bhagalpur, dated the 15th November, 1924, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Bhagalpur, dated the 22nd December, 1923.

Messrs. Hasan Imam and L. K. Jha, for the Appellants.

Messrs. L. P. Pugh, N. C. Sinha, N. C. Ghosh and N. C. Roy, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—This is an appeal on behalf of the plaintiffs from a decision of the District Judge of Bhagalpur reversing the decree of the Subordinate Judge and dismissing the plaintiffs' suit.

The suit was instituted on the 28th March, 1923, claiming a declaration of their title to and delivery of possession of a holding in Mauza Bosbhati. It appears that in the year 1899 Musharu Gope and Roudi Gope executed a mortgage of their kaimi jote lands in Mauza Bosbhati in favour of Tofa Lal Pathak whose interest since his death has devolved on the plaintiffs. In March, 1912, Tofa Lal Pathak brought a suit against the Gopes to enforce the mortgage and on the 9th October in the same year obtained a decree which was made absolute on the 3rd June, 1913. On the 27th October, 1924, the holding was sold in execution of the mortgage-decree and purchased by the mortgagee. On the 3rd August, 1915, the sale was set aside in proceedings under O. XXI, r. 90 of the Code of Civil Procedure at the instance of the mortgagors. A fresh application for execution was filed and on the 19th July, 1919, the holding was again sold in execution of the mortgage-decree and it was again purchased by the plaintiffs, the representatives-in-interest of Tofa Lal. On the 26th February, 1920, the plaintiffs obtained delivery of possession from the Court. At that time Shibram Singh and others, the defendants first party, were in possession of the holding having been inducted on the land as tenants by the proprietors in circumstances hereinafter mentioned. These defendants who may be referred to as the Singh defendants were, however, ousted by the plaintiffs in pursuance of the delivery of possession awarded them by the Court as purchasers in the execution proceedings in their mortgage suit. The Singh defendants then instituted proceedings under O. XXI, r. 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure against the plaintiffs, in which they were successful, and on the 16th May, 1921, the plaintiffs were dispossessed. The plaintiffs have accordingly brought the present suit to recover possession of the holding impleading, in addition to the Singh defendants, the proprietors of the village as second party defendants, Gonar Gope and another, the representatives of the original mortgagors, as third party defendants and Chatku Pathak and others, members of the plaintiffs' family who have separated from them after partition, as fourth party defendants.

In order to understand the situation which now arises it is necessary to go back to the year 1911 and trace the history of the litigation which took place in respect to this holding. It appears that Kumar Rajendra Narain Singh and Babu Tejendra Narain Singh, who are now represented by the second party defendants, were the maliks of the village in which the holding is situated, the former having a 9-annas share and the latter a 7-annas share in the proprietary interest, and it seems that they made separate collections of rent from the tenants. In September 1911, and on the same day, each of the proprietors brought a separate suit for his proportion of the rent against the Gopes who were then in occupation of the holding as tenants. These suits were framed under s. 148-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act and each of the landlords obtained a decree for rent against the tenants, the 9-annas landlord on the 4th December, 1911, and the 7-annas landlord on the 27th January, 1912. The 7 annas landlord in execution of his decree put up the holding for sale and himself purchased it on the 5th April, 1914. A similar sale took place in execution of the decree obtained by the 9-annas landlord who also purchased the property on the 6th May, 1915, but with this transaction we are not now concerned. Neither of the landlords obtained immediate possession but on the 15th February, 1917, possession was delivered to the 7 annas proprietor who then held the land as a joint proprietor under the provisions of s. 22, sub-s. (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act paying rent to his co-proprietor the 9-annas shareholder. On the 5th February, 1919, the 7-annas proprietor settled the holding with the Singh defendants who entered into possession as raiyats under s. 22 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Subsequently, in February, 1920, as already stated, the Singhs were dispossessed by the plaintiffs but again recovered possession in the proceedings under O. XXI, r. 100 above referred to. It may here be stated that it has been found as a fact that the holding in question is a non-transferable occupancy holding, and the main question for determination in this appeal is whether the mortgagees of the original occupancy tenants can recover possession of the holding against those holding under the landlords and without the consent of the latter.

Various issues were raised at the trial with three of which only are we concerned in this appeal:—

(1) Whether, as the District Judge on appeal held, the suit is barred by s. 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground that the lands now claimed were found in the previous proceedings under O. XXI, r. 90, to which I have referred, not to be identical with the mortgage property and that this decision operates as res judicata and bars the plaintiffs' claim.

(2) Whether the decree in the rent suit obtained by the 7-annas proprietor was a rent decree under s. 148 A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, or merely a money-decree, and, if a rent decree, whether the sale in pursuance thereof passed more than the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtors by reason of the fact that notice of the sale was not served upon the co-sharer proprietor as provided in s. 158 B of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and

(3) Whether having regard to the fact that the landlord purchaser did not take steps under s. 167 of the Bengal Tenancy Act to annul incumbrances, the mortgage charge upon the property must be regarded as still subsisting and conferring on the plaintiffs a right of possession.

In approaching the consideration of these questions and considering how far they affect the rights of the parties in this suit certain proved or admitted facts must be borne in mind. First, the holding in question is a non-transferable holding and the original occupancy holders, the Gopes, could confer no title upon the plaintiffs as raiyats without the consent of the landlord. Secondly, the landlords have never consented to accept the plaintiffs as tenants of the holding and, thirdly, the plaintiffs are now claiming possession as raiyats.

Both the Courts below found that the lands in suit were identical with the lands mortgaged to the plaintiffs, but whereas the trial Court considered that the proceedings between the plaintiffs and the Gopes under O. XXI, r. 90 in which it was found otherwise, did not act as res judicata against the plaintiffs in the present suit, the District Judge on appeal took a different view. The trial Court appears to have been of opinion that the decree obtained in the rent suit by the 7-annas proprietor was not properly framed under s. 148-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act and, further, held that as no proceedings had been taken under s. 167 of that Act, to annul the incumbrance the plaintiffs' lien remained and took priority over the rights of the landlord. The District Judge on appeal referred to the plaintiff in the rent suit and found that it complied with the requirements of s.

148-A and that the decree obtained in that suit was a rent-decree. He further found that, although no notice was served under s. 158-B on the co-sharer landlord, the latter had acquiesced in the sale and must be taken to have waived his right to such notice. In support of this proposition he relied on the case of Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Rahaman Gazi (1). He further held that although no proceedings had been taken under s. 167 of the Bengal Tenancy Act to annul the plaintiffs' incumbrance no annulment was necessary in the case of non-transferable occupancy holding. For this proposition he relied upon Surat Lal Chowdhery v. Murlidhar (2).

In argument before us it was no longer denied on behalf of the appellants that the decree obtained by the 7-annas proprietor was a rent decree. In fact the form of the plaint in that suit makes it quite clear that it complied with the provisions of the Statute. But it was contended that the sale in execution thereof conferred upon the landlord purchaser no more than the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor because no notice was served upon the co-sharer landlord as required by s. 158-B, sub-s. (2) of the Act. It was also contended on behalf of the appellants that the failure to take proper proceedings to annul the incumbrance gave priority to that incumbrance over the rights of the landlord even assuming that he purchased under a rent-decree. On the question of res judicata it was contended that the point was not substantially in issue in the previous proceedings in 1915, that these proceedings were not between the same parties or their representatives and that as no objection was taken at the sale to the plaintiffs in 1917 objection could not be taken now on the principle laid down in the case of Mungul Pershad Dichit v. Grija Kant Lahiri (3) and that until the sale was set aside it could not be questioned.

It is unnecessary, in my opinion, to determine the question of res judicata as, even if we should decide this in favour of the appellants, we think they must fail upon other points in the case. Nor indeed could we finally determine this question without having before us more detailed information as to the proceedings under O. XXI, r. 90 than we have at present.

With regard to the second point I have already stated that it is conceded that the decree was a rent-decree. Nor do I consider that in the circumstances the failure to serve notice under s. 158-B involved the consequence that the purchaser at such a sale was in the position of an ordinary purchaser under a money-decree. The obligation to serve notice upon the co-sharer landlord is enacted to protect his interest. In such a case the person upon whom it is required to serve notice may, at his option, waive the necessity for such notice. It is found by the District Judge in this case that he did waive the right to such notice and recognised the purchase of the 7-annas landlord, accepting from him his share of the rent. The question was considered in the case of Rajanji Kanta Ghose v. Rahaman Gazi (1) where it was held that a co-sharer landlord might waive his right to notice under the section in question notwithstanding the decision of the Judicial Committee in Raghunath Das v. Sunder Das Khetri (4). In my opinion the case of Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Rahman Gazi (1) was rightly decided.

It remains to consider the third point, namely, the effect of the failure to annul the mortgage incumbrance under the provisions of s. 167 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Admittedly the provisions of that section were not complied with, but, although the notice required under the section is framed in language which applies generally to purchasers at sales in execution of rent-decrees, and incumbrances can only be annulled in the manner prescribed in the section, different considerations arise in a case like the present where the landlord is himself the purchaser and the incumbrancer is the mortgagee of a non-transferable occupancy holding. The section must be given effect to in the light of the other sections and of the right of the landlord to refuse to recognise a tenant not of his own choosing. Regarded merely as a purchaser he would be barred by the existing incumbrances unless they were annulled. But regarded as a landlord he has the right to refuse to recognise a transferee of the original occupier as his tenant. The

(1) 82 Ind. Cas. 507; 27 C. W. N. 765; 37 C. L. J. 447; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 408.

(2) 46 Ind. Cas. 921; 4 P. L. J. 362.

(3) 8 C. 51; 11 C. L. R. 113; 8 I. A. 123; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 249; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 32 (P. C.).

(4) 24 Ind. Cas. 304; 42 C. 72; 41 I. A. 251; 18 C. W. N. 1058; 1 L. W. 567; 27 M. L. J. 150; 16 M. L. T. 353; (1914) M. W. N. 747; 16 Bom. L. R. 814; 20 C. L. J. 555; 13 A. L. J. 154 (P. C.).

plaintiffs are none-the-less transferees though they acquired under a mortgage lien granted by the original tenants. By s. 65 the rent forms a first charge on the holding and takes priority over the mortgage lien. A landlord holding a decree for rent can sell the property and purchase it himself. If he is a co-sharer proprietor, as in this case, he acquires the peculiar interest conferred by sub-s. (2) of s. 22 and may hold the land on paying to his co-proprietors their share of rent, and may transfer his rights so acquired to a third person who thereupon becomes a raiyat. What then is to happen if the holding is subject to a mortgage granted by the defaulting tenant? Can the mortgagee who has obtained a decree on his mortgage and purchased the property in execution claim possession from the landlord or the raiyat settled on the land by the landlord? Clearly not, without the landlord's consent. He has no right to hold the land as a raiyat against the will of the landlord and his incumbrance, although never formally annulled and although still subsisting for what it is worth, is a barren right against the landlord when he seeks to enforce it by taking possession of the property. It is, therefore, of no consequence that the landlord did not seek to annul the mortgage, for the mortgagee could not step into the shoes of the original tenants and acquire a raiyati interest against the landlord's will. To hold otherwise would be, in effect, to allow the tenant of a non-transferable holding to transfer in a round about way to a stranger, without the landlord's consent, by executing a mortgage in favour of the stranger and allowing the holding to be sold in execution of a mortgage-decree. Such a sale can give him no right against the landlord without the latter's consent or entitle him to oust the landlord or the tenant claiming under him. It must be remembered that the plaintiffs in this case are claiming actual possession as purchasers of the holding. They are not seeking to redeem the land by payment of the rent charge under s. 73 of the Transfer of Property Act or to share in the surplus proceeds of the rent sale as second mortgagees. Such remedies may have been open to them in proceedings properly framed for that purpose. But the present suit is not one of such a nature. Even had proceedings been taken under s. 73, I apprehend that when the plaintiffs came to take possession they would still have been in a difficulty unless the landlord consented to accept them as tenants. The view just expressed is in accordance with the decision of this Court in Surat Lal Chowdhery v. Murlidhar (2). The truth would appear to be that the transferee of a non-transferable occupancy holding, whether he takes by kobala from the original tenant or whether he acquires the property by purchase under a mortgage-decree, has a very precarious right, for he cannot force himself upon the landlord as a tenant without the latter's consent.

For these reasons I think that this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Adami, J.—I agree.

B. K. P.

Appeal dismissed.

A. N. A.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

PRIVY COUNCIL APPEAL No. 28 OF 1926.

November 8, 1926.

Present :—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Foster.

F. A. SAVI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Srimati SABITRI THAKURAIN—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 109 (a), (c)—Appeal to Privy Council—Order setting aside decree based on alleged compromise, whether 'final order'—Tests of finality of orders—Powers under cl. (c) to be sparingly used.

An order setting aside a decree passed in terms of a compromise alleged to have been made between the parties to the suit and directing the suit to be restored to the file and continued from the stage at which the compromise was filed, is not a final order within the meaning of s. 109 (a) of the Code of Civil Procedure. [p. 318, col. 1.]

Shankar Bharati v. Narasinha Bharati (8) and Bhagwati Dayal v. Dhan Kunwar (9), followed.

Lachmi Narain Marwari v. Bal Makund Marwari (10), distinguished.

Sabitri Thakurain v. Savi (1), Shubrook v. Tufnell (2), Salaman v. Warner (3), Bozson v. Altrincham Urban District Council (4), In re Croasdel and Cammell, Laird & Co. (5), Sourendra Nath Mitter v. Tarubala Dassi (6) and Brito v. Brito (7), referred to.

Per Dawson Miller, C. J.—The real test for determining whether an order is final or not is whether the order, as made, finally disposes of the rights of the parties. If it does it is a final order, but if it does not, then, it is an interlocutory order. [p. 317, col. 1.]

The powers granted under s. 109 (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure should be sparingly used. [p. 319, col. 1.]

Mr. P. C. Manuk (with him Mr. S. N. Palit), for the Appellant.

Mr. S. Sultan Ahmad (with him Messrs. L. K. Jha and H. K. Jha), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—This is an application by the first two defendants in the suit for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council from an order of a Division Bench of this Court passed on the 8th June last setting aside (a) a decree passed on the 26th November, 1924, by the Subordinate Judge of Monghyr in terms of a compromise alleged to have been made between the parties in the suit, and, (b) an order of the Subordinate Judge dated the 6th July, 1925, rejecting an application under s. 151 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside the said decree. The High Court further ordered that the case should be restored to the list to be taken up from the stage at which the compromise was filed.

The questions for determination are first, whether the order of the Division Bench is a final order within the meaning of s. 109 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code, and, secondly, if not, whether the case should be certified as a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council under s. 109 (c) of the Code.

The plaintiff is the widow of the late Babu Ugra Mohan Thakur, a rich zamindar of Bhagalpur, who died in 1914 leaving the great bulk of his estate to his nephew, the defendant No. 2 in the suit, and a small sum of Rs. 100 per month to his widow for her maintenance. His Will was duly proved and Probate was granted to his executor, the defendant No. 1, in spite of the strenuous opposition of the widow, the present plaintiff, who contested the case as far as the High Court and was finally refused special leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council. She also propounded an alleged Will of later date and sought for Letters of Administration but that suit was finally disposed of by the Privy Council in 1921 her claim being rejected. The present suit in which this application arises was instituted in 1920 by the plaintiff claiming to revoke the Probate on the ground that it was fraudulently obtained, and for other reasons and in the alternative she claims maintenance at a more liberal rate than that given by the Will. Apart from the executor and the residuary legatee, who are the first two defendants, the other defendants have some slight interest under the Will or by purchase from the executor.

In November, 1924, during the pendency of the suit negotiations with a view to compromise took place between the parties and on the 25th of that month the plaintiff and the first two defendants signed a petition of compromise which provided, inter alia, that the plaintiff should be paid out of the estate a sum of Rs. 1,000 per month, instead of Rs. 100 as provided in the Will, including arrears from the date of the testator's death in 1914, such arrears to be paid as to Rs. 17,000 in cash and the balance by instalments, and the suit was to be withdrawn. The plaintiff was in fact paid the Rs. 17,000 and a further sum of Rs. 3,000 as an advance towards her future maintenance. This transaction took place in the waiting room of the Railway Station at Monghyr, the plaintiff being about to proceed by train to Dharbhanga. It so happened that Mr. Chakravarti, the Subordinate Judge of Monghyr, before whom the suit was pending was also at the Railway Station upon business of his own and the parties with their Pleaders handed over the petition to him there and then. He appears to have caused it to be read over to the plaintiff and noted thereon the following words:—

"Filed before me at 5-12 p. m. and read over to the plaintiff who admitted the same."

The hearing of certain issues in the case had been fixed, by an earlier order, to take place on the 27th November. On the 26th the Pleaders of the parties appeared in Court and asked that the suit should be formally disposed of in the terms of the compromise. The Subordinate Judge then recorded the following order—

"Petition of compromise filed on 25th November, 1924, after Court hours put up to-day with the consent of the parties. Ordered.....suit be decreed in the terms of the compromise."

The rest of the order deals with certain costs. About a week later, on the 4th December, a decree embodying the terms of the compromise was prepared and signed and sealed by the Court. The order made on the 26th was presumably passed under O. XXIII, r. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, which provides the procedure to be adopted when the Court is satisfied that a compromise has been entered into.

On the 7th April, 1925, the plaintiff filed a petition in the Court of the Subordinate Judge seeking to have the compromise decree set aside on the ground that she had not consented to the terms thereof, and material terms had been omitted of which she was not aware when she signed the document; that her Pleader had no authority to file a compromise petition on her behalf and in her absence on the 26th November and that her signature had been obtained by fraud. The application was made under s. 151 of the Civil Procedure Code which reserves to the Court power to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court. The application was transferred to the file of another Subordinate Judge, Mr. Choudhari, and determined by him on the 6th July, 1925. He dismissed the application, without going into the merits, holding that it was not maintainable under s. 151 and that the proper remedy was by suit to set aside the decree.

From this order of the Subordinate Judge refusing to set aside the decree the plaintiff applied in revision to the High Court asking that the Subordinate Judge, Mr. Choudhari, should be directed to exercise his jurisdiction under s. 151 of the Code, which he had failed to do. A further application in revision was at the same time presented to the High Court asking that the order of the Subordinate Judge Mr. Chakravarti, dated the 26th November, 1924, directing a decree to be drawn up in accordance with the terms of the compromise should be set aside on the ground that it was ultra vires and without jurisdiction inasmuch as it had not complied with the conditions prescribed by O. XXIII, r. 3, which, before a decree can be passed on compromise, requires that the compromise should be recorded, and this was not done. Had it been done an appeal would have lain from such an order but as no such order had been passed no appeal was possible. The plaintiff also complained that it did not appear from the order that the Court was satisfied that the suit had been adjusted by a lawful agreement or compromise within the terms of r. 3 of O. XXIII.

On the 8th June, 1926, these applications were heard together before Jwala Prasad and Bucknill, JJ., [Sabitri Thakurain v.

Savi (1)]. The Court held first that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to hear the application under s. 151 and ought to have entertained it and not dismissed it without going into the merits; and, secondly, that the order of the 26th November, 1924, directing a decree to be drawn up in the terms of the compromise could not stand and that, consequently, the decree itself must also be set aside. The principal grounds upon which the Court arrived at this conclusion were (1) that the terms of O. XXIII, r. 3, were not complied with as no order had been passed that the compromise should be recorded, (2) that the Court had no jurisdiction to take up the case on the 26th November, 1924, as there was no formal consent of the parties to do so before the date fixed for hearing on the 27th, (3) that there was no consent of any duly constituted Pleader or agent to taking the case on the 26th November, because the vakalatnama of the plaintiff's Pleader gave him no authority to compromise or to file a petition of compromise, and (4) that the presentation of the petition of compromise by the plaintiff's Pleader in the absence of any authority so to act was a fraud upon the Court. The Court further directed the suit to be restored to the file of the Subordinate Judge of Monghyr to be continued from the stage at which the compromise was filed on the 26th November. The Court further directed that the case should be disposed of in accordance with law, by which I understand from the context the intention was that the Court should first be satisfied that a lawful compromise had, in fact, been entered into and, if it was satisfied, should order the compromise to be recorded before passing a decree in accordance therewith.

From this order the present application is made on behalf of the first two defendants for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council. It is contended on behalf of the applicants that the order is final as it set aside a decree already passed in their favour. It is further pointed out that had the decision been the other way it would undoubtedly have been a final order determining the rights of the parties. In support of the argument reliance is placed upon certain of the earlier English decisions in which it has been laid down that an order made upon an application which, if decided in one way, would determine the main dispute while, if decided the other way, would not, is a final order whichever way it is decided. The matter is one which has given rise to questions of nicety and considerable difficulty, and conflicting decisions are to be found in the cases upon the subject. It is not, in my opinion, necessary to refer to many of the English cases, which are numerous, on the point.

I propose, however, to refer to a few cases in their chronological order in which different tests for ascertaining the finality of a judgment or order have been laid down.

In Shubrook v. Tufnell (2) decided in 1882, an arbitrator under an order of reference stated a case for the opinion of the Court which provided that, if the opinion of the Court should be one way, the case was to be referred back to the arbitrator; if the other way, judgment was to be entered for the defendant with costs. The Court decided in favour of the plaintiffs and referred the case back to the arbitrator. The defendant appealed. It was objected that the case which had been treated as an appeal from an interlocutory order should have been entered as an appeal from a final order. The Court of Appeal consisting of Jessel, M. R., and Lindley, L. J., held that the order passed was a final order and that the appeal should take its place in the general list. The Court appears to have acted upon the view that where the decision of the Court on the point submitted to it could not in any event necessitate the entering of final judgment for either party the decision was interlocutory, but that if it could enter final judgment in the event of coming to a different decision then the order passed whichever way it went was final.

In the later case of Salaman v. Warner (3) a different view was taken by the same Court consisting of Lord Esher, M. R., and Fry and Lopes, L. JJ. In that case it was held that an order dismissing an action made upon the hearing of a point of law raised by the pleadings before the trial is not a final order within the meaning of O. LVIII, r. 3 of the Annual Practice. It was there laid down that a final order is one made on such an application or proceeding that for whichever side the decision is given, it will, if it stands, finally determine the matter in litigation. The case had been set down for argument before the trial upon a point of law, that the statement of claim did not disclose any cause of action. A Divisional Court dismissed the action after argument upon this point. Had the decision been the other way the suit would have proceeded in the ordinary course upon the merits. The Court of Appeal held that the order appealed from was interlocutory and not final. "If their decision" said Lord Esher, M. R., "whichever way it is given, will if it stands, finally dispose of the matter in dispute, I think that for the purposes of these rules it is final. On the other hand, if their decision, if given in one way, will finally dispose of the matter in dispute, but, if given in the other, will allow the action to go on, then I think it is not final, but interlocutory." Fry, L. J., who concurred stated the rule thus: "I think that the true definition is this, I conceive that an order is 'final' only where it is made upon an application or other proceeding which must, whether such application or other proceeding fail or succeed, determine the action. Conversely I think that an order is 'interlocutory' where it cannot be affirmed that in either event the action will be determined."

Each of these cases appears to have laid down a test based not upon a consideration of the actual decision appealed from but upon a consideration of the decision which might, in one event, have been given, and the tests formulated in the two cases are in direct conflict.

In the case of Bozson v. Altrincham Urban District Council (4) an order was made in an action brought to recover damages for breach of contract that the questions of liability and breach of contract only were to be tried, and that the rest of the case, if any, was to go to an Official Referee. At the trial the Judge held that there was no binding contract between the parties and made an order dismissing the action from which order the plaintiff appealed. The Court consisting of Lord Halsbury, L. C., Lord Alverstone, C. J., and Sir Francis Jeune, P., held that the appeal was from a final order. The Lord Chancellor refused to follow the decision in Salaman v. Warner (3) preferring to follow the earlier decision. Lord Alverstone, C. J., laid down what appears to me, with great respect, to be the real test in such cases. He says:—"It seems to me that the real test for determining this question ought to be this; Does the judgment or order, as made, finally dispose of the rights of the parties? If it does, then I think it ought to be treated as a final order; but if it does not, it is then, in my opinion, an interlocutory order." Judged by that test the order dismissing the action was held to be a final order.

(2) (1882) 9 Q. B. D. 621; 46 L. T. 749; 30 W. R. 740.

(3) (1891) 1 Q. B. D. 734; 60 L. J. Q. B. 624; 39 W. R. 547.

(4) (1903) 1 K. B. 547; 72 L. J. K. B. 271; 67 J. P. 397; 51 W. R. 337; 19 T. L. R. 266; 1 L. G. R. 639.

The only other English case which I think it necessary to refer to is In re Croosdell and Cammell Laird & Co. (5). In that case an arbitrator made his award in the form of a special case but a Divisional Court subsequently made an order setting aside the award on the ground of misconduct on the part of the arbitrator. On appeal to the Court of Appeal it was held by Collins, M. R., and five Lords Justices that the decision appealed from was an interlocutory order. The Court thought it unnecessary to enunciate any general rule on the question what orders are final and what interlocutory but arrived at their decision in the case before them on the ground that the order which did not determine any of the matters in dispute but left them where, they were, merely asserting an informality in the award which had been made, and setting it aside, was interlocutory. It will be observed that although the decision of the arbitrator was set aside the order was held to be interlocutory, as the effect of it was not to determine the rights of the parties at issue in the litigation but to leave matters where they were before the arbitration took place.

In the present case, if the test applied by Lord Alverstone, C. J., in the case cited above, is the proper test to apply, then it cannot be said that the order which the petitioners now seek to appeal from is a final order. The effect of the order is merely this, that owing to defects of procedure in the subordinate Court no proper decree has been passed and that the rights of the parties still have to be determined according to law. There is nothing in the order which, in my opinion, can even remotely be said to determine any of the rights in dispute between the parties and were it necessary to arrive at a conclusion in the light of the English cases only, I should hold that the order now sought to be appealed from is interlocutory and not final. It seems to me that the real test must be based upon a consideration of the actual order made.

The Indian cases, however, in which there appears to be a singular unanimity on the particular point raised, also go to show that where a decree is set aside on the ground of irregularity or want of jurisdiction the order is not final but interlocutory. In Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and Allahabad the same view appears to have been taken, as a short reference to the cases recently decided in those Courts will show. In Sourendra Nath Mitter v. Tarubala Dassi (6) the trial Court had recorded a compromise and passed a preliminary decree in accordance therewith as in the present case. On appeal a Division Bench of the High Court held that the compromise had not been made out, set aside the order recording the compromise and the decree based thereon, and remanded the case to the lower Court for trial. Against this decision an application was made for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council. The Court held that the order of the Division Bench remanding the case to the lower Court for trial must be regarded as an interlocutory order, and that it was not a decree or final order passed on appeal within s. 109 (a) of the Code. One distinction between that case and the present is that there the order and decree were set aside on appeal, whereas in the present case the decree was set aside under the Court's revisional jurisdiction. The distinction, if any, is in favour of the respondent for s. 109 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code speaks only of a decree or final order passed on appeal. I will assume, however, for the purposes of this case, without deciding the point, that no distinction is to be drawn between an order passed on appeal and one passed in revision. A further distinction lies in this, that in the order there sought to be appealed from it was in fact found that no compromise had been entered into, whereas in the present case it is still left for the trial Court to determine that question. Rankin, J., after pointing out in his judgment that an adjustment under O. XXIII, r. 3, was in some ways a very special matter whereby a party was allowed to stand upon and enforce an agreement which was not in existence at the date of the suit, and that it was a method whereby a party was allowed to enforce what is really a new cause of action in order to avoid abandoning one suit and starting another, says: "In my judgment, the mere dismissal of an application for recording an adjustment coupled with an order that it is, therefore, necessary for the case to be tried in the ordinary way does not stand in such a relation to the proceeding before the Court as to entitle it to be regarded as something which conclusively adjudicates upon the rights of the parties which were really the subject-matter of the litigation. It merely negatives one of the several ways in which it may be contended that the rights of the parties should be disposed of." Still less can it be said that there is any finality in an order which determines neither the rights of the parties in the suit nor the question whether a valid compromise has been come to but leaves all these questions to be determined hereafter.

(5) (1906) 2 K. B. 569; 75 L. J. K. B. 769; 54 W. R. 620; 35 L. T. 441; 22 T. L. R. 759.

(6) 89 Ind. Cas. 94; 29 C. W. N. 832; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 857.

In Brito v. Brito (7), a decision of the Madras High Court, it was held that an order passed in revision refusing to interfere with an order of the Subordinate Judge passed under s. 151 of the Code restoring to the file a suit which had been disposed of upon an alleged compromise between the parties was not a final order within the meaning of s. 109, and that leave could not, therefore, be granted to appeal to His Majesty in Council against such an order.

Again the Bombay High Court in Shankar Bharati v. Narasinha Bharati (8) decided that an order of the High Court setting aside a decree of the trial Court based upon an alleged compromise between the parties and directing the trial Court to proceed with the suit in the ordinary course was not a final order appealable under the Code to His Majesty in Council.

Lastly, it was decided by the Allahabad High Court in the case of Bhagwati Dayal v. Dhan Kunwar (9) that the words "final order" in s. 109 of the Code mean an order which puts an end to the litigation between the parties or, at all events, disposes so substantially of the matters in issue between them as to leave only subordinate or ancillary matters for decision, and that an order by which a Court set aside a compromise of a suit is an interlocutory order and not a final order.

(7) 78 Ind. Cas. 938; 46 M. L. J. 357; 19 L. W. 458; 34 M. L. T. 112; (1924) M. W. N. 330; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 701.

(8) 69 Ind. Cas. 80; 47 B. 106; 24 Bom. L. R. 925; A. I. R. 1922 Bom. 383.

(9) 92 Ind. Cas. 1027; 24 A. L. J. 331; A. I. R. 1926 All. 311; 43 A. 329.

All these cases are of recent date having been decided between the years 1922 and the present year. No decision of any of the High Courts in India has been drawn to our attention in which an order such as that passed in the present case has been held to be a final order.

The case of Lachmi Narain Marwari v. Bal Makund Marwari (10) to which I was a party was referred to by the learned Counsel for the applicants in support of his argument. In that case a preliminary decree obtained in a partition suit had been set aside by the trial Court for want of prosecution in the subsequent proceedings. The preliminary decree had finally decided in favour of the plaintiff's right to partition. In carrying out the terms of the decree the plaintiff defaulted in appearance. The trial Court thereupon, exercising a jurisdiction which it did not possess, set aside the preliminary decree and dismissed the suit. The High Court decided that that order could not stand as the trial Court had no power to set aside the decree previously obtained merely on the ground of non-appearance in the subsequent proceedings. The decree was subsequently restored but no further question remained to be decided with regard to the plaintiff's right to that decree. It was there held that the order of the High Court was a final order and the case went on appeal to His Majesty in Council. The difference between that case and the present is this. The order in that case finally determined that the plaintiff was entitled to partition. The order in the present case decides nothing as to the rights of the parties in the suit and merely directs the Judge to re-hear the application for recording the compromise and to proceed thereafter according to law.

The case of Baij Nath Goenka v. Rameshwar Singh (11) was also referred to, but I can find nothing in the judgment in that case which conflicts with the view I have already expressed. In my opinion the order which it is sought to appeal from is not a final order.

It was further argued on behalf of the applicants that the order should in any event be certified as a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council under cl. (c) of s. 109. The argument under this head consists mainly in pointing out that the plaintiff iff, as appears from the various unsuccessful attempts she has made to contest the validity of her husband's will, is a lady of pronounced litigious tendencies, and that if this case were allowed to go before a higher tribunal that tribunal would have no difficulty in overruling the decision and putting an end once and for all to this unfortunate litigation. I am not prepared to enter into a discussion of the merits of the decision from which it is sought to appeal. It must be assumed that the decision is right until it is overruled or varied by a higher tribunal; nor am I satisfied that the course suggested would bring about a more speedy termination of the litigation than if the case proceeds as directed by the order. The powers granted under s. 109 (c) should, in my opinion, be sparingly used and although I do not consider it desirable to lay down the principles which should guide the Court in acting on it, I consider that the present case is not one in which the powers granted under cl. (c) of the section can properly be invoked. This application should, in my opinion, be dismissed with costs.

(10) 60 Ind. Cas. 479; 6 Pat. L. J. 116; 2 P. L. 155.

(11) 45 Ind. Cas. 192; 3 Pat. L. J. 339; (1918) Pat. 81; 5 P. L. W. 45.

Ordinarily the hearing-fee would be assessed at five gold mohurs but on the 5th July last, before the vacation, an application was made asking, amongst other things, to expedite the hearing of the present application without serving some of the respondents in the suit. That application was refused but the costs were reserved to be taken into account when the application for leave to appeal should come before us.

Foster, J.—I agree.

A. N. A. Application dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1341
OF 1924.

October 28, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and Mr.
Justice Kulwant Sahay.

Musammat SOGIA AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS.

versus

Musammat KITABAN AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Dower—Interest of widow in possession in lieu of dower, whether transferable apart from dower-debt.

The interest of a Muhammadan widow in property of which she is in possession in lieu of dower can be validly transferred apart from the dower-debt itself. [p. 319, col. 2.]

Bibi Makbulunnissa v. Bibi Umatunnissa (1), Nabijan v. Sahifan (2) and Abdulla v. Shams-ul-Haq (3), followed.

Abdul Rahman v. Wali Mohammad (4), dissented from.

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Saran, dated the 19th June, 1924, affirming that of the Additional Munsif, Chapra, dated the 27th September, 1923.

Mr. Saiyid Nurul Hassan, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Khurshed Husnain and Syed Izhar Husain, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—This is an appeal by the defendants. The principal question for decision is as to whether Musammat Murti had the right to transfer and whether Eid Mohammad obtained a valid title under the transfer of the property by Musammat Murti under a deed of gift. Musammat Murti was the widow of one Basu, and it has been found that she was in possession of the property in lieu of her dower debt. Musammat Murti executed a deed of gift in favour of Eid Mohammad, the husband of the plaintiff No. 1 and the father of the plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3. The defendants claim to be some of the heirs entitled to the property by right of inheritance, and their case is that the transfer by means of the deed of gift by Musammat Murti did not pass any interest in the property to Eid Mohammad and that the defendants were entitled as the heirs-at-law to the property.

The Courts below have held that the transfer by Musammat Murti to Eid Mohammad was a valid transfer and the suit has been decreed in favour of the plaintiffs.

The question is as to whether Musammat Murti had the right to transfer the property under the gift to Eid Mohammad. The finding of the learned District Judge is that what was transferred under the deed of gift was the security and not the dower debt itself, and one of the questions raised is whether the security could be transferred apart from the dower debt. This question was considered by this Court in Bibi Makbulunnissa v. Bibi Umatunnissa (1) and it was held that such a transfer of the security is a valid transfer and is binding against the widow and persons claiming through the widow, as also against the heirs-at-law so long as there is a debt due to the widow. The same view was taken in another case by a Division Bench of this Court in Nabijan v. Sahifan (2). This view is supported by a decision of the Allahabad High Court in Abdulla v. Shamsul-Haq (3). A different view was taken by another Division Bench of this Court in Abdur Rahman v. Wali Mohammad (4); but with very great respect to the learned Judges who decided that case, I am of opinion that the view taken in the other two cases is the correct view. There seems to be no reason in law or in equity why such a transfer should not be held to be a valid transfer. The widow is in possession of the property which is clearly transferable in law and the transferee of such a property from the widow would acquire a valid title so long as the debt is not satisfied. The interest which the widow had to remain in possession of the property would pass to the transferee, and there seems no reason why such a transfer should be held to be invalid apart from the debt itself. The view taken by the learned Judge on this point must, therefore, be accepted as correct.

(1) 70 Ind. Cas. 312; 4 P. L. T. 272; (1922) Pat. 348; A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 33; 2 Pat. 84.

Another point was taken by the learned Advocate for the appellants to the effect that the heirs of the widow and of her husband in the present case happen to be common and, therefore, the debt must be held to be extinguished and the heirs would be entitled to take the property according to their legal shares. This point, however, does not appear to have been taken in the Courts below and we are not in a position to say as to whether the heirs of the widow and of her husband are the same.

Lastly it is contended that there has been no finding in the judgment of the District Judge as to whether Eid Mohammad, the husband of the plaintiff No. 1, is really dead. The question, however, does not appear to have been raised either in the trial Court or in the Court of Appeal below.

The result is that this appeal is dismissed with costs.

Das, J.—I agree.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 67 Ind. Cas. 635; 4 P. L. T. 278; A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 153.

(3) 58 Ind. Cas. 833; 43 A. 127; 18 A. L. J. 969; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 329.

(4) 63 Ind. Cas. 601; 4 P. L. T. 267; (1922) Pat. 313; A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 72; 2 Pat. 75.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 150 OF 1927.

November 17, 1927.

Present.—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay and Mr. Justice Macpherson.

Mirza MUHAMMAD REZA

AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

RAJBALLABHNATH SINGH

AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Court-fee—Payment in excess under bona fide mistake—Power of Court to order refund.

Where an excess amount of Court-fee has been paid under a bona fide mistake the Court has power to issue a certificate to enable the party concerned to apply to the Revenue Authorities to obtain a refund of the excess amount.

Chaudra Hari Singh v. Tipan Prosad Singh (1), Hari Har Guru v. Ananda Mahanty (2) and In re Grant (3), followed.

Application for the refund of excess amount of Court-fee paid by the appellants on memo. of appeal.

Mr. Kailashpati, for the Appellants.

ORDER.—This is an application on behalf of the appellants for refund of the excess amount of the Court-fee paid by them on the memorandum of appeal. It is stated in the petition that the Court-fee paid by the respondents, who were the plaintiffs in the Court below, upon their plaint was Rs. 900 and the appellants were under the impression that that was the proper Court-fee to be paid on the memorandum of appeal and they purchased a Court-fee stamp at Gaya before they came to their Vakil at Patna for filing the present appeal. The Stamp Reporter has reported that the Court-fee paid is in excess of the amount required by Rs. 90.

The question as regards the power of the Court to make an order for refund of excess Court-fee was considered by a Division Bench of this Court in Chaudra Hari Singh v. Tipan Prosad Singh (1). Their Lordships relied upon Hari Har Guru v. Ananda Mahanty (2) which followed In re Grant (3). It appears from the petition that the excess Court-fee was paid under a bona fide mistake.

Let a certificate be issued to enable the appellants to apply to the Revenue Authorities to obtain a refund of the sum of Rs. 90, the amount of the excess Court-fee.

B. K. P.

Certificate issued.

(1) 46 Ind. Cas. 271; 3 P. L. J. 452; (1918) Pat. 273,

(2) 20 Ind. Cas. 498; 40 C. 365.

(3) 14 W. R. 47.

ODH CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 6 OF 1927.

September 14, 1927.

Present:—Sir Louis Stuart, Kt., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Raza.

RAJ BACHAN SINGH—DEFENDANT

— APPELLANT

versus

Shri Thakurjee Maharaj Thakur SOORAJ KUNWAR RAM—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Widow—Property acquired before marriage and after marriage—Power of disposition of such property—Possession of Hindu widow over property at time of her death—Presumption of absolute estate—Burden of proof—Finding of trial Court after close and intelligent attention—Duty of Appellate Court.

Property obtained by a Hindu female before marriage and property acquired by her subsequent to her marriage, in her own interest, either by purchase from the savings of her income or in other ways, is property which she is competent to dispose of in her lifetime. [p. 322, col. 2.]

There is no presumption of law that property which is in the possession of a Hindu widow and the acquisition of which is not explained, originally belonged to her husband, even though the husband died possessed of considerable property. On the other hand, the presumption under the general rule of law is that she is the owner thereof and has absolute power of disposal over it. [p. 323, col. 2.]

Diwan Ran Bijai Bahadur Singh v. Indarpal Singh (1), relied on.

Where the issue is one of fact and the only question is which set of witnesses is to be believed, the verdict of a Judge trying the case who has given a close and intelligent attention to the evidence and written a well-reasoned judgment should not be lightly disregarded in appeal. [p. 325, col. 2.]

Bombay Cotton Manufacturing Co., Ltd. v. Motilal Shiplal (2), relied on.

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Kheri, dated the 24th September, 1926.

Messrs. M. Wasim and Kashi Prasad, for the Appellant.

Messrs. P. L. Banerji, Radha Krishna, Harnam Sunder Lal and Sita Ram, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The circumstances in which this appeal has arisen are as follows. Gobardhan Singh was the taluqdar of Bijua in the Kheri District. He died in 1905. He had married five wives, three of whom survived him. He left no male issue. The name of the wife whom he first married was Suraj Kunwar known as the Bari Rani. The name of the wife whom he married after he had married Suraj Kunwar is not stated. She was known as the Manjhli Rani. The two wives whom he married next in succession had predeceased him. One of them had borne him a daughter, who married Maharaj Kunwar Sardar Singhji, the son of the Chief of Shabpura.

Their son is Raj Bhanwar Lalji Shatraonji Singh who was the second defendant in the suit. The wife whom he married last was Dambar Kunwar known as the Chhoti Rani. Raj Bachan Singh was the nearest collateral heir. Under the provisions of a Will he devised a life-estate in half of the taluqdari property, which he owned and possessed, to the Bari Rani and a life-estate in the remaining half to the Chhoti Rani subject to the payment of maintenance to the Manjhli Rani. Under the terms of this Will on the death of either the Bari Rani or the Chhoti Rani the survivor was to succeed to her life-estate and on the death of both of these ladies his daughter's son defendant No. 2 was to succeed to the whole of the taluqa subject to a life-estate in ten villages which was bequeathed to defendant No. 1. It is admitted that the Manjhli Rani died in 1915 and that the Chhoti Rani died in 1924. After the death of the Chhoti Rani the Bari Rani remained in possession of the whole of the taluqa until her death on the 15th May, 1925.

The Bari Rani was a lady who devoted a considerable portion of her life to religion and she devoted a considerable portion of her savings to religious purposes. It is agreed that she purchased out of the savings from her income the village of Dantara and Rajgarh and dedicated these villages in entirety to the deity as embodied in Sri Thakurji Maharaj Suraj Kunwar Ram who is the plaintiff in this suit. She built in addition temples for the worship of the same god and for the worship of the goddess Devie. She built a thakurdwara and installed the image of the god in the thakurdawara at Padarya Tala. She also endowed a religious fair. It is in evidence that the lady was absorbed in religious works of this nature. According to the evidence, when she was in her seventy-fifth or seventy-sixth year, she conceived the intention of dedicating the whole of her moveable property to the same deity, and on the 3rd May, 1925, she is alleged to have executed a deed of trust Ex. 1 by which she directed that she should remain in possession of this property during the rest of her life and that after her death it should be vested in a legal gentleman, B. Bankey Behari Lal, who practices in Lakhimpur, as trustee for the deity. The question as to whether she did or did not execute this deed is before us for decision. There can be no doubt as to the fact that the deed was presented to the Sub-Registrar of Lakhimpur for registration on the 4th May, 1925, and that it was registered on the 5th May, 1925. The lady died on the 15th May, 1925. Before she executed this deed she had executed other deeds of trust. One of these deeds had been executed on the 24th May, 1924, by which she handed over certain property to the deity for religious purposes and appointed herself as manager during her lifetime appointing seven persons one of whom was B. Bankey Behari Lal to be members of a Committee of management after her death. This deed is Ex. 3. It is a registered deed and its validity is not questioned. Exhibit 1, if accepted, had the affect of vesting further property in the deity. It appointed, however, only one of the gentlemen who had been previously nominated as manager to manage the property so vested. But it clearly laid down that the control of the property should be subject to the conditions embodied in the deed Ex. 3.

After the death of Suraj Kunwar disputes arose as to succession. As there was an apprehension of forcible possession being taken over the moveable property in the possession of the lady at the time of her death the District Magistrate of the Kheri District took over charge of the property and kept it in his custody and refused to part with the possession to any person who could not show a title through the Civil Court. B. Bankey Behari Lal then filed a suit on the 1st of June, 1925, for a declaration that the moveable property left by the lady was dedicated to the deity under the terms of Ex. 1. He joined both the defendants. Both the defendants contested his claim. Each asserted that the deed Ex. 1 was not a valid disposition of the property. Defendant No. 1 took the position that on the 4th, May, 1925, Suraj Kunwar was incapable of understanding or transacting business and that she remained in a condition of mental coma until she died on the 15th May, 1925. He stated that the signatures upon the deed were forgeries. Both the defendants took the position that the property affected by Ex. 1 was property the disposition over which was not within the power of Suraj Kunwar. Each defendant claimed that property as against the other defendant. The learned trial Judge refused to decide which defendant would succeed to property which Suraj Kunwar was not competent to dispose of in her lifetime. He found upon the facts that something less than two-thirds of the property which was in the possession of Suraj Kunwar was her self-acquired property which she could dispose of in her lifetime. He further found that the deed Ex. 1 was executed by Suraj Kunwar intelligently and with full knowledge of its contents and full intention to make the disposition which she made. He found that she was mentally capable at the time that she executed the deed. He decreed the suit accordingly. The defendant No. 1 has filed the present appeal asking that the suit should be dismissed in entirety and in the alternative that the relief should be reduced. Defendant No. 2 has not appealed. The plaintiff filed cross-objections but as he refused to pay the Court-fee chargeable upon them those cross-objections were dismissed by an order of a Bench dated 20th July, 1927. We now proceed with the determination of the appeal.

The first question which we propose to decide is as to the correctness of the decision of the learned trial Judge where he decides that the property of a value of Rs. 97,000-8-10 to which the decree relates was property which had either belonged originally to Suraj Kunwar or which had been acquired by her out of the savings from her income. We need not dwell upon the law on the subject as the law is exceedingly clear. The property which the lady had obtained before her marriage and property which she had acquired subsequent to her marriage in her own interest, either by purchase from the savings of her income or in other ways, is property which she was competent to dispose of in her lifetime. This view of the law is not questioned by the learned Counsel for the appellant. He attacks the finding on this ground only. His case is that it is established on the evidence that when Gobardhan Singh died a portion of his property passed into the possession of Suraj Kunwar, another portion passed into the possession of the Manjhli Rani and another portion passed into the possession of the Ohhoti Rani. His case is that under the law Suraj Kunwar had no right to dispose of such property. He further takes the position that all the property of the Manjhli Rani and the Ohhoti Rani eventually came into the possession of Suraj Kunwar. His case there is that, whether such property had originally come from Gobardhan Singh or whether it had come from the Manjhli Rani or the Ohhoti Rani as the result of their self-acquisition, this property was not property which Suraj Kunwar was competent to dispose of. He accepted the position that property, which had been acquired by Suraj Kunwar in her personal right or purchased out of her savings, was property of which she could dispose, but he insisted that on the evidence it was clear that property had come to her from Gobardhan Singh, from the Manjhli Rani and from the Ohhoti Rani and that the plaintiff was only entitled to obtain the property which he was able to prove had been acquired by Suraj Kunwar herself. The learned trial Judge in dealing with this portion of the case took the following position.

He said at o. p. 43:—

"It was argued by the learned Counsel for the plaintiff that as the property entered in the list attached to the plaint was in the possession of Rani Suraj Kunwar, therefore, under s. 110 of the Indian Evidence Act she must be held to be its owner unless proved otherwise and as the defendants had failed to prove that any of the property belonged to Raj Gobardhan Singh or any of the co-widows Manjhli Rani or Ohhoti Rani it must be held that Bari Rani was its owner. That position was, however, abandoned when it was pointed out that it was in the evidence of the plaintiffs' witnesses also that the Bari Rani got the property of Manjhli Rani and Ohhoti Rani after their death and the plaintiff could not avail of the presumption under s. 110 of the Evidence Act and it was conceded that any property which the defendants' witnesses had deposed as belonging to Raj Gobardhan Singh or Manjhli Rani or Ohhoti Rani might be excluded and it was also conceded that if there be several properties in the lists attached to the plaint of the description of the properties given by defendant's witnesses as belonging to the two Ranies or Raj Gobardhan Singh then the property of the highest value might be excluded. It was contended by the learned Counsel for the defendant No. 1 that it was for the plaintiff to prove that each and every item of the property entered in the lists attached to the plaint was stridhan of Bari Rani or had been acquired by her and as the plaintiff had failed to establish it the suit should be dismissed. The property consists of small items and is entered in 53 pages. It would be practically impossible to prove when and for how much each item of property was acquired and it would be very hard and inequitable to dismiss the entire suit because the plaintiff has not been able to prove when and how each item of property was acquired."

The learned Judge then proceeded to decide that Suraj Kunwar was competent to dispose of all the property in her possession at the time of her death except the property which the defendants were able to prove had originally belonged to Raj Gobardhan Singh or the Manjhli Rani or the Ohhoti Rani. We consider that he arrived at a correct conclusion, but we do not think that he has given the correct reason to support it. In our opinion the provisions of s. 110 of Act I of 1872 undoubtedly were sufficient to establish the title of Suraj Kunwar to all the property in her possession at the time of her death and were sufficient to show that she had power to dispose of all such property unless and until it was established that she did not have that power. The section is as follows:

"When the question is whether any person is owner of anything of which he is shown to be in possession, the burden of proving that he is not the owner is on the person who affirms that he is not the owner."

The lady at the time of her death was in possession of all the articles mentioned in the plaint. These articles have been placed under lock and key and are in the custody of the District Magistrate of Kheri. Under this section the presumption is that she was owner and had power to dispose of all those articles and until that presumption is rebutted by direct evidence which the Court accepts it remains. The presumption has been rebutted by direct evidence which the learned trial Judge has believed in reference to articles of a net value of Rs. 52,999-7-2 and the decree gives no relief in respect of those articles. There is authority in addition in support of this view. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Diwan Ran Bijai Bahadur Singh v. Indarpal Singh (1) said at page 228:

"There is some conflict of evidence as to whether this property was originally acquired by Randhir Singh or his wife Ajit Kunwar, but Counsel for the appellant, admitting that both the Courts below were adverse to the plaintiff's contention on the evidence, elected to treat the case as if there were no evidence one way or the other, and to base their client's claim on the following proposition of law. They alleged that when a widow is found in possession of property of the acquisition of which no account is given, and it is shown that her husband died possessed of considerable property, then there is a presumption of law that the property found in the widow's possession was originally that of her husband. No authority was cited at the bar which supports this proposition, and their Lordships are not prepared to adopt it or to lay down anything inconsistent with the general rule that he who claims property through some other person must show the property to have been vested in that person."

(1) 26 I. A. 226; 26 C. 871; 4 C. W. N. 1; 2 Bom. L. R. 1; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 578; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1158 (P. C.).

We have, however, to observe that the learned trial Judge appears to have included in the property which he decreed one article which, according to the principles which he has adopted, should not have been included in the decree. That is an article known as Harmina-kari with eighteen taviz having one studded chand and five lars of pearls valued at Rs. 2,500. There is evidence, which he has accepted on other points, of defendant's witness Lachman Singh at o. p. 162 that the Chhoti Rani urged to wear a Harmina-kari. There is more than one of the ornaments of this description awarded and according to the rule laid down by the learned trial Judge the ornament of the highest value of this description should be excluded. We, therefore, propose to amend the decree by the exclusion of this article. It shall in any circumstances reduce the valuation to Rs. 94,500 8 10.

We have now to consider the final question as to whether Suraj Kunwar did actually execute the deed Ex. 1 and whether its execution was intelligent and effective. The evidence in favour of the execution of the deed is as follows. Maharaj Kumar Sardar Singhji, the son of the Chief of Shahpura who, as we have already stated, married Raj Gobardhan Singh's daughter, has deposed that he had in the month of April, 1925, come to reside close to Padarya, where Suraj Kunwar lived to be near her as her health was failing. He has deposed that she told him that she wished to make a further disposition of her property for religious purposes and that she asked him at the end of April to send his motor car to Lakhimpur, which is some twenty-two miles distant from Padarya, to fetch B. Bankey Behari Lal who, as we have already stated, was one of the trustees under the deed Ex. 3. Maharaj Kumar Sahib sent his motor car accordingly and B. Bankey Behari Lal arrived. B. Bankey Behari Lal has deposed that the lady instructed him at the end of April 1925 to draw up a deed on the lines of Ex. 1 and that he prepared a draft accordingly which he brought to her on the 2nd May, 1925. In that draft he says that he had entered the names of Raj Bachan Singh and the Maharaj Kumar Sahib as trustees. He says that the lady told him to remove those names and insert his name as sole trustee, that she accepted the draft as correct and that she instructed him to instruct her ziladar Parbhu Dayal, to fair out the deed on a stamp paper which had been purchased for the purpose. He says that Parbhu Dayal faired out the deed accordingly and the Rani then signed it after it had again been read out to her. The evidence as to the execution is the evidence of B. Bankey Behari Lal, of Parbhu Dayal the scribe, and of two servants Ganesh Prasad otherwise known as Ganesh Rai and Hazari Lal who signed, as attesting witnesses to the lady's signature. The lady had given a power of attorney Ex. 21 to a certain Mohan Lal a resident in Lakhimpur. Under this power of attorney Mohan Lal had authority to register deeds on her behalf provided he could show a special written permission to have such deeds registered. Mohan Lal had been with Bankey Behari Lal while the deed was under preparation, and after the deed was executed the lady gave Mohan Lal a signed permission to get the deed registered, and he took it accordingly to Lakhimpur where it was admittedly presented for registration on the 4th May, 1925, and registered on the following day. The evidence as to registration is that of Mohan Lal. It is true that he has not produced the written authority given to him to present the deed for registration, but it is clear from Ex. 21 that the Sub-Registrar could not have accepted the power of attorney as sufficient authority.

to permit Mohan Lal to have the deed registered unless he had a separate permission in writing. This separate permission is said to have been lost and secondary evidence has accordingly been allowed in proof of its contents. We consider that the secondary evidence has been rightly admitted. The written authority appears to have been returned to Suraj Kunwar. When Mohan Lal was called on to produce it he said that he had given it to Suraj Kunwar. All those above witnesses have deposed not only to the execution of the deed Ex. I, they have also deposed to the effect that the lady was in full possession of her mental faculties and that the execution of the deed was the result of her independent wishes after consultation with B. Bankey Behari Lal, who was not only a gentleman who was carrying out her desires as a trustee, but was also her legal adviser. They deposed that although the lady was ill at the time her mental faculties were in no way affected. The evidence as to her mental condition is supported by the evidence of a medical practitioner by name Hansraj who has been for some thirteen years employed in the service of the District Boards. He acts as a confidential friend for the Rani of Katesar who was the elder sister of Suraj Kunwar. According to his evidence he went to Padarya on the 9th of May, 1925, to inquire whether Suraj Kunwar was fit to come and stay with her sister at Katesar. It appears that the Rani of Katesar had heard that Suraj Kunwar was not well. According to the evidence of Dr. Hansraj, Suraj Kunwar, when he saw her on the 9th May, 1925, was suffering from dropsy and was in no condition to travel. She was very ill. He, however, considered that she was in full possession of her mental faculties. Another witness upon this point was Janardan Prasad a Brahman teacher in the Sanskrit school at Padarya. He was appointed to that position by Suraj Kunwar and visited her frequently. Another witness was Ram Lal a servant of Suraj Kunwar. Both these witnesses have deposed that Suraj Kunwar was in full possession of her mental faculties at the time of the execution of the deed.

Against this is the evidence of a certain number of witnesses who have deposed that they saw the lady about that period and that she had completely lost all power of movement and all knowledge of what she was doing. These witnesses are Krishna Bahadur Sah and Makrandhuj Sah distant connections of Raj Gobardhan Singh, Thakur Gobardhan Singh an employee of the estate, Bhagwan Din a Brahman cultivator of Deorya, Kanauji Lal a peon of the estate, Kuar Partab Singh a guzaradar of the estate, Raj Bachan Singh the defendant No. 1, Lachman Singh Thakur, a brother of the servant of defendant No. 1 Parsotam Deo a man who called himself an Indian Medical Practitioner who lives at Gola Gokaran Nath and a Brahman woman called Shebhu who lives close to Gola Gokaran Nath. Parsotam Deo stated that he was called in to attend Suraj Kunwar during her illness and that he found her in the last stages of dissolution and unable to understand anything. Shebhu says that she was an unpaid servant of the lady.

These witnesses have stated facts diametrically opposite to the facts stated by the plaintiff's witnesses. The position of a Court of Appeal, when it finds witnesses for the plaintiff deposing to facts absolutely contrary to the facts to which the witnesses for the defendant depose, when, as here, the witnesses on one side are prima facie as deserving of credit as the witnesses on the other side, when, as here, the witnesses on neither side have been shaken in cross-examination, is not as difficult as it would appear when, as here, we have the advantage of a well-reasoned and well-thought out judgment by a competent trial Judge who has given a close and intelligent attention to the evidence before him. The attitude to be taken in a case of this kind was indicated by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the Bombay Cotton Manufacturing Co. Ltd. v. Motilal Shirlal (2). They stated at page 113* :—

"It is doubtless true that on appeal the whole case, including the facts, are within the jurisdiction of the Appeal Court. But generally speaking it is undesirable to interfere with the findings of fact of the trial Judge who sees and hears the witnesses and has an opportunity of noting their demeanour, especially in cases where the issue is simple and depends on the credit which attached to one or other of conflicting witnesses. Nor should his pronouncement with respect to their credibility be put aside on a mere calculation of probabilities by the Court of Appeal. In making these observations their Lordships have no desire to restrict the discretion of the Appellate Courts in India in the consideration of evidence. They only wish to point out that where the issue is simple and straightforward and the only question is which set of witnesses is to be believed the verdict of a Judge trying the case should not be lightly disregarded."

(2) 29 Ind. Cas. 229; 42 I. A. 110; 19 O. W. N. 617; 17 M. L. T. 403; 28 M. L. J. 593; 21 O. L. J. 528; 17 Bom. L. R. 455; 2 L. W. 521; 39 B. 386. (1915) M. W. N. 788 (P. C.).

We have been impressed greatly by the care and intelligence with which the learned trial Judge has decided this case. We are satisfied that he has applied his mind intelligently as to the witnesses whom he should believe and the witnesses whom he should not believe. After hearing the criticisms of the learned Counsel for the appellant, who has criticised intelligently and with skill, we accept the finding of the learned trial Judge as to the credibility of the witnesses. He believed the witnesses for the plaintiff, and disbelieved the evidence for the defendants.

There is one piece of evidence, however, adduced on behalf of the defendant appellant to which we have not yet referred. That is the evidence of Charles Hardless who was called as an expert in handwriting. The learned Judge did not consider the evidence of this witness as of any value and did not accept his opinion. After having made an independent examination and a comparison of the handwriting involved we have arrived at the same conclusion. We have taken as the standard signatures of Suraj Kunwar the signatures in Ex. 3, a document which was admittedly executed by her. Exhibit 1 contains her signatures in two places. After a close examination of the signatures in Ex. 3 and Ex. 1 we have arrived at the conclusion that the signatures in Ex. 3 and the signatures in Ex. 1 are the signatures of the same person, and as the signatures in Ex. 3 are admittedly the signatures of Suraj Kunwar the signatures on Ex. 1, according to our findings, are also the signatures of Suraj Kunwar. The lady signed her name in Hindi in scrawling letters. She clearly was not skilled in handwriting. In every one of her signatures there is some slight difference in the formation of a particular letter. But there can, to our mind, be no doubt as to the fact that all these signatures were made by one and the same person. The differences in the letters are just the differences which would be expected. The opinion of the Expert Hardless is an opinion which we cannot reconcile with our own observations. He has stated that in his opinion the two separate signatures on Ex. 1 are what he calls "traced forgeries." He would appear to assume that both the tracings were from the same signature. Not only do we not find from the appearance of the signatures any indication that they have been traced but we find that the two signatures on Ex. 1 differ between themselves in the shape of the letters. No two letters are exactly alike in both. So they clearly could not have been traced from the same signature. There is absolutely nothing to show that they are forgeries. Mr. Hardless has prepared a photograph which to us proves nothing at all. We consider that the learned trial Judge took the correct view in attaching no weight to the evidence of this witness.

As a result, therefore, we modify the decree of the lower Court by eliminating from it the Har mina kari with eighteen taviz which is entered as the first article in Box No. 22 in List A of the ornaments found in the Kuti Kothri. In the printed book this item will be found at page 107 of the list attached to the decree. This is the only alteration which we make. As the appeal was in respect of Rs. 7,000 8-10 and has succeeded to the extent of Rs. 2,500 we consider that on the question of costs it should be taken as having failed in entirety. We accordingly direct that the appellant Raj Bachan Singh pays his own costs and those of both the respondents in this appeal. No determination is made by this Court of the rights of the defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 2 inter se.

G. H.

Decree modified.

A. N. A.

ODDH CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 158 OF 1927.
November 11, 1927.

Present:—Sir Louis Stuart, Kt., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Raza.

SAHEB DIN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—

APPELLANTS

versus

MAHABIR SINGH AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Jurisdiction—Suit between rival tenants for declaration of title to occupancy lands—Cognisance by Civil Court.

A suit by a tenant of occupancy lands for declaration of his occupancy right against a rival tenant claiming such right in the lands is cognisable by the Civil Court. [p. 328, col. 2.]

Dilawar Khan v. Kulsum Bibi (1), distinguished.
Second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 9th March, 1927, reversing that of the Munsif, Akbarpur, Fyzabad, dated the 16th December, 1926.

The case came on for hearing before Mr. Justice Hasan who made the following ORDER OF REFERENCE.—This is the plaintiffs' appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Fyzabad, dated the 9th of March, 1927, reversing the decree of the Munsif of Akbarpur, dated the 16th of December, 1926.

The plaintiffs' suit, which was decreed by the Court of first instance, has been dismissed by the lower Appellate Court on the ground that its cognisance by the Civil Court is barred. The lower Appellate Court relies on a decision of a learned Judge of this Court in the case of Dilawar Khan v. Kulsum Bibi (1). On behalf of the plaintiff-appellants the soundness of that decision is challenged in appeal before me. I am of opinion that the appeal involves a very important question of law and should be decided by a Bench of two Judges. I accordingly make the Reference.

Messrs. Ali Zaheer and Staya Nand Roy, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Niamat Ullah and Naim Ullah, for the Respondent.

In pursuance of the Order of Reference the case was heard by Sir Louis Stuart, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Raza who delivered the following JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 9th March 1927, setting aside a decree of the Munsif, Akbarpur, dated the 16th December, 1926.

The following facts are, no longer, in controversy.

One Harbadan Singh had four sons, namely, (1) Ram Saran Singh, (2) Sheo Pershad Singh (3), Debi Dat Singh and (4) Raghunath Singh. Harbadan Singh and Raghunath Singh died some time before the first settlement. The sons of Harbadan Singh were not living jointly as members of a joint Hindu family at the time of the first settlement. Ram

Saran Singh, Sheo Pershad Singh Debi Dat Singh and Ram Dat Singh, son of Raghunath Singh, brought separate suits against the taluqdar of Samanpur for their under-proprietary rights in village Diwai-pur, and ultimately decrees for occupancy rights (without right of transfer) were passed in their favour in 1869, as detailed below:—

	bighas	biswas
1. Ram Saran Singh ...	24	9
2. Sheo Pershad Singh ...	30	6
3. Debi Dat Singh ...	7	10
4. Ram Dat Singh ...	7	17

A few years after the decrees were passed by the Settlement Court, Sheo Pershad Singh, Debi Dat Singh and Ram Dat Singh fell into serious arrears and left the village to avoid payment. Ram Saran Singh paid off the arrears and got possession of their holdings also. He was recognised and treated by the taluqdar, as the occupancy tenant of the said holdings also and rent was realised from him as such. After a period of more than 12 years, Sheo Pershad Singh, Debi Dat Singh and Ram Dat Singh returned to the village and then Ram Saran Singh let certain lands to them. He let some 12 bighas land (including the land in suit) to Sheo Pershad Singh, at the annual rent of Rs. 26 odd. In 1887 Ram Dat Singh sued Ram Saran Singh for his share of the occupancy tenure, but his suit was dismissed by the Civil Court (Munsif of Akbarpur) on the 29th November 1888. Sheo Pershad Singh was examined by Ram Dat Singh as a witness in that suit. He admitted that he had absconded, as he had failed to pay the rent of his holding. He stated that he had returned to the village in or about 1877 and that Ram Saran Singh had taken possession of his holding in his absence, having colluded with the taluqdar. He stated further that he had got possession of 12½ bighas land only out of his holding which was held by tenants and that Ram Saran Singh was making collections. The taluqdar has all along realised the rent of all the holdings from Ram Saran Singh and his (Ram Saran Singh's) descendants.

Sheo Pershad Singh died many years ago. He had four sons. They are also dead. The plaintiffs, Sahib Din Singh and Gaya Din Singh, are the only surviving members of the family. They are the sons of Sheo Pershad Singh's son, Ram Bharos Singh.

(1) 93 Ind. Cas. 62; 3 O. W. N. 210; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 205; L. R. 7 A. (O.) 79; 13 O. L. J. 496.

Amarjit Singh, Udraj Singh, Samarath Singh and six others (defendants Nos. 2 to 10 in the present suit) are the descendants of Ram Saran Singh deceased.

The dispute in this case relates to 3 bighas 13 biswas 5 biswas land specified at the foot of the plaint. Mahabir Singh (defendant No. 1 in the present suit) holds the land as a tenant.

Deoki Singh, uncle of the plaintiffs, issued a notice of ejectment against Mahabir Singh (defendant No. 1) in respect of the land in suit, in 1920. Mahabir Singh contested the notice of ejectment on the ground that he was not the tenant of Deoki Singh and that he was holding the land as the tenant of the defendants Nos. 2 to 10. His claim was decreed by the Revenue Court and the notice of ejectment was cancelled, on the 26th May, 1920. The plaintiffs then brought the present declaratory suit on the 19th April, 1926, on the allegation that the land in suit formed part of their 30 bighas 6 biswas land in respect of which their ancestor Sheo Pershad Singh had obtained a decree for occupancy rights on the 4th January, 1869, that they were entitled to claim occupancy rights in the land as against the defendants and that the defendants Nos. 2 to 10 had got no right whatever in the land in suit. They prayed for a declaration of their right, and in the alternative, for a decree for possession of the land.

The claim was resisted by the defendants on various grounds. They denied that the plaintiffs were entitled to claim occupancy rights in the land in suit and alleged that the defendants Nos. 2 to 10 were the rightful occupancy tenants of the land which was held by the defendant No. 1 as their tenant. They pleaded also limitation, res judicata and estoppel. It was also pleaded that the suit was not cognizable by the Civil Court.

The learned Munsif framed seven issues and found as follows:—

1. The plaintiffs are 'qabzadars' of the land in suit.

2. The plaintiffs have been in possession as 'qabzadars' within limitation.

3. The plots in suit were let to the defendant No. 1 by the plaintiffs' uncle Deoki Singh.

4. The plaintiffs' claim is not barred by s. 11, Civil Procedure Code, as against the defendant No. 1.

5. The plaintiffs are not estopped from alleging themselves to be the 'qabzadars' of the land in suit.

6. The suit is cognizable by the Civil Court.

The plaintiffs are entitled to the declaration that they are owners as 'qabzadars' of the land in suit, that the defendant No. 1 is only a tenant and that the defendants Nos. 2 to 10 have no title to the land in suit.

The learned Munsif decreed the plaintiffs' claim accordingly.

The defendants appealed and their appeal was allowed by the learned District Judge. He held that the present suit was not maintainable in the Civil Court. He, therefore, dismissed the suit and did not think it necessary to give his finding on any other point involved in the case. In determining the question of jurisdiction, the learned Judge has gone into questions of fact also, but he has given no definite finding on issues of fact.

The plaintiffs have now come to this Court in second appeal.

We are not prepared to agree with the finding of the learned District Judge on the question of jurisdiction. We think the present suit is cognizable by the Civil Court. The learned District Judge has referred to the case of Dilawar Khan v. Kulsam Bibi (1) decided by one of us on the 21st of January, 1926. That case may be easily distinguished from the present case. The present suit is not a suit between a tenant-in-chief and a sub-tenant. The facts and circumstances of that case are quite different from the facts and circumstances of the present case. The present suit is a suit between rival claimants of qabzadari lands. The tenant (defendant No. 1) has of course been impleaded in the present suit, but defendants Nos. 2 to 10 are the principal defendants against whom the plaintiffs want to establish their occupancy rights in the land in suit.

We do not think it necessary to remand the case to the lower Appellate Court for findings on other points as the evidence on record is sufficient to enable us to determine the issues of fact necessary for the disposal of the appeal on the merits. We have examined the record and heard the learned Counsel on both sides. In our opinion the plaintiffs' claim must be rejected on the merits.

The principal points for determination in this case are these :—

1. Are the plaintiffs entitled to claim occupancy right in the land in suit?
2. Does the defendant No. 1 hold the land in suit as the plaintiffs' tenant or as the tenant of defendants Nos. 2 to 10?

We find on the first point that the plaintiffs are not entitled to claim occupancy rights in the land in suit. The statement made by the plaintiffs' grand-father, Sheo Pershad Singh, on the 22nd June, 1883, (Ex. C. 13) shows clearly that he had absconded as he had failed to pay the rent due from him. He had left the village and abandoned the holding. He remained absent for a long time. In these circumstances the taluqdar was justified in assuming that Sheo Pershad Singh had abandoned the holding. He treated the holding as abandoned and settled the land with Ram Saran Singh, the ancestor of defendants Nos. 2 to 10. He was perfectly right in doing so under the circumstances of the case. Ram Saran Singh thus became the occupancy tenant of the holding in question and paid rent for the same as such. Sheo Pershad Singh remained absent for more than 12 years and then returned to the village. His brother, Ram Saran Singh, then let some 12 bighas land to him at the annual rent of Rs. 26 odd. If he and his sons thus held the land after they returned to the village, it was an act of grace from Ram Saran Singh and they did not hold the land in their own right. They had lost their rights and Ram Saran Singh did not and could not confer on them right of occupancy in the lands to which they were admitted. It is neither alleged nor shown that the taluqdar had conferred on them right of occupancy in the land in question. It is said that Sheo Pershad Singh had obtained a decree against Ram Saran Singh for possession of the land as qabzadar but no such decree has been produced in this case. It is true that there is a reference to a decree in a statement made by Ram Saran Singh on the 17th August, 1895 (Ex. 6), but there is nothing in that statement to show that Sheo Pershad Singh had obtained any decree against him as a qabzadar in respect of the land in question. Ram Saran Singh has stated clearly that he was the qabzadar of the entire occupancy tenure (72 bighas) in the village. Sheo Pershad Singh and, after his death, his sons were, surely holding the land in question as the sub-tenants of Ram Saran Singh, the occupancy tenant. Ram Saran Singh had sued the plaintiffs' father, Ram Bharos Singh, for arrears of rent for the years 1291 and 1292 Fasli (1883 and 1884 A. D.). The suit was compromised and the claim of Ram Saran Singh was decreed by the Commissioner of Fyzabad on the 8th June, 1886. (See Exs. C. 3 and C. 9). Had Ram Bharos Singh been holding the land as an occupancy tenant from the taluqdar, under the decree of the Settlement Court mentioned above, Ram Saran Singh could not obtain the decree against him for arrears of rent. The very fact that Ram Saran's claim for arrears of rent was decreed against Ram Bharos Singh shows clearly that the latter was holding the land as the sub-tenant of the former. It may safely be inferred from the compromise (Ex. C-9) that Ram Bharos Singh admitted that he was holding the land as a tenant from Ram Saran Singh. It is true that the entries in the Patwari's papers support the plaintiffs' case, but the entries in question cannot help the plaintiffs when their ancestor Sheo Pershad Singh lost his rights under the circumstances stated above. It should be borne in mind that mutation of names, by itself, confers no title. It is amply proved that the plaintiffs' ancestors have all along paid the rent to Ram Saran Singh and have never paid it to the taluqdar. It is neither alleged nor shown that the plaintiffs or their ancestors were ever recognised by the taluqdar as occupancy tenants after Sheo Pershad Singh left the village and abandoned his holding. No suit was brought by Sheo Pershad Singh against the taluqdar after he returned to the village. The taluqdar is not a party to the present suit also. The land which was let to Sheo Pershad Singh on his return, was not wholly the land of his decree of 1869. There were some plots which were not included in the decree. Some plots out of the plots in suit are not included in the said decree. The plaintiffs' allegation that all the plots in suit are included in the decree is untrue. The learned Munsif thinks that there was some exchange of plots, but this view of the learned Munsif is hypothetical and speculative. It was never the plaintiffs' case that there was any exchange of plots at any time.

We hold, therefore, that the plaintiffs cannot claim occupancy right in the land which was let to their ancestors by Ram Saran Singh under the circumstances stated above.

We find on the second point that the defendant No. 1 holds the land in suit as the tenant of the defendants Nos. 2 to 10. The plaintiffs' witness, Sampat Lat, Patwari, states that the plaintiffs' uncle Deoki Singh had let the plots in suit to Mahabir Singh, defendant No. 1, more than 10 years ago. His evidence is quite vague and unreliable. We are not satisfied with his evidence. He says that a patta and a kabuliyat were executed in his presence, but no patta or kabuliyat has been produced in this case. The evidence given by Mahabir Singh and Amarjit Singh shows clearly that it was Ram Saran Singh who had let the land in suit to Mahabir Singh about 18 or 20 years ago. Ram Saran Singh took back the land from Ram Bharios Singh or Deoki Singh and let it to Mahabir Singh at the annual rent of Rs. 12. Mahabir Singh never paid rent to Deoki Singh or to the plaintiffs. He has all along paid the rent to Ram Saran Singh and his descendants. We are inclined to believe the evidence given by Mahabir Singh and Amarjit Singh on the point under consideration.

The result is that the plaintiffs' suit fails on our findings on the two points mentioned above. We do not think it necessary to decide any other point in disposing of this case—Hence we dismiss the appeal with costs. The defendants will get their costs from the plaintiffs in all the three Courts.

Appeal dismissed.

G. H.
A. N. A.

ODDH CHIEF COURT.

ORIGINAL SUIT No. 2 OF 1927.

November 25, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Pullan.

Thakur RAJENDRA BAKHSH SINGH

—PLAINTIFF

versus

Musammat BAHU RANI AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS.

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7, cl. iv, sub-cl. (c) and (d)—Declaratory suit—Valuation—Gross over-valuation by plaintiff—Court's power to interfere under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code.

Where a plaintiff seeks to obtain a declaratory decree with consequential relief under s. 7 cl. iv, sub-cl. (c) or to obtain an injunction under sub-cl. (d) of the Court Fees Act, the suit must be valued according to the amount for which the relief sought is valued in the plaint, and there is no direct authority for the Court to interfere with the valuation set up by a plaintiff who seeks a relief under s. 7, cl. iv, sub-cl. (c) or (d) of the Court Fees Act, unless the Court can take advantage of s. 151 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 331, col. 2; p. 332, col. 1.]

Hari Sankar Dutt v. Kali Kumar Patra (1), Sunderbat v. Collector of Belgaum (2), Raj Krishna Dey v. Bepin Behary Dey (3), Jageshtra v. Durga Prasad Singh (4) and Thakur Sheodat Singh v. Thakur Bishunath Singh (5), referred to.

Obiter.—If a plaintiff makes an absurd and outrageous misrepresentation as to the value of his suit in order to have it tried by a higher Court, the Court can interfere with the valuation set up by a plaintiff by invoking its powers under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code. [p. 332, col. 1.]

Messrs. Niamat Ullah and Ghulam Hassan, for the Plaintiff.

Messrs. Ishwari Prasad, Kedar Nath Tandon, Thakur Prasad, Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, Girja Shankar and Bhairon Nath, for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—For the second time this suit has come before this Court for determination of the question of valuation. The plaintiff when he filed his suit in the first instance valued it at over six lacs of rupees, but in so doing he omitted to notice the provisions of s. 254 of the Oudh Civil Digest, which limited the valuation of his suit to one thousand rupees on account of the first relief claimed and forty thousand rupees on account of the second relief. When this objection was made the plaintiff sought to amend his plaint, but my learned predecessor decided that the amendment could not be allowed at that stage, and that he should first of all determine the valuation of the suit as filed. He accordingly found that the valuation was forty-one thousand, and returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. The plaintiff amended his plaint in the manner which he had already proposed, and again presented the plaint in this Court on the ground that on the allegations now disclosed and the reliefs now sought, the suit was within the jurisdiction of this Court.

In the first instance the plaintiff had assailed a deed of gift executed by a certain lady partly because she denied that he was the validly adopted son of Thakur Mahabir Bakhsh Singh and partly because the document transferred certain property to which he was entitled as reversioner. In the plaint as amended he has also asked that the whole deed of gift should be set aside and he has further sought an injunction against the defendants, that is to say, the donor and the donee, restraining them from dealing with the property in a manner inconsistent with the rights of defendant No. 1, as a Hindu widow, and prejudicial to the interests of the plaintiff, and there is still another relief which has been laid open to him by the action of the defendants, who, in their written statements, set up the case that this was a joint Hindu family, contrary to the allegations in the plaint. The plaintiff is now able to say that if the Court finds that this is a joint Hindu family he is entitled to possession of the whole property, except one village Sardaha, which has not been transferred by the deed of gift. I am asked by the defendants to find that these are not genuine additions to the plaint, but have been inserted merely as a device to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of the Court. No doubt this is the primary object of the plaintiff. He has always tried to have this suit tried in this Court and he has always valued the suit at upwards of six lacs. It is now admitted that the deed of gift was grossly under-valued and, even on the admission of the defendants, the property transferred by that deed of gift could not be worth less than 2½ lacs of rupees. Consequently, the reduction in the valuation of the plaintiff's suit, to meet the technical provision of the Oudh Civil Digest, was brought about primarily by the dishonesty of the defendants, who wished to execute a deed of gift on a stamp of less value than that prescribed by law. I am not prepared to find at this stage that the new reliefs claimed are without any meaning or that they can be rejected summarily without a hearing. This plaint has now been amended and I have got to consider it in its amended form, and as long as I find that the reliefs asked are reasonable and such as would have been considered by the Court without question had not the defendants been able to impute dishonest motives for their insertion, I consider that they may be taken into account in order to estimate the valuation of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction.

Now there is no question that these reliefs are included in s. 7, cl. iv of the Court Fees Act, which must be read with s. 8 of the Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), that is to say, the valuation for the purposes of jurisdiction must be the same as the valuation for the purpose of Court-fee. Where a plaintiff seeks to obtain a declaratory decree with consequential relief (s. 7, cl. iv, sub-cl. (c), or to obtain an injunction (sub-cl. (d), the suit must be valued according to the amount for which the relief sought is valued in the plaint. I have been referred to several rulings commencing with Hari Sankar Dutt v. Kali Kumar Patra (1), which pointed out that in such a suit the Court must accept the value of the relief stated in the plaint and this view was accepted by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Sunderbai v. Collector of Belgaum (2), where they quoted with approval a decision of the High Court of Bombay which laid down this principle. At the same time I must point out that in every case that has been shown to me the Courts have been regarding the matter from an opposite standpoint to that which I must adopt in the present case. They have always considered cases in which the plaintiff has sought to pay a lower Court-fee by an under-valuation of some part of his claim, and no case has been brought to my notice where a plaintiff has sought to bring his suit in a Court of higher jurisdiction by falsely overestimating the value of his claim, and paying a higher Court-fee than that which the law demanded. In the present case no question of Court-fee arises, as the plaintiff has paid the maximum. In several cases I have been shown remarks directed against arbitrary valuation on the part of the plaintiff, but it has always been an arbitrary undervaluation and never an arbitrary overvaluation. Such was the case of Raj Krishna Dey v. Bipin Behari Dey (3) and Jageshra v. Durga Prashad Singh (4). All that the rulings show me in favour of the defendants in the present case is that Courts have not uniformly accepted the plaintiff's valuation of his suit for the purposes of Court-fee when they have held that the valuation for the purpose of jurisdiction was higher. No doubt, the observations of Mr. Chamier in Thakur Sheodat Singh v. Thakur Bishunath Singh (5), where he says that the Courts have

(1) 32 C. 734; 9 C. W. N. 690.

(2) 52 Ind. Cas. 897; 43 B. 376; (1919) M. W. N. 254; 23 C. W. N. 753; 21 Bom. L. R. 1148; 46 I. A. 15 (P. O.).

(3) 17 Ind. Cas. 162; 40 C. 245; 16 C. L. J. 194; 17 C. W. N. 591.

(4) 24 Ind. Cas. 679; 36 A. 500; 12 A. L. J. 844.

(5) 6 O. C. 255.

always accepted the plaintiff's valuation as determining the forum, except in cases where it has been proved that the plaintiff has misrepresented the true value with the intention of getting a trial in a different Court from that intended by the Legislature or has acted recklessly in valuing his suit, or has adopted a wrong method of valuation, may be considered, if taken apart from their context, to assist the defendants' plea. But this again is a case in which the plaintiff sought to under-estimate and not to over-estimate the valuation, and, moreover, it was a suit for pre-emption which stands on a somewhat different footing from other suits. In my opinion, therefore, there is no direct authority for the Court to interfere with the valuation set up by a plaintiff who seeks a relief under s. 7, cl. iv sub-cl. (c) or (d) of the Court Fees Act, unless the Court can take advantage of s. 151 of the Civil Procedure Code. There can be no doubt that that section may be brought into use if a plaintiff makes an absurd and outrageous misrepresentation as to the value of his suit in order to have it tried by some particular Court. If a person attempted to sue in a Munsif's Court for property worth a lac of rupees by declaring it to be worth one hundred, the Court would refuse to entertain his plaint and similarly this Court would refuse to entertain a plaint if the valuation was demonstrably far below the minimum of five lacs, which is prescribed for the original jurisdiction of this Court.

I have, therefore, considered carefully what the real valuation of this property is for the whole property as stated in the plaint may be taken into account for the purpose of valuation if reliefs (c) and (d) are read together. There is no contest as to the recorded profits of the villages in suit. The average for the last six years has been shown to be Rs. 11,615, but the plaintiff has been able to show that in two villages at least defendant No. 1 has given leases to her servants on very low terms. A Patwari Samsan Ali, who has been called as a witness, (P. W. No. 7) shows that one village has been let out to a certain Taluqdar Singh, defendant's mukhtar, at a rent of Rs. 90 a year, and that he has sub let considerably less than half of the whole for Rs. 114. Similarly in another village 452 bighas have been let out to one Jagdish Bakhsh Singh at a rental of Rs. 286 9, whereas the true rental of this holding could not be less than Rs. 700. The plaintiff, therefore, has made out a good case for showing that the profits are more than Rs. 11,615 which is the amount stated by the defendants.

The plaintiff has given two other methods of calculating the value. First of all he has argued that in this part of the Province sales are frequently calculated on the value of the land per bigha. He has taken the cultivated land and shown that at a rate of Rs. 35 per katcha bigha the value of these villages is upwards of four and a half lacs of rupees. He has produced exemplars in the form of sale-deeds of other land in neighbouring villages where it appears that a very high price has been fetched, sometimes over Rs. 60 per katcha bigha. No doubt, some of these sale-deeds were executed in exceptional circumstances and the sale consideration was not in cash but went to pay off debts. Still they are valuable as showing that this principle of valuation is from time to time adopted in the neighbourhood.

The other basis of calculation is taken from the fact that defendant No. 2 by the terms of the deed of gift agrees to pay the donor a sum of Rs. 12,000 a year. Now it is argued that a man who receives a gift of property does not pay the donor an annual sum in excess of the profits, and the plaintiff, therefore, argues that at least I should accept this sum of Rs. 12,000 as representing the annual value of the seven villages which are contained in the sale deed. It is not, however, necessary to set the price of the villages so high because, in my opinion, village land is generally sold at a rate representing something like 30 years' purchase. The defendants themselves examined a witness, who stated that a certain property had been sold for Rs. 14,000 of which the nikasi was Rs. 500 and from that nikasi the land revenue had to be deducted. It is, therefore, not likely that this land was sold at less than 30 years' purchase; and indeed this contention is in accordance with common experience. If the profits of the land are to be taken as Rs. 11,615 a year, I cannot estimate its value as less than 30 times that figure, namely Rs. 3,48,450. But this is not the whole of the plaintiff's claim. He states that there is in the possession of the defendants a quantity of valuable moveable property of which he has filed a list, and the value of which he states to be Rs. 1,30,000. The defendants do not admit the existence of this property and consequently they give no other valuation. Clearly the whole valuation given by the plaintiff must be accepted for purposes of jurisdiction and Court-fee because no other value can be given, and there is still a comparatively small sum of Rs. 25,000 which the plaintiff claims as a share of a pension granted by Government to this family, and which may be properly included in this suit. The total, therefore, comes to more than five lacs of rupees and I, therefore, find that this suit is within the jurisdiction of this Court and I decide this preliminary issue in favour of the plaintiff. The plaintiff will receive his costs from the defendants.

The 8th of December is fixed for issues, and the 17th for filing of documents which must be admitted or denied on or before the 23rd December before the Registrar.

G. H.

A. N. A.

Order accordingly.

ODDH CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE No. 44 OF 1927.

December 1, 1927.

Present:—Sir Louis Stuart, Kt., Chief Judge.

DEBI DAYAL—APPLICANT

versus

MANAO alias JIT BAHADUR AND ANOTHER—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 133, 139-A (2)—Public nuisance—Denial of public right—Duty of Magistrate to stay proceedings—Dismissal of application, legality of.

The proper procedure to be adopted by a Magistrate where he finds in proceedings under s. 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code that there is reliable evidence to show that the place from which the alleged unlawful obstruction or nuisance is sought to be removed is not a public place, is not to dismiss the application and refer the parties to the Civil Court but to stay the proceedings before him under s. 139-A (2) of the Code until the matter of the existence of the alleged public right is decided by a competent Civil Court.

Case reported by the Second Additional Judge, Lucknow at Unao.

ORDER OF REFERENCE.—This is an application to revise the order of Chaudhri Mohammad Mah Sahib, Special Magistrate, First Class, Unao, dated the 23rd May, 1927, dismissing the applicant's application under s. 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

The learned Magistrate has found that there was reliable evidence in support of the defendant's denial that the place from which the alleged unlawful obstruction, or nuisance was sought by the applicant to be removed was a public place. But he has dismissed the application, which order is sought to be revised.

The applicant seeks that the order dismissing the application under s. 133 be set aside because it would stand under s. 133, cl. (2) in his way of seeking his remedy in the Civil Court. The learned Vakil for the defendant refers me to the sentence in the learned Magistrate's judgment towards the end and before the order that the parties should go to the Civil Court to have their rights adjudicated. I think the Civil Court would neither be entitled to, nor would go behind the operative portion of the order, that the application be dismissed.

I, therefore, send up this case to the Hon'ble the Chief Court with the recommendation that the order of the learned Magistrate dismissing the application under s. 133 be set aside and he be directed under s. 139-A (2) to retain the proceedings on his file and stay until the matter of the existence of the alleged public right has been decided by a competent Civil Court. The papers will be submitted to the Hon'ble Court on receipt of any explanation which the learned Magistrate might submit.

Mr. Moti Lal Saksena, for the Applicant.

Mr. Bal Krishna, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—I understand the learned Magistrate to agree that the wording of his order is open to objection and that the best method of putting the matter right is to set aside his order and to direct that under the provisions of s. 139-A (2) the proceedings be stayed until the matter of the existence of the alleged public right has been decided by a competent Civil Court. I accordingly direct under the provisions of s. 139-A (2) that the proceedings be stayed until the matter of existence of the right has been decided by a competent Civil Court.

A. N. A.

Proceedings stayed.

ODDH CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 198 OF 1927.

November 30, 1927.

Present:—Sir Louis Stuart, Kt., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Pullan.

RAM SIDH SINGH AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Mahanth BAKOODAS AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

U P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 111

Partition proceeding—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Objection that land is jagir and not sir—No question of proprietary title—Refusal of Revenue Court to decide objection—Civil suit, maintainability of.

Under the U. P. Land Revenue Act, 1901, the jurisdiction of Civil Courts in matters relating to partition is expressly ousted, except in so far as is provided by the provisions of s. 111 of the Act and the conditions and qualifications annexed to the grant of jurisdiction must be strictly complied with. [p. 334, col. 2; p. 335, col. 1.]

Mukhtar Ahmad v. Barati Lal (1), referred to:

An objection to partition which merely states that the land in question is not sir but jagir does not raise any question of proprietary or under-proprietary title and the Civil Court has consequently no jurisdiction to determine the matter even though the Revenue Court has erroneously left the question undetermined and referred the parties to the Civil Court. [p. 335, col. 1.]

Second appeal against the decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Sultanpur, dated the 21st March, 1927, reversing that of the Munsif, Musafir Khana, dated the 30th June, 1926.

Messrs. Haider Husain and Ali Zaheer, for the Appellants.

Mr. Niamat Ullah, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In order to understand the questions for decision in this second appeal it is necessary to state the previous history of the case at some length. There is in the Sultanpur District a certain village called Fatehpur which is held by certain persons as under-proprietors. The taluqdar of Maniarpur is the superior proprietor of the village. In this village there is an area of some 24 bighas of land. In partition proceedings of the Revenue Courts prior to 1916 this area has been treated in a particular manner. We have it that in the year 1916 Mahant Nanku Das applied under the provisions of Chap. VII of Local Act III of 1901 for partition of his own under-proprietary rights in that village. The proclamation under s. 110 of that Act fixed as a date for the filing of objections by other co-sharers the 26th of June, 1922. Up till that date no objections were filed. At a considerable later date afterwards the appellants filed an application to the effect that this particular area, was their jagir held by them for a period of over fifty years and that it should be excluded from partition and retained by them as their jagir. The Deputy Collector conducting the partition appears to have considered this as an objection to the partition made under s. 110 and as time-barred. In due course of time the partition proceeding was completed and submitted to the Collector under the provisions of s. 114 for confirmation. At the time of considering the confirmation the Deputy Commissioner considered an appeal made by the appellants against the dismissal of their objection. The Deputy Commissioner passed upon this appeal an order dated the 16th February, 1925. Apparently he considered the application made by the applicant as an objection made by a recorded co-sharer involving a question of proprietary title which had not been already determined by a Court of competent jurisdiction and he apparently intended to direct the appellants to institute within three months a suit in the Civil Court for the determination of the question. We say that he apparently intended to do this for the words are by no means clear. The words used are these:—

“The applicant-appellant will have his rights adjudicated before a proper forum and the result of the decision will be given effect to in the partition proceedings to whatever stage they might have reached, but in order to avoid delay I would recommend that the necessary steps should be taken by the applicant-appellant to have his rights adjudicated within the next three months. The lower Court will proceed with the partition.”

The appellants understood this to be an order under s. 111, cl. (b) and instituted a suit accordingly for a declaration that the land in question was their jagir and should be excluded from the partition. The learned Munsif, who tried the suit, awarded them the declaration which they desired. The lower Appellate Court, however, found that a Civil Court had no jurisdiction to grant the relief and dismissed their suit. They appeal here.

We support the conclusion that the suit must fail. Our reasons, however, are completely different from the reasons of the lower Appellate Court. The reason why we find that the suit must fail is this. As was pointed out by a Bench of the Judicial Commissioner's Court in Mukhtar Ahmad v. Barati Lal (1) the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in matters relating to partition is expressly ousted, except in so far as is provided by the provisions of s. 111, and the conditions and qualifications annexed to the grant of jurisdiction must be strictly complied with. The Civil Court has jurisdiction to determine a question of proprietary title, which has not been already determined by a Court of competent jurisdiction arising in a partition proceeding, if the partition officer refuses to inquire into the merits of the objection himself. Here undoubtedly the Deputy Commissioner refused to inquire into the merits of the objections but the question was not a question of proprietary title. We have examined the objection of the appellants. This objection is very clear. It merely states that the land in question is not their sir and that it is their jagir; but they claimed neither proprietary nor under-proprietary title in it. Their statement is exactly the same in their plaint. The learned Deputy Commissioner had no jurisdiction of any kind to pass the order which he did. He should have decided the matter himself. He has asked the Civil Courts to do something which they have no jurisdiction to do. We notice as a somewhat peculiar incident that while directing the Civil Courts to determine the matter he proceeded to conclude the partition without waiting for the decision. It is not for us to say what remedy the appellants will have in this matter. But the case clearly stands that in the partition proceeding they came forward with a very reasonable request that the land which was recorded in the wajib-ul arzas as their jagir, which had been decided in previous partition proceedings to be their jagir and as such to be excluded from partition, should be excluded from the present partition. They set up no claim of any kind to proprietary title. The Deputy Commissioner proceeded under a misapprehension to refer them to the Civil Courts, in order that they might decide the question which they had no jurisdiction to decide, but before the Civil Courts had arrived at a conclusion one way or another proceeded to make a partition in which he decided the point against the appellants. What the appellants' remedy may be it is not for us to say. It would seem hard if they have no remedy. This much we can say that the Civil Courts can give them no remedy. The Civil Courts had no jurisdiction. For these reasons and for these reasons alone we dismiss the appeal, but in the circumstances of the case direct that the parties bear their own costs in both the Courts.

(1) 25 Ind. Cas. 316; 17 O. C. 224 at p. 229; 1 O. L. J. 335.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

ODDH CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 217 OF 1927.

November 11, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Hasan.

Hafiz GHANI AHAMAD KHAN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 AND 3—

APPELLANTS

versus

Musammât MEHDI BEGAM—PLAINTIFF
AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammādan Law—Dower—Sharai dower—Transfer of property to wife after marriage towards dower, validity of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53—Preference of creditors, effect of.

Where no dower is fixed at marriage it may be fixed at a later period and sharai dower has to be fixed only where no dower is fixed either at the time of marriage or subsequently. [p. 336, col. 2.]

A Muhammadan husband, some time after his marriage, transferred immoveable properties worth Rs. 2,000 to his wife under a deed which recited that the transfer was for a consideration of Rs. 2,000 due to his wife towards her claim of dower of Rs. 25,000. It was found that the alleged claim of dower of Rs. 25,000 was fictitious and it was contended on the basis of this finding that the transfer was for an inadequate consideration as the wife would only be entitled to sharai dower.

Held, (1) that the husband must, under the circumstances, be held to have undertaken to pay Rs. 2,000 at least in discharge of his obligation for the dower-debt, that, there was, therefore, no case for fixing a sharai dower, and that the transfer could not consequently be said to have been made for an inadequate consideration; [ibid.]

(2) that the transfer could not be held to be invalid merely because the other creditors of the transferor were defeated thereby. [p. 336, col. 1.]

In a case in which no consideration of the law of bankruptcy or insolvency applies, there is nothing to prevent a debtor paying one creditor in full and leaving others unpaid although the result may be that the rest of his assets will be insufficient to provide for payment of the rest of his debts. [p. 336, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge, Lucknow, dated the 6th February, 1927, confirming that of the Munsif, Lucknow District, dated the 11th August, 1926.

Messrs. Zahur Ahmad and Mohammad Hafiz, for the Appellants.

Mr. Ganga Dayal Khare, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is the appeal by the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 from the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Lucknow, dated the 8th of February, 1927, affirming the decree of the Munsif of the same place dated the 11th of August, 1926.

The respondent, Musammât Mehdi Begam, is the plaintiff in the suit out of which this appeal arises. The facts as agreed upon at the hearing of this appeal are as follows:—

One Nawazish Ali Khan obtained a decree for possession of certain immoveable pro-party against Ahmad Ali Khan, the husband of the plaintiff, Musammāt Mehdi Begam, from the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Lucknow on the 31st of August, 1921. Under this decree Nawazish Ali Khan was entitled to recover also costs to the extent of Rs. 400 odd. There was a first appeal and a second appeal but the decree of the Court of first instance was all along affirmed. On the 24th of September, 1923, Nawazish Ali Khan applied for execution of his decree for costs by attachment of certain property belonging to Ahmad Ali Khan. The execution proceedings, however, proved infructuous and nothing further was done in that direction. On the 25th of October, 1923, Ahmad Ali Khan made a gift of his half share in a grove, in a house and in certain lands which he held in an under-proprietary tenure in favour of his wife, Musammāt Mehdi Begam, the plaintiff. On the 11th of September, 1924, Nawazish Ali Khan sold his decree for costs to the defendant-appellant, Hafiz Ghani Ahmad Khan. On the 12th of February, 1925, Hafiz Ghani Ahmad Khan took out execution of his decree by attaching the share of the grove which was the subject-matter of the gift of the 25th of October, 1923. The plaintiff intervened during the execution proceedings claiming title to the property attached on the basis of the gift just now mentioned. She was, however, unsuccessful and the result was the suit, out of which this appeal has arisen. Meanwhile, the grove was sold and purchased by Nabi Ahmad Khan, the third defendant in the suit, the second defendant being Ahmad Ali Khan, the husband of the plaintiff.

The deed of gift purports to be a transfer for consideration and the consideration stated therein is the sum of Rs. 2,000 as due to Musammāt Mehdi Begam for her claim of dower of Rs. 25,000. Prima facie, therefore, the transfer is a good transfer and should be given effect to unless the defendants succeed in avoiding it. The ground of avoidance is that the gift in question was executed by Ahmad Ali Khan with intent to defeat and delay his creditors and was for inadequate consideration within the meaning of s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. This plea in defence as against the gift has been negatived by both the Courts below.

The main argument in second appeal is that the lower Appellate Court having found in agreement with the trial Court that the total amount of the dower, that is Rs. 25,000, mentioned in the deed of gift, was fictitious, the only dower that could legally be held to be due from the husband to the wife was sharai dower and no more. The amount of sharai dower comes to Rs. 110. If these premises are correct it is further argued that the property in suit being at least worth Rs. 2,000, the consideration for the transfer in question must be held to be grossly inadequate.

The precise proposition of law to which appeal seems to be made in the arguments addressed on behalf of the appellants is that where no dower is fixed either at the time of marriage or subsequently, the wife is entitled only to sharai dower. If no dower is fixed at marriage it may be fixed at a later period. In support of this reference may be made to Jaddo Begam v. Sharf Jehan Begam (1) and to Bashir Ahmad v. Zobaida Khatun (2). In the present instance it was no body's case that no dower was fixed at the marriage nor can I read the finding of the lower Appellate Court in that sense. On the construction of the deed of gift and consistently with the finding that the amount of dower fixed at the marriage was not Rs. 25,000, it appears to me that the husband undertook to pay at least Rs. 2,000 in discharge of his obligation for the dower debt. This being so there is no case for fixing the sharai dower.

The rest of the arguments advanced in support of the appeal is covered by the observations of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Musahar Sahu v. Hakim Lal (3):—

"As a matter of law, their Lordships take it to be clear, that in a case in which no consideration of the law of bankruptcy or insolvency applies, there is nothing to prevent a debtor paying one creditor in full and leaving others unpaid although the result may be that the rest of his assets will be insufficient to provide for payment of the rest of debts."

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

A. N. A. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 102 Ind. Cas. 838; 4 O. W. N. 450; A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 194.

(2) 92 Ind. Cas. 265; 1 Luck. 83; 3 O. W. N. 105; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 186; 29 O. C. 108.

(3) 32 Ind. Cas. 343; 43 I. A. 104; 3 M. L. J. 116; 3 L. W. 207; 20 O. W. N. 393; 14 A. L. J. 198; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 198; 19 M. L. T. 203; 23 C. L. J. 406; 18 Bom. L. R. 378; 43 O. 521 (P. O.).

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE PATNA HIGH COURT.

December 12, 1927.

Present :—Lord Buckmaster, Lord Carson,
Lord Darling, Lord Warrington of Clyffe,
and Sir Lancelot Sanderson.

JEWAN LAL DAGA AND

ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

NILMANI CHAUDHURI—DEFENDANT

—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 159—Document not produced within proper time, whether available for refreshing memory of witness—Agreement for mortgage—Suit for specific performance—Equitable relief—High rate of interest—Interference by Court—Compound interest, whether allowable in the absence of express agreement.

For purposes of s. 159, Evidence Act, 1872, it is not requisite that the writing used to refresh the memory of a witness should have been admitted in evidence. Accordingly, a document not produced in Court within the proper time and, in consequence, rejected as evidence under the provisions of O. XIII, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, may nevertheless be referred to by the party producing it or his witness to refresh his memory if the document is otherwise within the purview of s. 159 of the Evidence Act. "The weight of the evidence, the objection to the document upon the ground that its not having been produced at the proper time renders its authenticity the subject of suspicion, and all other grounds upon which a document can be successfully impeached still remain open, but refusal to permit a man to refresh his memory by proper relevant contemporaneous documents might lead to a grave injustice." [p. 342, col. 2.]

Where, by an agreement for a mortgage, the defendant agreed to grant a mortgage of his immoveable property for the true amount of his indebtedness to the plaintiff, the Privy Council held that the property being identified and the terms of the loan being fixed, the document constituted an agreement which equity would enforce, unless there were circumstances which the Court would consider sufficient to justify the unqualified refusal on the defendant's part to carry out its terms. The plaintiff having brought a suit to obtain this equitable relief, their Lordships held that there was a valid agreement charging the property with whatever sum was actually due to the plaintiff, together with interest at the rate provided for in the agreement, and that a proper mortgage ought to be executed to carry out these terms. [p. 343, col. 1.]

Although the agreed rate of interest be high, it will not be disallowed by the Court unless there is evidence to show that in the circumstances the agreement as to interest is so unconscionable that effect ought not to be given to it. [ibid.]

"Rate of interest must vary with the risk run", and in considering the question of risk the Court should take into account, inter alia, the financial condition of the debtor and the rate of interest he has hitherto been paying:

Held, under the circumstances, that interest at 21 per cent. per annum on a mortgage security was not excessive. [ibid.]

Compound interest, unless agreed to, cannot be allowed. [p. 343, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from a judgment of the Patna High Court, (Dass and Adami, JJ.), dated the 22nd May, 1925, reversing a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Dhanbad, dated the 22nd December, 1922.

The defendant, being heavily involved in debts, entered into an agreement with one Kedarnath Daga (who was the plaintiff in the action, and being since dead, was represented by the appellants) on the 21st of September, 1920, at Calcutta, agreeing to sell to him one-half share in certain collieries belonging to the defendant for Rs. 7,25,000. At the time of the said agreement the collieries were subject to various incumbrances amounting to Rs. 8,00,000. The agreement, therefore, provided that, simultaneously with the execution of the conveyance, the defendant should execute an indemnity bond covenanting to pay to the plaintiff with interest all sums which the plaintiff might have to pay to discharge the incumbrances, and also that a deed of partnership should be executed providing for the working of the said collieries.

On the date of the agreement the plaintiff paid to the defendant Rs. 3,50,000 earnest money. Pending the investigation of title and completion of conveyance, the parties, in accordance with the agreement, commenced working the collieries, and the plaintiff from time to time advanced Rs. 33,128-8-3 for the working-expenses of the collieries, and at the defendant's request also advanced to him further sums amounting to Rs. 2,00,000.

On the investigation as to title, the same at first seemed defective. The plaintiff was anxious to get security for his advances amounting to about Rs. 5,50,000, and the defendant expressed his willingness to execute a mortgage to secure these advances. A draft of a mortgage bond was prepared.

Subsequent investigation proved that the defendant had a good title in the collieries, and the plaintiff wanted the sale-deed executed in accordance with the agreement of the 21st September, 1920. Differences arose between the parties as to whether the plaintiff had agreed to take a mortgage in substitution of his claim under the agreement of the 21st September, 1920.

Eventually the plaintiff agreed to give up his claim under the agreement if the defendant executed the mortgage within a reasonable time. Accordingly, a memorandum of agreement was drawn up and signed by the parties on the 5th of February, 1921. As the construction of this document was one of the main points for determination, before the Privy Council, it is set out below in full :—

- "1. Interest at 21 per cent. per annum.
2. Principal amount Rs. 5,50,000.
3. Any money over Rs. 5,50,000 and all interest to be paid on the day of the execution of the mortgage.
4. Costs of mortgage and in connection with the purchase due to B. N. Basu & Co., and Morgan & Co., to be paid by Mr. Chowdhury.
5. Hundis to be drawn for Rs. 5,50,000 by Mr. Chowdhury and to be renewed from time to time to the extent of the principal for the time being outstanding, the stamps on all hundis being paid by Kedar Nath Daga.
6. Mr. Chowdhury to pay Mr. Daga the sum of Rs. 800 on account of costs of establishment incurred by Mr. Daga.
7. The instalments of principal to be paid for April, May and June, 1921, to be Rs. 10,000 each instead of Rs. 20,000 each as mentioned in the mortgage.
8. Interest to be paid at 18 per cent. up to the approval of the draft mortgage and thereafter at 21 percent. per annum."

Thereafter the draft of a mortgage deed was duly prepared and approved of by the Solicitors of both parties; the plaintiff had the document engrossed, which was also approved of by the defendant's Solicitors. At the request of the plaintiff's Solicitor the defendant's Solicitor sent the defendant's cheque for Rs. 2,750 for the stamp duty for the mortgage deed and the engrossed document was duly stamped. Notwithstanding repeated demands on behalf of the plaintiff, the defendant did not execute the mortgage deed. Therefore, the plaintiff filed on the 12th of May, 1921, in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Dhanbad the present suit.

The plaint stated that according to the accounts therein set out the defendant owed the plaintiff on that date Rs. 6,05,642-11, and that the defendant had failed to execute the mortgage and to pay the instalments of Rs. 10,000 each for April and May, due as set out in the memorandum of agreement, dated the 5th of February, and in the unexecuted stamped engrossed document. The main prayers in the plaint were:—

(a) For a declaration that a moiety share of the properties mentioned in schedule A is charged for the sum of Rs. 5,50,000 with the interest, at the agreed rates which the plaintiff had advanced on account of purchase-money.

(b) For a declaration that under the terms of the agreed mortgage, the whole of the properties mentioned in schedules A and B are charged and mortgaged for the sum of Rs. 6,05,642-11-0 as per account given in schedule C.

(c) For an order that the defendant do specifically perform either the agreement dated the 21st September, 1920, and execute the conveyance in plaintiff's favour of his moiety share in the aforesaid collieries mentioned in schedule A, and also execute the indemnity bond and the deed of partnership, or that the defendant do specifically perform the agreement dated the 5th February, 1921, and do execute the said engrossed deed of mortgage as the Court may be pleased to hold the one or the other or both specifically performable.

(d) For an order that the defendant do register and otherwise complete the said documents, that the Court will order execution, and, on defendant's failure to execute, register and complete the same, the Court may be pleased to execute and register the documents on defendant's behalf.

(e) That a decree may be given declaring the defendant's indebtedness to the plaintiff to the sum of Rs. 6,05,642-11-0 out of which a decree may be given to the plaintiff as against the defendant for immediate payment for that amount as the plaintiff may be found entitled to get from the defendant.

(f) That a declaration may be given and a decree may be passed for such interest as the plaintiff may be found entitled to get from the defendant.

(g) That such declarations and decrees may be passed for specific performance, and otherwise as the plaintiff may be found entitled to get under the circumstances of the case.

(h) That on the default of the defendant to pay three instalments a decree may be given awarding possession to the plaintiff of the properties mentioned in schedule A.

(i) That such other or further relief may be granted as the plaintiff may be found entitled to.

The claim for specific performance of the contract of sale, dated the 21st September, 1920, did not arise in the appeal before the Privy Council.

The Subordinate Judge framed the following, among other issues:—

(5) Is the agreement of the 5th February, 1921, specifically enforceable?

(6) Has the defendant failed to perform his part of the agreement? Has there been any undue delay or laches on his part? Is the plaintiff debarred by his conduct from claiming specific performance of all or any of the agreements referred to in the plaint?

(7) For what sum, if any, is the defendant indebted to the plaintiff? Is the plaintiff entitled to claim interest, therefore, and if so, at what rate?

(8) Are the properties described in schedules A and B of the plaint or any of them charged or mortgaged for the claims of the plaintiff or for any portion thereof?

(9) To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled?

The Subordinate Judge's finding was that the defendant deliberately broke the contract and that he had absolutely no reason for refusing to perform it. On the question as to what relief the plaintiff ought to obtain, the Judge was of opinion that specific performance of the agreement of mortgage in the terms as set out in the agreement had been rendered impossible because the monthly instalments therein set out had never been paid. The engrossed deed, however, provided that if the defendant failed to pay any of the said monthly instalments of principal or interest, then, "notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained," the mortgagee should at his option be at liberty to call in the moneys therein secured and should be entitled to take possession of the coal, lands, and collieries. In the opinion of the Subordinate Judge the plaintiff was entitled in the circumstances to "substantial relief and not merely to a money decree." On the analogy of the decision in the case of Yashwantrao Holkar v. Dadabhai Cursetji (1) the Court thought that in justice and equity the plaintiff should be given the relief claimed in terms of the approved engrossed deed, for otherwise fraud and falsehood would be encouraged.

The trial Court decreed on the 22nd

(1) 14 B. 353; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 695.

December, 1922, the suit with costs as follows, namely, it declared that the plaintiff was entitled to the sum of Rs. 5,50,000 with interest at 21 per cent. from the 1st of April, 1921, up to the date of full satisfaction. It also ordered that the plaintiff should get forthwith possession of the properties as described in the schedule to the engrossed deed and retain possession of the same and work the collieries and pay the superior landlord's dues for rent and appropriate the balance towards the satisfaction of the dues until they were fully satisfied.

The defendant appealed against the decree of the Subordinate Judge to the High Court of Judicature at Patna. The learned Judges (Dass and Adami, JJ.) allowed the defendant's appeal and dismissed the suit. Dass, J., said in his judgment that "the terms of the mortgage bond are as hard and unconscionable as any that can be imagined, and undoubtedly shock the conscience of the Court," and that the defendant resisted the suit mainly on two grounds: (i) on the ground that his liability could not be ascertained except on an adjustment of accounts between the parties, and (ii) on the ground that he in fact owed the plaintiff Rs. 4,41,650 and not Rs. 5,50,000. The learned Judge (Mr. Justice Dass) also thought that the Subordinate Judge should not have allowed the plaintiff's witness Bishun Das to refresh his memory by referring to entries in the account books as these account books had not been accepted in evidence on the ground that they had been produced too late. Holding that Bishun Das should not have been allowed to refresh his memory by referring to the entries in the books of account, Dass, J., held that his evidence was valueless.

As the Privy Council approve of the procedure adopted by the trial Court in allowing the plaintiff's witness Bishun Das to refresh his memory from the account books which were kept by him and which were under his supervision, the order of the learned Subordinate Judge, dated the 6th November, 1922, is set out below in extenso.

"Certain account books as they were private documents of the plaintiff were not received by the Court when produced yesterday as they were not filed at the first hearing and as no good cause, in my opinion, was shown why they were not reproduced. The plaintiff's prayer for reconsideration of that order of the Court is rejected, the plaintiff's other prayer was that the witness

No. 3 (Bishun Das) in whose presence the entries in the kacha rokords were written and who saw the payments, may be allowed to refresh his memory by looking into such books and then to depose to the fact of certain advances of money to the defendant; the law on the point is that contained in s. 159 of the Evidence Act and also in r. 18 sub-r. (2), O. VII, Civil Procedure Code. Rule 18, sub-r. (2), O. VII, provides that a document which ought to be produced in Court by the plaintiff when the plaint is presented; etc., etc., and which is not produced, etc., etc., shall not without the leave of the Court be received in evidence on his behalf at the hearing of the suit. The sub-r. (2) of that r. 18 does, however, provide that nothing in this rule...applies to documents produced in cross-examination of the defendant's witnesses or in answer to any case set up by the defendant or handed to a witness merely to refresh his memory. Section 159, para. 2, Evidence Act, provides that "the witness may also refer to any such writing made by any other person and read by the witness within the time aforesaid (para. 1 of that section) if when he read it he knew it to be correct." It appears to me that the spirit of the law is that documents even though not received in evidence or inadmissible in evidence may be looked into by a witness who wrote such documents or in whose presence such documents were written and who read them, to refresh his memory. The learned Counsel, Mr. P. K. Sen, for the defendant has urged that to allow the witness to look into the rejected books to enable him to refresh his memory and to depose about the entries, amounts to permit the plaintiff to adduce secondary evidence of the contents. In my opinion that contention though plausible is not correct according to the law. No authority is cited in support of that contention. The witness is under examination, he says advances of different sums of money were made to the defendant in his presence and he saw entries of such sums made in the kacha rokord books, he does not, however, remember which specific sums were advanced on which particular dates. In such circumstances, although the plaintiff has not been allowed to put in the books as independent evidence, I think the law does permit the witness to refresh his memory by looking into the entries. I do, therefore, allow the witness to refresh his memory by looking into the kacha rokords books."

Commenting on the procedure adopted by the learned Subordinate Judge, Dass, J., observed as follows:—

"There remains the important question as to the alleged advance of Rs. 1,20,000 between 12th October, and the 2nd November, 1920. Now the plaintiff did not produce his books of account at the first hearing of the suit or indeed at any time until Bishun Das came to the witness-box. Bishun Das was examined on behalf of the plaintiff on the 5th November, 1922. On that date, as the order-sheet of the learned Subordinate Judge shows, 'plaintiff filed some rokors and *khata*s as per list with a petition stating cause for filing at this late stage.' The learned Vakil for the plaintiff tendered these documents in evidence; but the learned Subordinate Judge very properly rejected them. The grounds for rejecting the documents are stated by the learned Subordinate Judge in these words: 'Here, the learned Vakil for the plaintiff wants to produce some account books, on which the plaintiff relies and which he produces only to-day and as, in my opinion, no good cause has been shown for their production at this late stage, I refuse to accept the documents. The learned Counsel for the defendant most strongly objected to the documents being taken in at this stage. These are private documents and I do not think it will be legal and just to admit such documents now.' The rules as to the production of documents are stated in O. XIII of the Civil Procedure Code. Rule 1 compels the parties to produce, at the first hearing of the suit, 'all the documentary evidence of every description in their possession or power, on which they intend to rely. Now it is obvious that the first hearing of the suit does not mean the day on which the case is opened on behalf of the plaintiff and witnesses examined. It means the first day when the parties appear in Court after the written statement is filed. Now it is obvious that the rule has been enacted to prevent fraud by the late production of suspicious documents; and where the documents are private documents of the parties there is no reason why the rule should be relaxed unless, as r. 2 provides, 'good cause is shown to the satisfaction of the Court for the non-production thereof.' In my opinion the Legislature has expressed so strongly against documents being received at a late stage that, although it has given a discretion to the Court to receive such documents if filed at a late stage, it has limited the discretion of the Court by providing that the document should not be received unless good cause is shown to the satisfaction of the Court for the non-production thereof; and it compels the Court receiving any such evidence to record the reasons for so doing. In other words, the Legislature has expressed a strong view that there is suspicion inherent in the late production of documents.

"The learned Subordinate Judge considered the matter whether there was any ground to receive the account books tendered on behalf of the plaintiff; and, in my opinion, he exercised a wise discretion in rejecting these documents.

"But having rejected those documents, the learned Subordinate Judge allowed Bishun Das to refresh his memory by referring to the entries in the account books, and to give his evidence as to the advances made by referring to those entries. In my opinion the course adopted by the learned Subordinate Judge cannot be justified. The question involved in the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge to allow Babu Bishun Das to refresh his memory by referring to the entries in the account books is one of prudence and not one of law; and, in my opinion, it is wrong exercise of discretion to allow a witness to give his evidence by reference to a document when there are any circumstances casting suspicion upon the document. Now as I have shown, and as O. XIII of the Code of Civil Procedure establishes beyond doubt, the Legislature has certainly expressed the view that the late production of a document in itself amounts to a circumstance casting suspicion on the document.

"Now the learned Subordinate Judge has already rejected these account books on the ground, as I suggest, that their late production was suspicious. What justification then was there in allowing Bishun Das to refresh his memory by referring to the suspicious entries in these account books? Now the vice of the procedure adopted by the Subordinate Judge is this, that he has attached the same value to the evidence of Bishun Das which he would have attached to the entries if they had been proved in the usual course. The Subordinate Judge refers to a stray passage in the evidence of the defendant to the effect that he has no ground to suspect the plaintiff's account books. Grounding himself on that admission, the Subordinate Judge says as follows: 'Hence,' that is to say, as a consequence of the admission made by the defendant, 'the evidence of P. W. No. 3 which he gave after referring to the plaintiff's account books may well be believed and that evidence does prove that plaintiff did advance Rs. 5½ lakhs and also Rs. 31,128 odd for colliery expenses.'

"In my opinion, this is not a satisfactory way of dealing with the case..... I hold that Bishun Das should not have been allowed to refresh his memory by referring to the books of account which had been rejected by the Subordinate Judge on the ground, as I suggest, that they were suspicious, and that the evidence of Bishun Das is valueless on the point."

The plaintiff appealed to His Majesty in Council from the judgment of the High Court.

Mr. Wallach, for the Appellant.—The terms of the mortgage-bond are not hard and unconscionable.

The High Court should have passed a decree for specific performance of the mortgage on account of the defendant's indebtedness to the plaintiff. The trial Court was justified in allowing the plaintiff's witness Bishun Das to refresh his memory by referring to the account books which were kept by him and which were under his supervision.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Buckmaster.—Their Lordships have not had the advantage of hearing Counsel for the respondent on this appeal, but they have carefully considered the relevant documents, the evidence, and the judgments both of the Subordinate Judge of Dhanbad and those delivered in the High Court of Judicature at Patna, and they think that the appellants are entitled to certain relief refused by the High Court. The only question now raised relates to the agreement for a mortgage dated 5th February, 1921, and made between Kedarnath Daga, represented by the appellants, and the respondent. It is, therefore, unnecessary to consider the previous complicated transactions between the parties. The pleadings do not dispute that the purpose of this agreement was to arrange the terms upon which the respondent was to grant a mortgage of property, which had formerly been the subject of an agreement for sale and partnership between the parties. This is indeed made plain by the document which refers to the proposed purchase, and the letters which precede it. Following on the agreement a draft mortgage was in fact prepared purporting to carry out its terms, was approved by Solicitors on behalf of the respondent, and the mortgage itself was actually engrossed and the stamp paid for by the respondent.

The property being identified and the terms of the loan being fixed, the document of the 5th February constitutes an agreement which equity would enforce, unless there were circumstances which the Court would consider sufficient to justify the unqualified refusal on the defendant's part to carry out its terms. To obtain this equitable relief, together with other claims since abandoned, the plaintiff, represented by the appellants, instituted these proceedings, and the defences put forward upon the only point now material are in substance two: The first, that an adjustment of account between the parties in respect of certain accommodation hundis, signed by the defendant, for the plaintiff's use was contemplated, and that the mortgage was conditional on this being done; and secondly, that the terms of the agreement are unconscionable, oppressive, and substantially unfair. That accounts were open between the parties may, in their Lordships' opinion, be accepted; the reference on the document itself which provides that money, over five and a half lacs of rupees, is to be paid on the execution of the mortgage itself suggests that the amount of indebtedness of the defendant was not finally fixed. The Subordinate Judge thought that five and a half lacs were in fact due, and he found this issue in favour of the plaintiff—the High Court have found that the actual amount due was four lacs forty-one thousand six hundred and fifty rupees, and while declining to give the plaintiff any security for this sum, offered him a personal judgment for the amount if he would amend his pleadings by making a definite claim for this relief. This he declined to do, and hence the present appeal. Their Lordships have not been in a position to decide the question of the true indebtedness between the parties; the materials are not before them for the purpose; for it is plain that to a large extent the evidence would depend upon examination of the books of the various parties and the determination of whether the books themselves were trustworthy documents. There appears to have been the usual regrettable omission on the part of both parties to produce these books within the proper time, and in consequence the learned Subordinate Judge regarded with great suspicion the books the defendant produced, and he refused to allow the plaintiff's books to be put into evidence though he permitted him to refresh his memory by reference to their entries. This procedure has been most adversely commented on by the High Court, who regard the permission of the learned Judge as a wrong exercise of discretion. Their Lordships, however, think that the learned Subordinate Judge was right in the view he took, and s. 159 of the Evidence Act of 1872 is specific upon the point. The weight of the evidence, the objection to the document upon the ground that its not having been produced at the proper time renders its authenticity the subject of suspicion, and all other grounds upon which a document can be successfully impeached still remain open, but refusal to permit a man to refresh his memory by proper relevant contemporaneous documents might lead to a grave injustice. The High Court state that, in the circumstances, the evidence of the plaintiff was valueless, and they accept the defendant's view that the lesser amount only was due at the date of agreement. This controversy, as already stated, their Lordships are not in a position to decide, nor does it now become relevant, since the appellants are prepared to accept the lower figure, though asserting that the higher one is correct. The real question, however, was not so much the decision as between the two money claims but the determination of the issue correctly stated by the Subordinate Judge in the issues settled on the 24th August, 1921: "Are the properties described in schedules A and B of the plaint or any of them charged or mortgaged for the claims of the plaintiff or any portion thereof?" and had the defendant before this asked for determination of the real amount due and submitted to the execution of a mortgage for that sum, the litigation would have been ended except as to the question of amount. The High Court have, however, apparently regarded the question of amount as the determining factor of the whole dispute, and held that the claim for the larger sum was a gross and deliberate fraud, and an attempt to fasten on the defendant a liability only due by regarding as given for value accommodation hundis to the extent of 1 lakh 20 thousand rupees.

It is to be noted that no such defence was raised by the defendant. He disputes liability for the lesser sums, alleges, that the parties were not ad idem, and relies on the other grounds already mentioned, but he nowhere charges fraud; and it would indeed be difficult to establish seeing that the defendant was independently represented by Solicitors throughout the whole transaction. The agreement as to interest is certainly high, but there appears no trace whatever of the defendant protesting against it, no issue is specifically directed to the point, nor is there any evidence to show that in the circumstances it was so unconscionable that effect ought not to be given to the agreement for payment. Rate of interest must vary with the risk run, of which there is no sufficient evidence, though the defendant himself says in examination-in-chief:—

"During the last 4 or 5 years I had to pay Rs. 3 lakhs to Rs. 4 lakhs on account of interest. I have to pay at high rate of interest, i. e., at 18 to 24 per cent. per annum since September, 1920. The extent of my debt was Rs. 17 lakhs or 18 lakhs. My debt in September, 1918 or 1919, was Rs. 8 lakhs or 10 lakhs when I used to pay interest at Rs. 9 or Rs. 10 per cent. per annum. Since September, 1920, I have to pay interest at 18 to 24 per cent. per annum to the hundi wallas (who lend money on taking hundis); and in these circumstances their Lordships find themselves unable to say that the agreed rate was of such a character that they ought not to give effect to the agreement. It is true that in the defendant's evidence he objects to compound interest, but he says in plain terms that the rate of interest of the mortgage of which the memorandum was made on the 5th February was settled at 21 per cent. per annum. In these circumstances their Lordships think that there was a valid agreement charging the property with whatever sum was actually due, together with interest as the agreement provides, and that a proper mortgage ought to be executed to carry out these terms. The terms of that mortgage should be settled under the direction of the Subordinate Judge, but compound interest ought certainly not to be included, for it was never agreed. They have only to add that the fact that the draft mortgage attempted to go beyond the terms of the agreement in this respect might be a good reason why that particular mortgage should not be executed, but it does not destroy the plaintiffs' claim under the agreement, for nowhere was the binding effect of the agreement made conditional on fixing the amount of the debt, so that it would be wholly inoperative, unless this was first done, and, indeed, the defendant himself says: "Nothing was settled as to when there would be adjustment of account." It was, in effect, an agreement to give a mortgage for the true amount of the indebtedness, whatever this might be; nor does the fact that the action was begun before the account was settled deprive the plaintiff of all right to relief. The true relief to which the plaintiff was entitled was (a) an account of the amount due, (b) the execution of a proper mortgage to secure this sum. (a) has now become immaterial, but their Lordships can find no sufficient ground for depriving the appellants of relief (b), and as the litigation has been in substance for the protection of the plaintiff's security they think the proper order as to costs is that the plaintiff's and the appellants' costs should be added to the security, and they will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

K. J. R.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitor for the Appellants:—Mr. H. S. L. Polak.

Note.—1. This decision settles an important point of practice which often arises in the subordinate Courts as to the legitimate use to be made of documents which are not, for some reason or other, admissible in evidence. For instance, s. 49 of the Indian Registration Act, 1908, and s. 35 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, lay down that certain documents shall not be admitted in evidence unless they have been duly registered or stamped, and yet it has been held that such documents may be handed to a witness to refresh his memory: see 8 Ind. Cas. 233 at p. 235; 51 P. L. R. 1910; 6 P. W. R. 1911 Per Sir Arthur Reid, C. J., and Mr. Justice Rattigan, and Birchall v. Bullough, (1896) 1 Q. B. 335; 65 L. J. Q. B. 252; 74 L. T. 27; 44 W. R. 300, Woodroffe and Ameer Ali's Evidence Act, 5th Edition, page 899.

2. It may be remarked that the document, of 5th February was not registered, but as it was merely an agreement to grant a mortgage, registration was not necessary: see s. 17, sub-s. (2) (v), Indian Registration Act, 1903, and 49 Ind. Cas. 231; 41 M. 939; 8 L. W. 438; 35 M. L. J. 489; 24 M. L. T. 315; (1918) M. W. N. 811.

3. There is some conflict of judicial opinion on the question whether the Court will decree specific performance of a contract to take a loan of money on mortgage: see the authorities discussed in 49 Ind. Cas. 291; 41 M. 959; 8 L. W. 438; 35 M. L. J. 489; 24 M. L. T. 315; (1918) M. W. N. 811. In the case before the Privy Council, now reported, the object of the suit was not to compel the defendant to accept the loan, but to obtain the security for the money already advanced by the plaintiff, and that security having been promised by the document of 5th February, the defendant was held bound to fulfil it, and the decree which their Lordships passed in the plaintiff's favour was in effect for specific performance of the agreement for the mortgage: see Ghosh on Mortgage, 4th Edition, page 70 and Lord Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 21, page 75.—[K. J. R.]

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE SUPREME COURT OF NIGERIA.

June 27, 1927.

Present.—Viscount Haldane, Lord Atkinson, Lord Blanesburgh and Lord Warrington of Clyffe.

SUNMONU—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

DISU RAPHAEL, SINCE DECEASED (NOW REPRESENTED BY AWANOTU)—
PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Adverse possession—Joint family—Exclusive possession by one member—Possession for and on behalf of family—Acquisition of title under Statute of Limitation.

Where under the substantive law governing the parties, there is no individual ownership in land, the title to which is vested in the family, and the head of the family for the time being is a quasi-trustee for the members thereof, no title to the land can be acquired under the Statute of Limitation by mere length of possession. The party in possession (that is, the head of the family) is, in contemplation of law, holding for and on behalf of the family, and not on his own sole account. On his death, if one of his sons gets into possession, he too must be deemed to have got in consistently with a rightful title, that is to say, on behalf of his brothers and sisters and the family generally. Exclusive possession by him does not, therefore, confer on him a title under the Statute of Limitation. [p. 345, col. 2.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of Nigeria.

JUDGMENT.

Viscount Haldane.—The appeal before their Lordships comes from the Supreme Court of Nigeria, and that Court affirmed a judgment of Mr. Justice Pennington, sitting as Judge of the Divisional Court.

The appeal is that of the defendant, and the defendant appeals on the ground that he was entitled to enforce his right to the property in question. The original respondent is dead and he is represented by Awanotu, a daughter, but she has not appeared on this appeal, whether from want of money or otherwise is not important. Anyhow those were the parties.

The claim was to land in Victoria Road at Lagos, and the claim was that of the plaintiff, who is called Disu Raphael, now deceased. Disu Raphael said that this was property which belonged to the family, and he claimed a declaration that the property was the property of Sule Raphael, deceased, his father, and he claimed it for himself and for the rest of the family of Sule Raphael. The defendant, Sunmonu, was a half-brother of Disu Raphael. They were both sons of Sule Raphael but by different mothers. It was claimed at one time that Sule Raphael had made a Christian marriage in Brazil with a Christian woman, and that consequently, according to the law of Nigeria, his property went according to English Law, so that his eldest son, Disu Raphael, would have been exclusively entitled. This, however, was not urged at the Bar, and could not have been successfully urged because both Courts concurred in finding that the Christian marriage was not established. There was, therefore, a native marriage, and, according to the native law the property which descended, that is the estate, went for the benefit of the family.

It is very important to have clearly in mind what the native law relating to the land in Lagos really is. It is the more important because there have been various misconceptions of that law in decisions from time to time, some of which have been cited in this case, but they were finally laid to rest by the decision in Amodu Tijani v. Secretary of Southern Provinces Nigeria. (1) a decision of this Board. At page 404* in the judgment of the Board the title to native lands is explained. It is stated that it is the characteristic of the native title that what has been called in native cases where similar questions arise, the radical title of the Crown applies, and the right of the native is a usufructuary right, and it is a usufructuary right which extends prima

(1) (1921) 2 A. C. 399; 90 L. J. P. C. 236.

*Page of (1921) 2 A. C.—[Ed.]

facie to the whole family. Their Lordships are aware that it is possible by special conveyancing to confer title on individuals in West Africa, but it is a practice which is not to be presumed to have been applied, and the presumption is strongly against it. Prima facie the title is the usufructuary title of the family, and whoever may be in possession of the legal title holds with it that qualification. The matter is very well stated in the report made by Chief Justice Rayner on Land Tenure in West Africa. It is a report made in 1898, and the passage to which reference is made is adopted by the Privy Council in the case of Amodu Tijani v. Secretary of Southern Nigeria (1) which is called the White Cap case. Chief Justice Rayner says:—

"The next fact which it is important to bear in mind in order to understand the native land law is that the notion of individual ownership is quite foreign to native ideas. Land belongs to the community, the village or the family, never to the individual. All the members of the community, village or family have an equal right to the land, but in every case the Chief or Headman of the community or village, or head of the family, has charge of the land, and in loose mode of speech is sometimes called the owner. He is to some extent in the position of a trustee, and as such holds the land for the use of the community or family. He has control of it, and any member who wants a piece of it to cultivate or build a house upon, goes to him for it. But the land so given still remains the property of the community or family."

Their Lordships are aware that that was said of the title of the White Cap Chiefs. Their title was the question in that case, but the principle applies generally.

Sunmonu was sued in the way stated by Disu Raphael, and he pleaded possession, the Statute of Limitations, and also purchase and the grant of the primary title to it. The history of the primary title is this: Before 1895, when Sule Raphael died, he had bought the land from Agebodeh, who had a Crown grant of it dated 1866, that is, he had a Crown certificate; he had no conveyance. It does not appear to have been usual in those days for the Crown to make grants; they granted a certificate of title. That was acquired by Sule

Raphael from Agebodeh*, and he took over the Crown document at the death of Sule Raphael Sunmonu and other members of the family were in possession. Shortly afterwards the others departed, leaving Sunmonu in sole possession. In 1905 Sunmonu went and got a fresh primary title for himself. He surrendered the old one and got a new document comprising the land in question and additional land.

Now various things were set up. Sunmonu said he had purchased from his mother, the widow of Sule Raphael; but the Courts below agreed in pointing out that the lady could have no right to sell, and that, more than that, the Land Officer of the Crown, the Commissioner, would have had no power to grant a new title which varied or superseded the old one, and the new grant must, therefore, be regarded as made to Sunmonu on behalf of the family, and they also said that there was no evidence of acquiescence in exclusive occupation by Sunmonu to the exclusion of the other members of the family. The usufruct remained right through, whether they exercised it or whether they did not, and it was quite usual for somebody to be in possession as trustee for his family, and, therefore, his occupation was in contemplation of their right.

The Courts agreed in finding the facts as stated, and what they say is well expressed in the concluding paragraph of the judgment of Chief Justice Vander Meulen. The result is that Sunmonu must be taken to have got inconsistently with a native title and to have got in on behalf of his brother and sisters and the family generally.

In that state of things no Statute of Limitations could render any assistance to the appellant; there is no evidence about acquiescence, and the result is that their Lordships do not feel themselves able to disturb the judgments of the Court below, which are unanimous.

Their Lordships will, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be dismissed. As the respondent has not

*There appears to be an error in punctuation here. The passage should read thus: "That was acquired by Sule Raphael from Agebodeh, and he took over the Crown document. At the death of Sule Raphael Sunmonu and other members of the family were in possession".—[K. J. R.] appeared there will be no order as to costs.

K. J. R.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Lawrence, Jones & Co

Note.—This decision follows the principle recognized in such cases as Corea v. Appuhamy, (1912) A. C. 230; 81 L. J. P. C. 151; 105 L. T. 836 (an appeal from Ceylon) and 47 Ind. Cas. 626; 58 P. W. R. 1918; 64 P. R. 1818; 24 M. L. T. 389; 28 C. L. J. 437; 20 Bom. L. R. 1064; (1919) M. W. N. 1; 9 L. W. 123; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 8 (P. C.) (Hardit Singh v. Gurmukh Singh, an appeal from the Punjab Chief Court), namely, that "possession is never considered adverse if it can be referred to a lawful title."—[K. J. R.]

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE SUPREME COURT OF TRINIDAD AND TOBAGO.

July 21, 1927.

Present:—Viscount Haldane, Lord Atkinson, Lord Blanesburgh, Lord Darling and Lord Warrington of Clyffe.
THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA—
PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

JOSEPH SALVATORI—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDANT.

Construction of instruments—Principles.

The principles on which the Courts of Law act in construing an instrument in writing (and an Act of the Legislature is such an instrument), specially where its language is ambiguous, are these: In all cases the object is to see what is the intention expressed by the words used. But from the imperfection of language, it is impossible to know what that intention is without inquiring farther, and seeing what the circumstances were with reference to which the words were used.

Observations of Lord Blackburn in Wear River Commissioners v. Adamson (1), relied on.

Appeal from the judgment of the Supreme Court of Trinidad and Tobago, dated the 24th February, 1926, dismissing with costs an action brought by the appellants against the respondent upon a guarantee signed by the latter and dated the 23rd March, 1921. By an order of the Supreme Court, dated the 21st June, 1926, final leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council was granted to the appellants.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Atkinson.—[For the purposes of this report, only the following extracts are material:—]

The instrument of guarantee is, with the exception of the last clause of it, a printed document. Before dealing with the construction of its language, it is necessary to consider the condition of things out of which it sprung, and the objects apparently designed by the parties to it to be effected by it. It is only necessary to set out at length the first and last clauses of this deed of guarantee. They were as follows:—

Their Lordships do not think that the language of this deed is so ambiguous as the appellants contend that it is, but if it be so, then they think that the key to its construction is that laid down by Lord Blackburn, Wear River Commissioners v. Adamson (1). In the report he expressed himself thus:—

"...though no doubt the principles of construction of Statutes laid down by this House in the present case must have an important effect on those who have to construe that or any other enactment. My Lords, it is of great importance that those principles should be ascertained; and I shall, therefore, state, as precisely as I can, what I understand from the decided cases to be the principles on which the Courts of Law act in construing instruments in writing; and a Statute is an instrument in writing. In all cases the object is to see what is the intention expressed by the words used. But, from the imperfection of language, it is impossible to know what that intention is without inquiring farther, and seeing what the circumstances were with reference to which the words were used...."

Adopting that rule of construction, it is impossible, in their Lordships' view, having regard to the circumstances out of which the deed of guarantee arose, and in reference to which its language was used, to suppose that what was intended was that these broken and insolvent traders, the firm, should get no help from the Bank beyond leaving their account open, merely continuing to carry the liability, as Connell phrases it. The learned Judge, Mr. Justice Adrian Clark, said that the words "continuing to deal with Antoni Brothers in the way of its business as a Bank" must involve some bona fide fresh transaction between the parties." Their Lordships concur with him in this view. "They think it is impossible to confine these words to merely keeping the account of this firm open, that is, merely receiving payment from any one who chooses to pay in money to the Bank to the firm's credit...."

(1) (1878) 2 A. C. 743; 47 L. J. Q. B. 193; 37 L. T. 543; 26 W. R. 217.

K. J. R.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Ashurst, Morris, Crisp & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondent:—Messrs. Slaughter & May.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE HIGH COURT OF AUSTRALIA.

July 4, 1927.

Present:—Viscount Haldane, Viscount Sumner, Lord Shaw, Lord Darling and Lord Warrington of Clyffe
GEORGE RICHARDS LAFFER—
DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

FRANCIS ARNOLD GILLEN—PLAINTIFF
—RESPONDENT.

Contracts—Construction of agreements—Principles.

Where the question at issue is entirely one of construction of a particular agreement, it can only be properly answered after a consideration of all the surrounding circumstances, the position of the parties to the agreement, its subject-matter, and the apparent purpose and object thereof, and, in particular, of the provisions to be construed.

Appeal from the High Court of Australia.

The respondent, as plaintiff, instituted the present action against the appellant, as defendant, claiming damages. The action was tried by Poole, J., who by his judgment dated the 17th April, 1924, decided in favour of the respondent.

On appeal to the Full Court this judgment was reversed by Murray C. J., and Angus Parsons and Napier, JJ., who by their judgment dated the 12th August, 1924, allowed the appellant's appeal and ordered the respondent to pay the costs of the action.

The respondent appealed to the High Court of Australia, who, on the 17th December, 1925, by a majority (Higgins, J., dissenting), allowed the appeal and restored the judgment of Poole, J.

The present appeal was brought by special leave of His Majesty in Council.

JUDGMENT.

Warrington of Clyffe.—[The question turned upon the construction of an agreement purporting to be made between the Minister of Repatriation of and for the State of South Australia contracting for and on behalf of His Majesty the King, thereafter called the vendor, of the one part and the respondent, thereafter called the purchaser, of the other part. For the purposes of this report, only the following extract from the judgment is material:—]

"The question is entirely one of construction, and in common with all such questions can only be properly answered after a consideration of all the surrounding circumstances, the position of the parties to the agreement, its subject-matter, and the apparent purpose and object thereof, and in particular of the provisions to be construed."

K. J. R.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Sutton, Ommanney & Oliver.

Solicitors for the Respondent:—Messrs. Syrett & Sons.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE SUPREME COURT OF THE GOLD COAST COLONY.

June 16, 1927.

Present:—Viscount Haldane, Lord Shaw and Lord Warrington of Clyffe.

MANCHE ANEGE AKUE—APPELLANT

versus

MANCHO KOJO ABABIO IV—
RESPONDENT.

Land Acquisition Act (1 of 1894)—Rival claims to compensation—Burden of proof of title—Presumption in favour of person in possession.

Where land is compulsorily acquired by the Government for public purposes, and rival claims are made in respect of the compensation awarded for such land, the prima facie title to the money is with the party who was in sole and exclusive possession of the land at the time of its acquisition by the Government, and the onus is on the party claiming that he has a better or superior title to such money to prove such title.

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Gold Coast Colony.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Warrington of Clyffe.—The subject-matter of the litigation in which the present appeal arises is a sum of money representing the purchase money.

paid by the Government of the Colony for certain lands taken by them for public purposes under statutory powers.

Rival claims were made to this money. The appellant, the Manche or Chief of Sempe, claiming on behalf of communities known as Sempe and Akumaji, asserts that those communities are entitled to share in the fund. The respondent, the Manche of James Town and also the Manche of Alata asserts, that he, as Manche of Alata, is solely entitled to the fund on behalf of that community.

On the 24th July, 1918, the Divisional Court, consisting of the Chief Justice, Sir Phillip Crampton Smyly rejected the claim of the appellant and gave judgment in favour of the respondent. On the 16th May, 1924, this judgment was unanimously affirmed by the Full Court, composed of Michelin, J., and acting Judges Gardiner Smith and Aitken. Leave to appeal from this judgment to His Majesty in Council was obtained on the 18th August, 1924.

The town of Accra consists of three divisions, of which one is James Town. Each division has a Manche, or Chief, who is himself subordinate to a superior Chief called the Ga Manche. The respondent is the Manche of James Town.

James Town is divided into three quarters, known as Sempe, Akumaji and Alata respectively, each with its own Manche subordinate to the Manche of James Town. The appellant is the Manche of Sempe. The respondent, as Manche of James Town, claims to have vested in him all property belonging to any of the three stools of Sempe, Akumaji and Alata. This claim was formerly disputed by the Manche of Sempe, but was upheld by a judgment of the Full Court in an action by the present respondent against one Quartey.

The question at issue is whether the lands, the purchase money for which is the subject of the litigation were lands of the three quarters of Sempe, Akumaji and Alata in Common or of the quarter of Alata alone.

According to a tradition which appears to be accepted by both sides, the Alata people came into the country with one Wetse Kojo, from Lagos in or about the year 1642. They assisted the Sempe and Akumaji people in their wars with a neighbouring tribe, and as the result the lands of the Sempe and Akumaji people were placed under the stool of Wetse Kojo, and he and his successors thus became not only Manches of Alata, but also Manches of James Town. It was found as a fact by both Courts in the Colony that the lands in question were exclusively used and occupied by the Alatas, and it was admitted by Counsel for the appellant that the finding means that those lands were originally settled by the Alatas, the several villages and so forth being founded by them. This finding is accepted by the appellant.

It was further found by both Courts that by the custom of the Ga tribe land which had been exclusively used by the inhabitants of a particular quarter of James Town belonged exclusively to that quarter.

At the trial, the contest appears to have been mainly in reference to the question of the exclusive use and occupation by the Alatas, and it does not seem to have been seriously disputed that if this were established the result mentioned above would follow.

In their Lordships' opinion no ground has been shown for interfering with the decisions of the Courts below, and the appeal, therefore, fails.

The appeal might be decided on the further ground that inasmuch as the land was, when taken by the Government, in the exclusive use and occupation of the Alatas, the appellant must, in order to succeed, establish that he has a better title than the respondent; in other words, that the onus is entirely on him and that he wholly fails to discharge himself thereof.

On either ground the appeal fails, and their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that it should be dismissed with costs.

K. J. R.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. Ashurst, Morris, Crisp, & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondent:—Messrs. Monro, Saw & Co.

Note.—It does not appear that the law of Gold Coast is, in this respect, different from that which prevails in this country. It was decided by the Calcutta High Court as far back as the year 1868 that the person entitled to compensation is the person from whom the land is taken, i.e., to say, the party in possession at the time is prima facie entitled, until some one else establishes a better claim: see 10 W. R. 48 and 10 W. R. 391.—[K. J. R.]

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE MADRAS HIGH COURT.

December 8, 1927.

Present:—Viscount Sumner, Lord Atkinson,
Lord Sinha, Sir John Wallis and
Sir Lancelot Sanderson.

R. ARUNOHALA NAYADU—APPELLANT
versus

S R. BALAKRISHNA AND COMPANY—
RESPONDENTS.

Practice—Appellate Court—Finding of fact of trial Judge, not liable to be interfered with on appeal except for cogent reasons.

Where the trial Judge has had the opportunity of seeing the witnesses and hearing them give their evidence, he is in a much better position to gauge the truth and value of the oral evidence than the Judges of the Appellate Court, and, consequently, a finding of fact arrived at, on such evidence, by the trial Judge ought not to be interfered with by the Appellate Court except for cogent reasons.

Consolidated appeals from one judgment and two decrees of the High Court, Madras (Phillips and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ.) dated the 23rd April, 1924, reversing the judgment of the Subordinate Judge, South Malabar, dated the 29th September, 1920.

Mr. Dube, for the Appellant.

Messrs. De Gruyther, K. C., and Kurup, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Sir Lancelot Sanderson.—[For the purposes of this report, only the following extracts from the judgment are material:—] The High Court held that the evidence of the cartmen relating to the delivery of the seven red cedar logs was worthless, and that it was extremely unsafe to rely upon a receipt which the appellant's witnesses alleged had been given by the respondent's servant, which was Ex. LXII (c).

The learned Subordinate Judge, who tried the suit and who had the opportunity of seeing the witnesses and hearing them give their evidence, said as follows:—

"There is no reason to think that Ex. LXII (c) was not signed by the Moopan and that the witnesses examined by the defendant (now the appellant) are giving false evidence. I believe the evidence adduced by the defendant and find that seven red cedar logs mentioned in invoice No. 143 were received by the plaintiffs (now the respondents)."

Their Lordships having considered the evidence, both oral and documentary, on this question, are of opinion that no sufficient reason has been shown for interfering with the finding of fact of the learned Subordinate Judge, who was in a much better position to gauge the truth and value of the oral evidence than the learned Judges of the High Court.

In their Lordships' opinion, therefore, the appellant must be credited with the value of the seven red cedar logs, which appears from the evidence to have been Rs. 464.

K. J. R.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Mr. H. S. L. Polak.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. Douglas, Grant & Dold.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE SUPREME COURT OF THE GOLD COAST COLONY.

May 5, 1927.

Present:—Viscount Haldane, Lord Shaw
and Lord Warrington of Clyffe.

KOJO PON—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

ATTA FUA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151, O. XLI, r. 10—Security for costs of appeal—Security bond not properly executed—Authority of appellant's representative to sign bond—Appellate Court's duty to afford proper opportunity to appellant to cure defect—Adherence to mere technicalities—Defeat of substantial justice.

An Appellate Court made an order on the appellant for furnishing security for costs of the appeal within a specified time, and the appellant in compliance therewith gave security and executed the necessary bond, which was duly accepted by the Registrar of the Court. After various intermediate proceedings, the case finally came on for hearing before the Appellate Court, when the respondent took the preliminary objection that the security furnished by the appellant was not in strict compliance with the order of the Court, inasmuch as it had not been proved that the party executing the security bond on behalf of the appellant had authority so to do. The Appellate Court gave effect to this contention and forthwith dismissed the appeal without going into the merits of the case.

Held, that the refusal to hear the appeal merely on the ground of what might have been a mere technicality about the bond led to a failure of justice, and that the Appellate Court should have afforded a proper opportunity to the appellant, by adjourning the appeal, if necessary, to remedy the defect, if any, in the security bond. [p. 351, col. 2.]

Where it appeared that the security bond was signed, not by the appellant himself, but by a person purporting to act as his representative, and the question arose whether such person had the requisite authority on behalf of the appellant to execute the bond:

Held, that the appellant was entitled to an opportunity to prove by affidavit or otherwise that the bond was properly executed and that the party executing it had authority in that behalf. [ibid.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Gold Coast Colony.

The material facts appear from their Lordships' judgment.

JUDGMENT.

Viscount Haldane.—In this case their Lordships have the difficulty, which imposes the necessity of great caution, that the appeal comes here ex parte. Consequently they felt it right to look very minutely at what has been said and at the particular rules that concern it; nevertheless, on those rules and on what has transpired, they think that there is sufficient before them to enable them to deal with the case at once.

The appeal is brought from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the Gold Coast Colony, which had to entertain an appeal from the judgment of Sir Philip Cramp-ton Smyly, the Chief Justice. Sir Philip Cramp-ton Smyly had non-suited the plaintiff in an action on the ground of want of jurisdiction, and the appeal really involved the whole merits. It raised an elaborate question as to the title to native lands. When the present appellant proposed to appeal to the Supreme Court of the Gold Coast he had, of course, to conform with what the Rules of Court required; and he applied for and obtained from the Divisional Court conditional leave to appeal against the judgment of the Chief Justice, subject to certain conditions being fulfilled within one month of the date of his application. Among these conditions was this, that £100 was to be paid into Court to await any order as to costs that might be awarded to the respondent by the Appeal Court in the case of his success, or a bond was to be entered into with two sureties to be justified in the sum of £50 each. It was on the 7th July, 1922, that that order was made, and the appellant proceeded to enter into the bond prescribed by the order. There is no doubt, their Lordships think, that it was quite in accordance with the rules to prescribe this. The Rules of Court are enlightened and comprehensive and they give practically all the powers that the Courts here have. Under O. V of the First Schedule to the Rules there is a direction that "the Court may in all causes and matters make any order which it considers necessary for doing justice," whether such order has been expressly asked by the person entitled to the benefit of the order or not."

Then there is a series of further rules contained in O. XI, which are, again, very comprehensive.

"When by the rules of the Schedules of this Ordinance any act may be done by any party in a suit, such act may be done either by the party in person, or by his Solicitor or agent, if it can be legally done by an agent."

Under O. LIII, of Sch. II, the appellant has to give security for costs of an appeal; but that obligation is imposed only in very general terms. There are specific directions as to the powers of the Appeal Court to require security for costs, and then, generally, that they may make any order necessary for determining the real question in controversy in the appeal, and that there is full jurisdiction over the whole suit as if the same had been instituted and prosecuted in the Appeal Court as a Court of first instance, with power to give any judgment and make any order which ought to have been made, and to make such further order as the case may require.

That being the law and the plaintiff having been ordered to give security for the costs of his appeal, the plaintiff proceeded to enter into the bond which he was directed to execute. He was represented through the proceedings by Kwabena Asiamah and Kwabena Asiamah, who conducted the proceedings for him, executed the bond. When the bond was dated the 10th July, 1922, it provided security for the costs of the appeal to the respondent if they were given to the respondent, and then, it was executed by Kwabena and two sureties in the presence of Mr. White, the Chief Registrar to the Court, and it purported to be executed by Kwabena as the representative of Kojo Pon. That was as long ago as 10th July, 1922, and, whether or not the parties knew about it, the Court must be taken to have known that their Registrar had accepted the security.

The case came on by degrees, and finally it was reached for hearing by the Court of Appeal in April, 1924, and it was heard and judgment was delivered by Mr. Justice Michelin, Mr. Justice Hall and Mr. Justice Gardiner Smith upon the 10th April, 1924. These learned Judges accepted a point which their Lordships think they ought not to have accepted. It was argued by Counsel for the respondent, by way of preliminary objection, that the conditions of appeal had not been fulfilled; inasmuch as the bond for the costs of the appeal was not signed by the appellant, but by Kwabena, purporting to act as his representative. It was argued that the Court having granted only conditional leave to appeal, it was incumbent on the plaintiff himself to execute the bond, and Kwabena could not execute the bond, unless he had first obtained an order from the Court authorising him to do so. The learned Judges held that, as regards the bond to be entered into with two sureties to be justified in the sum of £50 each, no proof had been given of the authority of Kwabena to execute on behalf of the appellant; the authority of Kwabena ought to be strictly proved; and the bond must, therefore, be taken to have been invalid and that the defect was fatal to the appeal.

Their Lordships wish to say that in cases coming before them from the Dominions of the Crown, their first consideration always is to secure, if possible, that substantial justice is done. That may not always be possible. There may be conditions in the local law or in the rules which preclude the possibility of getting round technical obstacles and doing complete justice. But they think that in the case of the rules of procedure in the Gold Coast Colony there are no such obstacles,

The Court was invested with the widest powers, and it might have adjourned the hearing of the appeal until a proper bond was executed, or it might have said that an affidavit was sufficient; and that was the more incumbent on the Court because its own Registrar had accepted the bond executed by Kwabena on behalf of the appellant.

Under these conditions their Lordships think that to refuse to hear the appeal merely on the ground of what might have been a mere technicality about the bond was to fail to do justice as between the parties, and they are of opinion that the case must be remitted to the Court below to deal with it again, hear it, and, if necessary, get some formal proof of Kwabena's authority; but, as at present advised, their Lordships do not think that necessary inasmuch as Kwabena's authority was accepted by the Registrar, and inasmuch as he had acted right through, and nobody till the other day ever challenged his authority. However that may be dealt with by the Court below, if they think it necessary to deal with it at all. For the present it is enough to say that the case must go back and be heard out.

Then comes the question of what to do with the costs of this appeal. It has only been ex parte before the Board, and it may be that the appeal will not be fruitful; it may so turn out.

Their Lordships, therefore, think that the right course will be that the appellant's costs should be included in any costs he may recover in the Court below. If he recovers no costs in the Court below, he will not get any costs of this appeal, but he will not have to pay any costs. On the other hand, if he succeeds, he will get these costs. Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

K. J. R.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Ashurst, Morris, Crisp & Co.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S
SUPREME COURT FOR CHINA AT SHANGHAI.

May 30, 1927.

Present:—Viscount Haldane, Lord Shaw
and Lord Warrington of Clyffe.

CARL FRANZ ADOLF OTTO INGENOHL

—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

WING ON AND COMPANY (SHANGHAI),
LTD.—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Foreign judgments—Judgments in rem, conclusive effect of.

Generally speaking, it would be improper for a British Indian Court to review the judgment of a competent Foreign Tribunal. The broad principle applicable in such cases is that where the subject-matter is a res so situated as to be within the lawful control of the State under the authority of which a Court sits, and that authority has conferred on the Court jurisdiction to decide as to the disposition of the thing, and the Court has acted within that jurisdiction, that decision is conclusive, whether, according to the law of another country, it might seem right or wrong.

Castrique v. Imrie (1), relied on.

Appeal by the plaintiff in an action brought in His Majesty's Supreme Court for China at Shanghai to restrain the respondents from passing off cigars not manufactured by the appellant as if they had been manufactured by him, and also to restrain the user of certain brands or trade marks used by the appellant to denote his own cigars by affixing them to other cigars, and the user, in the description of such other cigars, of certain words. The action was one to restrain passing off and also for infringement of trade mark.

During the course of the litigation an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States from a judgment of the Court of the Philippine Islands, and their Lordships of the Privy Council approved of the pronouncement of Holmes, J., (of the United States Supreme Court) to the effect that a judgment of the Hongkong Court, whether erroneous or not, was binding on the Philippine Courts and that the latter were not entitled to go behind it.

JUDGMENT.

Viscount Haldane.—[For the purposes of this report, only the following extracts are material:—] "Meantime, in August, 1922, the appellant had sued Olsen & Co. in the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to recover the costs awarded him by the Court in Hongkong.

The trial Judge decided in the appellant's favour and the Court of Appeal reversed this judgment, holding that the judgment of the Hongkong Court was erroneous and not binding on the Philippine Courts. Since then, on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, an appeal from this decision has been allowed. Holmes, J., who delivered the judgment of the Supreme Court, held, in language of characteristic precision, that it would be improper for a foreign Court to review the judgment of the Hongkong Court about the rights of the appellant in the trade marks and names in Hongkong. In this he appears to have been applying a broad principle which has been fully recognised in this country in such cases as Castrique v. Imrie (1), that where the subject-matter is a res so situated as to be within the lawful control of the State under the authority of which a Court sits, and that authority has conferred on the Court jurisdiction to decide as to the disposition of the thing, and the Court has acted within that jurisdiction, that decision is conclusive, whether, according to the law of another country, it might seem right or wrong."

K. J. R.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Henry, Hilbery & Sons.

Solicitors for the Respondent:—Messrs. Stephenson, Harwood & Tatham.

(1) (1870) 4 H. L. 414; 39 L. J. C. P. 350; 23 L. T. 48; 19 W. R. 1.

Note.—This case, although an appeal from China, follows the principles recognized by the English Courts, and, as pointed out by Collins, C. J., and Benson, J., in 20 M. 112; 7 M. L. J. 76; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 79, in matters of foreign judgments the Courts in this country are guided by very much the same principles as those adopted by the Courts of England.

As regards judgments in rem, and foreign judgments generally, see s. 41 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, and ss. 13, 14, Civil Procedure Code, 1908. —[K. J. R.]

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 105 OF 1927.

March 23, 1927.

Present—Mr. Justice Cuming and
Mr. Justice Graham.

CARMEN—PETITIONER

versus

O'BRIEN—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 29-A, 528-A, 529-A—European British subject—Claim to be tried as such, when to be made—Duty of Magistrate.

A claim to be dealt with as a European British subject under ss. 29-A, 528-A and 529-B of the Criminal Procedure Code must be made before the trial or enquiry has actually commenced, and if it is not then made, it cannot be made at any subsequent stage. [p. 353, cols. 1 & 2; p. 355, col. 1.]

Per Cuming, J.—A Magistrate is not bound to ask an accused who is apparently a European British subject whether he claims to be tried as such, so far as cases coming within Chap. XLIV-A of the Criminal Procedure Code are concerned. [p. 355, col. 1.]

Criminal revision against the order of the Additional District Magistrate, 24-Parganas, dated the 10th January, 1927.

Mr. Swinhoe (with him Babu Bir Bhusan Dutt and Sudhirendra Nath Bose), for the Petitioner.

Mr. S. K. Sen (with him Babu Debendra Nath Bhattacharji), for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

Cuming, J.—The facts of the case out of which this Rule arises are briefly as follows. On the 18th of October the petitioner in this Rule obtained a warrant against the opposite party under s. 406 of the Indian Penal Code in the Court of the Police Magistrate at Alipura. On the 9th November the case was made over by the Police Magistrate, Mr. Mahmood Ali, to Mr. S. O. Gupta for disposal. Mr. S. O. Gupta is a Magistrate exercising the powers of a Magistrate of the Second Class. Mr. Gupta began the trial on the 9th November, when he examined one prosecution witness and adjourned the case till the 10th, when three more prosecution witnesses were examined. The trial proceeded also on the 22nd November, when the accused was questioned and the charge was framed. The learned Magistrate then asked the accused if he claimed trial as a European British subject. The learned Magistrate was apparently under the impression that he was obliged to ask an accused, who apparently was a European British subject, whether he claimed to be tried as such. I may point out here that such a procedure is no longer necessary, so far as a case which comes within Chap. XLIV-A of the Criminal Procedure Code is concerned. The accused apparently then stated that he did not desire to be so tried. His Counsel then filed a petition claiming to be tried as a European British subject. Apparently he subsequently waived this claim and stated that he desired to cross-examine the complainant next day, and his client would waive his right to be dealt with as a European British subject. The case was then continued on the 24th November, when more witnesses were examined and cross-examined, and the case was continued on the 25th and 27th of November and 4th and 21st of December. On the 21st of December the accused once more claimed the right to be dealt with as a European British subject. The learned Magistrate holding that he had already been asked whether he claimed this right and had waived this right, rejected the application.

The accused then asked for time to move the District Magistrate or the Appellate Court for a decision on the point. This, however, was refused, and the case was continued. The accused then seems to have moved the Additional District Magistrate for a transfer of the case to the file of a First Class Magistrate, the contention of the accused being that as a European British subject under s. 29-A of the Criminal Procedure Code he was entitled to be tried by a Magistrate of the First Class. The complainant, opposite party, contended before Mr. Blair, the Additional District Magistrate, that as the accused had waived his right to be so tried he could not now re-assert it. Mr. Blair, however, held that the right might be exercised by the accused any time up to the time when the Court was going to pass judgment in the case. He further held that it was open to him to revive his claim even though he specifically abandoned it. In this view of the law he withdrew the case from the file of Mr. S. O. Gupta and made it over to Mr. Alfred Bose, a Magistrate exercising first class powers.

The complainant has moved this Court, and she contends first of all that the claim to be dealt with as a European British subject, in other words, in this particular case, that the case should be heard by a First Class Magistrate, must be made before the trial actually began; and, secondly, she contends that once the accused has waived his right to be dealt with as a European British subject or in other words, to have his case tried by a Magistrate of First Class powers, he cannot revive his right.

The Rule has been granted on four grounds, first, that the learned Additional District Magistrate is wrong in holding that the claim to be tried as a European British subject, in a case contemplated by ss. 29-A, 528-A and 528-B of the Criminal Procedure Code, could be made at any time before judgment is delivered: secondly, that the learned Additional District Magistrate acted without jurisdiction in using the provisions of s. 528 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for the purpose of getting over an order which under the Code he could not do before the final orders in the case were passed: thirdly, that the learned Additional District Magistrate should have held that a claim to be tried as a European British subject, under ss. 29-A, 528-A and 528-B of the Criminal Procedure Code, had to be made at the very beginning of the trial, and if the claim so made was disallowed by the trial Court the remedy against the order disallowing the claim lay before the Court which would hear the appeal after a conviction or other order in the said case had been passed: and, lastly, that the accused having once waived his right, the learned Additional District Magistrate should have held that the accused having once waived his right could not re-assert it in a later stage of the same case.

The decision of this Rule turns upon the interpretation to be put upon ss. 528-A and 528-B of the Criminal Procedure Code. These sections are new, and hitherto have not formed the subject-matter of judicial interpretation. Hence the question may be considered as one of more or less of first impression. Section 29-A provides that "no Magistrate of the Second or Third Class shall inquire into or try any offence which is punishable otherwise than with fine not exceeding fifty rupees where the accused is an European British subject who claims to be tried as such." The point is, as I have already said, when that claim is to be made. Section 528-A provides that where, in any case to which the provisions of Chap. XXXIII do not apply, any person claims to be dealt with as a European or Indian British subject, or where any person claims to be dealt with as a European (other than a European British subject) or an American, he shall state the grounds of such claim to the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purpose of the inquiry or trial and such Magistrate shall inquire into the truth of such statement.....". Mr. Swinhoe, who has argued this case on behalf of the petitioner, has contended that these words make it quite clear that the accused must exercise his option to claim the privilege under s. 29-A of the Criminal Procedure Code before the trial actually commenced. Mr. Sen, who has appeared for the opposite party, on the other hand, contends, looking at the analogy of s. 451-A, that the accused may apply at any time before the judgment is pronounced by the Magistrate. He points out that under the old Code, under s. 451-A, this privilege might be claimed in a summons case at any time before the accused was heard in defence or in a warrant case before he entered on his defence, and the learned Counsel's argument is that, as no such limitations are put down in the present s. 528-A, the Legislature intended that the privilege might be claimed at any time before the judgment is pronounced.

Apart from the manifest inconvenience which must follow, if Mr. Sen's contention is correct, I think it is quite clear, reading the sections as we have them that the Legislature intended that the claim should be made before the trial or inquiry actually commenced. The words used are "he shall state the grounds of such claim to the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purpose of the inquiry or trial." I understand these words to mean that he should make his claim as soon as he is brought before the Magistrate for the inquiry or trial, that is to say, before the inquiry or trial is commenced. Mr. Sen argues from s. 528-B that the claim may be made at any time during the trial, because we find in that section the following expression: "If in any such case an European or Indian British subject or an European (other than an European British subject) or an American does not claim to be dealt with as such by the Magistrate before whom he is tried or by whom he is committed," and Mr. Sen argues from that that the claim may be made at any time during the trial before the Magistrate. I do not think that these words really support Mr. Sen's contention. I am inclined to think, reading the section as a whole, that these words refer to the case of a person who has been tried or whose case has been inquired into, but who has not claimed the privilege. Section 528-B deals, I think, with the case of a person whose case has reached either the appellate stage or the trial in the Court to which he has been committed.

I do not think that any useful purpose will be served by considering the sections as they stood in the various Acts at various times. The sections are, I think, by themselves reasonably clear. There is no doubt that the claim must be made before the inquiry or trial actually begins so far as a case which falls within Chap. XLIV-A is concerned.

That being so, it is unnecessary for us to determine whether the accused, having once waived his right to so claim, can revive that claim and be ordered to be tried as a European British subject. In the present case, not having made his claim when he was first brought before the Magistrate for the purpose of trial or inquiry, it was not open to revive or make it at any subsequent stage. In this case admittedly he made no claim at that stage.

The Rule is, therefore, made absolute. The order of the learned Additional District Magistrate is set aside, and the case will be re-transferred to the file of Mr. S. C. Gupta to be continued from that point where the learned Magistrate left off the trial of the case, and the case disposed of without any further delay.

Graham, J.—I agree with my learned brother. One of the points for decision is as to the stage when the claim to be dealt with as a European British subject should be made. The learned Counsel on behalf of the opposite party argued that that claim could be made at any time up to the delivery of judgment, and in support of his argument referred to the previous history of the Criminal Procedure Code, and to certain authorities.

It appears to me that unless the sections of the Code as it now stands are held to be obscure, we should not be justified in referring to the previous legislation. In my opinion on a proper construction of the sections of the Code, as it now stands, and in particular ss. 528-A and 528-B, it seems to be clear that the intention is that the claim shall be made at the commencement of the inquiry or trial as the case may be, and that if it is not then made it cannot be asserted at any subsequent stage. The question of status involves the mode or venue of trial, and it is in accordance with the fitness of things that the claim should be made at the outset.

The authorities to which reference has been made relate to the former Code, and in particular to s. 451 of the old Criminal Procedure Code, which has now been repealed. They do not, therefore, give us any assistance.

In my judgment there was a failure in this case to make the claim at the time contemplated by the Code, possibly due to the fact that the provisions of the new Code on the subject were not at the time appreciated.

I concur in the order which my learned brother proposes to make, and agree that the Rule should be made absolute.

A. N. A.

Rule made absolute.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE

No. 722 of 1925.

July 20, 1927.

Present:—Sir George Claus Rankin,
Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr.
Justice Mitter.

BHODAI SHEIKH—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT

versus

BARADA KANTA DUTTA—
PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Mortgage—Prior and puisne mortgages—Purchaser under puisne mortgage, whether entitled to unconditional decree for possession against purchaser under prior mortgage—Power of Court to order redemption—Multiplicity of suits, avoidance of.

In a suit for ejectment by a purchaser in execution of a decree on a puisne mortgage against a purchaser under a decree on a prior mortgage, the rights of the parties as purchasers under the two mortgage-decrees respectively should be determined and the plaintiff should be given a decree for possession only on condition of redeeming the defendant. [p. 356, cols. 1 & 2.]

Kalu Sharif v. Akhoy Charan Karmokar (1) and Bhagaban Chandra Kundu v. Tarak Chandra Basak (2), relied on.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Murshidabad, dated the 10th February, 1925, affirming that of the Munsif, Jangipur, dated the 18th December, 1923.

Dr. Jadu Nath Kanjilal, Babus Subodh Chandra Dutt and Tridib Nath Roy, for the Appellant.

Babū Gopendra Nath Das, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Mitter, J.—This is an appeal from a decision of the District Judge of Murshidabad, dated the 10th of February, 1925, which affirmed a decision of the Munsif of Jangipur, dated the 18th of December, 1923.

The appeal arises out of a suit commenced by the plaintiff to recover possession of a plot of 2 bighas 6 cottas and odd in area. The case of the plaintiff is that this land originally belonged to one Jhabu Sheikh who mortgaged this plot along with three other plots to one Bogdad Biswas in the year 1900. In 1908 Jhabu mortgaged plot No. 1 with the plaintiff. The plaintiff instituted a suit on his mortgage and obtained a decree in the year 1915, and in execution of that decree he purchased plot No. 1 on the 19th of August, 1916. Sometime in 1920 Bogdad obtained a decree on his mortgage with reference to the four plots mortgaged to him and in execution of that decree he purchased the mortgaged property, namely, the four plots. On the 9th of December, 1920, he sold this property to the present defendant. The plaintiff alleges that he was dispossessed by Bogdad—the first mortgagee. There was a proceeding under Order XXI, r. 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure at the instance of the plaintiff in which he succeeded. On the 7th of March, 1921, the plaintiff recovered possession, but he was again dispossessed in June, 1921. He brought a suit under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act in which he failed. Consequently he commenced the present suit for possession of the property, now in suit.

Both the Courts below have decreed the plaintiff's suit and granted him possession in respect of the disputed land.

In this second appeal it has been contended by the learned Advocate for the defendant that the plaintiff can only obtain possession conditional on his redeeming the first mortgage in which Bogdad, the original mortgagee, was interested and whose right has now passed to the defendant by his purchase. The question which we have to determine is whether the plaintiff is entitled to a decree for possession without any condition, or whether he can only succeed on his redeeming the first mortgagee or the defendant, who now stands in the shoes of the first mortgagee. But the lower Courts seem to think that this relief cannot be given to the defendant in the present suit. I think that the Courts below are clearly wrong. It is not necessary to have another suit in which the right between the plaintiff and the defendant as purchasers in execution of the two mortgage-decrees respectively should be determined. The matter can be determined in the present litigation and to avoid multiplicity of suits it is desirable that the matter should be determined in the present suit.

In these circumstances, I think that the decree of the trial Court as affirmed by that of the lower Appellate Court should be varied by an order that the plaintiff would be entitled to recover possession conditional on his redeeming the first mortgage within a certain time to be fixed by the trial Court. The case, therefore, is remitted to the Court of first instance for the purpose of fixing the time during which the plaintiff would be allowed to redeem the first mortgage of the year 1900 and also for determining upon what terms he would be allowed to redeem.

Rankin, C. J.—I agree. I should like to say that, in my opinion, the true law in this matter is laid down in the case of Kalu Sharif v. Akhoy Charan Karmakar (1) and in the case of Bhagaban Chandra Kundu v. Tarak Chandra Basak (2). As regards the point about the order under O. XXI, r. 100, Code of Civil Procedure, the plaintiff at that time was in possession and the order under that rule was made originally in his favour because he could not have been ejected by the first mortgagee. There was no need to bring a suit to set aside that order which was perfectly right. Since then the plaintiff got out of possession and he failed under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act and, therefore, he has come before the Court not merely on the basis of his own possession which is gone but on the merits of the claim, which makes all the difference. That makes applicable the two cases to which I have referred.

In this case the Munsif's order giving the plaintiff the costs of the trial must be varied and the order for costs before the Munsif will be that each party will bear his own costs. But the plaintiff must pay the costs of the two appeals and those costs will be added to the sum due on the mortgage, so that the plaintiff would have to pay those

(1) 62 Ind. Cas. 445; 25 O. W. N. 253.

(2) 100 Ind. Cas. 420; 45 O. L. J. 4; A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 259.

as a condition of redeeming. If the plaintiff, however, in the end fails to redeem, then he must pay the costs in all Courts.

A. N. A.

Appeal allowed;

Decree varied.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION Nos. 952 AND 953 OF 1926.

April 11, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Panton and

Mr. Justice Mitter.

KRISHNA CHANDRA DUTTA

CHOWDHURY AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-

DEBTORS—PETITIONERS

versus

DINA NATH BISWAS—DECREE HOLDER—

OPPOSITE PARTY.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 170—Patni tenure—Transfer of holding—Attachment of portion of holding under decree for arrears of rent against transferor—Claim by transferee, maintainability of—Transferee, whether representative of transferor—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XXI, r. 58.

Section 170 of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not apply where a portion only of a tenure is attached in execution of a decree for arrears due in respect of the whole tenure. [p. 357, col. 2; p. 358, col. 1.]

Chandra Sekhar Patra v. Rani Manjhee (1), relied on.

A person who has purchased the interest of a patni tenant prior to a decree for rent obtained by the landlord against the tenant is bound by the decree, and is a representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. He cannot, therefore, prefer a claim under O. XXI, r. 58 of the Code to an attachment of the tenure in execution of such a decree. [p. 358, col. 2.]

Surendra Narain Singh v. Gopi Sundari Dasi (4), relied on.

Where a patni tenure is transferred, until the transferee's name has been registered, the transfer does not affect the zemindar's right and, in spite of the transfer, the landlord may ignore the transferee and may continue to hold the recorded tenant responsible for the rent and other obligations imposed on the tenure. [p. 359, col. 1.]

Joykrishna Mukhopadhyā v. Sarfannassa (2) and Luckhinarain Mitter v. Khettro Pal Singh Roy (3), relied on.

Mr. Atul Chandra Gupta (with him Babu Jitendra Kumar Sen Gupta), for the Petitioners.

Babu Krishna Kamal Moitra, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

Mitter, J.—This Rule was issued on the opposite party to show cause why the order of the Subordinate Judge of Pabna, dated the 30th of July, 1926, refusing to entertain the claim of the petitioners under O. XXI, r. 58 of the Code of Civil Procedure, should not be set aside. The facts which have given rise to this rule are:—

That Ray Bahadur Dinanath Biswas, who is the opposite party to the Rule, is the 8-annas owner of certain mehals and he created a patni tenure in respect of 9-annas share of his interest, treating the 8-annas as 16-annas, in favour of the Sanyals; that on the 22nd of Falgun, 1317 B. S., the Sanyals sold the patni tenure by registered deeds of sale to the petitioners before this Court; that notwithstanding notice of purchase of patni by the petitioners, the zemindar brought a suit for rent in respect of the said patni against the Sanyals, who had parted with their interest in the patni at the date of the said suit and obtained a decree for arrears of rent on the 7th of July, 1925; that the decree-holder zemindar made three applications for execution, the last of which was on the 1st of May, 1926; that in this last application, the decree-holder, opposite party, instead of applying for attachment and sale of the patni tenure, under Chap. XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act, applied for attachment and sale of only one-fourth share of the said tenure; that the said one-fourth share of the tenure was attached in pursuance of the application of the decree-holder and the petitioners preferred a claim to the attachment of the said share of the patni under O. XXI, r. 58, of the Code of Civil Procedure, before the Subordinate Judge of Pabna.

The learned Subordinate Judge rejected the claim holding that the claim was not maintainable by reason of the provisions of s. 170 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. It may be mentioned here that the Subordinate Judge arrived at this conclusion 'not without great hesitation'. In support of this Rule, the learned Advocate for the petitioners has argued that the decision of the Subordinate Judge is wrong and that he has put a wrong interpretation under s. 170 of the Bengal Tenancy Act in holding that that section applies not merely when a tenure or holding is attached in execution of a decree for arrears due thereon, but also when a portion of a tenure is attached in execution of a decree for arrears of the whole tenure. It seems to us that this contention is right. Section 170 of the Bengal Tenancy Act runs as follows:

"Sections 278 to 283 (O. XXI, rr. 58-63) (both inclusive) of the Code of Civil Procedure shall not apply to a tenure or holding attached in execution of the decree for arrears due thereon". The words "tenure" or "holding" mean—the whole of the tenure or holding and not part of the tenure or holding. The intention of the Legislature seems to be that in order to attract the operation of s. 170, cl. (1), not only should the decree be for arrears of rent of the tenure, but that it should be executed as a rent-decree; i. e., by the attachment and sale of the entire tenure. It is true that the word "tenure" includes a portion of the tenure, but, in order to understand the meaning of the section, the general scope of the chapter in which it occurs must be taken into consideration. Sections 158-B (1), which is the first section of Chap. XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act, says:

"Where a tenure or holding is sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent due in respect thereof" (omitting immaterial portions) "the tenure or holding shall, subject to the provisions of s. 22, pass to the purchaser, if such decree was obtained by (i) a sole landlord, or (ii) the entire body of landlords, or (iii) one or more co-sharerlandlords, who has, or have, sued for the rent due to all the co-sharers in respect of the entire tenure or holding and made all the remaining co-sharers parties defendant to the suit".

In other words, the scheme of the chapter is that if a decree is a decree for rent, in the true sense of the term, then the entire tenure will pass in execution of such decree. Sections 160 and 161 deal with the encumbrances which a purchaser of the entire tenure cannot avoid except under certain conditions. Section 162 says "When a decree has been passed for an arrear of rent due for a tenure or holding, and the decree-holder applies under s. 235 [O. XXI, r. 11 (2)] of the Code of Civil Procedure for the attachment and sale of the tenure or holding in execution of the decree, he shall produce a statement showing the pargana, estate and village in which the land comprised in the tenure or holding is situate, the yearly rent payable for the same and the total amount recoverable under the decree".

This section also shows that attachment and sale of the entire holding was contemplated in execution of a decree for rent. It does not appear from any of the provisions of the chapter that a portion of the holding could be sold, in execution of a decree for rent. We think, therefore, the contention of the petitioners should prevail. The point raised, however, is not covered by authority. It should seem, however, that there are observations in the case of Chandra Sekhar Patra v. Rani Manjhee (1) which would indirectly lend support to the view we take. There the question arose that, where a rent-decree had been obtained and the defaulting tenure was attached, whether the provision of s. 170 could apply? The learned Judges held that s. 170 applied and made the following observations which are pertinent to the present question: "The lower Court has held that, as a matter of fact, he had attached the tenure in respect of which the arrears had been decreed. Some question has been raised before us to the effect that what was attached was not the tenure, but interest of the judgment-debtor in the land. Looking, however, at the terms of the application, we are not prepared to say that the attachment was not of the tenure itself."

From these observations one can infer that if it could be shown in that case that the interest of the judgment debtor in the tenure and not the tenure was attached, the Court would have answered the question in the negative and would have held that s. 170 had no application to such a case. Whether I am right in drawing this inference or not from those observations, for the considerations to which I have referred as to the scope of Chap. XIV, I think the Subordinate Judge's view is wrong.

Although s. 170 of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not bar the entertainment of the claim in the present case, O. XXI, r. 58 of the Code of Civil Procedure cannot govern the present case and the petitioners are not competent to prefer an objection to the attachment under the provision of the said rule. The petitioners, as I shall show presently, are representatives of the judgment-debtors within the meaning of

s. 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure and objections to attachment raised by a party to the suit in which the decree under execution was passed or by his representative fall within the scope of s. 47. Objections to attachment raised by a third party come under O. XXI, r. 58.

The tenure in question is admittedly a patni tenure. By s. 3 of the Patni Regulation (VIII of 1819) the tenure is "capable of being transferred by sale, gift or otherwise, at the discretion of the holder, as well as answerable for his personal debts, and subject to the process of the Courts of Judicature in the same manner as other real property".

By s. 5 of the Regulation, the transfer, however, is subject to the payment of fee and security to the landlord and until the conditions mentioned in the said section are fulfilled the landlord has a right to "refuse to register, and otherwise to give effect to such alienations, by discharging the party transferring his interest from personal responsibility, and by accepting engagements of the transferee".

It is open to the transferee to seek his remedy in the Civil Court to compel the zemindar to give effect to the transfer if the security tendered is not accepted by the landlord. But until the registration of his name has been effected the transfer does not affect the zemindar's right and, in spite of the transfer, the landlord may ignore the transferee and may continue to hold the recorded tenant responsible for the rent and other obligations imposed upon the tenure. As has been pointed out by Sir Omer Petheram, C. J., in Joykrishna Mukhopadhyaya v. Sarfannassa (2), that until the fee (as required by s. 5) has been paid, the zemindar shall not be bound to register the transfer and further than that, until the transfer has been registered, he shall not be bound to recognise the transfer in any way—that is to say, until his demand has been satisfied and the registration has been effected, the old tenant remains his tenant.

Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Luckhinarain Mitter v. Khettro Pal Singh Roy (3) laid down that until the assignment has been registered or the assignee has been accepted by the patnidar as his tenant, the assignor is not discharged from liability and such liability may be enforced by the sale of the dar-patni in execution of a decree against him for the rent.

In the present case the petitioners, who have purchased the judgment-debtor's interest prior to the decree for rent obtained by the landlord are bound by that decree and as such are representatives of the judgment-debtors within the meaning of s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. This view is in consonance with the view taken by this Court in the case of Surendra Narain Singh v. Gopi Sundari Dasi (4). The petitioners, therefore, being representatives of the judgment-debtors can raise objections to the attachment under s. 47 of the Code. They cannot, as we have already stated, raise objection to the attachment under O. XXI, r. 58, as they cannot be said to claim the property on their own account as a third party (not being a party to the suit or his representatives) could raise. It has been suggested to us by the learned Advocate for the petitioners that their application before the lower Court might be treated as one under s. 47 of the Code and dealt with as such, but we are not prepared to do that, as the objections under s. 47 might not stand on the same footing as objections to the claim under XXI, r. 58. The former class of objections may cover other and different grounds. We, therefore, discharge the present Rule and in doing so we observe that it will be open to the petitioners, if so advised, to raise objection to the attachment in question under s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code.

In the circumstances of the present case each party will bear its own costs.

This judgment will govern Rule No. 953 of 1926

Let the records be sent down at once.

Panton, J.—I agree.

A. N. A. Rules discharged.
(4) 32 O. 1031; 9 O. W. N. 824.

(2) 15 O. 345; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 814.

(3) 20 W. R. 380; 13 B. L. R. 146; 24 W. R. 407n; 3 Sax. P. C. J. 273 (P. C.).

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 2152 of 1922.

May 17, 1926.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chotzner.

KESSORAM PODDAR & Co.

PLAINTIFFS

versus

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA—

DEFENDANT.

Government of India Acts, 1915, (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61); 1916 (6 & 7 Geo. V, c. 37); 1919 (9 & 10 Geo. V, c. 101), ss. 20 (2), 29 (5), 32—Defence of India (Consolidation) Rules, 1915, R. 11A—Contract by Government servant—Liability of Secretary of State—Principles—Verbal contracts, validity of—Commandeering order—Act of State—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 80—Notice to Secretary of State—Contents—“Cause of action”—“Notice as to future cause of action”, validity of—Contract for sale of goods—Refusal to take delivery—Suit for damages—Limitation.

A contract on behalf of the Secretary of State for India must be in writing and must be signed by a person upon the permanent establishment of the Secretary of State who has been specially empowered in this behalf. Verbal contracts and contracts other than those specified in s. 29 (5) of the Government of India Act, even if established, have no effect. [p. 381, col. 1.]

Young v. Leamington Corporation (9) and other cases, relied on.

The Secretary of State can be sued as a body corporate as provided in s. 32 (1) of the Government of India Act. [p. 381, col. 2.]

The Secretary of State is liable for damages occasioned by the negligence of servants in the service of Government, if the negligence is such as would render an ordinary employer liable. The test really is whether the contract was a Sovereign act or was one which a private individual could have entered upon in his ordinary business pursuits. If it is the former, the Secretary of State is not liable, but if it is the latter he can be sued in the same way that the East India Company could have been sued for acts done in their capacity as traders and not as the Sovereign power. [p. 382, col. 2.]

A commandeering order is one which no one but Government can make, and being an act of the Sovereign power, the Secretary of State cannot be sued in respect of it. [p. 382, col. 2.]

Although the object of s. 80 of the Civil Procedure Code is merely to inform the defendant substantially of the ground of complaint and the words ‘cause of action’ in the said section should not be construed in a narrow sense, yet it is necessary to state the cause of action with some precision. [p. 384, col. 1.]

Secretary of State for India v. Perumal Pillai (16), distinguished.

Where a notice under s. 80, Civil Procedure Code, in respect of a contract for sale of goods alleged to have been entered into by a Government servant stated that no instructions had been given for the delivery of the goods and that unless the requisite orders for delivery were given legal proceedings would be adopted:

Held, that the notice was invalid inasmuch as it was in respect of a cause of action which had not already arisen. [ibid.]

A contract for sale of goods was alleged to have been made by a Government servant on the 26th

August, 1918. His superior officer issued a Circular on the 2nd February, 1919, stopping all further deliveries. A suit for damages for breach of the contract was filed in June, 1922.

Held, that in the absence of anything in the contract to show that the delivery was postponed to a later date, the breach of the contract must be held to have occurred in February, 1919, when the Circular stopping deliveries was issued, and that the suit was, therefore, barred by limitation. [p. 384, col. 2.]

Messrs. N. N. Sircar, S. M. Bose and S. C. Roy, for the Plaintiffs.

Messrs. L. P. E. Pugh and T. Ameer Ali, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—In this suit Kessoram Poddar & Co. sues to recover from the Secretary of State for India in Council, Rs. 23,35,835 together with interest Rs. 10,44,613-4 being the loss and damage sustained by the plaintiff firm by reason of the defendant's failure and neglect to pay for, or take delivery of, certain goods bought by the defendant from it. The purchases are said to have been made by one Charles Sutherland Waite, an officer of the Indian Munitions Board, Bengal, on four dates, namely, 4th, 14th, 17th June, and 26th August, 1918.

It appears that the Indian Munitions Board, Simla, was established on the 1st March, 1917, and the office of the Controller, Munitions, Bengal, was opened in June that year. Mr. Peterson of the Indian Civil Service was the first Controller, being appointed on the 30th June. He continued to hold office till the 19th April, 1919. Under him were two Assistant Controllers, Mr. Nixon of the Indian Civil Service and Dr. Meek of the Educational Service. Nixon left office on the 2nd February, 1918. Meek succeeded Peterson on 19th May, 1919. There were also four Deputy Controllers one of whom was Mr. Waite, who was appointed in November, 1917, and went on leave on 23rd January, 1919. His services were dispensed with on 20th February, 1919.

The plaintiff firm opened their metal department in March, 1918, and Mr. A. H. Ghaznavi was in charge of it. From May, 1918, Ghaznavi began calling on Waite for orders and it is alleged that prior to the purchases now in suit, he had received orders from Waite for goods costing Rs. 27 lakhs, for which payment has been made.

The plaintiff firm's case is that Waite's method of purchase was not to call for tenders from merchants having war materials to supply or to make out written contracts for such goods as he wished to buy but to take the list submitted by the firms (of whom there were at least 100 different European and Indian representatives), discuss the price and after discussion, put tick marks in pencil against such items on each list as he wanted, noting, in some cases, also the price agreed upon and that these tick marks indicated that he had bought the goods so ticked. Thereafter, when he wanted delivery of the goods purchased, he would send a delivery order through his office requiring the seller to deliver the goods at the Narcaidanga depot or at such other place as might be specified in the order, but owing to the congested state of the depots months often elapsed before such delivery orders were issued. He would also purchase goods by what was popularly known as a "commandeering" order. It appears that under the rules framed under the Defence of India Act, certain classes of goods such as corrugated iron sheets, galvanized plates, barbed wire and the like, could not be sold by merchants except under license from Government and when a commandeering order was issued, the goods had to be delivered at such places as were specified therein. Such an order could only be signed by the Controller of Munitions himself. In such cases the price of such goods was agreed upon but where there was a dispute, the price was ultimately settled by reference to arbitration. The restrictions under these rules were withdrawn in December, 1918. Waite had authority to buy both for stock and indent and could buy ahead for stock on the basis of the previous three months' requirements. In the exercise of these powers the plaintiff firm says that on the four dates mentioned above, he purchased the goods from it in the manner indicated. In some cases, delivery orders were issued and the goods were delivered and paid for, but in the case of the rest, no delivery orders were issued though the plaintiff firm repeatedly asked for them and it was always ready and willing to deliver the goods. Subsequent to the 26th August, it is said, that there were further purchases by Waite from the plaintiff firm and it is also said that in September, 1918, for instance, some scrap iron was bought and paid for.

The Armistice was signed in November, 1918, and on 13th December, 1918, Mr. Keatinge, Controller of Hardware, Metals and Implements, wrote to the plaintiff firm cancelling an order for seven items placed with them by Waite on the 16th August, 1918. The plaintiff firm replied on the 18th, denying the Controller's right to cancel the order and giving reasons which the Controller declined in his letter to accept. To this, the plaintiff firm replied on 3rd January, 1919: "The order was a contract and, therefore, delivery or non-delivery thereunder was to be regulated by the provisions of the law." On the same date, Mr. Peterson wrote: "The materials delivered at the time prior to the issue of the letter cancelling the order have been taken into account, but with regard to other materials it will be necessary for you to prove to the satisfaction of the Controller, Hardware, that these were in your possession when the letter cancelling the order was received by you." The plaintiff firm apparently succeeded in satisfying Keatinge, as, on the 15th January, he wrote a letter in which the following expression occurs: "This will, as explained by your representative to me, complete all outstanding orders placed with you by the Deputy Controller" (that is, Waite).

On 1st February, 1919, the Controller in a circular letter to all English and Indian firms wrote as follows:

"Would you kindly note that no deliveries should be made after the date of receipt of this letter or of any others placed with you by the Deputy Controller (Inspection) without first of all making a reference to me and obtaining my permission."

The effect of this letter was to discontinue all deliveries. The plaintiff firm's case is that it does not affect the previous purchases made by Waite for indent although he had been forbidden on the 20th August, 1918, from purchasing for stock. The plaintiffs' case further is that in November, 1918, they had received Waite's promise to take delivery of all goods purchased by him by July, 1919. The question of limitation would, therefore, not arise as Waite admits that the dealers would hold the goods till he called on them for them. This he never did. The plaintiff firm through their attorneys, Messrs. Morgan & Co., wrote a letter on 26th July, 1919, to the Controller giving particulars of the goods alleged to have been purchased by Waite and threatening a suit in the event of necessary delivery orders not being issued. A copy of the letter was sent to the Financial Secretary, Government of Bengal, Secretary, Munitions Board, and Controller of Hardware. In their letter to the Financial Secretary, the plaintiff firm gave the requisite notice under s. 88 of the Civil Procedure Code. Dr. Meek, the new Controller, replied on 29th July offering an interview but this offer was not accepted.

On the 22nd December, 1919, the premises of the plaintiff firm were searched by the Police, apparently with a view to prosecution, and all books and papers were seized. The documents were scrutinised by the authorities and Ghaznavi was asked for answers to certain inquiries which he gave. In the end no prosecution was launched. The papers were returned to the plaintiff firm in March, 1922, and in the following June this suit was filed. The plaintiffs' case is that during all this time Government never repudiated their claim.

The Secretary of State in his written statement denies that Waite was his agent or was competent to bind him by the alleged purchases or that there was any contract between him and the plaintiff firm in fact or in law. He denies the purchases by Waite and the plaintiff's loss by reason of the breach of contract. He avers that in February, 1919, the Munitions Board declined to receive goods or orders placed by Waite without reference to the controller. Thereafter, the plaintiff firm had notice and the cause of action, if any, is barred by limitation.

In para. 10, he says that the transactions alleged can give rise to no cause of action against the defendant inasmuch as the same relate to the exercise of Sovereign powers, namely, the purchase of munitions for the purposes of war, and do not relate to trade.

In para. 11 he says that the formalities required by law to create a contract binding on the defendant have not been complied with.

In para. 12 he says that for a considerable period prior to the transaction alleged in the plaint, the plaintiff firm had been systematically defrauding the Government of India by supplying goods at exaggerated prices under false weights and measures and quantities and that the quotations put forward by the plaintiff firm as amounting to a contract were part and parcel of the same scheme of fraud and can give rise to no cause of action.

With regard to the allegations contained in this paragraph, they are further explained in the particulars furnished by the defendant in February, 1925, as meaning that the plaintiff firm and Waite entered into a conspiracy to defraud Government in various ways by antedating the orders showing purchases by Waite purporting to have been made before his authority had been withdrawn and by short delivery.

The following issues were framed:—

(I) Was the purchase of munitions for the war an act of State? Can any legal liability arise in relation to such purchase?

(II) Was there any legal and binding contract operating under s. 20 of the Government of India Act? If not, is there any liability on the defendant?

(III) Did Waite in fact enter into any agreement to buy the goods in the plaint mentioned?

(IV) If so, has such agreement any legal effect to bind the defendant?

(V) Did the said Waite agree also that delivery should be made when called for?

(VI) Did Mr. Waite or any successor of his promise that orders would be given in due course as alleged in paras. 3 and 4 of the plaint?

(VII) If issues Nos. 5 and 6 be answered in the affirmative, is defendant in any way affected thereby?

(VIII) Was there refusal to take any more goods, and if so, on what date or dates?

(IX) Is the suit barred by limitation?

(X) Was the statutory notice duly served?

(XI) Was the plaintiff ready and willing to perform?

(XII) Was there a fraudulent conspiracy to defraud the Munitions Board?

(XIII) To what damages, if any, is the plaintiff entitled?

The original lists upon which the present claim is based consists of 11 sheets of paper marked at Waite's examination on commission in London (Exs. 1A to K). Number 1 is on a plain piece of paper in Ghaznavi's handwriting and the remainder are type-written on the office paper of Kessoram Poddar & Co., 15, Olive Row. Numbers 1, 3, 5, 6, 7, 9 and 11 bear tick marks or pencil lines indicating, according to the plaintiffs' case, that all the goods so marked were purchased by Waite. Numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 11 have various endorsements in Waite's handwriting which according to the plaintiffs' case are his orders to the office how to deal with the goods thus purchased.

I now proceed to consider the items seriatim.

4th June 1918, Sheet No. 1. Six out of the seven items on this page have blue and black pencil marks against them and against the item 250 tons corrugated iron sheets there is a note in black pencil by Waite "Make out order for this on Kessoram Poddar & Co., 15, Olive Row." For this item a commandeering order (Ex. A) was issued wherein Rs. 25 per cwt. was fixed as the price but the price allowed on arbitration was Rs. 32. Exhibits C1 to C5 show delivery of the goods and Exs. D1 and 2 and Exs. E1, 2 and 3 are the receipted bills. The plaintiffs' case is that the remaining five items were purchased by Waite at the same time without orders of delivery being issued so that the plaintiff firm is entitled to their value.

14th June. There is a tick mark in black pencil against an item on sheet No. 3, viz., 2½ tons galvanised plain sheets and 4½ tons galvanised wire. Below in Waite's handwriting appears a note "Make out order for 2½ tons galvanised sheets at Rs. 77 per cwt. Commandeer tin sheets against demand." The plaintiffs' case is that they received delivery order for 2½ tons galvanised sheets on the 20th June (Ex. F1) for which they were paid. In regard to the 6,445 cases tin sheets covered by the commandeering order they supplied in all 2,450 cases (Exs. C6 and 7, Exs. D3 and D6 and Ex. E4), for which they have been paid and they claim the value of 3,995 cases for which delivery orders have not been issued.

17th June. Sheet No. 2 contains an offer of 500 tons corrugated iron sheets for immediate delivery. Underneath there is some indistinct order in blue pencil in Waite's handwriting "Make out 'O' order for 500 tons. First ask how many 6 ft., 7 ft. (illegible), 9 and 10 ft. I will inspect sheets." The plaintiffs' case is that in spite of the commandeering order no delivery order was ever received by them and as they could not sell the goods so commandeered without license from the Board, the goods have been left on their hands and they are entitled to their value.

23rd August. Sheet No. 4 is a letter from the plaintiff firm offering Waite certain goods on which appears Waite's handwriting in red pencil "Put up cases relating to these." On sheet No. 5 there is a green pencil line against item mild steel round bars. Against the 2nd and 3rd items which are bracketed is a note by Waite "Have we met all demands." Against item galvanised wire there is a green pencil line with a note by Waite "Have we demands for others but 14." Against item galvanised barbed wires, there is a green pencil line with a note by Waite "Have we any outstandings." On sheet No. 6 against four items galvanised plain sheet there is a cross mark in red pencil against the first and fourth items with "Rs. 90" at the side. Against two items "Aluminium sheets" there is a red pencil line against both with "Rs 6/lb." at the side. There are red pencil cross marks against four other articles on this page. On sheet No. 7 there are 11 items mild steel sheets and a green cross mark against the 1st, 3rd, 5th and 7th items. There is a red line against item 5,070 cases tin plates. On sheet No. 9 there is a red pencil line against the first two items mild steel round bars, aggregating 566 tons. On sheet No. 11 there is a red line against 8 items of unequal angles and 5 items unequal legs against which Waite has written "Take this lot at Rs. 64" this entry being in red pencil except the price which is in blue pencil and there is a red mark against the last item 40 tons unequal legs.

The plaintiffs' case is that although this list was typed on the 23rd August it was actually submitted to Waite on the 26th August. On that day Waite purchased all the goods specified but delivery orders were issued in respect of only three items; 10 tons galvanised plain sheets specified in sheet No. 6 and 65 tons aluminium ingots on the same sheets and the first seven items of unequal angles on sheet No. 11 and for these payments have been received. As regards the rest no delivery orders have been issued. The plaintiff firm says that they are entitled to their value.

In support of these allegations the plaintiff firm has examined two witnesses; one is Mr. Stoddart who was Waite's assistant in the Munitions Board at Calcutta, and the other is Mr. Ghaznavi who as I have said was head of the metal department of Kessoram Poddar & Co. The firm appears to be in very low water at present. According to Ghaznavi, Kessoram Poddar has lost all his money and though he avers that Kessoram Poddar is making money again, Kessoram Poddar has not come into the box to explain how. Ghaznavi's remuneration as Manager, he states, was a quarter of the total profits. He was himself in the Insolvency Court from 1915 till last year (1925) when he entered into a composition paying three annas in the rupee when the order was annulled. He says in one place (Q. 465) that his pecuniary interest in this suit is Rs. 50,000 or perhaps Rs. 1 lakh, as he has still to pay merchants who supplied him with the goods. But here he seems to be inaccurate, as the result of his discharge from the Insolvency Court frees him from all liability to his creditors. He was questioned as regards certain dealings which he had with regard to getting a member of the Bar to stand security for him.

475 Q.—You have got a brother?

A.—Yes.

476 Q.—One of you got a member of the Bar to stand security for you or for him as the case may be and then when you were called upon you said, all your property was wagf?

A.—That is not so.

477 Q.—Who was it?

A.—Myself.

478 Q.—Did you get a member of the Bar to stand surety for you?

A.—He is a particular friend of mine (QR). Not only stand surety but he paid money from his own pocket to save me to a large extent.

479 Q.—You represented that you were giving security on your estate in Dacca?

A.—Not a bit of it. He stood guarantee.

480 Q.—Did you set up that these estates could not be liable for your personal debts because they were wagf?

A.—No.

481 Q.—Did you ever raise the question of wagf about that?

A.—No.

482 Q.—Did not the Allahabad Bank buy your properties from the Official Assignee and didn't you set up that those were wagf?

A.—Not those properties. You are making a mistake. The Bank wanted to sell properties which were really wagf. It was a mistake on their part. It was pointed out to them and they did not press it against that property when they found out.

483 Q.—There was a question with a large amount of property which was claimed by creditors or purchasers?

A.—No creditors claimed these properties.

484 Q.—Did the Allahabad Bank say there were certain properties which were liable to them and you said they were wagf?

A.—I never said it was wagf. They themselves moved in the matter.

485 Q.—Then your surety was left to meet the liabilities?

A.—Not with the Allahabad Bank.

It is plain from these admissions that Ghaznavi is not a man of high financial integrity and evidently he is vitally interested in the result of this suit. Stoddart was appointed Waite's assistant on the 1st May, 1918, and was made permanent a month later. He explains his duties in answer to Q. 12: they were generally to assist Capt. Waite in his work as well as to make out orders, indents, keep records and look after the office generally and though this apparently was not part of his duties, he states that he kept a private record of his own of all purchases made by Waite in the office (Q. 26). Before the war Stoddart was employed in the United States of America as verifying officer on the lakes which he explained means that he counted the number of packages at the different steamer stations on the lakes and this he did for 4 months when he joined the war. After the Munitions Board was dissolved he has taken up as he says in answer to Q. 476 the work of broker in Dodge and Seymour, Waterloc Street. He goes round, he says, for indents and he gets a salary of Rs. 150 a month and commission of 1 per cent; and if he works really hard he may make Rs. 300 a month. Thus it is apparent that neither from his previous career nor for his present occupation can it be inferred that Stoddart is beyond all question incorruptible. That the Government at one time did not regard him as such is proved by the fact that he was prosecuted with some others in connection with the Munitions Board frauds.

175 Q.—I believe there was a prosecution against you at the instance of Government?

A.—Yes.

177 Q.—Do you now remember when the prosecution started?

A.—You are taking me very far back.

178 Q.—Were you convicted or acquitted?

A.—To tell you the truth I never took the trouble to find out. I did not know. I was not convicted anyhow. I have never read the judgment.

179 Q.—You were neither sent to Jail nor fined?

A.—No.

A person who can give answers of this kind seems to me to stand self-condemned. The impression he conveyed to my mind was that he had come to Court with a carefully rehearsed story which was founded partly on fact and largely on fiction, and that he had made up his mind never to return an answer which might be construed as in any way conflicting with that story and further, that his eagerness to aid the plaintiff was so great that he was sometimes led into most palpable absurdities, as for instance, when he said that not only Waite but he and others of the subordinate staff including even the head clerk of the office were competent to commandeer goods at their pleasure.

I now proceed to consider his evidence. He first deals with Waite's system.

15 Q.—What was his (Waite's) system?

A.—He generally made marks on papers submitted by different firms or else he made remarks on the indents himself or he told us "Make out order for so and so" verbally which was majority of cases.

20 Q.—Confine yourself to hardware and metals and things of that kind. Was Captain Waite buying only for stock or also for indents?

A.—For stock, indent and also for commandeering.

He is not sure if he saw the lists Exs. 1A to K; but he said that such lists after being marked were handed to him.

32 Q.—What would you do when you received the lists?

A.—I generally marked down those items that Capt. Waite marked off in pencil which was a sign to me that he had accepted these goods from merchants as purchased.

33 Q.—You would enter that in what book?

A.—In my private book. I had several private books.

34 Q.—Why do you call it a private book?

A.—Because Capt. Waite was not a business man and I kept it for my own information so as to save time when I wanted any information of my own.

He was asked about Waite's endorsements.

43 Q.—Assume that you were dealing with this list and you read this endorsement "Have we any outstanding"—what would that convey to you?

A.—Several meanings but the principal one was that we had given orders to several people but who had failed to supply although they said they had stocked these goods and on their failure to supply we bill from here or if we had the goods already booked against anything else, this was the only information to Mr. Waite asking him whether he need indent for more.

This answer was given not in cross-examination as might be supposed but in answer to learned Counsel in chief. He was further asked about other endorsements made by Waite such as "Have we demands for others but 14", "Have we met all demands", "Put up cases" and so on. The witness had here got into unexpectedly deep water and he had to take refuge in the lame explanation that all these endorsements mean precisely the same thing.

55 Q.—Would Capt. Waite ask you to put up cases referring to these demands unless he had got the goods?

A.—What he meant really was that he had purchased the goods. The purchase of the goods had nothing to do with putting up cases.

That is the whole burden of this witness' song that Waite purchased first and enquired afterwards whether it was necessary for him to make purchases.

In cross-examination he was questioned on these answers.

226 Q.—You say that these all mean the same thing: "Have we met all demands", "Have we demands for others but 14", "Have we any outstandings"—You suggest that in munition language all that means the same thing?

A.—Yes.

227 Q.—"Put up cases referring to these demands"—that all means the same thing?

A.—Yes, which means regarding all the items. (Q. R.) that means "Put up cases against all the items that the man has present, every bit."

223 Q.—What I am suggesting is this: Apart from munition language, "Put up cases" means "let me see the indents?"

A.—Indents and demands and deliveries.

233 Q.—What I suggest is this: What he wanted to know is what indents had been made and how far these indents had been complied with?

A.—Yes.

234 Q.—You suggest that he asked for that information as to what indents they were and whether they had been complied with or not, but he bought the goods before he got it?

A.—Yes.

The witness was taken through the lists (Exs. A to K) and in regard to each item ticked he said that such item had been purchased irrespective of the endorsements at the side. He was cross-examined on several of these points:—

270 Q.—Did you in these books take into account anything but the orders that were issued?

A.—That is all that was noted in those books, the goods on which demands were made for delivery.

273 Q.—You were telling me that there are two books. You now say when you made out an order it was entered in this book. I am suggesting to you that the only thing, goods, which were entered in the indent book or in the stock book were goods for which the office had issued orders. Is that correct?

A.—Yes, that is correct.

274 Q.—These were official books?

A.—Yes.

275 Q.—For the purpose of official books, therefore, the office took no account of Waite's ticking on the stock list or of your private book?

A.—The office took note of my book when it was necessary for their help.

276 Q.—What you told me is this. The office is keeping two official books, in those books the office is entering the orders that have been issued and nothing else. I am suggesting to you that that being the fact, the office had no concern with Waite's ticks on lists? Is that correct?

A.—The office did not make any special note of Waite's ticks for the simple reason that these papers were filed in the office in a file called the tender book. Any time the office or Waite wished to refer to it was always brought forward.

He was asked (Q. 279) whether for the purposes of entering up the order it would not be necessary to refer to his private book at all and he answered "No".

With regard to the endorsements he was asked:

450 Q.—I want to put to you another reading of this, "Have we met all demands;" I suggest to you what it means is that I am aware there is some indent or demand. I don't know whether it is fully met or not: please ascertain?

A.—The translation first is, the line is that we have purchased them and the remark is just what you have just said.

453 Q.—I suggest to you that without enquiring first he would not possibly purchase?

A.—He has purchased the lot.

617 Q.—You said when Mr. Waite put a tick the goods were purchased and when you saw a tick, you put it in your private book but when it got to the regular office staff and the office records they only took account of the orders that were issued?

A.—Yes.

618 Q.—They did not trouble about the ticks?

A.—No.

619 Q.—I suggest to you that the real thing was the order?

A.—No. I think the contract is the real order.

620 Q.—I suggest that there was nothing your office took any notice of, except the actual issue of the order?

A.—No; they took notice of the ticks. Then we were aware that these things were taken and we had to pull from them.

It is perfectly plain from this evidence, though it had to be wrung from the witness by reluctant admissions, that the only goods which were considered to have been bought by Waite were those for which delivery orders were issued. The witness was asked about the commandeering orders which were issued on certain items. He was shown Ex. A and the endorsements thereon "Make out C order for 500 tons, first ask how many 6 ft., 7 ft. (illegible), 9 ft., 10 ft. I will inspect sheets, C. S. W."

96 Q.—When you would get such a note of Waite you have already said that you took it to mean that the goods have been taken?

A.—Yes.

97 Q.—Make out C order—that means a commandeering order?

A.—Yes.

98 Q.—Who would make that out?

A.—We would make it out and the Controller would sign it.

99 Q.—That would not be signed by Waite?

A.—No.

100 Q.—So far as dealers were concerned, the people who were selling, who was the person who used to tell them that such goods of theirs have been commandeered?

A.—So far as I was concerned, I could do that myself; if I saw any goods which I thought we required I would make enquiries.....

Then he was asked with regard to the commandeering order for 6,445 cases. "Commandeer tin sheets against demand" in the entry of the 14th June.

109 Q.—What does that mean?

A.—It means that these 6,445 cases were commandeered by the Munitions Board and if there was any demand from Simla and we had not sufficient stock in the depot he ordered more. Most probably Mr. Ghaznavi may have told Capt. Waite that he had some more in stock otherwise how could he demand more, if he had not any more.

In cross examination he was asked—

421 Q.—"Against demand"—what does that mean? Does it mean against demands that we have or invoices that we have or does it mean if there is a demand?

A.—It means that if we have any other demands beyond the 6,445 cases we were to put a note up to him to say that more was required.

422 Q.—Then you say that "commandeer tin sheets against demand" means that the whole of the 6,445 cases is to be commandeered and as much more as you want?

A.—If we had demands for them.

424 Q.—I am suggesting on the contrary that it means that these sheets are to be commandeered if there is a demand and not otherwise?

A.—I don't agree.

In my judgment there is no doubt that when these endorsements were made at the side of the items they meant exactly what they said and no more or no less. When a person who is in possession of his senses says "have we any outstanding" it means "are there indents which we have still to satisfy" but for it to be supposed that a person will buy goods in enormous quantities without knowing whether any demand exists seems to me absolutely unwarrantable. Stoddart was further asked whether there was any other method of purchase than by ticking and he said that people sometimes handed in their lists and left them with him.

698 Q.—You said that Waite would put a tick on these and these orders would be issued like that and sent to these firms—that was the routine?

A.—Yes.

699 Q.—There would be no direct conversation or purchase by conversation?

A.—Sometimes there would be.

700 Q.—As a rule these firms used to hand their lists in and await the result without seeing Waite?

A.—Yes.

701 Q.—With regard to those persons there was no buying by tick marks?

A.—Oh yes, they bought by tick marks.

702 Q.—If they did not get tick marks?

A.—Then it was understood that the goods were not taken.

703 Q.—They put in their lists and waited for these orders to come?

A.—Yes and there were tick marks. If there were no tick marks, they would know the goods were not taken.

704 Q.—I am putting to you the case of the Russa Engineering—they send you a list saying—we have such and such goods at such price and are waiting delivery—they get an order form—they never see Waite. Do you say that these persons bought by tick marks?

A.—No, they get orders direct.

705 Q.—They did not buy by tick marks?

A.—No.

706 Q.—Therefore you could quite well buy by putting in your list and getting these orders?

That would be a feasible way of doing business?

A.—I don't follow.

707 Q.—I am suggesting that these people had nothing to do with buying by ticking?

A.—You are referring to a statement that

I made where I said that firms that were busy came at a time when Waite could not be approached, and I went in person and produced the slips to him and he would say—we don't require this or we will take this. Accordingly I would advise the party who was waiting at the waiting room that such and such was the case.

It is not necessary in my judgment to enter into minute particulars of all that this witness has said. He has clung to his story from the beginning to the end, and the opinion that I formed of his evidence and the way he gave it was that he was wholly unreliable.

I now proceed to consider Mr. Ghaznavi's testimony. Mr. Ghaznavi is a clever business man with all his wits about him. His demeanour in the box showed that he suffered from no lack of confidence and as he has everything to gain and nothing to lose by the result of the case, he has some justification for his attitude.

His evidence covers very much the same ground as Stoddart's, but is necessarily much more comprehensive. He repeats the story about Waite's practice of purchase by ticking and ignores Waite's endorsements showing that certain enquiries were to be made before delivery orders were to issue on the ground that these were merely directions to the office as to what steps they were to take and did not affect the prior purchase of the goods which had been made by the tick marks at the side. He says in answer to Q. 16 that his firm has already recovered about Rs. 27 lakhs for supplying materials which Waite purchased by putting cross marks or a line against a particular item. He further says that the arrangement between them was that delivery should be given only when Waite called for it. He says that about a hundred firms sold their goods in the same way that he professes to have done. I may note in passing that he has not examined any member of such firm to support his story. He was taken through the lists (Exs. 1A—K) and stated in detail the various goods which Waite purchased by ticking. I have already set these out in full.

With regard to the memorandum of 4th June he was asked about the commandeering order (Ex. A) as showing that he delivered the goods covered by it and was paid for it—a statement which is supported by the challans and the bills.

As regards the memorandum of 14th June he says that Waite told him that he wanted the tin sheets, of which there were 6,445 cases, badly, and he wrote "Commandeer tin sheets against demands," and also took the remaining $2\frac{1}{2}$ and $4\frac{1}{2}$ tons. As regards the $2\frac{1}{2}$ tons witness has proved that he delivered the goods and was paid for them. As regards the 6,445 cases he has proved that he had delivered 2,450 cases and had been paid for these.

With regard to the memorandum of 17th June he says he offered 500 tons, upon which Waite said "I take these" and wrote out "Make out commandeering order." This was never received with the result that he has not been able to dispose of the goods.

As regards the memorandum of 23rd August he says that on sheet No. 5 of the list Waite took all the articles marked in green pencil, on sheet No. 6 he took all the articles marked with red cross or red lines and the words "Rs. 90" and "Rs. 6 alb" are in Waite's handwriting. He says that all these 10 tons galvanised plain sheets were delivered and paid for at the rate of Rs. 90 and that the 65 tons aluminium ingots were also delivered and paid for. On sheet No. 7 Waite took the articles marked with a cross in green pencil or with a red line. On sheet No. 9 he took the first two items. On page 11 he took all the articles marked with a red line and the item at the foot marked with a cross, and he wrote "take this lot No. 64" against all but the last item. He says that delivery was given of the first seven items and payment was made, as to the rest no delivery order was sent and the price of those goods is payable by Government.

He was then shown a delivery order No. 2788A (Ex. 3) for 10 tons galvanised plain sheets shown on page 6 of the list, and the corresponding entry in the register (Ex. 2A) which is dated 16th August. He was asked by his learned Counsel to explain how goods purchased on the 26th August could have been delivered on an order, dated 16th August. His reply was: "I do not know, it may have been the officer put the date from the previous list. I am guessing"—(Q. 235).

Then he was asked:—

237 Q.—Did you know that as a matter of fact on the 20th or 21st August there had been any limitation on the power of Waite to buy for stock?

A.—Nothing whatever.

He was asked at Q. 246 whether he had made any demands for delivery orders and he said he asked Waite, Stoddart and Keatinge who referred him to the Controller.

He was then asked about his correspondence with Keatinge and his explanation to Keatinge's statement that "this will, as explained by your representative to me, complete all outstanding orders"—was that it referred to all outstanding delivery orders (Q. 251).

He was then questioned about Peterson's circular letter of 1st February stating that no deliveries were to be made without reference to him, and he said in answer to Q. 259 that he continued demanding orders from Stoddart and Peterson verbally. He was asked (Q. 262) what Peterson had told him and his answer was:—

"Peterson said: Waite has left his department in a chaotic condition and I must look through all that before I can say certainly. You have to wait. The depôt is absolutely congested, we cannot take over the goods unless we clear the depôt."

He was again asked whether Waite had promised him delivery orders:

352 Q.—Before January 1919 did he say anything at any other time?

A.—In November I think he said before Mr. Peterson—Peterson went to see Waite at his office; and also in December he said: "My dear fellow, here is the armistice, we have several places congested, we have to wait." I said—How long? He said, "No longer than 4 or 5 months." I said "That is a long way off." He said "I cannot help it", "we are simply full up; let us clear these goods and we will take delivery." I said: "Give me some time within which I can expect you to take delivery." He said: "Not longer than July." Then when I saw him again in January, I said I hear you are going away. He said: "Yes, only for a month or two."

353 Q.—Do you know when he came back?

A.—He never came back at all.

354 Q.—You did not meet him at all after January 1919?

A.—The last time I met him was at the station when he was going to Ooty to see him off—that was in January 1919.

355 Q.—Did Mr. Peterson at any time tell you that he will not take these goods or give you delivery orders?

A.—Never.

356 Q.—And when you as you said were verbally making a grievance before Peterson, did he any time repudiate them?

A.—No question of grievance, I demanded from him to take delivery.

357 Q.—Did he repudiate?

A.—No.

In the beginning of July Ghaznavi states that he interviewed Messrs. Morgan & Co. and had his claim formulated in their letter of 26th July, 1919. After sending it he says he got a reply from Dr. Meek stating that he did not doubt the statements but would like to see the originals (Q. 279.)

Then he explains that all his papers were seized by the Police on 23rd December, 1919, (Q. 281) and were not restored to him till the 20th March, 1922, and he says in Q. 301:

"After the papers were returned in March 1922, even up to that moment was there any suggestion in writing or verbally by anybody on behalf of the Government that your claim was a bogus one or there was no contract?—No."

He further states of his own personal knowledge that the Police enquired of his vendors and his banker as to his purchases and also of Cox's and at the bonded warehouse to find out whether he had the goods in his possession, and that they were satisfied that the goods were there. He further states that he was continually asked by the Police to explain entries in his books and that he did so, and that he kept copies of the questions and answers. He further states that he gave notice to the Government to produce a great quantity of correspondence but that none of it has been produced.

Then he was asked:—

401 Q.—When Mr. Waite was buying goods from you, was he in the habit of telling you whether it was meant for stock or for indent?

A.—No.

402 Q.—What did he do?

A.—He would say "I will take this." He never said for stock or indent—that was for him to decide.

403 Q.—Suppose one day he had taken 100 tons from you and put his tick mark and so on, whether that will be taken to, wards stock or towards indent, would that be told you?

A.—No.

404 Q.—You were not interested in it.?

A.—Not at all.

405 Q.—You only wanted to sell your goods and get your money?

A.—Yes.

Waite had only authority to buy for stock up to the last three months' average and his authority to do so was taken away from him on the 20th August, 1918. Ghaznavi affects an airy indifference as to this point as to whether the authority still remained with Waite, though, as I shall have to show a little later the question was one of very great importance.

He was asked about an answer given by Waite:—

408 Q.—You know that Waite has said in his examination amongst other things that a cross mark or line does not necessary indicate that he had purchased, but it meant that he wanted to consider them as convenient sizes or things of that kind. Is that correct?

A.—No, it is not correct. If the other lists are produced by the other side I can show that every time he put his mark on a particular item we got delivery orders for that.

409 Q.—The remarks that are made here, were you in any way interested in them?

A.—It has nothing to do with us—it is for his office.

410 Q.—If you sold any goods to Waite or rather he agreed to take them what was your experience? Would delivery orders be issued at once?

A.—No.

411 Q.—Would you sometimes have to wait for a fairly long time?

A.—Yes, quite a fairly long time.

412 Q.—How long?

A.—Sometimes for two or three months, sometimes immediately—there was no fixed rule.

434 Q.—You remember the circular of 1st February addressed to all merchants not to take delivery of goods?

A.—Yes.

435 Q.—As a matter of fact you went on supplying to Government long after that?

A.—Yes. We supplied right through 1919 and possibly 1920 also.

436 Q.—The circular letter is 1st February and you supplied goods in March, April, May, June 1919?

A.—Yes.

437 Q.—Have you got here documents which will show that you supplied goods and were paid for them?

A.—Yes.

438 Q.—Did you also supply in July, August, September, October 1919?

A.—Yes.

439 Q.—Of fairly large amounts?

A.—Yes.

440 Q.—You supplied as late as 17th December 1919?

A.—Yes.

441 Q.—In every month in 1919 you obtained money from Government and delivered the goods?

A.—Yes, from the Munitions Board."

In cross-examination he was first asked by Mr. Pugh as to his previous history to which I have already referred.

He was then questioned about commandeering orders:

495 Q.—Then we may strike out of your claim all the claims on which Waite has written: "make out commandeering order"?

A.—Why?

496 Q.—Because of your own showing he could not have bought them from you?

A.—Not a question of buying in that sense. I was saying that he had to adopt that particular procedure in those circumstances. Purchase there was but a particular method had to be adopted in purchasing the goods.

515 Q.—When he said he was going to commandeer, a commandeering order would follow?

A.—It followed always.

516 Q.—And very promptly, same day probably?

A.—No.

517 Q.—How long after?

A.—May be a day or two or three days.

And he says in answer to Q. 546 that commandeering order would apply, so far as the list before the Court went, only to the tin plates and the C. I. sheets.

Mr. Pugh made a point as to the difference between an ordinary sale and a sale which was the result of a commandeering order, and Ghaznavi was asked:

576 Q.—The elements [(in an ordinary sale) are voluntary action on both sides, offer and acceptance?

A.—Yes.

577 Q.—And price fixed?

A.—Yes, or fixable.

578 Q.—Do you say commandeering is the same thing?

A.—I still think it is the same thing, unless the seller wants to hide away the goods or wants not to sell, then you use that instrument of getting that property against his will."

He was then asked—

627 Q.—Assume that these items in which he said he would make a commandeering order were to go out, how much of your claim would disappear?

A.—That will have to be worked out, I cannot say offhand.

628 Q.—All the tin sheets which you are claiming under order of 14th June will go out?

A.—Yes.

629 Q.—Also 500 corrugated iron sheets in the letter of 17th June?

A.—Yes.

Then he was asked—

600 Q.—Take the list of 14th June—"commandeer tin sheets against demand." Is that a commandeering order?

A.—Yes.

601 Q.—You know quite well it is not. You know commandeering order had to be signed by Peterson?

A.—Yes, I did not know then.

I shall have more to say about commandeering orders, but this much I may say now that whenever Waite wrote "commandeering order" upon an invoice, the formal order had to be signed by Peterson as the Controller, and nobody else in that office except Peterson could sign that order, and that Peterson only signed the order if he was satisfied that the goods were wanted.

Ghaznavi was asked what was meant by Waite's endorsements "Have we met all demands?" and the like and his answer was (Q.609) that he could not say one way or the other.

611 Q.—What do you understand by "commandeer tin sheets against demand?"

A.—All I understand is my tin sheets have been bought and the rest is for the department and Mr. Waite to say what it means.

He elaborates this answer in reply to question 636:

"Don't you think it would be a more intelligent thing to do to find out first whether he wanted this before buying it instead of buying first and then finding out afterwards?—He knows his requirements. He knows that he wanted this. That is why he purchased it. Then he says "find out if this will cover" 115 tons is not of all one size—it is of different sizes—9 sizes.

651 Q.—An indent which is not satisfied may be called an outstanding; would you not accept that as an outstanding?

A.—Yes, it may be said in that way, you may take it in the way you have read it.

652 Q.—Mr. Waite has said that he did not buy anything except those on which he said "make out order?"

A.—That statement is false.

653 Q.—And he says he put these remarks on these lists with a view to get certain information from his office before he decided to buy the goods?

A.—The fact remains that on these marks we got orders. The Rs. 27 lakhs worth of goods we delivered were ordered by these marks—there was no other contract except by these marks.

He was then asked why he did not file his suit in July:

725 Q.—In July you had all your documents?

A.—Yes.

726 Q.—Therefore there was nothing to stop your filing a suit?

A.—You forget the two months' notice.

728 Q.—That will take it to September?

A.—The High Court was closed.

729 Q.—Then November?

A.—Mr. Langford James was instructed to draw the plaint.

730 Q.—He takes months always to draw plaints?

A.—Not only months, sometimes more than that.

After that he says his papers were seized by the Police in December and so he could do nothing till after they were returned in March 1922.

749 Q.—How long could you keep your suit out of limitation by asking for orders which you did not get?

A.—I never took that point into consideration. I went on asking as long as I could and when I found they were delaying and shilly-shallying I immediately asked Morgan & Co. to file a suit.

Then he was shown Messrs. Morgan & Co.'s letter of 26th July, 1919, and asked:

755 Q.—You are treating it that the goods have been specifically ordered or commanded?

A.—Yes.

757 Q.—You are not saying “they are to be delivered in future?”

A.—Why should I say that? That is an arrangement with Waite.

762 Q.—Did you consider that the contract had been broken when this letter was being written?

A.—No, it was not broken then. We asked for delivery. If they had taken delivery the matter would have ended.

763 Q.—You asked for delivery and if they had asked for it, you would have delivered and the contract would have been carried out?

A.—Quite so.

764 Q.—So the contract was not at an end according to you?

A.—This letter was not repudiated. They did not say: “We won't take your goods.”

765 Q.—I am asking you whether the contract was at an end at this time?

A.—No. Because they never repudiated.

766 Q.—When was it broken?

A.—I was advised after two months I think, since 2 months' notice was required.

767 Q.—Then you say the breach was 2 months after this letter?

A.—Yes.

Then he was asked how it was that if Waite definitely promised to take delivery in July no mention of it appears in Morgan & Co.'s letter, and he said it may not appear. He was further questioned on the point:

777 Q.—Nor does it appear in your plaint?

A.—I do not remember now.

(As a matter of fact it does not appear in the plaint.)

He makes a suggestion in answer to Q. 825 that para. 4 of the plaint gave some hint about it. But so far as I have been able to understand that paragraph it does not bear out the suggestion. He was asked in Q. 852:

I want to draw your attention to one or two things there. You have not mentioned there the definite promise to supply in July, to give the orders by July, 1919?

That was put to Capt. Waite long before this?—I think that was in November.

It is not there?—It is not there, and Mr. Taylor knew that.”

858 Q.—The next thing I want to draw your attention to is that there was no suggestion or any demand on Peterson or a conversation with Waite in the presence of Peterson?

A.—Where?

859 Q.—In these particulars?

A.—No.

860 Q.—Nor in the cross-examination of Waite?

A.—Yes.

861 Q.—In the presence of Peterson?

A.—I do not know about that.

862 Q.—I suggest to you that Mr. Peterson's name was not mentioned in that connection at all till yesterday, I mean Friday?

A.—Mentioned to whom?

863 Q.—In any letter or document or cross-examination or on commission or any pleading or anywhere?

A.—That was a matter for the lawyers to know.

Then he was asked:

861 Q.—You see this letter that you wrote on the 3rd January, 1919. That was in connection with the order which Mr. Keatinge claimed to cancel?

A.—Yes.

869 Q.—There had been an order given and Mr. Keatinge wrote and said it had to be cancelled, you remonstrated, and eventually he took delivery?

A.—Yes.

871 Q.—You are making out a case there that the order cannot be cancelled because the order is a contract?

A.—I am making out nothing of the kind here.

873 Q.—I will read it and point it out to you?

A.—It is referring to the delivery order, that is all.

874 Q.—I will read you this passage: “What we want by saying you cannot cancel.....by the provisions of the law”—Did you or did you not say that the order was a contract?

A.—What, that must have been a lawyer's contract. I could not understand all that legal phrase. It was never disclosed although we wrote that letter dealing with the legal aspect of the whole thing.

876 Q.—Do you say it was a lawyer's draft?

A.—Very likely, I do not know. I may not have been there at that time. I do not remember who drafted that letter.

Later on he was asked whether Waite did not enter into written contracts because he could not do so, and he replied that he bought crores of rupees worth of goods from the market by ticking. He was asked :

963 Q.—You see three items in your list which were not carried in by you to 26th August. There are delivery orders which are dated 15th and 16th August ?

A.—I see that.

984 Q.—Actually they reached you on the 4th and 6th September ?

A.—Quite so.

The matter was left there apparently, though it seems strange that an order which was actually issued from the office on the 15th or 16th August should take so long to get to Olive Row.

He was asked about Mr. Peterson's circular letter :

997 Q.—There is that circular letter of Peterson which says no deliveries are to be made without reference to him ?

A.—Quite a sensible letter.

998 Q.—Did you represent the matter to Peterson and say that Waite had bought a lot of goods ?

A.—He said: " When you want to deliver outstanding orders or orders placed with you by Waite, just inform me before doing so because I am in charge of his department."

999 Q.—Have you got any letter which you wrote to Peterson to say there are these outstanding goods bought on tick marks and I want to deliver them ?

A.—That has been my misfortune, going there daily and interviewing these people, not putting them in writing.

1000 Q.—You have no writing ?

A.—No. We used to call there almost daily for orders, deliveries and so on.

1008 Q.—When you came back with your ticked lists did you enter up these purchases in a book ?

A.—No, I used to preserve those copies.

1009 Q.—In your office same as in the Munitions Board Office no account was taken of these tickings in any book ?

A.—It was not necessary so far as I was concerned in my office. The lists were there.

1010 Q.—You had books in great detail both in English and in the vernacular ?

A.—I could not say in great detail, but in the ordinary course of business certain books were kept.

1011 Q.—I suggest to you the reason why these so-called contracts of yours are not entered up in the Munitions Board books or in your office books is that they were not contracts at all ?

A.—No, no contracts were written up in our office. We used to preserve the list and when we used to tender the goods in Keatinge's time we used to keep the tenders.

The question then is what value is to be attached to evidence of this kind. I have given it very close and careful attention, and in my judgment it discloses so incredible a state of things as not to be worthy of acceptance. Had it been a true account I have no doubt that the plaintiff firm could have produced many witnesses, respectable merchants, who had dealt with the Munitions Board during the time when it was in existence and who would unhesitatingly have come forward to say that goods were purchased in large quantities by Waite by no other means than by ticking lists and that there were no formal contracts or anything of the kind. It is plain that what the Munitions Board looked to by way of check upon purchases made were the delivery orders issued. They did not accept nor is there any record in the office books to show that they regarded purchases by ticking as real purchases. There is one thing which is perfectly evident and that is this, that if Ghaznavi had believed that he was making contracts for the sale of very large quantities of war material, he must have made entries in his own books. It has been said that Waite was unbusinesslike. No body can say that Ghaznavi was unbusinesslike, and for him to pretend that orders covering large sums would be treated with so little care as not even to merit an entry in his ordinary account books seems to me preposterous. The burden of proof in this case is on the plaintiff, and upon the evidence before me I am not satisfied that he has succeeded in discharging that onus.

At the same time I think it my duty to say that the evidence which has been adduced on the side of Government is not satisfactory. With regard to the purchase, the only material witness examined on behalf of the Government is Waite himself. Keatinge's evidence, to which I shall refer later, does not deal directly with Waite's method of purchase although he deals with another question of importance. It seems to me that when the credit of an important branch of a Government Department, such as the Munitions Board, is assailed, it was the duty of Government to examine the superior officers who were in charge of that branch. Both Mr. Peterson and Dr. Meek were apparently available in Calcutta. As successive Controllers of the Board in Calcutta, they might be expected to know the procedure that obtained in the office. They could certainly have told the Court whether Waite's alleged practice of purchasing by ticking was authorised and whether goods were delivered and paid for accordingly. More important still, Peterson could certainly have told the Court whether Ghaznavi's interview with Waite was held in his presence and whether Waite's alleged promises were also so made. Even though it be found that the surrounding circumstances are sufficient to refute Ghaznavi's allegations, the position would have been rendered more certain and infinitely clearer if there was Mr. Peterson's sworn evidence on the record that the allegations made were in fact wholly untrue. No doubt the determination not to put the Controlling Officers in the box was not taken without due consideration, but, in my judgment, the decision was unwise and lays Government open to charges to which it should not have been exposed. As I say the only witness examined is Waite, who, according to the particulars furnished by the Government Solicitor, "has entered into a conspiracy" with the plaintiff firm "to defraud the Government." A party to a suit presumably calls a witness to represent him to the Court as worthy of credit. What is to be said when the witness is, according to the party's own showing, of no repute? It might perhaps be said that if he had not been called, an inference adverse to Government would have been inevitable, and it might perhaps also be said that as regards the transactions which form the subject-matter of this claim, no one else was competent to testify, but what reliance can be placed upon his evidence? Mr. Pugh intimated to the Court that he did not propose to call evidence to prove the alleged conspiracy between Waite and the plaintiff firm but that does not rehabilitate Waite. Can it be said, as Mr. Sircar for the plaintiff firm has put it, that on this occasion only he has spoken the truth? It is surely not open to Government to say that though he is disreputable he is still a witness of truth. At the highest his evidence can only be considered as showing that he is not the imbecile that Ghaznavi makes him out to be.

He was examined on commission in London on 15th May, 1924, nearly six years after the transactions upon which the present suit is based took place. As Mr. Sircar has referred in some detail to his evidence it is necessary for me to consider it for what it is worth.

He was asked:—

10 Q.—I want first of all to go to your general method of business. Were the orders as a rule verbal or in writing?

A.—Which orders do you mean? Mine or the orders I received?

11 Q.—The orders you gave to Kessoram Poddar & Co.?

A.—Invariably in writing.

11 Q.—Supposing there was an urgent matter, would you sometimes give an oral order?

A.—Yes.

13 Q.—When you gave an oral order, what happened then?

A.—It was confirmed by a written order.

20 Q.—I will put the question quite definitely to you. As far as you know, is this claim a claim for goods that you ordered?

A.—As far as I know some of the goods might have been ordered but certainly not all.

He was asked certain questions about the lists. I refer to pages of Exs. 1A to K, though these are not specified in the evidence. Q. 21 relates to sheet No. 1 of the list, Q. 23 to sheet No. 3 and Q. 26 to sheet No. 11.

21 Q.—There is an item of 250 tons of C. I. sheets. You agree to that?

A.—Certainly. From my note it was my intention to order it.

22 Q.—I see that your note there is "Make out order for this"?

A.—Yes.

23 Q.—In connection with the order of the 14th June there is a note by you: "Make out order for 2½ tons of galvanised sheet." I suppose you would say that probably that was ordered?

A.—It shows that it was my intention to make out an order. Whether an order was made out or not I cannot say.

26 Q.—In the case of No. 11 there is a note by you against "unequal angles and unequal lengths" and the note is "Take this lot Rs. 64?"

A.—Yes.

27 Q.—In face of that is it possible that that order was given?

A.—"Take this lot" means that a certain lot was picked by me and it was the order to the office to make out an order for those quantities that I had taken.

28 Q.—That refers to the first four items in the list?

A.—As far as my memory goes, and as far as the list goes.

In cross-examination Waite admits that when dealers brought in lists he could tell them at the time what goods he would buy and then the forwarding of the official order was a matter of course. He explains that he made marks on the lists showing that the articles had some important bearing.

51 Q.—The mark would have some significance?

A.—Yes, some important bearing. Either that I would have to pay some particular attention to it or that it was something that might be required—a useful size for instance.

52 Q.—Or that that was the article you intended to indicate as the one you would purchase?

A.—I would purchase if required. I would not say that I would purchase, because if it was for purchasing I would simply say "Take this."

He elaborates this in answer to Q. 61. :—

61 Q.—Were you in the habit of scoring with blue pencil?

A.—Sometimes I was, and at other times I would not make any marks. As I have said, if these items were of important sizes, or important demands, those blue marks would signify that I wanted to buy them in case of necessity, but it would not necessarily mean that I had ordered the goods or intended ordering them.

62 Q.—It does not necessarily mean that?

A.—No.

The plaintiff's case is definitely put to him in questions Nos. 63 to 76, and he denies its truth.

76 Q.—You marked against the various items, after discussing the price, the goods you purchased from him?

A.—That I would purchase?

77 Q.—No, that you there and then agreed to purchase from him?

A.—I do not agree to that because I would have made a note then just as I have made in the case of the corrugated sheets. The case was again put to him in question No. 94. :—

94 Q.—The items marked were the items that you had bought?

A.—No, I do not agree to that. It went forward to my clerk for him to make out that order for the corrugated sheets; I cannot go beyond that.

Then he was asked:—

102 Q.—When you sent your order, if a formal order went forward from the Munitions Department, that would really be an order for delivery?

A.—Yes.

103 Q.—I notice in the first item of 4th June—"12 tons mild steel angles. Delivery ready." What would that mean?

A.—That means he has got them in stock ready to deliver them.

104 Q.—You would ask them, to retain those for you?

A.—If I wanted them, certainly I would.

105 Q.—At the interview?

A.—Yes, if I wanted them.

106 Q.—You would tell him to keep them?

A.—Yes. I might have told him: "Keep those 48 hours," or I might have told him: "Keep them altogether and I will take them."

107 Q.—If you told him to keep them altogether and you would take them, that would mean that he was to hold them for you?

A.—Yes.

108 Q.—Until you specified the delivery?

A.—Yes.

Then he was asked about commandeering orders for 500 tons of C. I. sheets.

110 Q.—Does "Make out O. order" mean: make out commandeering order?

A.—Yes.

111 Q.—Would that be an intimation to the plaintiffs that you were commandeering these goods?

A.—It was no intimation to the plaintiffs at all, it is just information for my office.

112 Q.—Assuming he saw you write that, would it mean that to him?

A.—It would mean that a commandeering order was being applied for.

113 Q.—For them?

A.—For them.

114 Q.—And that they were not at liberty to dispose of the goods?

A.—Oh yes, they could do what they liked with them until they received the commandeering order.

125 Q.—You never had power to make out a commandeering order?

A.—No.

126 Q.—You might on occasions buy goods from sellers, agree to the price with them and in order to make doubly sure of delivery say: "I shall make out a commandeering order?"

A.—No, I do not think I ever did that.

127 Q.—You might do that?

A.—It is possible.

128 Q.—So far as the purchaser was concerned, he would then know that those goods were ear-marked for the Government?

A.—Yes, but of course there was no need for a commandeering order if he agreed to the price.

340 Q.—If you recommended a commandeering order, before the commandeering order actually appears, was the seller perfectly entitled to deal with his goods as he liked?

A.—Yes. I do not say that he would know I was commandeering because the custom invariably was that immediately you spoke about commandeering, the goods were hidden away.

He was asked whether he could purchase for stock and indent and he said he could and in answer to Q. 147 he said:—

147 Q.—In making purchases for stock you either might make them by way of what I may call bargain and sale or by way of commandeering?

A.—No; there was no commandeering for stock; commandeering was only for immediate demands.

He was then asked:

150 Q.—After you have made your notes upon the document containing particulars of goods, the matter became a matter of routine. I take it?

A.—Yes.

He was then asked about "commandeering tin sheets against demands."

154 Q.—The note upon that is, "make out order for $2\frac{1}{2}$ tons galvanised sheets at Rs 77 per cwt. Commandeer tin sheets against demand—O. S. W. 14th June, 1918?"

A.—Yes.

155 Q.—That would mean, would it not that there was to be an order, that you had bought $2\frac{1}{2}$ tons galvanised sheets and that with regard to the tin sheets comprising

6,445 cases, you intended to have them commandeered?

A.—If a demand existed.

156 Q.—Against demand?

A.—Yes.

157 Q.—I suggested to you that you commandeered tin sheets against demand?

A.—Yes.

159 Q.—I suggest that "commandeer" meant that you wished to place your embargo on it?

A.—If demand existed.

161 Q.—So far as the plaintiffs were concerned it meant that they were not at liberty to part with them?

A.—Oh No. I would not say that because a demand might not have existed.

162 Q.—Surely "against demand" meant that you were going to commandeer?

A.—If the demand existed I was going to commandeer. If the office told me that the demands had been met there would have been no commandeering order.

In answer to Q. 166, he repeats that a demand must exist before he could commandeer:—

168 Q.—Did you never take tin sheets into stock?

A.—You cannot commandeer. You can purchase but there must be a demand in existence for a commandeering order.

Then the case was put to him with regard to items of 16th June.

172 Q.—I must put to you that with regard to all the items contained in the offer of the 14th June you agreed to buy them all from Mr. Ghaznavi and you sent on this note to your own department as an instruction to carry out certain purchases?

A.—It does not necessarily follow that I intended to buy them. I intended to buy the $2\frac{1}{2}$ tons and as regards the others, if a demand existed my instructions were to commandeer.

185 Q.—So far as the seller was concerned, if you had agreed to buy the goods from him it would not matter whether you had commandeered the goods or whether you sent a formal order for delivery, would it?

A.—No.

218 Q.—That completes the list. I now come back to the letter of the 23rd August upon which is the note: "Put up cases referring to these details with your signature"—What does that mean?

A.—A case in that instance means a demand.

219 Q.—“Put up cases referring to these details?”

A.—Yes, an indent.

220 Q.—What does it mean?

A.—That is for the office to bring those cases to me.

221 Q.—Bring what cases?

A.—The cases referring to those details.

222 Q.—Do you mean the cases of goods?

A.—The office cases, the original indent. It is called a case.

He was asked in cross-examination (Q. 333 seq.)

333 Q.—In fact did you get demands from other departments for goods?

A.—Yes.

334 Q.—When you got this list did you want to see whether there were any outstanding demands that this offer would fulfil?

A.—Yes, any of the items in it which would be covered by the demands.

He was then questioned about the interview with Ghaznavi in November:

251 Q.—I suggest to you that in the month of November Mr. Ghaznavi saw you and you said to him that you would take delivery of the goods by the following July?

A.—November of what year?

252 Q.—That was in November 1918?

A.—Yes, in July I was not in the Munitions Department.

253 Q.—Are you suggesting that there was not an interview between Mr. Ghaznavi and you in November 1918?

A.—No, I do not think so, because I was not in office in 1918.

256 Q.—Were you attending at the office?

A.—No, not in the month of November. I was laid up in bed—a cripple.

271 Q.—I am suggesting to you that in November you had an interview with Mr. Ghaznavi at which a man named Chatterjee was present?

A.—From memory I cannot possibly re-call it.

272 Q.—And at that interview Mr. Ghaznavi was asking you to take delivery of the goods you had bought?

A.—I have not the slightest recollection of that.

273 Q.—And that you said that now the armistice had taken place it made things rather awkward, but you would take delivery of all the goods by July?

A.—I have not the slightest recollection of it.

274 Q.—Will you say that that conversation did not take place?

A.—Yes, I will say that.

At that time it appears at all events there was no suggestion that Mr. Peterson had been present at the interview.

294 Q.—What was to become of the goods which you had bought for which you gave no delivery orders?

A.—I had not bought them if I had not given delivery orders. I had given orders for the office to issue orders for the goods that I had bought.

295 Q.—Supposing the office had not issued the orders?

A.—Then, of course, it is for Mr. Ghaznavi to claim for it.

296 Q.—That is what he is doing?

A.—As far as I was concerned, once my order was given that was sufficient.

That ends Waite's evidence. Whatever his character may be, and howsoever little worthy of credit he may be in consequence, it is in my judgment plain that he had some sort of method in his conduct of business. He was not the incompetent fool Ghaznavi pretends. As I say I can place no great reliance upon his evidence from the fact that he is obviously a man of no repute. At the same time, what he says is reasonable and is, therefore, at all events more probable than what Ghaznavi had to say.

I now turn to the evidence of Mr. Keatinge who was examined de bene esse on the 3rd March last. He was Controller of hardware, implements and materials in 1918 and on the 20th August he sent a telegram to the Controller, Calcutta: “Kindly instruct Minister and Deputy Controller, Inspection, not to make any further purchases of hardware, implements and materials for stock without reference to me.” Waite was then the Deputy Controller, Inspection. A copy of this was sent to Mr. Nixon, the Assistant Controller, who sent it to Waite who initialled it on the 22nd August (Ex. 2). Keatinge proves the correspondence which is to be found in part III of the brief between himself and the plaintiff firm. It begins with the letter of 13th December, 1918, wherein he cancelled certain orders placed by Waite with them on the 16th August and these are the first seven items on page 11 of the list of the 20th August. This was followed by Kessoram Poddar's protest of the 18th December and their letters of the 3rd and 8th January, 1919, and resulted in the revocation of the cancellation. This was contained in his letter of 15th January to Messrs. Kessoram Poddar & Co.—“The Assistant Controller in charge, Narcaidanga Depôt, will take over such quantities of the material as you have delivered at the depôt to date and the further lot which you hope to deliver at the depôt next week at latest. This will, as explained by your representative to me, complete all outstanding orders placed with you by the Deputy Controller (Inspection). The “representative” here mentioned.....in the letter is admittedly Ghaznavi.

Keatinge was asked:

45 Q.—Were you given to understand that the delivery of the balance under that particular order would complete all transactions?

A.—Yes, complete all outstanding orders.

46 Q.—Between the plaintiff firm and the Board?

A.—Yes.

47 Q.—Give his Lordship the reason why you agreed to accept the balance of this particular order?

A.—It is rather difficult for me to do so; it was so long ago. It was represented to me by this gentleman that there was this outstanding and I suppose there was a certain amount of feeling—perhaps we considered the materials were all in his hands and we decided to take it over. But I cannot say now what was my particular reason. It was so far back.

48 Q.—Did you give your consent to accept that balance on the basis of all outstanding orders being completed?

A.—Distinctly.

Then in cross-examination it was put to him:

50 Q.—I am suggesting to you that what was happening was this that supposing 100 tons had been sold by Kessoram Poddar to the Secretary of State, if an order was sent for delivery of 10 tons he would have to deliver these 10 tons only. I am suggesting that the order would specify what goods had to be delivered?

A.—I don't quite follow.

53 Q.—I am asking you to assume that the Government had agreed to buy 100 tons of goods of a particular kind. Was the practice this, that probably next week an order would be sent for delivery of 10 tons, after a few days for the balance of 90 tons, or say only for 50 tons, leaving 40 tons to be delivered afterwards? Was that the practice which was followed?

A.—Not to my knowledge, decidedly not. He was then asked by the Court:

59 Q.—How do you understand that sentence: “This will complete all outstanding orders?”

A.—I understand that cancelled all outstanding orders. If there were any outstanding orders they were cancelled by this letter.

He was then asked whether he had seen Ghaznavi and he said he came to see him on several occasions.

63 Q.—Do you remember if he ever made any grievance that he was not getting more order for delivery?

A.—No, I have no recollection.

It is perfectly plain, therefore, from Mr. Keatinge's evidence that when he saw Ghaznavi he told him he would take delivery of the seven particular items which appear in page 11 of the list and that he understood that at that time, that would complete all transactions and that there were no more outstanding orders for which Government was liable to the plaintiff firm. I have no doubt that Ghaznavi fully understood that that was the true state of things. It seems, therefore, idle for Ghaznavi now to say that matters were not concluded but that the letter refers only to delivery orders and did not apply to purchases made by Waite before that date. If that had been so, why did he not tell Keatinge at the interview that in addition to these seven items which were now to be paid for, there were also 360 tons on page 11 for which delivery orders were still waiting? Why did he not tell him that all the other items now claimed were still in hand pending receipt of the delivery orders? Keatinge was apparently in a melting mood and prepared to pass anything without much enquiry. Why did Ghaznavi not tell him then and there that Waite who was then at Ootacamund would explain everything to him if he still entertained any doubt? It is plain that Ghaznavi had an unequalled opportunity of getting paid for all the goods alleged to have been purchased by Waite and the inference to be drawn from his conduct is in my judgment clear that at that time Ghaznavi was satisfied that all outstanding orders had been settled and that he had no further claim on Government.

In commenting upon this evidence Mr. Sircar has referred to the entry on page 11 of Exs 1A to K: “Take this lot Rs. 64” and he says that the seven items are covered by Keatinge's letter of the 13th December, 1918, and since they have been delivered and paid for by Government, Waite was, therefore, wrong when he stated that his pencil line was only against four items and had been subsequently extended to cover the remaining items on that page. As, therefore, fraud has no longer been pleaded by the Government as a defence to this suit, it must be taken to be admitted that the order for 200 tons and six other items of 160 tons is still outstanding. In reply, Mr. Pugh pointed out that delivery order No. 2814A (Ex. 4) bears date 16th August, 1918, though the list was not handed to Waite till the 26th August. In his letter of the 13th December Keatinge purported to cancel all outstanding orders but on the plaintiff's remonstrance he agreed to take delivery of the balance, not knowing that the delivery orders had been antedated and not suspecting any irregularity.

It is not for me to conjecture how nearly Rs. 6½ lakhs of public money which was paid for these items was paid without a proper enquiry having been made, if not by Keatinge himself, then by some other competent officer. Had such enquiry been made it must have been evident that the order made on the 16th August for delivery of goods which could not have been bought before the 26th August must have been antedated. Had the enquiry been pursued, it would have been discovered that Waite's authority to buy against stock was withdrawn on the 20th August. Had the register been inspected, it would have been found that the order appears at the foot of a page and that the last preceding entry was No. 2814 and the one that follows at the top of the next page was No. 2815 and that this particular order had been numbered 2814 A. Had the register been more closely examined it would have been found that there were two other similar instances, namely, 2788A and 2819A, where a capital letter was added to the number of the delivery order that in both of these cases the order was inserted at the foot of the page and that both of them were in favour of Kessoram Poddar. The inference to be drawn is, in my judgment, irresistible that these orders were smuggled into the register to show that Waite had ordered the goods before he had been deprived of his authority and that a huge fraud had been perpetrated by the plaintiff firm upon Government in collusion with some one in the office. The orders were, however, passed as good orders and paid for, it being recognized that Waite's purchases by ticking were valid if they were followed by delivery orders.

With regard to Waite's note on page 5 of the list: "Have we met all demands," Mr. Sircar points out that 10 tons were delivered and paid for. If the remark meant that he would not buy till he was satisfied that he had met all demands why should 10 tons be taken? Mr. Sircar's contention has been that the market was rising daily, so Waite, whether acting honestly or dishonestly, would be likely to buy in what he did not require in anticipation of a further rise when goods were actually required. In my view the construction which these words naturally bear are simply that Waite meant "I want 10 tons now, which I take; do we want any more?" Similarly, in regard to the first note "have we demands for others but 14", Mr. Sircar points out that there was a delivery order for 5 tons and that this purchase was by reason of the line against it. If that is so, it must follow that Waite bought all the items, and having bought all the items, asked the office whether any more were wanted. I should construe the words as meaning "I know there are demands for 14; do we want others than 14?" With regard to the aluminium ingots which appear on page 6 of the list, Mr. Sircar points out that these were covered by delivery order No. 2819A (Ex. 5) and paid for which shows that if there was a contract it must have been by ticking. Waite said that he was buying for indent which authority he retained till October 1918 (Q. 225) but that though he had originally intended to buy for indent, he had changed his mind subsequently and converted the goods so purchased to stock. There can be no doubt that these articles were purchased by tick marks followed by the antedated delivery order and that is also true of the galvanised plain sheets which is covered by delivery order No. 2788A to which I have already referred.

There are thus two conflicting versions to be considered; the plaintiff's version that Waite made a purchase merely by saying "I take this" and putting a tick against the item he wanted, and Waite's version that he ticked off on the lists what he considered of interest or of importance for future use but when he actually wanted to buy, he issued directions to his office "Take this", "Make out delivery order or commandeering order." Despite Waite's character I cannot but hold that this is the more reasonable explanation and I think I may go so far as to say this that even if Waite's evidence be ignored, Ghaznavi's story is so improbable as to deserve no credence. That a man in charge of a Government Department, however dishonest or however unbusiness-like he may be, would buy before he knew that the goods were wanted at all, seems incredible. Waite could buy for stock based on three months' previous indents and also for indents which had not been executed and that no doubt is what he meant when he noted on the 26th August "put up cases relating to these 'demands' or in other words "let me see the indents which have come in with the necessary orders." It is proved by Keatinge that the Munitions Board took no notice of anything else but the actual delivery orders. Ghaznavi has no books to show that he regarded tick marks as indicating concluded purchases. He says that he has his copy of the list and that is enough for him, but, as Mr. Pugh has pointed out, in the list attached to Messrs. Morgan & Co.'s letter of the 24th July, the tick marks do not appear while in the list annexed to the plaint, all Waite's remarks are not entered. Mr. Sircar has urged that Ghaznavi's statement that 27 lakhs worth of goods had been taken over and paid for, has not been controverted. These goods were purchased by ticking Ghaznavi's earlier lists and the plaintiff firm has called upon the defendant to produce those lists and also Stoddart's private books. Nothing has been produced and no one has come from the office to swear that these books could not be found. This leads to an inference adverse to the defendant: Murugesam Pillai v. Gnana Sambanda Pandara Sannadhi (1), Ram Prasad v. Raghunandan Prasad (2), Sri Raja Parthasarathy Appa Rao v. Secretary of State for India (3) and is in accordance with s. 114 of the Evidence Act.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 659; 40 M. 402; 21 M. L. T. 288; 32 M. L. J. 369; 15 A. L. J. 281; 1 P. L. W. 457; 5 L. W. 759; 21 C. W. N. 761; 19 Bom. L. R. 456; 25 C. L. J. 589; (1917) M. W. N. 487; 44 I. A. 98 (P. C.).

(2) 7 A. 738; A. W. N. (1885) 160; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 838.

(3) 21 Ind. Cas. 871; 38 M. 620; (1913) M. W. N. 959; 14 M. L. T. 514; 26 M. L. J. 39.

I agree with Mr. Sircar that these lists were relevant to the enquiry and if in existence should have been produced. If they were not in existence there should have been some evidence on the defendant's side to prove it, but I am not prepared to infer from their non-production that a method of purchase was then in vogue which has not been established here. As I have said before, had it been a fact, Ghaznavi could have produced some trustworthy person from the hundred firms dealing with the Munitions Board to support him. Mr. Sircar next urges that there has been no repudiation of the contract alleged in Messrs. Morgan & Co.'s letter of the 26th July, 1919. On the other hand, Dr. Meek in his reply on the 29th July says. I cannot question your statement in any way. "I only want to see exactly what Mr. Waite has written."

It is necessary to read this letter:

"In your letter you state that Mr. Waite has made some definite written remarks on certain papers which your clients hold. Would you very kindly ask your clients to bring all the papers to me, so that I may see exactly what Mr. Waite has written. I am not questioning your statement in any way, but only want to see the originals in order that I may decide what action to take. I shall be in office between 11 A. M. to 1 P. M. on any date this week, but if these hours are not suitable I shall be quite glad to make a definite appointment with your clients."

It is, therefore, clear that though at that time Dr. Meek could not, of course, question the statements made because he had not seen the papers he wished to see the originals to decide what action to take, and he offered to make an appointment with the plaintiff firm for the purpose at any time convenient to them. The plaintiff firm, however, took no notice of the invitation, though, if the claim had been a genuine and true claim, the chance would obviously have been welcomed. That being so, to construe a courteous offer to make an appointment as being equivalent, if not to an acknowledgment of a contract or at all events to a non-repudiation, seems to me unwarrantable. The most emphatic repudiation lay in the action of Government when on the 23rd December the Police seized all the plaintiff's books and papers evidently because they intended to see whether there was evidence sufficient to prosecute the firm criminally.

The next question is, supposing as a fact Waite had purchased goods by ticking, had he authority to do so? Is his act binding on the Secretary of State? Mr. Pugh has referred to s. 20 of the Government of India Act which deals with the revenues of India and cl. 2 (c) relates to the liabilities to which these revenues are subject. He refers to s. 29 which lays down the contracts which may be made by or on behalf of the Secretary of State. Clause 5 of that section provides how these contracts are to be made and who is competent to make them:

"Provided that any contract for or relating to the manufacture, sale, purchase or supply of goods, or for or relating to affreightment or the carriage of goods, or to insurance, may, subject to such rules and restrictions as the Secretary of State in Council prescribes, be made and signed on behalf of the Secretary of State in Council by any person upon the permanent establishment of the Secretary of State in Council who is duly empowered by the Secretary of State in Council in this behalf. Contracts so made and signed shall be as valid and effectual as if made as prescribed by the foregoing provisions of this section. Particulars of all contracts so made and signed shall be laid before the Secretary of State in Council in such manner and form and within such times as the Secretary of State in Council prescribes."

Now, it is plain that according to this section the contract to be valid must be in writing and must be signed by a person who has been specially empowered to sign it. That person must be upon the permanent establishment of the Secretary of State. Mr. Pugh observes that Waite was not on the permanent establishment nor was he specially empowered in that behalf. Any authority that he had to deal with Munitions at all was derived from Peterson who delegated certain of his own powers to him. Moreover, where the Statute says that the contract to be valid must be in writing, verbal contracts, even if established, have no effect. Mr. Pugh has referred to a number of cases in support of this, viz., Shivabhajan v. Secretary of State for India (4), Srinibas Prosad Singh v. Kesho

Prosad Singh (5), Kinlock v. Secretary of State (6), Grey v. Charusila Dasi (7), Ashbury Railway Carriage & Iron Co. v. Riche (8), Young v. Leamington Corporation (9) and Doya Narain Tewary v. Secretary of State for India (10).

Mr. Sircar contends that it is not the plaintiff firm's case that the Secretary of State has signed the contracts or that somebody else has signed them for him. The Secretary of State is liable because he is the person to be sued when the plaintiff wants to get his money out of Indian revenues. The plaintiff says that these were purchases by a servant of the Government of India which were in some cases paid for by the Government of India and for which in the present case the Government of India is liable. Here the Government of India had decided that it would buy goods in the open market like any tradesman. Mr. Sircar relies on s. 20 (2) (c) of the Government of India Act and s. 32 (1) and (3): "There shall be charged on the revenues of India alone, all expenses, debts and liabilities lawfully contracted and incurred on account of the Government of India." Section 32 (1) says that the Secretary of State in Council may be sued and may sue as a body corporate and cl. (3) provides that "the property for the time being vested in His Majesty for the purposes of the Government of India shall be liable to the same judgments and executions as it would have been liable to in respect of liabilities lawfully incurred by the East India Company if the Government of India Act, 1858, and this Act had not been passed." Mr. Sircar contends that though there is no contractual relationship between plaintiff and the Secretary of State, yet under s. 32 (1), the Secretary of State has to be sued as a body corporate and under cl. (3) he is liable in the same way that the East India Company would have been liable. He has referred to Sarat Chandra Das v. Secretary of State for India (11), Secretary

(5) 9 Ind. Cas. 862; 15 C. W. N. 475; 13 C. L. J. 365; 38 C. 754.

(6) (1880) 15 Ch. 1 on appeal (1882) 7 A. C. 619; 51 L. J. Ch. 885; 47 L. T. 133; 30 W. R. 845.

(7) 7 Ind. Cas. 247; 38 C. 53.

(8) (1875) 7 H. L. 653; 44 L. J. Ex. 185; 33 L. T. 451; 24 W. R. 794.

(9) (1883) 8 A. C. 517; 52 L. J. Q. B. 713; 49 L. T. 1; 31 W. R. 925; 47 J. P. 660.

(10) 14 C. 256; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 170.

(11) 9 Ind. Cas. 859; 38 C. 376; 13 C. L. J. 360; 15 C. W. N. 470.

of State for India v. Hari Bhanji (12) and Kishen Chand v. Secretary of State for India (13).

There can, I think, be no question that the Secretary of State can be sued as a body corporate as provided in s. 32 (1) of the Government of India Act. As was pointed out in Doya Narain Tewary v. Secretary of State for India (10):

"A suit brought against the Secretary of State is not one against any person or any real body corporate, but is one brought against a nominal defendant, such nominal defendant being put upon the record merely to enable the plaintiff to obtain the remedy secured to him by s. 65."

It is plain from s. 32 (3) that "the property for the time being vested in His Majesty for the purposes of the Government of India shall be liable to the same judgments and executions as it would have been liable to in respect of liabilities lawfully incurred by the East India Company."

The position has been explained in the case of Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. v. Secretary of State for India (14) the head-note of which says:—

"The Secretary of State...is liable for damages occasioned by the negligence of servants in the service of Government if the negligence is such as would render an ordinary employer liable." The test really is whether the contract was a Sovereign act or was one which a private individual could have entered upon in his ordinary business pursuits. If it is the former, the Secretary of State is not liable, but if it is the latter he can be sued in the same way that the East India Company could have been sued for acts done in their capacity as traders and not as the Sovereign power.

Where commandeering orders are concerned, I think the position is plain. Power was taken by Government under the Defence of India (Consolidation) Act (? Rules), 1915, and under r. 11A (a) an officer specially authorised in this behalf is enabled by an order in writing to require the owner of any particular class of goods (these goods were specially notified by Government) to place them at the disposal of Government (12) 5 M. 273; 6 Ind. Jur. 403; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 190.

(13) 3 A. 829; A. W. N. (1881) 87; 6 Ind. Jur. 323; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 540.

(14) 5 B. H. O. R. App. 1.

*Head-note of 5 B. H. O. R.—[Ed.]

at such time and place as was specified in the order, making disobedience to the order punishable at law. Provision for payment of the price by reference to arbitration is also made. In this case, therefore, there can clearly be no ordinary commercial contract for sale and purchase, because one of the parties may be unwilling to surrender his goods and yet may be compelled under the commandeering order to do so. He has no option once the order has been made and issued. He is bound to place his goods at the disposal of Government when called upon to do so. The only right he has is that if he does not accept the price offered by Government he can have it settled by arbitration. The arbitrator's order is final. Plainly, therefore, a commandeering order is one which no one but Government can make, and being an act of the Sovereign Power, the Secretary of State evidently cannot be sued in respect of it.

It has, however, been argued by Mr. Sircar that the process of acquisition by Waite has been exactly the same whether it has been by delivery orders or by commandeering orders, and the contract in either case was a good contract, though the method of payment may be different. A sale is a good sale though no price may be fixed at the time of the purchase, when the arrangement is that the price will be subsequently settled by a particular agency, Valpy v. Gibson (15).

I do not think this argument is well founded. Waite had no authority to issue a commandeering order. That could only be done by Peterson, who as Controller was specially authorised in that behalf. When, therefore, Waite wrote "make out commandeering order" and the like, he was really giving instructions to his office to make out the order in anticipation of Peterson's sanction. But until the order was signed by Peterson and served on the owner, it had no legal or binding effect and the owner might, if he had been so inclined, have disposed of the goods in any way he pleased. Ghaznavi says, it is true that a person holding goods which came under the special class notified could not sell these goods without a license from the Government. That, no doubt, is so. But the embargo on this class of goods was withdrawn in December, 1918, and it is idle to say now that after that date Ghaznavi could not have disposed of these goods in any manner that suited him.

(15) (1847) 4 C. B. 837; 16 L. J. C. P. 241; 11 Jur. 826; 136 E. R. 737; 72 R. R. 740;

A further question then arises whether contracts other than those specified in s. 29 (5) of the Government of India Act can be held to be binding on the Secretary of State. In my judgment they cannot. In Young v. Leamington Corporation (9) where the Statute provided that where the subject-matter of contract exceeds £50 in value, contracts must be under seal, and when the contract was not under seal it was held to be bad and unenforceable. Lord Bramwell said at page 528* :

"The Legislature has made provisions for the protection of rate-payers, shareholders, and others, who must act through the agency of a representative body, by requiring the observance of certain solemnities and formalities which involve deliberation and reflection. That is the importance of the seal. It is idle to say there is no magic in a wafer. It continually happens that carelessness and indifference on the one side, and the greed of gain on the other, cause a disregard of these safeguards, and improvident engagements are entered into."

If these principles are applied to the present case it may be said that while there is no magic in a written contract, it is a safeguard which has been laid down by the Statute for the protection of the public revenues. When, therefore, a Statute lays down certain mandatory provisions in regard to the framing of contracts between the Secretary of State and a private individual, it is no answer to say that because the provisions were ignored on particular occasions and payments were made on contracts which were not in conformity with the Statute, that that should be taken as a precedent which will be binding upon the Secretary of State in every case. In my judgment, contracts to be binding upon the Secretary of State, must be made in strict conformity with the provisions laid down in the Statute. If they are not so made, they are not valid as against him.

I now proceed to consider the question of the sufficiency of the notice under s. 80 of the Civil Procedure Code, with which the question of limitation is bound up. This section says :—

"No suit shall be instituted against the Secretary of State for India in Council... until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been, in the case of the Secretary of State in Council, delivered to, or left at the office of, a Secretary to the Local Government..... stating the cause of action, the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff and the relief which he claims."

In this case the notice was given to the Financial Secretary to the Government of Bengal on the 26th July.

Mr. Pugh argues that if the alleged breach of contract took place, then, the notice is good. But if the plaintiff firm wishes to get out of limitation by saying they had not to deliver till called on to do so, then there was no cause of action of which they could give notice and the notice was "bad."

Mr. Sircar replies that there was no question of giving delivery till asked for, and therefore, under s. 93 of the Contract Act the plaintiff was not bound to deliver until such application was made. Further, under s. 46 of the Contract Act plaintiffs had not to perform their engagements until after a reasonable time, and it is argued that the joint effect of these sections is to free the plaintiffs from liability to deliver at any time, reasonable or otherwise, until they were called upon to do so. It was for Waite to indicate when and where the delivery was to be made, and until he did so, the plaintiff firm had not to move, and limitation had not begun at all. The delay of seven months, therefore, could not be held to be unreasonable in view of the congestion which prevailed in all the Government depôts. Further, Mr. Sircar has urged that the words "cause of action" as used in s. 80 should not be too strictly construed. He relies on Secretary of State for India v. Perumal Pillai (16), Jehangir M. Cursetji v. Secretary of State for India (17), Jones v. Bird (18) and Manindra Chandra Nandī v. Secretary of State for India (19). He points out that in the letter of 26th July the plaintiffs had stated their grounds of complaint and as the object of the section is merely to intimate to the Secretary of State the (16) 24 M. 279; 11 M. L. J. 117.

(17) 27 B. 189; 5 Bom. L. R. 30.

(18) (1822) 5 B. & Ald. 837 at p. 844; 106 E. R. 1397; 1 Dowl. & Ry. 497; 24 R. R. 579.

(19) 5 C. L. J. 148; 34 C. 257.

*Page of (1883) 8 A. C.—[Ed.]

details of the complaint and to give him two months within which to make amends, Perumal's case (16) is directly in point as the claim had arisen after the notice was given.

It is quite true as was explained in Perumal's case (16) at page 282* that the cause of action should not be taken in a narrow sense, the object of the section being merely to inform the defendant substantially of the ground for complaint. But it is, in my judgment, equally true to say that the section requires the cause of action to be stated with some precision. Now, what is the cause of action stated in the attorney's letter of the 26th July? In the third paragraph, it is said "no instructions have been given to our client for delivery of the goods", and lower down: "Unless our clients are given the requisite orders to deliver the materials, which Capt. S. C. Waite agreed on behalf of the Munitions Board to take over, they will have no course but to adopt legal proceedings." The letter does not say the cause of action is a breach of the contract between the Board and the plaintiff firm. The breach is still in futuro, and depends upon the definite refusal of the Government to issue the delivery order. That being so, the cause of action does not appear to have arisen at the time of the notice and the notice must, therefore, be invalid. If, on the other hand, the plaintiff's case that there was a stipulation that the goods were not to be delivered till called for, is true, a term must be inferred from the contract or read into it, but there is in fact no such term. If such a term is to be inferred, it must be a reasonable term, i. e., it must be within a reasonable time of the receipt of the last order of the 26th August, 1918. It is plain from Keatinge's letter of 15th January, 1919, that he regarded "all outstanding orders" placed with the plaintiff firm as finished. This was followed by Peterson's notification of the 2nd February, stopping all further deliveries. The suit was not filed till June, 1922. It was, therefore, plainly the duty of the plaintiff firm to show that there was a term in the contract by which delivery was not to be called for up to July, 1919, that is to say, ten months after the contract. This, in my judgment, he has failed to do and Ghaznavi's statement that Waite promised to take delivery in July is falsified by the fact that the suggestion neither appears in his attorney's letter threatening the suit nor in the plaint itself. There is, also the undoubted fact that Waite went on leave in January, 1919, to Ghaznavi's knowledge, and that his services were dispensed with in February following. Ghaznavi was perfectly aware of that too, and if his claim had been well-founded he must have pressed it as soon as he heard that Waite was no longer in a position to issue the delivery orders which Ghaznavi says he promised him the previous November. In my judgment, the breach of alleged contract should be held to have occurred on 1st February, 1919, when Peterson issued his circular letter, and limitation began to run from then, and as the suit was not filed within three years from that date it is barred by limitation.

I, therefore, answer the issues as follows:—

Issue No. I.—First part, Yes, in so far as commandeering orders were concerned, Second part, No.

Issues Nos. II, III and IV.—No.

Issues Nos. V, VI and VII.—No.

Issue No. VIII.—Yes, 15th January, 1919, and 2nd February, 1919.

Issues Nos. IX and X.—Yes.

Issue No. XI.—No evidence was led by the defendant. I answer this issue in the affirmative.

Issue No. XII.—No evidence was led by the defendant. I answer this issue in the negative.

Issue No. XIII.—None.

The result, therefore, is that the suit will stand dismissed with costs on scale No. 2, including costs of the commission and reserved costs, if any.

[Note.—An appeal was preferred from the above judgment but it was dismissed on March 14, 1927, for want of prosecution.—Ed.]

A. N. A.

Suit dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1210 OF 1923.

November 23, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway and
Mr. Justice Jai Lal.

ABDUL GHANI—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

SANSAR CHAND AND ANOTHER

—PLAINTIFFS AND HUKAM CHAND

—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Alienation—Mortgage—Father's right to mortgage ancestral estate for antecedent debt—'Antecedent debt,' meaning of.

An alienation by a Hindu father of the undivided family estate for an antecedent debt is binding on the estate. [p. 386, col. 1]

An antecedent debt means a debt, antecedent in time as well as in fact, that is to say, that the debt must be truly independent and not part of the transaction impeached. [ibid.]Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad Rai (2), followed.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 6th February, 1923, modifying that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Jullundur, dated the 2nd May, 1921.

Mr. Niaz Muhammad, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Fakir Chand and Chandar Gupta, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Broadway, J.—This and the connected second appeal arise out of two cases instituted by the sons of one Hukam Chand for a declaration that certain alienations made by their father Hukam Chand would not affect their reversionary rights on his demise. The defendant in one case was Abdul Ghani who had purchased 64 kanals 5 marlas of land from Hukam Chand on the 9th of June, 1905, for a sum of Rs. 2,500. In the second case the defendant was one Sardar Ali who had purchased certain property from Hukam Chand for a sum of Rs. 4,700 on the 13th of January, 1917. The learned District Judge recorded one judgment in both cases although the trials were separate, and found necessity established for Rs. 1,000 in the case against Abdul Ghani, and in the case against Sardar Ali decreed the plaintiffs' suit in full. Abdul Ghani and Sardar Ali have preferred two separate appeals to this Court and we have heard Mr. Niaz Muhammad on behalf of Abdul Ghani, and Mr. Badri Das on behalf of Sardar Ali, while Mr. Fakir Chand and Chandar Gupta appeared for the plaintiffs-respondents.

The case of Abdul Ghani need not detain us long. The findings are clear that Hukam Chand and his sons were members of a joint Hindu family and that the property alienated was ancestral. These are pure findings of fact. Similarly, it was found that no necessity whatever had been proved for Rs. 1,500 out of the Rs. 2,500 alleged to have been paid by the appellant Abdul Ghani. Mr. Niaz Muhammad was constrained to admit that there was no evidence whatever on the record as to necessity qua this sum of Rs. 1,500, and I would, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs.

The matter is not quite so clear in the second appeal, namely, the one by Sardar Ali. The learned District Judge finds that the sum of Rs. 4,700 was made up of four items:—

	Rs.
(a) Paid to Saif-ud-Din, previous mortgagee.	2,500
(b) Deposited with the vendee for payment to Saif-ud-Din in case any excess was found to be due to the mortgagee in (a)	200
(c) Cash paid before the Sub-Registrar	1,900
(d) Registration expenses	100
TOTAL	4,700

Qua the Rs. 1,900, there is no evidence of necessity whatever and the view taken by the learned District Judge must, therefore, prevail.

As to the item payable to Saif-ud-Din the position is this. In 1915 Saif-ud-Din advanced this sum of Rs. 2,500 on a mortgage to Hukam Chand, and in 1917 Sardar Ali was to pay off this item together with any further sum that might be found due for which purpose he retained Rs. 200 of the sale price. As a matter of fact Saif-ud-Din was paid a sum of Rs. 2,631-12-6. The learned District Judge, apparently following Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1) came to the conclusion that although the debt to Saif-ud-Din was 'antecedent' it was the duty of the vendee Sardar Ali to establish that the debt for which the mortgage had been executed in 1915 was for necessity. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee considered Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1) in Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad Rai (2) and in order to make the position clear formulated, at page 104* of the report, the propositions which they desired to lay down as a result of their examination of the authorities. It was there held that:—

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.).

"(1) The managing co-parcener of a joint undivided estate cannot alienate or burden the estate qua manager except for purposes of necessity; but

(2) If he is the father and the reversionaries are the sons he may, by incurring debt, so long as it is not for an immoral purpose lay the estate open to be taken in execution proceeding upon a decree for payment of that debt.

(3) If he purports to burden the estate by mortgage, then unless that mortgage is to discharge an antecedent debt, it would not bind the estate.

(4) Antecedent debt means antecedent in fact as well as in time, that is to say, that the debt must be truly independent and not part of the transaction impeached."

Now, the transaction impeached in this litigation is the sale to Sardar Ali and, therefore, the debt paid off by Sardar Ali to Saif-ud-Din was clearly an independent one and, therefore, 'antecedent' within the meaning of that expression as used by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee. It was contended, however, that the fact that this debt was an antecedent one merely shifted the onus on to the plaintiffs-respondents to prove that the debts were immoral and that, therefore, on the findings in this case the learned District Judge's decision should be upheld.

Now, it is true that the learned District Judge has found that Hukam Chand was extravagant, vicious and generally of an immoral character, but this finding relates to his character as established in 1917. Admittedly there is nothing on the record to connect the debt incurred by Hukam Chand under this mortgage with any of his vicious propensities or activities. It was urged, however, that it was sufficient to discharge the onus to prove that he was generally of immoral character without any business in which he could have invested the money raised by him under the mortgages. In support of that contention reliance was placed on Jaswanti v. Tej Narain (3) in which it was remarked that there is a presumption that a loan has been raised for an "immoral purpose" if it is proved that at the time of raising the loan the borrower was living a licentious life, beyond his means, indulging in drink, riot and debauchery and that at the same time he was without any business or occupation upon which the money might legitimately have been spent. Ram Rattan v. Basant Rai (4) is an authority which appears, to some extent at any rate, to conflict with this view, for it was held in that as well as in certain other cases that the burden is not discharged by showing that the father lived an extravagant or immoral life and that there must be a direct connection between the debt and immorality set up by the son. I do not think it necessary to examine these two authorities in order to ascertain whether they are reconcilable for it seems to me that in this case it has not been proved that when the debt in question was incurred, that is to say, the mortgage was executed, Hukam Chand was leading such a licentious life as is contemplated by Jaswanti v. Tej Narain (3).

(2) 77 Ind. Cas. 689; 46 A. 95; 21 A. L. J. 934; 46 M. L. J. 23; 5 P. L. T. 1; 28 C. W. N. 253; (1924) M. W. N. 68; 19 L. W. 72; 2 Pat. L. R. 41; 10 O. & A. L. R. 82; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 50; 33 M. L. T. 457; 26 Bom. L. R. 500; 11 O. L. J. 107; 51 I. A. 129; 1 O. W. N. 48; 41 C. L. J. 232 (P. O.).

*Page of 46 A.—[Ed.]

I would, therefore, accept the appeal of Sardar Ali and modify the decree by granting the plaintiffs-respondents a declaration to the effect that this alienation would not affect their reversionary rights to the extent of Rs. 1,968-3-6. I would leave the parties in this appeal to bear their own costs in this Court.

Jai Lal, J.—I agree.

R. L.

A. N. A.

Appeal accepted.

(3) 41 Ind. Cas. 192; 10 P. R. 1918; 120 P. W. R. 1917.

(4) 64 Ind. Cas. 121; 2 Lah. 263; 3 Lah. L. J. 563.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1371 OF 1927.
November 22, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tek Chand.

NANAK CHAND AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS
—APPELLANTS

versus

GAMAN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Encroachment by tenant—
Landlord's right to encroachment—Presumption.

Where during the continuance of the tenancy, a tenant encroaches upon land belonging to a third person, his possession of the land so encroached upon is prima facie for the benefit of the landlord unless it appears by some evidence that the tenant, at the time the encroachment was made, intended it for his own exclusive benefit. The presumption in such cases is that encroachments made by the tenant are a part of the holding, and on the termination of the tenancy the tenant must render them up to the landlord whether he has directly undertaken to do so or not.

Andrews v. Hailes (1), Earl of Lisburne v. Davies (2), Tepu Mahammad v. Tefayit Muhammad (3) and Ammu Ammal v. Puthiarambath Moidin (4), referred to.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 19th February, 1927, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Gujrat, dated the 25th June, 1926.

Mr. Sahib Dayal, for the Appellants.
Mr. Iftikhar Ali, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This dispute relates to a small plot of 14 marlas in area, being a part of Khasra No. 1057 which represents the abadi of the village. The facts found by the learned District Judge are as follows:—

The plaintiffs-appellants are the owners of Khasra Nos. 1512, 1513 and 1514 the last of which adjoins the abadi. In 1914 they leased these fields to one Fazal Din tenant for cultivation and it appears that at that time Fazal Din encroached upon the adjoining portion of the abadi. This encroachment was, however, removed soon after. Later, Fazal Din ceased to cultivate the land and the plaintiffs let fields Nos. 1512, 1513 and 1514 to Gaman respondent as tenant under them. Gaman also encroached upon the abadi which adjoined these fields and took possession of the plot measuring 14 marlas which is now in dispute. Gaman has since been ejected by the plaintiffs from fields Nos. 1512, 1513 and 1514 but he still continues in possession of the portion of the abadi encroached upon.

The plaintiffs sued to recover possession of this plot from Gaman but the learned District Judge has dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiffs had acquired no proprietary right in it and cannot oust the quondam tenant even though his possession is unlawful.

In my opinion the learned District Judge's decision cannot be sustained as on the findings of facts arrived at by him the plaintiffs were legally entitled to a decree. The proposition of law is firmly established that where during the continuance of the tenancy a tenant encroaches upon land belonging to a third person, his possession of the land so encroached upon is prima facie for the benefit of the landlord. In such cases the presumption is that encroachments made by the tenant are a part of the holding and on the termination of the tenancy the tenant must render them up to the landlord whether he has directly undertaken to do so or not. See Andrews v. Hailes (1) where Lord Campbell has elaborately discussed the principles underlying the rule and the judgment of Willes, J., in Earl of Lisburne v. Davies (2). The law on the subject is thus summed up by Woodfall in his standard work on Landlord and Tenant (20th Edition) at page 894: "Encroachments made by a tenant from the adjoining waste during the term are prima facie for the benefit of the tenant and afterwards of his landlord, unless it appears by some evidence that the tenant at the time they were made intended them for his own exclusive benefit." The view taken by the Indian Courts is in accord with this rule. See Tepu Mahammad v. Tefayit Mahammad (3) and Ammu Ammal v. Puthiarambath Moidin (4). In this case Gaman respondent has led no evidence to displace this presumption and there are no materials on the record from which it can be inferred that he intended to make the encroachments for his sole benefit.

I, therefore, accept the appeal and setting aside the decree of the learned District Judge, decree the plaintiffs' suit with costs throughout.

R. L.

Appeal accepted.

(1) (1853) 22 L. J. Q. B. 409; 2 EL. & BL. 349; 17 Jur. 621; 1 W. R. 366; 118 E. R. 797; 95 R. R. 593.

(2) (1866) 1 O. P. 259; 1 H. & R. 172; 35 L. J. O. P. 193; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 340; 13 L. T. 795; 14 W. R. 333.

(3) 29 Ind. Cas. 216; 19 C. W. N. 772.

(4) 43 Ind. Cas. 677; (1918) M. W. N. 38.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 1238 OF 1927.

December 2, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Agha Haidar.

TEK SINGH AND OTHERS—ACCUSED.

—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 366, 376—Acts disclosing offences of kidnapping and rape—Conviction for both, legality of.

Where the series of acts proved against the accused establishes two distinct offences falling under ss. 366 and 376 of the Penal Code, the accused can be convicted separately for both the offences, [p. 389, col. 2.]

Ghulam Muhammad v. Emperor (1), followed.

Criminal appeal from an order of the Magistrate, First Class, exercising enhanced powers under s. 30, Criminal Procedure Code, Lahore, dated the 30th September, 1927.

Mr. L. Saunders, for the Appellants.

Diwan Ram Lal, Assistant Legal Remembrancer, and Mr. Mulk Raj, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Tek Singh, Jiwan Singh and Pala Singh have been convicted under ss. 366 and 376, Indian Penal Code. Their sentences are (1) under s. 366, four years' rigorous imprisonment and Rs. 100 fine each and (2) under s. 376, three years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 100 each. The sentences are to run consecutively. The other two persons, namely, Indar Singh and Sohawa Singh have been each convicted under s. 342, Indian Penal Code, and ordered to pay a fine of Rs. 150 each. They have all appealed to this Court and their appeal has been fully argued by Mr. Saunders while the case for the prosecution has been carefully placed before me by Mr. Ram Lal.

The story for the prosecution is that a young woman named Gulab Kaur who is a widow was going to take part in the birth ceremony of her brother's son to a certain village early on the morning of the 15th of July, 1927. She was accompanied by her two daughters and one son, the age of one of the daughters, namely, Musammatt Tej Kaur being 11 years. Her mother-in-law Musammatt Raj Kaur accompanied her a short distance to see her off and she was also accompanied by Khushal Singh, the son-in-law of Musammatt Raj Kaur. The story goes on that when she reached a certain village pond the present appellants rushed out of some bushes and pounced down upon the woman and lifting her up in their arms took her to the house of Tek Singh where Tek Singh, Jiwan Singh and Pala Singh committed rape upon her by turns. Naturally there was a hue and cry and the villagers were attracted to the spot and the woman was let out when the door was opened at about sun rise. Her children were detained outside the kotha, somewhere in the dehliz and Sohawa Singh and Indar Singh, according to the prosecution, gagged their mouths so as to prevent their raising an outcry. Khushal Singh who according to his own evidence is 55 years old was secured by a turban having been tied round his neck so as to prevent his escape.

This is the main story for the prosecution. We have to see how far this story has been proved in its various stages by the evidence produced on behalf of the prosecution. No First Information Report was originally lodged at the thana which is at a distance of only three miles from the scene of the occurrence. But we find that on the 22nd of July, 1927, Musammatt Gulab Kaur came to Lahore and made a statement before the Assistant Superintendent of Police. This officer sent this statement to the thana to be recorded as a First Information Report. He further ordered that the Police should take up the investigation. A point was urged very seriously by Mr. Saunders that the statement before the Assistant Superintendent of Police was a belated one and that it throws considerable doubt upon the bona fides of the complainant party. We have, however, the evidence of Khushal Singh who gives the details of the circumstances as to how the father of the girl accompanied by some others went to the Police Station and in the absence of the Sub-Inspector of Police, the Head Constable who happened to be in charge of the thana refused to take down the report. This statement receives support from the statement of the Sub-Inspector Sant Singh (P. W. No. 5) who says that in the course of the investigation it came to his knowledge that the Head-Constable who at the time was at the thana did not record the report though the relatives of the woman asked him to do so. There is also another way of looking at the matter. If the complaint had been a false and unfounded one there was no point at all in Musammatt Gulab Kaur's coming all the way from her native village to Lahore to make a statement before the Assistant Superintendent of Police, in this case a European Officer. A report at the nearest Police Station would have served the purpose equally well and would have saved her a good deal of trouble and expense. I accept the explanation given by the witnesses for the prosecution and hold that the defence cannot derive any advantage from the lateness of the report.

Mr. Saunders further argues that two names seem to have been added in the statement of this woman before the Court and that the name of one Arjan Singh has been omitted. These persons whose names have been subsequently added have not been convicted and, therefore, it cannot be said that merely because two men have not been convicted the whole list of the accused persons given by the woman should be taken to be false and an imaginary one. As to the main question a good deal of argument was addressed to me on behalf of the appellants that the woman was a bad character and had been carrying on a liaison with Tek Singh accused. Reliance to a large extent was placed upon the statement made by Tek Singh from the dock. I am not prepared to place any reliance upon it. After all, it is the statement of a criminal who is at bay and wants to throw mud all round in order to save his own skin. The evidence for the defence on this very point is very vague and unconvincing. It is, in any way, not such as a Court of Justice would take into consideration for the purpose of imputing immorality to a woman. Whatever her character may have been, so far as the materials on the records are concerned, it has not been established that the woman was of a loose or immoral character. The learned Magistrate seems to have been considerably impressed by the evidence of the child Musammatt Tej Kaur. I have read the statement of this witness very carefully and, in my opinion, there is a ring of truth about it. She is a child of tender years and it is hardly likely that she would be used as an instrument for the purpose of bolstering up a false case against the appellants. If a false case were intended to be made up against the appellants older people would have been available to give evidence with greater confidence. Mr. Saunders also argued that the woman is described by the learned Magistrate as a stalwart Jat woman of 27 and, therefore, it is unlikely that she should yield to her seducers easily. This argument is a very familiar one and there is no doubt that if a single grown up woman in fairly good health is really determined to resist any attempt to rape her, her assailant would find it difficult singly to commit the offence. But here we have got a case of at least three persons two of whom are below 30 and the third Pala Singh is variously described as a man between 40 and 50. They are said to have been armed with chhavis and gandasas. Besides these three men there was further reinforcement awaiting outside. It is, therefore, intelligible that by threat and show of force they would be able to overcome any possible resistance that the woman might offer. A further argument was advanced on behalf of the appellants that it is highly improbable that Tek Singh and Jiwan Singh who are brothers should commit such an offence at about the same time on the same woman and that three persons should take their turn in committing the particular offence with which they are charged. It is difficult to judge people of this class with the ordinary standard of clean living and clean thinking people and all that I can say is that there is no limit to human depravity. Judging from the record it appears that these appellants belong to that depraved class of human beings who are devoid of all sense of decency.

A further point was urged that the three accused could not be convicted separately under ss. 366 and 376, Indian Penal Code, the argument being that the series of acts constituted one and the same transaction and, therefore, the appellants could not be convicted twice over. A certain decision by a learned Judge of this Court was cited in argument, but I prefer to follow a judgment of Mr. Justice Broadway reported as Ghulam Muhammad v. Emperor (1) because independently of the judgment this was exactly my own view. The proved facts in the case established two distinct offences falling under ss. 366 and 376, Indian Penal Code, respectively.

The sentence that has been inflicted upon the appellants is by no means severe and it is a pity that the Courts do not inflict much severer sentence upon criminals of this class. But the sentence of fine cannot be justified. It simply means this that the relations of the accused persons would be hard hit when the latter are in Jail. I, therefore, remit the sentences of fine so far as the appellants Tek Singh, Jiwan Singh and Pala Singh are concerned but I maintain their conviction and sentence of rigorous imprisonment under both the sections and I dismiss their appeal.

(1) 99 Ind. Cas. 344; 7 Lah. 484; 28 Cr. L. J. 136; 28 P. L. R. 802; A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 83.

In the case of Indar Singh and Sohawa Singhall that I can say is that they have been dealt with very leniently as, in my opinion, they deserved much severer punishment. I, therefore, simply dismiss their appeal.

R. L.

A. N. A.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 368 of 1927.

November 23, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tek Chand.

Musammāt ATMA DEVI THROUGH Sodhi CHARAN SINGH, Mukhtar Khas—

PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER—

versus

Musammāt SHIB DEVI alias DHAN

DEVI—DEFENDENT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 11, 151, 152—Amendment of clerical or arithmetical errors in decree or judgment—First application disposed of on merits—Subsequent application, competency of—Res judicata—Power-of-attorney—Mukhtarnama authorising filing of appeal in High Court—'Appeal', whether includes revision.

A Court is competent to entertain successive applications for amendment of clerical or arithmetical mistakes in judgments or decrees and a decision of a prior application of this kind does not operate as res judicata in subsequent applications, but if an application for amendment has been heard and disposed of on the merits the Court will not, except in exceptional circumstances, entertain a subsequent application for substantially the same relief.

Langat Singh v. Janki Koer (1), followed.

Where a mukhtarnama authorises the filing of an appeal in the High Court the word 'appeal' should be liberally construed and should be taken to include revision also.

Petition for revision of the order of the Additional District Judge, Amritsar, dated the 18th January, 1927, dismissing the application filed by the petitioner for amendment of the decree passed by the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Amritsar, on 25th January, 1922.

Mr. Charan Singh, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Din Dayal Kapur, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a petition for revision of an order dismissing an application under s. 152/151, Civil Procedure Code, for amendment of certain alleged clerical and arithmetical mistakes in the judgment and decree passed in favour of the plaintiff in 1922 on foot of a mortgage.

For the respondents two preliminary objections are raised. Firstly, it is contended that this petition for revision had not been properly instituted as Sodhi Charan Singh, Advocate, who filed the petition as the mukhtar khas of the petitioner had not been authorised in the mukhtarnama to institute a petition for revision. I have referred to the mukhtarnama which is on the record and find that it authorised the mukhtar to prefer an appeal to this Court. Technically speaking the power to prefer a revision is not specifically given in the mukhtarnama but, in my opinion, the power to prefer an appeal to this Court must be liberally interpreted and it must be held that Sodhi Charan Singh was competent to lodge a petition for revision. I, therefore, overrule this objection.

Secondly, it is objected that an application for correction of the alleged clerical and arithmetical mistakes was presented by the petitioner on the 18th of November, 1924, and after notice to the respondent, was dismissed on the merits on the 11th of December, 1924. In these circumstances it is contended that another application for substantially the same relief is not competent. I have heard the learned Counsel for both parties in respect of the alleged arithmetical mistakes which are stated to have accidentally crept in the judgment and have also examined the application for amendment, dated the 18th November, 1924, above referred to. In my opinion the two applications are substantially the same and in view of the decision of the previous application and the long delay in presenting the present application the lower Court was justified in dismissing it. As laid down in Langat Singh v. Janki Koer (1), a Court is competent to entertain successive applications for amendment of clerical or arithmetical mistakes in judgments or decrees and a decision of a prior application of this kind does not operate as res judicata in subsequent applications, but if an application for amendment has been heard and disposed of on the merits, the Court will not, except in exceptional circumstances, entertain a subsequent application for substantially the same relief. In my opinion no such exceptional circumstances are made out in this case.

(1) 12 Ind. Cas. 151; 39 C. 265; 14 C. L. J. 481.

I, therefore, hold that the order of the lower Court was correct and dismiss the petition for revision. Having regard to all the circumstances of the case, however, I would leave the parties to bear their own costs in both the Courts.

R. L.

Petition dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 177 of 1927.

December 16, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway.

MR. H. BHARUCHA—ACCUSED—

PETITIONER

versus

THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, LAHORE

—COMPLAINANT—RESPONDENT.

Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), s. 153—Use of premises as brothel—Order directing vacation of premises, legality of—Proper order.

A Magistrate has no power under s. 153 of the Punjab Municipal Act to order a person who is using his premises as a brothel to vacate the premises altogether. The proper order to be passed under the section is one directing such person to discontinue using the premises as a brothel.

Case reported by the Additional Sessions Judge, Lahore, with his No. 76 of 31st October, 1927.

FACTS appear from the following report of the Sessions Judge:—

REPORT.—Mr. H. Bharucha, a Parsee gentleman, is carrying on a Hotel known as Albion Hotel on the Nicholson Road, Lahore. The Municipal Committee of Lahore complained against him under s. 153 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911, that the said Hotel was being used as a brothel and was visited by disorderly persons. The case was tried by Mr. Phailbus, Magistrate, First Class, who considered the evidence produced in the case by both the parties and came to a finding that the Hotel was in fact used as a brothel, that there was a boarding house in the upper flat of the building and a temple and a mosque in its vicinity and that the neighbours had been disturbed at night by the disorderly behaviour of drunken people in the Hotel.

On this finding, the learned Magistrate ordered "that Mr. Bharucha should vacate the premises within five days."

This is a petition for revision against the said order.

Only three points have been argued before me. The first is that there is no sufficient proof that the Hotel is used as a brothel. This is, however, a finding of fact which has been recorded by the Magistrate after considering the evidence and is not open to question on revision. Then it is complained that there was no notice under s. 153 of the Punjab Municipal Act declaring the area to be a prohibited area. This argument hardly needs any notice, as there was no prosecution under s. 152. The proceedings have been under s. 153 and the same could be taken within the whole of the Municipal area, provided the conditions laid down in the said section were fulfilled, which does appear to be the case here.

The last contention is that the Magistrate could not order the petitioner to vacate the premises. This is conceded by the learned Counsel on behalf of the Municipal Committee. He agrees that under this section the order should only have been that Mr. Bharucha should, within five days, discontinue the use of the Albion Hotel as a brothel and so arrange that there should be no undue noise and disorderly behaviour therein.

The records are, therefore, submitted to the High Court with a recommendation that the order of the Magistrate directing the Hotel premises to be vacated, be set aside, and that an order substituted instead to the effect that the Albion Hotel should cease to be a brothel and should no longer be accessible to disorderly persons and that the said order should be carried out within five days.

ORDER.—Accepting the recommendation of the Referring Court I set aside that portion of the Magistrate's order as directing vacation of the premises and in lieu thereof direct that the petitioner discontinue using the Albion Hotel as a brothel and so arrange the carrying on of his business as to avoid undue noise to the detriment of his neighbours. This he must do within five days.

A. N. A.

Order set aside.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS SECOND CIVIL APPEAL

No. 1417 of 1927.

November 10, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jai Lal.

GOPAL MAL—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR

—APPELLANT

versus

FIRM GOPAL SINGH-HARI

SINGH THROUGH SANTOKH SINGH

—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

Instalment decree—Acceptance by decree-holder of overdue instalment—Waiver of default clause.

It is open to a decree-holder to expressly state when accepting an overdue instalment that he does so without prejudice to his rights which have already accrued owing to the default or to show by his conduct at the time of accepting the instalment that he does not waive his right under the default clause. In the absence of such indications to the contrary tender by the debtor and acceptance by the creditor of an overdue instalment must be deemed to amount to a waiver and condonation of the default. [p. 393, col. 2.]

[Case-law discussed.]

Miscellaneous second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Amritsar, dated the 7th August, 1926, 11th April, 1927, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Third Class, Amritsar, dated the 30th November, 1925.

Mr. Anant Ram, for the Appellant.

Mr. Faqir Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In a decree for the payment of money it was provided that the amount decreed shall be payable by instalments and that in default of payment of any one instalment the whole of the amount due under the decree would become payable forthwith, with the addition of Rs. 50. It seems that the first instalment was paid in Court two days late and the amount so paid was realised by the decree-holder. The second instalment was paid before the due date. The third instalment which was payable on the 10th of October, 1925, was paid by the judgment-debtor to one Shiv Ram who, it is alleged was an agent of the decree-holder, on the 20th of October. It now transpires that Shiv Ram paid this amount on the same date to the decree-holder. There is, therefore, no dispute that the instalment due on the 10th of October was tendered to the decree-holder on the 20th of October and accepted by him. The decree holder, on the 26th of October, 1925, executed the decree for the whole of the balance due thereunder alleging that by paying the third instalment ten days late the judgment-debtor had made a default in the performance of the conditions of the decree. The Executing Court declined to entertain the objection by the judgment-debtor to the contrary and held that there had been a default by the judgment-debtor. On appeal the District Judge without deciding the dispute with regard to the third instalment held that the first instalment was admittedly paid two days later and, therefore, there has been a default and the whole amount due under the decree had consequently become payable.

From this order the judgment-debtor appealed to this Court and I remanded the case on the 27th of May, 1926, holding that the acceptance by the decree-holder of the over due instalment after the due date amounted, in this case, to a waiver of the default clause and that, therefore, the view of the District Judge was incorrect. It was represented to me at the hearing of that appeal that the third instalment was paid to Shiv Ram before the due date, and as it was not stated before me that Shiv Ram had paid the amount to the decree-holder on the same date I remanded the case to the District Judge with direction to decide whether Shiv Ram was an authorised agent of the decree-holder and whether the amount was paid to him before the due date.

The District Judge has now held that Shiv Ram was not an agent of the decree-holder and has dismissed the appeal. The judgment-debtor has presented this second appeal. It is admitted by both parties that the facts now stated by me are the correct facts. I must accept as conclusive, the finding of the District Judge, that Shiv Ram was not the agent of the decree-holder; it must, therefore, be held that in paying the amount of the instalment to the decree holder he was acting as the agent of the judgment-debtor. It is, therefore, obvious that in view of my decision that ordinarily the acceptance by the decree holder of an over due instalment after the due date amounts to a waiver of the default clause, it was not really necessary to remand the case.

The learned Counsel for the respondent raised a preliminary objection that the findings of the learned Judge below were findings of facts and, therefore, a second appeal was not competent and in support of this contention he cited a judgment of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind reported as Bahadur v. Gelomal (1). There might have been some force in this contention, were it not for the fact, that the view of the learned District Judge is opposed to my judgment remanding the case to him. I am not examining the correctness or otherwise of the facts found by the District Judge, but only the legal inference to be drawn from those facts.

Incidentally the ruling cited by the Counsel is against his contention on the merits of the appeal because it was held in that case that the acceptance by a creditor of an over due instalment after the due date does amount to a waiver of the default clause. The same view was taken in Ram Nath v. Gio (2) which case related to a default clause contained in a mortgage bond. But, in my opinion, there is no difference so far as the point at issue is concerned, between a bond and a decree making the amount due payable, by instalments with the default clause. In Khairuddin v. Atu Mal (3) which is a Full Bench judgment of the Chief Court of the Punjab, the following remark appears at page 553*:

"It has been held that if the plaintiff accepted payment of one or more sums as an instalment or instalments due under the bond such acceptance amounts to a waiver and puts an end to the cause of action which had accrued."

I have not been shown any subsequent ruling either of the Chief Court of the Punjab or of this Court taking a different view to that taken in these two cases. The learned Counsel for the respondent relied upon the Full Bench judgment of the Bombay High Court in Kashiram v. Pandu (4) in which a different view was alleged to have been taken, but I have been unable to discover where the difference lies. In that case Jenkins, C. J., held that acceptance of an over due instalment may have the effect of estopping the creditor from enforcing the default clause but that there may be circumstances which may negative the operation of an estoppel and Aston, J., expressed himself strongly in favour of the proposition that under the circumstances the creditor must be deemed to have waived his right under the default clause.

(1) 59 Ind. Cas. 607; 14 S. L. R. 128.

(2) 101 P. R. 1880.

(3) 183 P. R. 1883 (F. B.).

(4) 27 B. L. 4 Bom. L. R. 688 (F. B.).

*Page of P. R. 1883—[Ed.]

Badri Narayan v. Kunj Behari Lal (5) and Jiwan Balchsh v. Mubinal Haq (6) also support this view. It is, of course, open to the decree-holder to expressly state when accepting the instalment that he does so without prejudice to his rights which have already accrued owing to the default or to show by his conduct at the time of accepting the instalment that he does not waive his right under the default clause. In the absence of proof to the contrary tender by the debtor and acceptance by the creditor of an over due instalment must be deemed to amount to a waiver and condonation of the default.

On the facts that have now transpired and in view of my opinion on the legal point involved in this case I hold that the default by the judgment-debtor in the payment of the third instalment on the due date has also been waived by the decree-holder.

The result is that I accept the appeal and setting aside the orders of the Courts below dismiss the application for execution of the decree. The appellant will have his costs throughout.

R. L.

Appeal accepted.

(5) 18 Ind. Cas. 731; 35 A. 178; 11 A. L. J. 224.

(6) 73 Ind. Cas. 794; A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 678.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 2091 OF 1923.

December 1, 1927.

Present:—Mr Justice Broadway and
Mr. Justice Jai Lal.

BISHEN CHAND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat BISHEN DEVI AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 7—Suit for redemption—Court's duty to award interest up to date fixed for redemption.

The provisions of O. XXXIV, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code, are mandatory and a Court is bound to direct a mortgagor on redemption of the mortgaged property to pay interest to the mortgagee up to the date fixed for redemption by the Court.

First appeal from a decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Lahore, dated the 15th June, 1923.

Mr. Tirath Ram, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.

Broadway, J.—The only point for determination in this appeal is whether the mortgagors on redemption of the mortgaged property should be directed to pay the mortgagee's interest up to the date fixed for redemption by the Court. The Court has only allowed interest up to the institution of the suit, as it considered that the interest already allowed, was sufficient. In doing so the learned Senior Subordinate Judge, Mr. Ghulam Yazdani, appears to have lost sight of r. 7 of O. XXXIV of the Civil Procedure Code which is mandatory on this point.

The respondents filed cross-objections urging that costs should not have been allowed to the appellants on the ground that the appellants had raised various pleas which ought not to have been raised by them. On the other hand, it appears that the plaintiffs-respondents claimed to redeem the property for a far less sum than was due, and in these circumstances I do not think that the order of the Court as to costs should be interfered with. The cross-objections are, therefore, dismissed.

The appeal is accepted and the appellants are allowed the sum of Rs. 864, the interest claimed. No order as to costs in this Court. This sum of Rs. 864 must be paid by the 1st of February, 1928.

Jai Lal, J.—I agree.

R. L.

Appeal accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL

No. 2922 OF 1926.

November 1, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Harrison and Mr. Justice Tek Chand.

RUP SINGH—DEBTOR-INSOLVENT—
APPELLANT

versus

THE OFFICIAL RECEIVER, JHANG
AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss. 27 (2), 43—Application for discharge—Power of Court to extend time fixed at the instance of creditors or suo motu—"Period specified by Court", meaning of.

It is open to an Insolvency Court to extend the period specified in the order of adjudication within which the debtor is to apply for his discharge on the application of the insolvent himself or on the application of the creditors or suo motu. [p. 395, col. 2.]

K. K. S. A. R. A. Chettiar v. Maung Myat Tha (1), followed.

Where the period within which an insolvent is to apply for discharge has been extended under s. 27 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the words "period specified by the Court" in s. 43 of the Act mean not the period specified by the Court in the first instance but the period as extended by the Court under s. 27 (2). [p. 395, col. 2.]

Miscellaneous first appeal from an order of the District Judge, Jhang at Sargodha, dated the 27th May, 1926.

Mr. D. C. Ralli and Lala Jagan Nath Aggarwal, for the Appellant.

Messrs. M. L. Puri and S. L. Puri, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The following question has been referred to this Division Bench by Jai Lal, J.:—

"Whether it is open to an Insolvency Court to extend the period specified in the order of adjudication within which the debtor is to apply for his discharge, either on the application of the creditors or suo motu, or whether the power of extension given by s. 27 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act can be exercised only on an application by the debtor?"

Since this order of reference was written a judgment of the Division Bench of the Rangoon High Court has been published as K. K. S. A. R. A. Chettiar v. Maung Myat Tha (1) and this lays down very clearly that there is nothing incompatible with the extension of the period, within which a debtor must apply for his discharge at the instance of and on cause shown by the petitioning creditor. With this decision we agree and we are also of opinion that there is no reason why a Court should not extend the time suo motu.

The facts of the particular case, in which this question has arisen, are given in the earlier part of the Referring Order and those facts show that the creditors applied for extension of time in very peculiar circumstances. Mr. Ralli has addressed us on behalf of the insolvent and has urged that it is only logical that the right to apply for an extension of time should be confined to the person who has the sole right to apply for discharge, namely, the insolvent himself. It is, in our opinion, no more illogical to allow the creditors to apply for an extension of time than it is to allow them as the Act expressly does, to apply for the original adjudication with all consequences which flow from that adjudication. There is, however, no question of the logical amplification or restriction of any rule. We have to consider the plain meaning of the words used in the two sections of the Act. Section 43 lays down, that the Court shall annul the order of adjudication if the debtor does not appear to apply for an order of discharge within the period specified by the Court. This is mandatory and the Court has no option in the matter. Counsel, however, would have us read the words "the period specified by the Court" as meaning "specified in the first instance" and not as subsequently extended, if action has been taken under s. 27 (2). This subsection runs as follows:—"The Court may, if sufficient cause is shown, extend the period within which the debtor shall apply for his discharge, and in that case shall publish notice of the order in such manner as it thinks fit." Mr. Ralli then qualified the position taken up by him to this extent that he reads the words: "the period specified by the Court" as meaning the period so specified in the first instance or extended on application made by the insolvent, but not as including "extended on application made by the creditors or by the Court on its own motion." Were there any ambiguity it would be for us to decide between the two rival interpretations, but so far from there being any ambiguity it appears to us that the words are absolutely clear. The Court has the power to extend on sufficient cause being shown, and that sufficient cause may be patent on the face of the record or may be established by any interested party. It is for the Court to decide whether the cause is sufficient and, if it extends the period, the later date to which it is extended becomes the last date of the period specified by the Court as described in s. 43 of the Act.

(1) 100 Ind. Cas. 921; 6 Bur. L. J. 5; A. I. R. 1927 Rang. 136.

We answer the reference by saying that we are in agreement with the view taken by the Division Bench of High Court of Rangoon in the case reported as K. K. S. A. R. A. Chettiar v. Maung Myat Tha (1) and we hold that it is open to an Insolvency Court to extend the period on the application of the insolvent himself, or on the application of the creditors, or suo motu. It follows, that the appeal is dismissed with costs.

R. L.

*Appeal dismissed.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 406 OF 1927,
November 25, 1927.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway,
ABDUL AZIZ—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER
versus

PUNJAB NATIONAL BANK, LTD.,
LAHORE—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. IX,
r. 13—Order restoring suit dismissed in default—Revision.*

An order restoring a suit dismissed in default is not an interlocutory order and is open to revision. [p. 396, col. 1.]

Wiru Ram v. Amar Chand (5), Firm Bhajan Ram-Gil Raj Mal v. Narain Devi (6) and Piroj Shah v. Qarib Shah (7), followed.

Petition for revision of an order of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Lahore, dated the 30th March, 1927.

Messrs. Carden Noad and Obedullah, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Har Gopal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The Punjab National Bank, Ltd., Lahore, instituted a suit for the recovery of money against one Abdul Aziz. The case was fixed for hearing on the 29th of June, 1926, when the plaintiff's Counsel failed to appear up to 2 p. m. and the suit was dismissed in default. On the same day, however, an application was filed by the Counsel for the plaintiff Bank asking for restoration of the suit and alleging that the said Counsel had been engaged in another Court and that his absence had not been intentional. This application was not supported by any affidavit.

On the 2nd of December, 1926, the plaintiff's Counsel again failed to appear at the hearing of the application for restoration which was accordingly dismissed in default. On the same date, soon after the dismissal in default of this application, the Counsel for the plaintiff Bank filed another application. In the heading he asked for, the restoration of the suit (darkhast baramdgi muqadma wa darkhast baramdgi) but did not specify what darkhast was to be restored. In the relief sought by the application no mention is made of any application whatever, but the prayer is that the suit should be restored. This application was again not supported by any affidavit. The 4th of February, 1927, was fixed for the hearing of this second application, and on that date Abdul Aziz filed certain objections but as the Presiding Officer of the Court was absent it was postponed to the 4th of March, 1927, and again to the 12th of that month. On the 12th of March, 1927, the defendant Abdul Aziz's Counsel failed to appear as soon as the case was called on, whereupon the following order was passed: "The Counsel for the plaintiff is present, none is present on behalf of the second party. The application is of the same day: the case is restored; the second party to be summoned for the 30th March, 1927."

Mr. Obedullah who had reached the Court on the 12th of March, 1927, while the above order was being written by the Court filed a petition for review of that order which was dismissed on 30th of March, 1927, for the reason that there was no ground for review.

The defendant Abdul Aziz has now come up to this Court on the Revision Side and it has been urged that the action of the Court below was without jurisdiction, illegal and improper. Mr. Har Gopal on behalf of the plaintiff Bank raised certain objections. First, he urged that no revision was competent inasmuch as the order was an interlocutory one and reliance is placed on Firm Lal Chand-Mangal Sen v. Firm Behari Lal-Mehr Chand (1) and Fateh Ullah v. Abdul Rahim (2). Secondly, it was urged that even if the second application was barred by time the decision of the Court below was not open to attack on revision, and reliance is placed on Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (3) and Jhotu Lal Ghose v. Ganowri Sahu (4).

Mr. Noad for the petitioner did not attempt to challenge the correctness of the decision in the authorities relied upon by Mr. Har Gopal. He urged that the order in question was not an interlocutory one and for his contention relied on Wiru Ram v. Amar Chand (5) a decision of Campbell, J., Firm Bhajan Ram-Gil Raj Mal v. Narain Devi (6) decided by Jai Lal, J., and finally on the decision by Campbell, J., in Piroj Shah v. Qarib Shah (7).

In my opinion the authorities relied upon by Mr. Noad support his contention and following them I hold that the order complained of is not an interlocutory one and, therefore, is open to revision.

Now the second application, i.e., the one made on the 2nd of December, 1926, by the plaintiff Bank in its terms clearly asked for the restoration of the case, and was, therefore, prima facie barred by limitation. The remarks of Campbell, J., in Piroj Shah v. Qarib Shah (7) are applicable and the case would clearly be one in which this Court should interfere. The order under consideration is a very brief one, and does not indicate that the Presiding Officer of the Court had brought his mind to bear seriously on the question he had to decide.

In these circumstances I accept this petition and return the case to the Court below with the direction that it will hear first the application dated the 2nd of December, 1926, and if it considers that the plaintiff Bank's contention is correct and that it includes a prayer for restoration of the first application dated the 29th June, 1926, the Court will then proceed to decide whether any justification or excuse had been made out for the absence of the Counsel on either or both of these dates. The petitioner would be entitled to the costs for this petition in this Court but as no fee certificate has been filed, no Counsel's fee is allowed.

R. L.

A. N. A.

Petition accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 721 OF 1927.

December 16, 1927.

